parent-child relations, step-families, interviews, 88T4778

stepchild adjustment, sex differences, contact with noncustodial parent, 54-family sample, 88T4762

Stereotypes

Anglo-Americans' stereotypes of Mexican Americans, Mexican Americans' perceptions; socioeconomic factors; interviews; Mexican-American couples, Santa Barbara, California; 88T3573

black males' status, US, racist attitudes/stereotypes; statistics; 88T3603

fictional literature, US Indians' portrayal; contextual analysis; 1820-1850, 88T3604

- sociology, professionalization, sociologist's societal role, 88T3343
- Sociology
 article selection, academic journals; editorial bias, 88T4595
 economics vs sociology, model integration, 88T3865
 sociology, 20th-century Poland, political control consequences; 88T3397 sociology, public philosophy, book review essay, 88T3364 sociology's development, postindependence Nigeria, Western cultural influence, 88T3349
 teaching sociology, theory/practice conflict, causes/solutions, 88T3327 theology/sociology, liberal/rational approaches' relationship, 88T4426 undergraduate sociology, teaching/curriculum, article/comment, 88T3328
 US sociology, Iván Szelenyi's work, interview, 88T3332
- Sociology Education
 nonhuman cultural forms, introductory sociology texts' other books' coverage, literature survey, 88T3322 organizational/industrial/political sociology classes, case study approach, 88T3329 undergraduate sociology, teaching/curriculum, article/comment, 88T3328
- Sociology of Art
 sociology of art, theoretical/methodological considerations, 88T4329
 steel drum music, blacks, Caribbean, white Swiss imitations' potential impact, 88T4335 surrealism, Jürgen Habermas's critique, comment, 88T4336
- Sociology of Education
 educational issues, leftist position, US, 2-book review essay, 88T4352 equity vs excellence, US education, comments, 88T4417 sociology of education, international seminar, Poland, 88T4396 sociology, internal/external functioning, state/society relationship, case study; sociology of education, Netherlands, 88S20152
- Sociology of Knowledge
 language/theory of representation, postmodernist critique, Louis Marin's work, 88T4110 social work research, sociology of knowledge approach, 88T5131 sociology of knowledge, US, Gerard De Gre's contributions, 88T5125
- Sociology of Law
 critical legal studies lack, legal education, Flanders, Belgium; 88T4504 ideologies of law, natural law theory vs legal positivism, 88T4489 law, symbolic cartography, theoretical/methodological issues, 88T4509
 sociology of law, Poland, theoretical/methodological issues, 88T4512
- Sociology of Literature
 novels, semiotic literary criticism, 88T4340
 Rimbaud, Arthur, poetry corpus, lexical analysis/hierarchically descending classification method, 88T3273
- Sociology of Science
 alternative science approach, ecology application, 88T5135 history of science, realist/constructionist approach, 2-book review essay; 88T4562 history of science, scientific centers/peripheries, competitive vs collaborative models; 88T4587 philosophy of science, genderization issues, 2-book review essay; 88T4578 science of science, history/policy influence; 88T4569 sociology of science/science policy relationship, 88T4583
- Sociology of Work
 meaning of work, postindustrial society, 88T3309 sociology of work, Latin America, 88T3797
- Sociometric Analysis
 family functioning assessment, self-report scale development/validation, 88T4836 sociometric status assessment methods, reliability/validity evaluated, questionnaire/interview/other data, French-Canadian kindergarteners/teachers, Quebec, 88T4133
- Sociopathic Personality sociopathy/hysteria, cheating adaptation model; 88T4976
- South Africa
 black/working class theater, South Africa, semiotic production theory proposed; 88T4339
 Gujarati-Indian-descent community, South Africa, community dynamics; case study interviews, archival data, Gramscian orientation, 88T3654
 "neo-apartheid" racial policies, legitimization crisis, South Africa; 88T3590 personality development/psychiatry profession, South Africa; apartheid policy; article/comments/reply, 88T4971 physical/psychological torture, security law detainees, South Africa; interviews, 88T4535 value structures, Indian/English students, South Africa/GB, geographical-sociopolitical context/ethnicity/socioeconomic status, Rokeach Value Survey; 88T3550
- South America
 plantation economy, dependency model, West Indian society; case studies; counties, coastal Ecuador/Rajgahar Village, Guyana, 1860s, 1970s, 88T4266
- South Carolina
 sexual behavior/knowledge/attitudes, early vs late coital initiators college students, questionnaire; South Carolina; 88T4867
- South Korea
 delinquency, male workers/high school students, Kwanju, Chonnam, South Korea, questionnaire, 1980; 88T5118 development strategies, class transformation, post-WWII Taiwan/South Korea; 88T3871 economic development, South Korea, 1960-1985, political aspects, 88T3874 group formation/social stratification process, Korea, surveys, 1976-1980, 88T4136 in-/outgroup communication, university students, US/Korea/Japan individualism-collectivism, questionnaires, 88T3497 intergenerational occupational opportunity equality, Japan/Taiwan/South Korea, rapid structural change; official statistics; 88T4164
- Southern States
 adult vs adolescent unwed fathers, self-concept/anxiety levels, questionnaire; southeastern city, 88T5320
 alcohol use patterns/correlates, undergraduate students, inventories questionnaires, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill; 88T5021 coitus initiation, black vs white male/female adolescents; motivation social control, attractiveness; panel data, southern US; 88T4727 mental illness, homeless person, "drift-down" hypothesis, interviews, Richmond, Virginia; 88T5064 real estate firm birth/death rates, environmental effects, southern US census/other data, 1960-1985, 88T5338 sex-role attitudes, black vs white male/female college students, questionnaire, southern US, 88T5315 southern Republican vs Democratic senators/representatives, social demographic characteristics; US Congressional directory data, 88T4081 working class consciousness/organization, southern US industries, social/economic/political conditions, interviews, historical data, 1930s-1940s, 88T3765
- Space
 outdoor home environments (playgrounds/neighborhoods/campsites) children's use/evaluation; interviews, observations; 88T4839
- Space Technology manned space missions, psychological/interpersonal issues; literature review, US/USSR space simulation studies; 88T5206
- Spain
 drug consumption, medical students, Spain; questionnaires; Barcelona 88T5014 international tourism, economic development, Greece/Mexico/Spain official statistics; 1945-1982; 88T4007
- Spatial Analysis
 rape, spatial-temporal patterns, centrography measurement technique police records, San Diego, California, 1971-1975; 88T5075
 spatial distribution/mobility, Yugoslav social groups, demographic/socioeconomic variables; 1981 census data; 88T4640
 tolerance behavior, social control theory, social space vs social learning, 88T4507 urban structure, residential aspects, Cali, Colombia; census, field survey, 88T4303
- Spatial Behavior
 capitalism/sociospatial concentration, Marxist theories compared, 88T5205 employment/unemployment, social/spatial clustering, England, interviews, married men, Hartlepool, 88T3591
- Special Education
 learning problems, objective disability paradigm tested, US; states' special education classifications; 88T4364
- Specialization
 academic specialization's consequences, physical/social sciences; 88T3229 career succession, chief executive officers, Fortune 1000 companies, business publications; 88T4227 economic crisis, mass production vs flexible specialization approaches, book review essay; 88T3897
- Spiritualism
 spiritualism, new cult member enjoyment motivation, Sydney, Australia; 88T4434

Inrogate Parents

psychiatric testimony, class/gender bias, Mary Beth Whitehead surrogate mother case; 88T5308

Interviews

community development program assessment, citizen surveys, methodological problems/solutions; case study; midwestern US, 88T5164 public opinion structure, France, survey methodology validity, questionnaire surveys; 1977-1985; 88T3962

respondent behavior, survey research; interviewer style, experiment, 88T3254

social survey research, history/relation to academic research, 19th-/20th-century US/GB; 88S20144

sociodemographic studies, Latin America, survey data's usage critiqued, 88T3270 survey data processing, open question problems, comment, 88T3265 survey participation, past experience's effects; survey, Netherlands, 88T3267 local institutional survival strategies, macrolevel structural forces, case studies, full-time/part-time tobacco farmers, Gadsden County, northern Florida, 88T4271 alcohol-related diseases, inpatient care/mortality decrease, Stockholm, Sweden, government statistics, hospital records, 1973-1984, 88T4643

Survival

Sweden

alcoholics, compulsory treatment legislation, Sweden vs Finland, 88T5015

children's play as communicative activity, contextual importance, Sweden, observations, questionnaires, 88T4310

cirrhosis mortality increase/alcohol consumption, adult males, Sweden, alcohol ration system's abolition, surveys, 1946-1980, 88T3904

cultural assimilation failure, US military deserters/draft resisters, Sweden, participant observation, interviews, trial/newspaper accounts, 1960s-1980s, 88T3805

democratic socialism, economic vulnerability response, Australia vs Sweden, 88T5227

energy policy, implementation process, Sweden, 88T5198

family income distribution, industrial countries comparison, Luxembourg Income Study; Canada, West Germany, Israel, Norway, Sweden, UK, US; 88T4774

family social class, women's/nonbreadwinner's contributions, conventional theories critiqued, national statistics, interviews, cross-class couples, Sweden, 88T4150

farmers' interest group organizations, Sweden, 88T4251

national defense, public willingness/attitudes, Sweden, political affiliation, gender, attitudes, domestic/foreign opinion polls, 88T5171

participatory job design, task/skill training, field studies, Sweden US, East Germany, 88T3786

political sophistication, US vs Swedish young adults, questionnaire, Wisconsin/Texas/Stockholm, 88T4112

psychological/physical illness/behavior, male vs female Swedish white-collar workers; work/nonwork stressors/stress moderators, questionnaire, 88T3725

science/technology strategies/priorities, France/West Germany/Sweden/Japan/UK/US; cross-national data, 88T4604

Swedish production, autonomous work groups, managers' motivations, interviews, unionists, employers; 1980/81, 88T3784

welfare changes, Sweden/Denmark, Norwegian research/planning implications; 2-book review essay, 88T4052

workers' self-activation, cognitive/communicative aspects, Sweden, 88T3736

Switzerland

feminist research, Switzerland; 88T5297

mentally ill, involuntary commitment changes, Swiss legislation, 88T4490 political asylum policy restrictiveness, Switzerland, 88T4080

steel drum music, blacks, Caribbean, white Swiss imitations' potential impact; 88T4335

suicide rates, Emile Durkheim's theories critiqued; archival data, Catholic vs Protestant populations, Netherlands/Prussia/Switzerland; late 19th/early 20th centuries, 88T3405

technological change, social relationships impact, printing industry, Switzerland; interviews, observations, document analysis, 88T4603

Symbolic Relations

social representation vs self-identity, physically disabled vs nondisabled adults, France; questionnaire, 88T3524

Symbolism

Chamula Indian carnival, symbolic representation, Chiapas highlands, Mexico; field/published data; 88T3650

human body, poststructuralist/postmodernist social theory, 88T4333

key political symbols, consensus/exploitation uses, policy science; case study; "Watergate" newspaper headlines/editorials; 88T5189 mountain/nature symbolism/spirituality, Japanese folk religions/Buddhism; 88T3644 social practices, theory of symbolism, book review essay, 88T3419 symbolically generalized media of communication theory, Jane Kuzler's contributions, comment, 88T3949

wedding cake/ceremonies, symbolic meanings, UK; anthropological perspective, 88T3624

zoo, practical exhibition problems, animals'/zoo's symbolic value; 88T3997

Symptoms

acquired immune deficiency syndrome, neuropsychiatric/psychopathological symptoms, treatment/research, 88T4916

Systems Theory

critique concept, Max Horkheimer's vs systems theory, 88S20151

general behavior systems, living system evolution process vs current psychological theories, 88T3413 values/social integration, Talcott Parsons's work, theoretical problems, 88T3352

Taiwan

development strategies, class transformation, post-WWII Taiwan/South Korea, 88T3871

farmers' associations, Taiwan, organizational effectiveness factors; 88T3842

intergenerational occupational opportunity equality, Japan/Taiwan/South Korea, rapid structural change, official statistics, 88T4164

intergenerational/intragenerational occupational mobility, Taiwan, sex differences, survey, 1979, 88T4162 religious behavior, Taiwan; documentary evidence; didactic travelogues, temples/worship halls; 88T4440 reproductive behavior, married couples, Taiwan, household type; national survey, interviews, 1980; 88T4887

Tanzania

female heads of houses, production control, Maasai cattle-herders, southern Kenya/northern Tanzania, commercialization; 88T3661

Task Oriented Groups

goal attainment/achievement level, group members' perceptions; feed-forward vs feedback information, experiment, 5th-grade boys, Kanazawa, Japan, 88T3472 problem-solving groups, group satisfaction/processes/leadership, feedback session, case studies, 88T3533

Teachers

classroom behavior, teacher reports, role-set correlates, scales, public school teachers, 88T4391

job attitudes, satisfaction-dissatisfaction dimension, two-factor theories tested, questionnaires, educators, Tulsa, Oklahoma/Chicago, Illinois, 88T3775

sociometric status assessment methods, reliability/validity evaluated, questionnaire/interview/other data; French-Canadian kindergarteners/teachers, Quebec, 88T4133

teacher education program, participants' experience, ideals/rhetoric mismatch, field research; US university; 88T4382

teacher turnover/quality of worklife relationship, questionnaire survey; district superintendents, 88T3771 teaching, ideological vs educational functions, democratic transition, field research, teachers' workshops, Paraguay, 88T4348

Teaching

teaching economics, cultural context considerations, Africa, 88T5130

teaching of acting, US colleges/universities, history/development, content analysis; college catalogs/national convention programs/published books, 1920-1960, 88T4327

teaching sociology, theory/practice conflict, causes/solutions, 88T3327

undergraduate sociology, teaching/curriculum, article/comment, 88T3328

Teamwork

team cohesion/success, ice hockey players, Helsinki, Finland, questionnaires, 88T4034

Technicians

technical workers, contemporary socioeconomic systems, Marxist analysis, 88T3733

Technocracy

technological revolution, Thorstein Veblen's The Engineers and the Price System, 88T4610

Technological Change

communications technology development, Eugene Rosenstock-Huussy's thought; 88T4612

- racial/ethnic stereotypes, professional wrestling; content analysis; televised events; 88T4206
- social psychology, musical groups, stereotypes/personality traits; questionnaire; professional orchestra musicians, US/Canada; 88T4334
- Stigma
adoptive parent status, informal social responses, infertile adoptive mothers' perceptions; questionnaire, interviews, 88T4810 recovering alcoholics, workplace stigmatization/social acceptance, interviews, scale, supervisors, Atlanta, Georgia/Dallas, Texas, 88T3782 stigma/sexual orientation theories, homosexual/family member therapy, 88T5095
- Stochastic Models
depressive mood change, evolutionary model, 88T4987 scale construction, R. J. Mokken's model, 88T3293
- Storytelling family storytelling, small group culture generation/reproduction, 88T3638
- Strategies
social movements, development/strategies/goals, global perspective, 88T3940
- Stress
alcohol abuse, ethnicity/stress impacts, dichotomous model, statistics, US, 1968-1977, 88T4999 criminal homicide, stressful life events, inmate files, incarcerated offenders, North Carolina, 1976/77, 88T3502 socialization/stress, organizational newcomers, integrated model developed, 88T3749 technostress, strategic choice management model proposed, 88T3769
- Strikes
labor relations/strike activity, waterside workers, Sydney, Australia, case study, 1947-1983, 88T3753 miners' strikes, national political context, 1820s Mexico; 88T4075 productivity change-intracontractual strike activity, US manufacturing industry, government statistics, 1961-1981, 88T3706
- Structural-Functional Analysis
classroom behavior, teacher reports, role-set correlates, scales, public school teachers, 88T4391 morbidity rate changes, structural/functional perspective, survey, adult household heads, 88T4642
- Structural Models
educational attainment/social influences, first-graders, structural equation models presented, IQ tests, grades, interviews, 1971-1977, 1982/83, 88T4358 new social movements, value change vs structural interpretations, case study, peace movements, Netherlands, 88T1946
- Student Attitudes
learning outcomes, causality/attribution patterns, Jewish students, Israel; high vs low socioeconomic status, experiment, 88T3482
prochoice attitudes, undergraduate students, Reagan presidency time frame, questionnaires, 88T4890 value structures, Indian/English students, South Africa/GB, geographical-sociopolitical context/ethnicity/socioeconomic status, Rokeach Value Survey, 88T3550
- Student Behavior
computer achievement/attitudes, 8th-grade boys vs girls, microcomputer search experience, experiment, 88T4601
- Student Teacher Relationship
classroom behavior, teacher reports, role-set correlates; scales, public school teachers, 88T4391 interaction rules discontinuity, school vs family academic achievement effects, questionnaire, grades, elementary school teachers/students, New Zealand, 88T4368
- Students
intelligence test performance, subscale discrepancies, black adolescents, US, neuropsychological/sociocultural/achievement variables; tests, 88T3476 scientific research career attitudes, university students, Finland; 88T4700
- Subcultures
delinquency-underclass membership relationship, cultural deviance theory reassessed, questionnaire, white junior/senior high school males, Contra Costa County, California; 88T3554
punk rockers, personality traits/family dynamics; questionnaires, scales; punk/nonpunk juvenile delinquents, institution, 88T5107 traveling circus shows, disappearance/reappearance frequency, GB; field work, 1975-1979; 88T3623
- Subjectivity
ethnography, phenomenological approach; personal experience; criminological research, 88T3653
- social ownership/socialist development, ownership subjects, Czechoslovakia; 88T3924
- Subsistence Economy
reindeer-herding Saami's diversified subsistence economy, women's contributions, Norway, 88T4170 work ideas, oral literature, Sulka people, New Britain, Papua New Guinea, fieldwork; 1980-1985, 88T4247
- Substance Abuse personal distress/alcohol abuse prevention, church congregations, ecological consultation approach, fieldwork, 88T5333 psychoactive substance use, female vs male university students, Cairo, Egypt, questionnaire, 88T5021 substance abuse, adolescents; family religiosity/socialization factors, 88T5003
- Suburbs collective action capacity, suburban community associations, participants' professional/social hierarchy, France, 88T3854 retirement housing relocation, elderly persons' preferences, age, income, marital status, sex, mailed questionnaires; Minnetonka, Minnesota, 88T5051
suburban development, 19th-/20th-century US, English influence, 88T4281
suburbanization, national US vs sunbelt metropolitan patterns, census data, 88T4272 suburbanization, US/England, Robert L. Fishman's views critiqued, 88T4288
suburbanization, US, book-review essay, 88T4296
white-suburban-middle-class homosexuals, coming-out process, interview/field data; 88T4720
- Success
learning outcomes, causality/attribution patterns, Jewish students, Israel, high vs low socioeconomic status, experiment, 88T3482 successful women, black-white differences, questionnaire, Who's Who sample, 88T4173
- Sudan
biscuit relief feeding programs, donor/user guidelines, field study Ethiopia, Sudan, 88T5220
- Suicide
child/adolescent suicide, Manitoba, 1971-1982, age/gender/other sociocultural, demographic factors, 88T4898 completed suicides, Apache/Navajo/Pueblo Indians, US, epidemiological trends, death certificates, New Mexico; 88T4652 suicidal behavior; social deviancy, statistics, 88T3510 suicide patterns, social characteristics, US Amish, official statistics newspaper obituaries, informants; Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, 1974-1983, 88T4895 suicide rate, England/Wales, 1530-1590, socioeconomic factors, legal records; 88T3538 suicide rates, Emile Durkheim's theories critiqued; archival data, Catholic vs Protestant populations, Netherlands/Prussia/Switzerland; late 19th/early 20th centuries, 88T3405
suicide rates, urban areas, Catholicism's impact, county-level data US, Emile Durkheim's law tested; 88T4432 suicide, religious vs secular attitudes, medieval England; 88T3512 suicide, women, US; working environment, race, official statistics 1975-1979; 88T5267 suicide-social integration relationship, Emile Durkheim's theory, three levels of aggregation, 88T3514
- Superior Subordinate Relationship alcoholism as disease model, employee assistance program personnel's acceptance, interviews, questionnaires; US, 88T3666 recovering alcoholics, workplace stigmatization/social acceptance in interviews, scale; supervisors, Atlanta, Georgia/Dallas, Texas, 88T3782
- Supply And Demand
supply/demand/remuneration issues, USSR, worker competition, 88T3929
- Support Networks
agricultural support organizations, interorganizational cooperation, conflict, Thailand; interviews, respondents from 72 organizations, 88T4238
farmers' interest group organizations, Sweden; 88T4251 informal helping network, Vietnamese refugees, England; case study church group, Williamstown; 88T3580 self-help organization, scientific community, Cracow, Poland, social sciences' contributions; personal experience; 1981-1984; 88T3953 stress-health-social network relation; national testing sample, social exchange theory; 88T4899
- Surgery
surgical care quality, professional performance, US hospitals, organizational variables; 88T4956

88T4346
 Smith's life textbooks, feminist critique; 88T4809 gender bias, human anatomy text illustrations; 88T5307 masculine social-psychological textbooks, individual scholars' influence, citation analysis; 88T3362
Textile Industry
 manufacturing industry nationalization, administrative control implementation, Egypt; interviews, employees, textile company, Cairo, 88T3719 proletarianization/family, textile workers, Quito, Ecuador, census/survey data; 88T3757
Thailand
 agricultural support organizations, interorganizational cooperation/conflict, Thailand; interviews, respondents from 72 organizations, 88T4238 tourists, adverse legal interactions, foreign countries, case studies, Thailand; 1977-1985, 88T3995
Theater Arts
 black/working class theater, South Africa, semiotic production theory proposed, 88T4339
Sociology
 biology/sociology, liberal/rational approaches' relationship, 88T4426 Theoretical Problems
 agricultural sciences, research problem selection, organizational context, 88T4568 attitude assessment, functional approach reformulated, content analysis, inventory; essays, college students, California; 88T3498 autodynamic social processes, circular causality/outcome, 88T3423 utopias, Niklas Luhmann's concept, 88T3422 behavioral science concepts, Asian culture; 88T3415 behavioral sciences, symbolic systems description/prescription, metal-linguistic approach; reply; 88T3218 biological/cultural coevolution, demographic functioning/mechanisms, article/comments/reply, 88T4623 civilization/superego relationship, Norbert Elias's/Theodor Adorno's ideas compared, 88T3340
 classical sociological traditions, work orientation questioned, 88T3751 revolutionary development, sedentarism/population growth/resource selection, middle/late Woodland period, midwestern US, article/comments/reply, 88T3429 collective bargaining, nonwage provision variation, US, industry/union characteristics; labor statistics; 1975, 88T3792
 comparative wage justice, alternative models, 88T3760 constructionist theory of social problems, US, Hans Haferkamp's views critiqued, article/reply, 88T3385 correctional treatment, sociologically based theories, US, 88T4539 crime and Human Nature by James Q. Wilson/Richard J. Herrnstein, review essay; 88T5073 critical social theory, reason/domination/subjectivity relationship, Michel Foucault vs Frankfurt school; 88T5129 critical social theory, universalizable vs particular interests, Jurgen Habermas's views critiqued; 88T3438 current ethnography, theoretical/methodological problems, semiotic analysis recommended; 88T3379 role of deprivation concept questioned, GB, 88T4151 dependent populations, conceptual problems, classification scheme, 88T5060 developmental psychology, parent-child relations theory changes, effects on family policy issues; 88T4854 economic theory, intellectual pedigree' function/influence, 88T4574 economic values/theories, natural environment's role/function, Hans Immler's treatise; 88T5139
 economics vs sociology, model integration, 88T3865
 education inequalities, social status differences' effects, neo-Weberian model vs neo-Marxist theory, official statistics, Australia, 1982, 88T4360
 Elias, Norbert, medieval sexual openness, Anthony Giddens' response critiqued, 88T3490 emotion models, emotion/cognition interactions; literature review; 88T3499 environment sociology; 88T5208 ethical values/moral development, Immanuel Kant's/Jean Piaget's/Lawrence Kohlberg's/Jurgen Habermas's works; 88T4851 family therapy/theory, systems consultation framework, 88T5332 femininity, Simone de Beauvoir's explanation critiqued; 88T5291 figurational sociology, Norbert Elias; special journal issue introduction, 88T3353 forecasting performance, vector autoregressive models; 88T5172
 global economy, paradox management, international relations, 88T5340

human aging, age stratification theory critiqued; 88T5091 human consciousness, Western/Eastern viewpoints; 88T3549 human emotions, genetic/learned aspects, theoretical issues; 88T3491 idealized muscular physique, males' preference; psychological rigidity/authoritarianism; methodological critique/response; 88T3525
 ideologies of law, natural law theory vs legal positivism; 88T4489 immigrants' social structural position, Australia, positivist causal methodology/theory critiqued, 88T3583 industrial relations systems, John T. Dunlop's theories examined, 88T3766 informal economics research/approaches/policy choices, 88T3903 interpersonal understanding, social scientists' difficulties, Max Weber/Karl Marx, 88T3227 intradisciplinary polemics, sociology, 1920s-1930s, 88T3369
 job attitudes, satisfaction-dissatisfaction dimension, two-factor theories tested, questionnaires, educators, Tulsa, Oklahoma/Chicago, Illinois, 88T3775 justice norms' formation/variation, structural exchange/symbolic interactionist theory; 88T4514
 La storia e il quotidiano (History and the Everyday) by Franco Ferrarotti, review essay; 88T3411 later deviance, self-rejection/disposition to deviance, earlier analysis corrected, 88T3504 law, macrosociological analysis, 88T4518
 law, symbolic cartography, theoretical/methodological issues, 88T4509
 legal discourse, democratic capitalism, theoretical problems; 88T3444 life history research, methodological/theoretical issues, 88T3956 macrosocial field theory, conflict-cooperation micromodel/catastrophe theory, post-WWII India/Pakistani conflict, 88T3436 management theory structural changes, 1960s-1980s bourgeois ideology, organizational problems, 88T3844 marital communication/quality, theory/research/assessment problems, ecological congruence matrix devised, 88T5204
 Marxist sociology, US, Soviet view; 88T5324
 Marxist theory, Italy, Lucio Colletti's contributions, 88T5330 masculinity theory, development ideal proposed, object-relations theory explanations, 88T5304 mass behavior, individual community members' influence, theoretical issues, 88T4013 modern democracies, Hans Kelsen's theories, 88T4099
 Nietzsche Friedrich, influences, textual analysis, 88T5140 organizational performance/cohesion, organizational synergy, literature review, 88T3836 Parsonian cultural paradigm, normative universalization critiqued; 88T3643 policy making, positivist vs interpretive paradigms, article/comment, 88T5192 political science, philosophy of science models, 88T3228 positivism/hermeneutics, analytical issues, Hungarian perspective; 88T3213 positivism/hermeneutics, Hungarian perspective, 88T3214 private sphere definition, community control, literature review, 88T5148 probation services, England, pragmatism, 88T4545 probation services, presentencing investigation, personal experiences/qualitative interviews, 88T4223
 Quest for Excitement: Sport and Leisure in the Civilizing Process by Norbert Elias/Eric Dunning, review essay, 88T4002
 Quest for Excitement: Sport and Leisure in the Civilizing Process by Norbert Elias/Eric Dunning, review essay, 88T4011
 racial discrimination, neoclassical economist/dual labor market analyses, historical materialist/symbolist theory; 88T3572 racism/sexism concepts, prejudices vs generalization; 88T3547 rational choice theory, basic concept/themes, 88T5197 regional communication patterns, US, research issues, 88T3970 religion/society relationship, India, Max Weber's notions, 88T3409 religious hypocrisy research, theoretical/methodological issues, 88T4448 rural geography, France, history/current organization, 88T4262 sadomasochism, sociological research, 88T4728 scientific authenticity, theoretical/empirical criteria; 88T3226 self-managed groups, leader's role, social learning theory/sociotechnical systems perspective; 88T3829 sex/inequality, terminological issues/guidelines, Norway; literature review, 88T5309 social behavior/discipline, Michel Foucault's theory, 88T4380 social class, research operationalization debate, British sociology; 88T4140 social control system taxonomy, informal norms' importance, theoretical issues, 88T4481

- global vs multinational firms, technological/economic development impact; 88T3915
- industrialization, technological/economic development, Bulgaria; 88T4608
- man-technology relationship/integration, intellectuals' role; 88T3428
- technological change, social relationships impact, printing industry, Switzerland; interviews, observations, document analysis; 88T4603
- technological revolution, Thorstein Veblen's The Engineers and the Price System; 88T4610
- technology, social dimensions, growth analysis; 88T4607
- Technological innovations
- advanced manufacturing technology, deskilling/quality of working life effects, questionnaire, employees, electronics company; 88T3788
- alternative technology movement, values basis; 88T3627
- computer technology innovations, Hungarian oil industry; power relations; 88T4611
- domestic production, services-goods shift, unpaid at-home work increase, technology, surveys, Canada/Netherlands/Norway/GB/US; 88T3900
- employment trends, industrial vs information sectors, Western economies; technological innovations; 88T3743
- gender meanings, women's work experience, First/Third Worlds, technological development, 4-book review essay; 88T5317
- gender relations/sexual division of labor, industrial organizations, technological innovations, case study, confectionery industry, New South Wales, Australia; 1850s-1985; 88T3741
- global problem resolution, high technology/social change potential, alternative solutions; 88T4599
- labor-oriented technology development, potential impact on science/technology, questionnaire, researchers/social scientists; 88T3878
- megacities' problems, technological/applied science solutions; 88T4298
- new technology adoption, large farmers, India, interviews, Punjab; 88T3867
- nuclear weaponry/technology, ideological functioning; 88T4598
- technological innovation adoption, production/labor force effects, newspaper industry, firm characteristics, case study, Indiana; 88T4195
- technological innovation, Mexican agriculture; national statistics; 1950-1979; 88T4243
- technological innovation/productivity, industry-university cooperation, US; 88T4571
- technological panaceas, increasing worldwide adherence, humanist critique; 88T4093
- tertiary economic sector, software house typology; 88T4606
- Technological Progress
- free time use, technological growth's effect, secondary data, Norway, Netherlands, US, UK, Canada, 1960s-1980s; 88T4014
- rural telephony, technological modernization issues; case study, farm households, US; 88T3976
- technology/development theme, epistemological debate; 88T4602
- Western European technological development, cultural aspects, college course outline; 88T3331
- Technology
- culture-technology relationship; 88T4609
- technological diffusion/adoption, medical field, system dynamics simulation model, case studies; 88T3308
- Technology Assessment
- communications technology development, Eugene Rosenstock-Huussy's thought; 88T4612
- computers, classroom use, sociopolitical issues; 88T4350
- information society concept, David Lyon's work, comment/reply; 88T3452
- religion vs technology, social roles; 88T4447
- technology, social dimensions, growth analysis; 88T4607
- technostress, strategic choice management model proposed; 88T3769
- work/household/consumption activities, technology's impact, socioeconomic account; time budget survey, UK; 88T3560
- Technology Transfer
- agricultural technology transfer, Cooperative Extension Service, budgetary/policy issues; 88T4241
- national research, developing countries, Western approaches' inappropriateness, design principles outlined; 88T3870
- Telecommunications
- government telecommunications policies, Argentina/Chile/Mexico, cultural innovation potential; 88T3986
- Religion & Television Research Project, methodological problems, US; 1984; 88T4433
- Religion & Television Research Project, US, interorganizational conflicts; 1984; 88T4435
- religious television broadcasting, US, privatization/social cleavage issues; 1984 Gallup survey; 88T4466
- religious television broadcasts, religious/political/social themes, content analysis; 1983; 88T4419
- religious television programs, interpersonal interaction portrayals, US content analysis; 1983/84; 88T4450
- religious television, audience characteristics/motivation/viewing patterns, methodological issues, US; 88T4437
- religious television, viewer motivations, uses/gratifications assumptions; questionnaire, adults, US; 88T4418
- Telephone Communications
- rural telephony, technological modernization issues, case study, farm households, US; 88T3976
- Telephone Surveys
- drug use measurement, telephone vs field interviewing, randomized response technique; 88T5026
- Television
- Corporation for Public Broadcasting's public education project, Robben Fleming interviewed; 88T4362
- ethnic group portrayals, television programs/commercials, Hispanic black vs Anglo perceptions, demographic/media use variables, telephone interviews, Chicago, Illinois; 1983; 88T3581
- racial/ethnic stereotypes, professional wrestling, content analysis, televised events; 88T4206
- sports broadcasting output, Belgian Radio & Television; 88T3972
- television rights, Olympic Games, fiscal issues; 88T4019
- television sports broadcasts, textual/semiotic codes; 88T3981
- Television Viewing
- cross-cultural psychological research methodology, television impact; 88T3982
- cultural values, Philippine high school seniors, US television program viewing, questionnaire; 88T4048
- leisure-time activities, children/adolescents, television, 1967-1978; 88T4009
- passive vs selective TV viewing patterns, US, interviews; 1982; 88T3985
- Tennessee
- intra- vs extrafamilial sexual abuse, female victims, family characteristics, questionnaires, undergraduates, Memphis, Tennessee; 88T4333
- neighborhood-type organizations, participants' vs nonparticipants' characteristics; interviews, Nashville, Tennessee/Israel; 88T4304
- Tenure
- social workers, scholarly production, tenure, survey; 88T4220
- Terminal Illness
- dying patient-medical attendant dialogue, truth/silence, historical analysis; 88T4892
- treatment options, hospice vs traditional care, terminally ill Medicare beneficiaries, cost control/effectiveness issues, survey questionnaire; 88T4967
- Terminology
- sex/inequality, terminological issues/guidelines, Norway, literature review; 88T5309
- Territoriality
- sociology of territory, Italy; bibliographic citations; 88T5211
- Terrorism
- terrorism, noncombatant victims, protective strategies; 88T5265
- war/politics relationship, terrorism problem; 88T5252
- Testimony
- psychiatric testimony, class/gender bias, Mary Beth Whitehead surrogate mother case; 88T5308
- sexual abuse/molestation cases, children's testimony; 88T4519
- Tests
- test anxiety, coping mechanisms, emotions/cognition/interplay, questionnaire, high school students, West Germany; 88T4397
- test norm estimation, examinee vs multiple matrix sampling; 88T3297
- Texas
- child abuse victims, videotaped testimony admissibility legislation Texas; 88T4473
- discrimination perceptions, Hispanic police officers; survey/interview data; McAllen, Texas; 88T4188
- high school dropout rate, minimum competency test's effect, Texas test results, school records; 1985; 88T4347
- political sophistication, US vs Swedish young adults; questionnaire Wisconsin/Texas/Stockholm; 88T4112
- seasonal migration, elderly, sociodemographic/health/lifestyle profile questionnaires, interviews; Rio Grande Valley, Texas, trailer park; 88T5044
- Textbooks
- educational change, Greece; governmental/traditional institutional influence; content analysis; high school textbooks; 1955-1974.

subject index

medicine beliefs, Mexican Americans, social work practice implications, 88T4933 illness healing, magical beliefs vs psychiatric commitment, Inuit participant observation; hospital/temple settings, 88T4984 healing ceremony's political purposes, Wana people, Sulawesi, Indonesia, 88T4902 healer healers, Brazil, treatment modalities, discussions, observation, 88T4923 healer healing, participants' motivations/treatment outcomes, socioeconomic/political impacts, fieldwork, Mexico, 88T4918 traditional Chinese medicine, US patients' demands, Western biomedical profession's opposition, 88T4931 traditional Chinese medicine, Western values' impact, 88T4964 traditional medicine, Andean Bolivia, modern physician education, 88T4905 traditional medicine, India, scientific knowledge, case study, Ayurvedic physician, 88T4962 traditional medicine, Latin America, hot-cold categorization, 88T4961 traditional medicine, West Germany, Kur naturopathic-water-environment therapy, 88T4935 Traditional Societies aggressive behavior types/developmental cycle, Sambia tribal group, Papua New Guinea, secondary data, 88T3652 aggressive behavior, male socialization, Simbu people, Papua New Guinea, fieldwork, secondary data, 88T3648 aggressive behavior, social-structural vs psychocultural explanations, Mae Eng tribal group, Papua New Guinea, secondary data, 88T5262 agricultural production efficiency, traditional societies, household size, national statistics, rural households, Anambra State, Nigeria, 1977/8, 88T4256 anthropological fieldwork in other cultures, epistemological problems, personal experience, Brazil, 88T3633 birth spacing, women, Java, breastfeeding-postpartum amenorrhea relationship, interviews, Ngagile; 1976-1978, 88T4883 ethnicity-culture distinction, Maori-Pakeha (European) relations, New Zealand, primary school children, psychological testing data, 88T3567 fertility, Yoruba women, Nigeria; matrimonial/sociodemographic factors, interviews, 1974/75, 88T4856 illness, death, fear of sorcery, Gnaou people, Papua New Guinea, case studies, 88T3511 kinship transformation, economic value, Soboba Indians, Riverside, California, 88T3616 landownership, indigenous Maskoy vs commercial enterprise, Paraguay, case study, 88T4128 lineage descent genealogy concept, historical Islamic solidarity, Ibn Khaldun's work, 88T3618 living ecosystems, New Guinea, equilibrium/disequilibrium models, 88T3307 violence, cultural context, Semai Senoi people, Malaysia, psychometric test, 88T3658 violence, sociocultural mechanisms, Zapotec Indians, Mexico, fieldwork, 88T5260 life perceptions, elderly Yoruba, structured interviews, Nigeria, 88T5056
 healing ceremony's political purposes, Wana people, Sulawesi, Indonesia, 88T4902
 Shamanism, Khanty traditional society, Siberia, USSR, 88T4903
 social organization, Baxtyari nomads, Iran, secondary data, 88T3615 Sunda ethnic identity, rural Indonesian village; social/economic change, case study, mining/processing facility founding, 88T3530
 traditional medicine, Andean Bolivia, modern physician education, 88T4905
 tribal groups, Tunisia, research/theoretical issues, participant observation, Berber village, 88T3656 tribal status group, marriage affiliation, Awlad Qaylan tribe, Adrar, Mauritania, secondary data; 88T3612 Traditionalism economic/social well-being relationship, traditional ethnic community organizations' contributions, first generation Japanese Americans, survey, 1964-1966, 88T5168
 social structure/traditional mythology's symbolic organization, Japan, 88T3632 traditional gender roles/family structure, GB; increased male unemployment/female employment; survey, interviews, Hartlepool, South Wales, 1984; 88T4156 traditional political organization/new social movement relationship, peace movement, Netherlands; questionnaires; peace activists/residents, urban areas, 1985; 88T3948

Training

teacher education program, participants' experience, ideals/rhetoric mismatch; field research, US university; 88T4382

Transportation

urban public transit authority, living systems process analysis, 88T3816

Transsexualism

transvestism/transsexualism, public meanings/private identities, interviews, documentary analysis, GB, symbolic interactionist framework; 88T5311

Transvestism

transvestism/transsexualism, public meanings/private identities, interviews, documentary analysis, GB; symbolic interactionist framework, 88T5311

Treaties

US-Soviet/Arab-Israeli conflicts, de-escalation agreements, coercive vs noncoercive inducements, 88T4046

Treatment

electroconvulsive therapy use, US, National Instt Mental Health data, 1975-1980, 88T4991

homosexual to heterosexual therapeutic change, recent theories, practice implications, 88T4723

Treatment Compliance

alcoholism as disease model, employee assistance program personnel's acceptance, interviews, questionnaires, US, 88T3666

Treatment Programs

acquired immune deficiency syndrome anxiety, treatment strategies, 88T4926

acquired immune deficiency syndrome, neuropsychiatric/psychopathological symptoms, treatment/research, 88T4916

alcohol problems, police/social/medical authorities' management, Finland, 1960-1980, 88T5007

alcohol problems, referral processes, union peer counseling programs, ethnographic data, Tunnel & Construction Workers' Union, New York City, 88T5019

alcoholics, compulsory treatment legislation, Sweden vs Finland, 88T5015

alcoholics, obligation-to-undertake-treatment legislation, Poland, 88T5025

alcoholics, treatment programs, Hungary, 88T4996

alcoholism intervention, American Indians, Shaker Church's function, 88T4958

correctional treatment, sociologically based theories, US, 88T4539

delinquency assessment, male juvenile offenders, child behavior checklist's utility, scale, behavioral ratings, 88T5101

drug treatment/rehabilitation, voluntary agencies, GB, policy issues, fieldwork, 88T4997 evening/weekend alcoholism treatment program, federal employees, US, case study, 88T5008

homosexuals' acquired immune deficiency syndrome anxiety/sexual control, group treatment program, New York City, 88T4946

Jewish elderly, cohort subgroups described, 88T5048 juvenile justice, punitive vs rehabilitative emphasis, US, 88T4537

Trends

infant mortality trends, core-periphery differences, national/provincial/local levels, Finland, 1950-1984, 88T4651

Trials

reliability of children's testimony, legal proceedings, cognitive/moral development theories, 88T4495

sexual abuse/molestation cases, children's testimony, 88T4519

Trinidad And Tobago

steel drum music, blacks, Caribbean, white Swiss imitations' potential impact, 88T4335

Truth

dying patient-medical attendant dialogue, truth/silence, historical analysis, 88T4892

hermeneutics, truth/edification goals, Georgia Warnke's work critiqued, comment, 88T3235

Tubuai Islands

wealth differences/social inequality, developing peasant communities, welfare/equity-oriented strategies, case study, Tubuai, French Polynesia; 88T3873

Tunisia

tribal groups, Tunisia, research/theoretical issues, participant observation, Berber village, 88T3656

Turkey

femininity/subordination experiences, women, Turkey; Islamic ideology, 88T5279 social structures, modern rural Turkey, nomadic pastoralism cultural paradigm's influence; secondary/archeological data; 88T3617

- social control, European/American models, historical developments; 88T4101
- social ecology, adherents' views critiqued; 88T3377
- social network analysis, software packages, theoretical issues; 88T3848
- social organization weaknesses, human potential waste, Western developed countries, article/comment/rejoinder; 88T3880
- social policy, conceptual issues; 88T5183
- social science, hermeneutical criteria; 88T3223
- social sciences, social actors, humanistic methodology; 88T3426
- social system stalemates, vortical processes, Turkey, action research perspective; 88T3860
- social-psychology theory development, cognitive paradigm, cultural aspects; 88T4588
- sociobiology's validity, methodological issues, article/comments/reply; 88T4657
- sociology of art, theoretical/methodological considerations; 88T4329
- sociology of knowledge, US, Gerard De Gré's contributions; 88T5125
- sociology of law, Poland, theoretical/methodological issues; 88T4512
- sociology, humanistic approach, mind/consciousness's biological/social significance; 88T3386
- sociology, present-centered approach critiqued; 88T3350
- state formation, Africa, communicative interactive approach; 88T4115
- statistical methods, homogeneity assumption; 88T3299
- structuration theory, agency's role, 2-book review essay; 88T3410
- technology/development theme, epistemological debate; 88T4602
- Toward a General Theory of Social Control* by Donald Black, review essay; 88T3408
- tribal groups, Tunisia, research/theoretical issues, participant observation; Berber village; 88T3656
- values, conceptual issues; 88T3435
- values/social integration, Talcott Parsons's work, theoretical problems; 88T3352
- work motivation, related values, Africa, theoretical-methodological problems; 88T5176
- workers' health research, Latin America, methodological approaches compared; 88T3731
- working class, research tendencies, Mexico; 88T4137
- workplace participation, critical rationality model, non-zero-sum power framework, case studies; 88T3728
- Theory Formation
- civilization analysis/history of consciousness, theoretical synthesis; 88T3631
- crisis/normality distinction, conceptual clarification; 88T3416
- education inequalities, social status differences' effects, neo-Weberian model vs neo-Marxist theory, official statistics, Australia; 1982; 88T4360
- Elias, Norbert, work's influence, social/cultural factors; 88T3357
- family therapy/theory, systems consultation framework; 88T5332
- feminist theory, radical/reformist/Marxist schools; 88T5271
- grandparenthood, life cycle developmental phase, literature review; 88T4829
- modernity definition, Eastern Asian historian's perspective; 88T4077
- physical anthropology research, US social/political biases, Aleš Hrdlička's impact; 88T4558
- scientific knowledge, social construction, canonical formulations; 88T4586
- social structure, sexual attitudes'/behaviors' influence, theory proposed; 88T4717
- social/political theory, peace/war neglect, Immanuel Kant's/Jonathan Schell's works; 88T4088
- theory/data relationship, statistics' role; 88T3288
- Western civilization, Norbert Elias's civilizing processes theory, applications; 88T3418
- Theory Practice Relationship
- applied sociology, US, Soviet perspective; 88T5096
- family life ideology/practice, feminist movement's effects, GB; 88T5316
- Habermas and the Foundations of Critical Theory* by Rick Roderick, review essay; 88T5199
- ideal-practical goals, Vilfredo Pareto's social action/utility theory; 88T3432
- megacities' problems, technological/applied science solutions; 88T4298
- military sociology, academic vs military environments, Italy; 88T3808
- participatory action research, characteristics/techniques, Latin America; 88T5094
- practice knowledge utilization, social workers, questionnaires; 88T5092
- self-knowledge, tacit/practical vs articulate/discursive knowledge, research implications; 88T3534
- sociological methodology, dialectical-materialist applications; 88T3330
- teaching sociology, theory/practice conflict, causes/solutions; 88T3377
- worker participation program evaluation, influence of ideas, theories action; 88T3730
- Tibet
- child preference/care/survival, ethnic Tibetans, Nepal; cultural, sociostructural factors, fieldwork; Humla District; 1982/83; 88T4676
- Tillich, Paul Johannes
- The Socialist Decision* by Paul Tillich, Frankfurt school parallels; 88T3344
- Time
- concept of time/future, postindustrial/programmed societies; 88T3377
- history/time, T. S. Eliot's views; 88T4341
- monochronic vs polychronic time, Western vs Eastern societies, development policy implications; 88T5191
- occupational differentiation, temporal change; 88T3755
- Time Series Analysis
- appellate/trial court caseloads, US; supply vs cost-benefit variables statistics, time-series-cross-section analysis; 88T4500
- Time Utilization
- objective/subjective time allocation, elderly; interviews, time budgets; 88T5040
- social actor behavior regulation, working/leisure time/daily life, research methodology; 88T3785
- work speed, formal rules/implicit norms, France, observation, keyboard operators; 88T3685
- Tokyo, Japan
- US intelligence operation, WWII, Berlin, Germany/Tokyo, Japan message deciphering; 88T3807
- Tolerance
- tolerance behavior, social control theory, social space vs social learning; 88T4507
- Tonga
- women's cooperative associations, Tonga Kingdom (South Pacific) wealth/resource distribution; 88T5323
- Toronto, Ontario
- neighboring-crime relationship, city's physical diversity, questionnaire census/police data, Toronto, Ontario; 88T4282
- policing trends, Toronto, Ontario, class vs crime control models, police/arrest data, 1859-1955; 88T4524
- recreational physical activity vs elite sport, newspaper coverage, content analysis, Toronto Star/Montreal La Presse, Ontario; 88T3979
- sexual abuse histories, adolescent male runaways, interviews, homeless youth shelter, Toronto, Ontario; 88T4699
- shoplifter types/motivations, demographic/psychological profile, interviews, probation reports, Toronto, Ontario; 88T5090
- Torture
- physical/psychological torture, security law detainees, South Africa interviews; 88T4535
- Totalitarianism
- origins of European totalitarianism, Bonapartist Caesarism, 19th century France; 88T4083
- Toward a General Theory of Social Control* by Donald Black, review essay; 88T3408
- Totemism
- harmful organizations, conditions favoring emergence/survival, environmental effects; 88T3830
- Tourism
- development, Third World economies, tourism's role, research review; 88T4004
- international tourism, economic development, Greece/Mexico/Spain official statistics, 1945-1982; 88T4007
- leisure/tourism/education facility overlap, 19th/20th centuries; 88T4006
- rape of local vs tourist women, offender sentence severity, Israel court records, 1979-1981; 88T4528
- seaside resorts' popularity decline, socioeconomic/cultural factors GB; 88T4008
- tourism, evolutionary development, Caribbean regions; statistics as symptomatic curve/cyclical models tested; 88T4010
- tourists, adverse legal interactions, foreign countries; case studies Thailand; 1977-1985; 88T3995
- Toxic Substances
- Union Carbide industrial accident effects, Bhopal, Madhya Pradesh India, citizen-anthropologist's viewpoint; 88T5215
- Tracking (Education)
- psychometric intelligence, high school students, Israel; schooling, tracking; psychometric tests, interviews; 1967, 1971; 88T4403
- Traditional Medicine

sociological methodology, dialectical-materialist applications, 88T3330
 sports, religious ritual characteristics, USSR, 88T4032 Stalinist criticism, contemporary USSR, film review, 88T4330 state administrative actions, citizen legal protection/rights, USSR, 88T4471
 supply/demand/remuneration issues, USSR, worker competition, 88T3929 survey response accuracy/agreement, married Soviet emigrants, US, contamination sources; interview survey project data, 88T4733 temporary worker utilization effects, Moscow industrial plants, USSR, personnel records; automobile plant, 88T3700 traditional family, collective family concept/family policy effects, USSR, 88T4781
 Western sociology, Soviet sociologists' round-table discussion, 88T3392 worker unproductiveness, Krasnoyarsk, USSR, remedies advanced, statistics, questionnaire; workers, 88T3777 youth moral education, USSR, personal vs social justice, 88T3635 unionization labor organization, union power erosion, US, 88T3744 unions agricultural union protests, European Economic Community's 1984 milk pricing meetings, Margeride, France, 88T4240
 alcohol problems, referral processes, union peer counseling programs, ethnographic data, Tunnel & Construction Workers' Union, New York City, 88T5019
 black vs white union participation, Illinois; survey, 1980, 88T3722
 Swedish production, autonomous work groups, managers' motivations, interviews; unionists, employers; 1980/81, 88T3784
 technological change, social relationships impact, printing industry, Switzerland, interviews, observations, document analysis, 88T4603 trade union legal agencies, Italy, lawyers' role, 88T3773 trade unions/political parties, roles/ideologies, Italy, 88T3707 union growth/decline, 20th-century US, single equation model proposed, secondary data, 88T3779 union membership, technological institute graduates, Western Australia, survey, 1970s, 88T3689 union wage-bargaining power, Denmark, worker participation, 1970s, 88T3711
United Kingdom
 alcohol consumption, longitudinal patterns, young adults, UK, National Child Development Study; 1958 birth cohort, 88T4998
 divorce, recently married couples, UK; age, social class, premarital living arrangements, government statistics, 1979-1984, 88T4773
 family income distribution, industrial countries comparison, Luxembourg Income Study; Canada, West Germany, Israel, Norway, Sweden, UK, US; 88T4774
 free time use, technological growth's effect, secondary data, Norway, Netherlands, US, UK, Canada, 1960s-1980s, 88T4014
 labor process, capital's role, UK, case study; tobacco company, 1970s, 88T3835 maternity history data analysis, parity progression ratios, census data, England, Wales; 1971; 88T4862 occupational mobility, occupation-based labor market typology, UK, surveys, 1979, 1981, 88T3692 police history, UK, imperial expansion context, 88T4525 police reform, party/class voting patterns, 19th-century UK, 88T4546 political ideas/behavior, interclass relations, consumption cleavages, questionnaire; voters, UK; 1984; 88T5195 pornography, women's movement's position, UK, 88T5273
 wedding cake/ceremonies, symbolic meanings, UK, anthropological perspective; 88T3624
 workmen's compensation, post-WWII UK, political economy perspective, 88T4071
United Nations
 dental care, cross-national studies, World Health Organization, 88T4911 World Health Organization-supported behavioral research, goals/quality evaluated; 88T4919
United States of America acquired immune deficiency syndrome, health insurance system impacts, US; 88T4942 administrative complexity, school districts, US, local/state/federal funding environment; surveys; 1976/77; 88T4384 advanced capitalist societies, work/income disadvantages, women, statistics, census data; US, Italy; 1980s; 88T3694 alcohol/drug use, incarcerated violent vs property offenders, survey/interview data; 88T5089 alienation, US/Polish/Japanese employed males, analytic model proposed, interviews; 1964-1974; 88T3528

American Indians, US history participation; 2-book review essay; 88T3592 applied sociology, US, Soviet perspective, 88T5096
 armed services, US, organization format change, 88T3813 black infant death rate, US, abortion/family planning services' availability/utilization, official statistics, census, teenager mothers, 88T4626
 black males' status, US, racist attitudes/stereotypes, statistics, 88T3603 business political partisanship, US, 88T3817
 career succession, chief executive officers, Fortune 1000 companies, business publications; 88T4227 changing household size/structure, US, 1970-1985, national survey/census data, 88T4825 children of divorce, demographic characteristics, representative sample, 1982 National Survey of Family Growth, 88T4744 children's dolls, Afro-American women's portrayals/stereotypes, post-Reconstruction-1930s, content analysis, 88T4017 church membership rates, US, blacks'/Jews' inclusion, statistics, 88T4457 collective bargaining agreements, legal issues/principles, seniority provisions vs nondiscrimination programs, legal/historical/descriptive research, 1965-1986, 88T4480
 collective bargaining, nonwage provision variation, US, industry/union characteristics, labor statistics, 1975; 88T3792 collectivism vs individualism, Indian vs US university students, empirical measure tested, grid, 88T3545 college/university faculty members, demographic characteristics, US; 88T4191 completed suicides, Apache/Navajo/Pueblo Indians, US, epidemiological trends, death certificates, New Mexico, 88T4652
 constructionist theory of social problems, US, Hans Haferkamp's views critiqued, article/reply, 88T3385 contraceptive behavior/attitudes, young adults, US, individual/peer group characteristics, questionnaires; New England colleges/universities, social-psychological approach, 88T4877 corporate board ineffectiveness, US; board characteristics, company reports, 1979-1983, 88T3826 corporate economic/political power, manufacturing firms, US, aggregate resource concentration, 1947-1978, 88T4089 crime/social disorder management techniques, educational establishments, US/GB, 88T4381 criminal case processing, pre-indictment phase, US Attorney, Washington, DC, case records sample, 88T4513 dangerous inmate management, Canadian/US/Scottish prisons, 88T4529 declining population trend, US, federal policy responses, 88T4055 delinquency, blacks vs nonblacks, US, broken homes, project data, 88T5114 development activities, US missionaries, sub-Saharan Africa, 88T4436 divorce process, US, 88T4743 divorce, social history, US, divorce records, South Atlantic states; 1790-1860, 88T4827 divorce-proneness, white/black males/females, parental divorce, national surveys, 88T4766
 domestic production, services-goods shift, unpaid at-home work increase, technology, surveys, Canada/Netherlands/Norway/GB/US, 88T3900
 earnings inequality, black women, US, 1960-1980, 88T3716
 economic/social well-being relationship, traditional ethnic community organizations' contributions, first generation Japanese Americans, survey, 1964-1966, 88T5168 economic/technical efficiency, US capitalist vs Hungarian socialist enterprises, 88T3680 employee quality circles, management role, interviews, questionnaires, manufacturing/chemical/pharmaceutical plants, US/GB, 88T3676 employer alcohol-related policies, US; 88T3778 employment stability, plant/firm size, survey, 1979, 88T3763 environmental belief systems, public vs elites, Japan/US, questionnaire, citizens/political activists/political elites, Shizuoka Prefecture/Spokane County (Washington), 1983/84, 88T5133 ethnic-cultural values, skilled Polish-American automobile workers, Hamtramck, Michigan, 88T4217 family functioning/needs satisfaction, enlisted soldiers, US Army, self-help intervention, experiment, 88T4752
 family income distribution, industrial countries comparison; Luxembourg Income Study, Canada, West Germany, Israel, Norway, Sweden, UK, US, 88T4774
 fatherhood of US sociology, F. H. Giddings nominated; 88S20164 fear of crime, US/GB, social factors/neighborhood context; surveys; 88T3966

- social system stalemates, vortical processes, Turkey, action research perspective; 88T3860
- traditional marriage partnership, Turkish refugees, Ammouliani, Greece, socioeconomic changes, case study; 88T5321
- Twentieth Century
- class consciousness/formation, Jewish working class, Palestine, 1880-1920, 88T4130
- concierge's memories, 20th-century France, book review essay, 88T3358
- demologic tendencies, mass politics, 19th-/20th-century Germany, 88T4060
- family household changes, 20th century, traditional theory tested, interviews, residents, urban Scotland, 88T4782
- household/family development, functional differentiation, social status, statistics, 19th-/20th-century Germany, 88T4823
- industrial home work development/production potential, modern world economy, 18th century-present, 88T3911
- infant/child mortality, seasonal variations, US, statistics, New York, New York/Chicago, Illinois/New Orleans, Louisiana, 1870-1919, 88T4632
- leisure/tourism/education facility overlap, 19th/20th centuries, 88T4006
- mass migration, North China-Manchuria, 1891-1942, econometric model, 88T5214
- Roman Catholicism, post-WWII Poland, sociocultural imbeddedness, 88T4458
- sex/sexuality depictions, changing trends, traditional women's magazines, US, content analysis; 1900-1980, 88T5301
- sociology, 20th century Poland, political control consequences, 88T3397
- sociopolitical developments, 20th-century Europe, social myths' influences, 88S20155
- street/white-collar/corporate crime news coverage, The New York Times, content analysis, 1900-1950, 88T3983
- suburban development, 19th-/20th-century US, English influence, 88T4281
- turn-of-the-century cultural upsurge, Weimar Republic, Germanic culture/Jewish symbiosis, 88T3601
- Typology
- learning problems, objective disability paradigm tested, US, states' special education classifications, 88T4364
- Uganda
- fertility, venereal disease effects, rural peoples, Uganda, medical-demographic survey, 88T4957
- Underemployment
- financial satisfaction, education level (overeducation), community participation, Rhode Island cases, 88T3723
- underemployment problem, Latin America, post-1970s; statistical/survey data, 88T3781
- underemployment, black vs white males, US urban centers, residential location, education, age, Current Population Surveys, 1970-1982, 88T3737
- unemployed youth, social processes/coping strategies, gender differences, participant observation, interviews, 88T3790
- Undergraduate Students
- undergraduate sociology, teaching/curriculum, article/comment, 88T3328
- Underground Movements
- societal social control deterioration, subsystem loyalty vs impersonal/rational behavior, 88T3431
- Undocumented Immigrants
- health care access, Mexican immigrants, US; political economy perspective, 88T4909
- illegal alien problem, amnesty's failure, Australia; 88T3594
- Unemployment
- downward mobility, unemployed-earner households, West Germany, family size/structure, survey, 88T4788
- employment attitudes, re-employed males; long-term unemployment; longitudinal interviews, 1981-1984; 88T3756
- employment/unemployment, social/spatial clustering, England; interviews, married men, Hartlepool, 88T3591
- informal work, employed/unemployed individuals' participation, England; interviews; households, Isle of Sheppey, Kent, 1981; 88T3754
- modern society/work, unemployment solutions/redefinition of work; 88T3691
- psychological problems, middle-aged unemployed men, GB; 88T3791
- traditional gender roles/family structure, GB; increased male unemployment/female employment, survey, interviews; Hartlepool, South Wales; 1984; 88T4156
- unemployed men, wives' withdrawal from work reasons, GB/US, Australia, literature review, 88T3688
- unemployed's work ethic, West Germany, empirical study criticized, 88T3383
- unemployment images/explanations, unemployed workers, Italy, interviews, time sheets, 1984-1987; 88T3699
- unemployment problem, cross-national/divergent policy responses, literature review, Netherlands focus, 88T3678
- unemployment problems, southern Italy, 88T5146
- unemployment rates, political science graduates, Netherlands, survey, 88T4221
- unemployment, life situations/context/coping strategies, 7-book review essay, 88T3752
- unemployment, northern Mexico, export-processing, industrialization censuses, 88T3892
- unemployment, social-psychological aspects, interviews, unemployed young people, Dunedin, New Zealand, 88T4686
- Unemployment Rates
- loglinear models, parameter interpretation, odds ratio approach, 1965-1978 US Current Population Surveys, unemployed males, 88T3244
- Union of Soviet Socialist Republics
- agricultural productivity obstacles, USSR, new family-unit focus, 88T4824
- book market, USSR, coupon rationing strategy, 88T4377
- Chernobyl (USSR) nuclear accident effects, Norway, government actions/public's perceptions, 88T5217
- computerization, social effects, Soviet view, 88T4605
- demographic change, socioeconomic determination, USSR, policy theoretical issues, conference proceedings, 88T4653
- doctors, USSR, Bolshevik government deprofessionalization questioned, 88T4182
- domestic consumption patterns, regional variation, USSR, questionnaire, adults, 88T3886
- economic decision making, USSR, professional sociological input, 88T4207
- economic development acceleration, USSR, social science's role, conference speech, 88T3401
- economic development, USSR, forecasting methods, 88T5170
- economic reform policy/administration, Soviet studies, 2-book review essay, 88T3396
- economic reform, USSR, professional education factors, 88T4171
- economic reform, USSR, small business/entrepreneur role, 88T3863
- economic reform, USSR, sociology's role, 88T3403
- economic restructuring, USSR, juridical science/practice, 88T4520
- economic restructuring, USSR, price-setting policies, 88T3883
- family policy, postrevolutionary Soviet government; 88T4765
- histogram analysis, nominal data, sociodemographic questionnaire data, adults, Moscow, USSR, 88T3248
- industrial worker behavior, productivity/socioeconomic regulators USSR, 88T3686
- International Sociological Association's Eleventh World Congress, New Delhi, India, Soviet contributions, 88T3356
- labor productivity improvement intervention, Byelorussian (USSR) railroad case, questionnaire survey, 88T4174
- labor productivity loss, Petrozavodsk, USSR, alcohol use, questionnaire data, 88T3664
- Lomonosov, Mikhail Vasilyevich, 18th-century Russian scientist, biographical sketch, 88T4572
- managerial decision making, games/simulation approaches, USSR conference proceedings, 88T5345
- nationalities problem, USSR, Central Asian Muslims, 88T3589
- nuclear accident, Chernobyl, USSR, West Germans' opinions/attitudes, interviews, 1986, 88T3965
- out-of-wedlock births, USSR, Baltic republics, questionnaire survey females; 88T4847
- political protest, militant tactics' efficacy, hegemonies vs polyarchies case studies, USSR; 1965-1978, 88T3947
- religious participation, Turkmenistan (USSR) youths; social factors questionnaires; 88T4439
- rural development, eastern USSR, railroad building project's effects, 88T3864
- "Science, Technology, & Peace," 1987 international conference, Moscow, USSR; 88T3320
- second economies, Eastern Europe; secondary data; 88T3925
- shamanism, Khanty traditional society, Siberia, USSR; 88T4903
- social psychology, socioeconomic development role, USSR; 88T3507
- social psychology, USSR, restructuring efforts; 88T3868
- social science-government policy interplay, USSR, economic policy shifts; 88T3354 sex-role perceptions, language use/humor patterns, US; 88T4313 sexuality depictions, changing trends, traditional women's magazines, US; content analysis; 1900-1980; 88T5301 sexual attitudes/behaviors, college preparatory vs public high school students, US; questionnaires, interviews, 88T4712 sexual distance, US blacks, racial/ethnic groups; scale, 88T4399 sexual psychology, musical groups, stereotypes/personality traits, questionnaire; professional orchestra musicians, US/Canada, 88T4334

 social survey research, history/relation to academic research, 19th-/20th-century US/GB; 88S20144
 sociobiological hypothesis testing, legal opinions' use, US, case studies, 88T4655 socioeconomic opportunity/occupational mobility, rural areas, US vs India, 1960s-1970s; 88T4265 sport information dissemination services, gambling usages, US, 88T3977 sport, high school curriculums, US, embryological/psychological explanations, 88T4037 sport-media ideological/commercial interrelationship, content analysis, newspapers, Iceland/England/US, 88T3989 sports gambling-mass media relationship, US, 88T4025
 suburban development, 19th-/20th-century US, English influence, 88T4281
 suburbanization, national US vs sunbelt metropolitan patterns, census data, 88T4272
 suburbanization, US/England, Robert L. Fishman's views critiqued, 88T4288
 suburbanization, US, book-review essay, 88T4296
 suicide patterns, social characteristics, US Amish, official statistics, newspaper obituaries, informants, Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, 1974-1983, 88T4895
 surgical care quality, professional performance, US hospitals, organizational variables; 88T4956
 teaching of acting, US colleges/universities, history/development, content analysis; college catalogs/national convention programs/published books, 1920-1960; 88T4327
 technological innovation/productivity, industry-university cooperation, US, 88T4571
 underemployment, black vs white males, US urban centers, residential location, education, age, Current Population Surveys, 1970-1982, 88T3737
 unemployed men, wives' withdrawal from work reasons, GB/US/Australia, literature review, 88T3688
 union growth/decline, 20th-century US, single equation model proposed, secondary data; 88T3779
 urban geographic research trends, US/GB; literature review; 1985/86, 88T4293
 US intelligence operation, WWII, Berlin, Germany/Tokyo, Japan message deciphering, 88T3807
 US sociology, Iván Szelényi's work, interview, 88T3332
 Vietnamese refugees' adaptation, US, kinship structure, 88T4622 violent juvenile crime prevention, neighborhood-based mobilization programs, police reports, surveys, residents/youths, Bronx, New York/Chicago, Illinois/Dallas, Texas/New Orleans, Louisiana/San Diego & Los Angeles, California, 1981-1986; 88T5105 water quality planning programs, public/private interest participation, US, survey, North Carolina, 1970s, 88T5210 women's return to school, motivational factors/economic outcome, US, longitudinal surveys, 1968-1973; 88T5274 work attitudes/economic theory, historical changes, US; 88T4168 work centrality/importance, Japan vs US, interviews, 88T3703 worker-owners' class position, US/Western European cooperatives, job stress/satisfaction impacts, secondary empirical data, 88T4160
 WWII internment camps, US, Japanese-American legal movement, case studies, 88T3945
 Yiddish-speaking Jewish elderly, US, socioeconomic/demographic profile, census data; 1970; 88T4644
United States Supreme Court school desegregation policy, Michigan/Ohio, political/legal influences, district/Appellate/Supreme courts' responses, 88T4356 Universities
 German universities/National Socialist Party interdependence, 1933-1945, 88T4395
 teaching of acting, US colleges/universities, history/development, content analysis; college catalogs/national convention programs/published books, 1920-1960; 88T4327
 technological innovation/productivity, industry-university cooperation, US, 88T4571 universities, institutional vigor undermined, causes, 88T5173 universities/government policy changes, political causes, GB, 88T4372 university quality of life, faculty members' ratings; questionnaire; State U of New York, Buffalo; 88T4385 Unwed Mothers

 adolescent motherhood, positive aspects; literature review; 88T4747 adolescent mothers/their children, integrated multiagency program, Vancouver, British Columbia; 88T3850 child abuse/neglect, urban public assistance single-parent mothers; contraceptive problems, unplanned fertility, interviews; 88T4891 interorganizational coordination/communication, social services, pregnant/parenting adolescent clients, agency/community resources; fieldwork; Parents Too Soon program, Illinois; 1983; 88T4884 out-of-wedlock births, USSR, Baltic republics, questionnaire survey, females, 88T4847 parenting behavior, adolescent mothers, preparenting information course impact, psychological testing data, 88T4687 premarital pregnancy rate change causes, Kikuyu community, Kenya, demographic/ethnographic data, 1940-1983, 88T4729 self-esteem, unwed teenage mothers, psychological tests; state-sponsored training program participants, Delaware, 88T4708 teenage childbearing/neonatal mortality association questioned, heterogeneous explanation proposed, US, research review; 88T4869 teenage pregnancy, knowledge/lack vs family conflict explanations, literature review, 88T4885 unwed motherhood, changing societal attitudes, Belgium, social/medical developments, secondary data; 1960-1981, 88T4805 Upper Class emotions/emotional displays, upper class Europeans, Norbert Elias's control/repression theory critiqued, 88T3546 Urban Areas
 assimilation, internal migrants, Third World cities; farm-origin, gender/educational differences, questionnaire, life histories; Bangkok, Thailand/Bogota, Colombia/Cairo, Egypt, 1977, 1980; 88T4289 black culture/institutions, US cities, Robert E. Park's view; 1914-1944, 88T3371 childrearing expectations, predictive variables, Korean immigrant parents, US, inventory, urban southwest; 88T4832 crowd occurrences, urban areas, 18th-/19th-century England; working time structure, newspaper accounts, historical data; 88T4286
 Gaelic communities' characteristics, urban lowland Scotland; 1709-1891, 88T5167 health/social status, contemporary urban homeless, interviews, Los Angeles County, California; 88T4950 Jackson, Kenneth T., urban history specialist, interview, 88T3391 slum/squalter areas, migrants' settlement/segregation, less developed countries, survey, Cagayan de Oro City, Philippines; 88T4276 social movements, urban areas, literature review, 88T3934
 traditional political organization/new social movement relationship, peace movement, Netherlands; questionnaires, peace activists/residents, urban areas, 1985; 88T3948
 underemployment, black vs white males, US urban centers; residential location, education, age, Current Population Surveys, 1970-1982; 88T3737 urban department store as social force, women's public/secondary relationships, literature review, 88T4287
 urban geographic research trends, US/GB, literature review; 1985/86; 88T4293
 urban hospital departments, living systems process analysis; 88T3831 urban land-use conflicts, state's role, theoretical interpretations; 88T4299 urban social movements' weaknesses, historical conditions, Paraguay; case studies, 1975, 1979, 88T4283
 urban sociology/geography, urban managerial/institutional approach, 88T4279
 urban structure, residential aspects, Cali, Colombia; census, field survey, 88T4303
 violent juvenile crime prevention, neighborhood-based mobilization programs, police reports, surveys; residents/youths, Bronx, New York/Chicago, Illinois/Dallas, Texas/New Orleans, Louisiana/San Diego & Los Angeles, California, 1981-1986; 88T5105
Urban Crime crime control, mass media campaigns, unintended effects; experiment, residents, Dutch city, 88T3991 crime victim restitution orders, urban court system, social work aspects, interviews, court records, 88T5069 localized crime-rate differences, official statistics' validity, Sheffield, England, survey, 88T4275 neighboring-crime relationship, city's physical diversity; questionnaire/census/police data, Toronto, Ontario, 88T4282
 urban gang coalition, 1843 rebellion, Karbala, Iraq, Ottoman Empire; 88T3935

- federal aid policy, higher education, graduation-contingent subsidies; 88T4361
- feminist consciousness development/transformation, Asian-American women; gender, race, social class, culture; 88T5272
- fertility attitudes, male Nigerian college students, Kansas; mail questionnaire; 88T4857
- fertility decline, two-child norm, urban vs rural US, census data, 19th/20th centuries, 88T4619
- fictional literature, US Indians' portrayal, contextual analysis; 1820-1850; 88T3604
- free time use, technological growth's effect; secondary data, Norway, Netherlands, US, UK, Canada; 1960s-1980s, 88T4014
- geographical knowledge, gender differences, attentional hypothesis proposed; experiments; undergraduates, US, 88T5222
- Habermas, Jurgen, social theory, US reception, 88T3374
- Habits of the Heart: Individualism and Commitment in American Life* by Robert N. Bellah et al, societal addiction/dependence patterns; review essay; 88T3450
- Habits of the Heart: Individualism and Commitment in American Life* by Robert N. Bellah et al, US moral predicament, essay, 88T3465
- health care access, Mexican immigrants, US; political economy perspective, 88T4909
- high school setting, adolescent social development impact, literature review; 88T4389
- high technology, US, weaknesses/difficulties, 88T4600
- higher/adult education, US, corporations' role, case studies, institutes, French viewpoint, 88T3762
- homeless, geographic/demographic profile, need typology developed, US; interviews, Ohio; 88T5241
- homelessness, US; political/economic factors, 88T5231
- housing policy strategies, Western Europe/US; 88T5187
- humorous language pragmatics, oral Anglo-American culture, ambiguity effect; 88T4314
- ideology-methodology relationship, network analysis, US/France, 88T3278
- immigrant community formation/continuance, elderly's role, Nicaragua, San Francisco, California; participant observation, interviews, survey, 1984-1986, 88T5059
- in-/outgroup communication, university students, US/Korea/Japan, individualism-collectivism, questionnaires; 88T3497
- individualism vs commitment, US social reality, book review essay, 88T3469
- Indochinese refugee adjustment patterns, sociocultural factors, US Office of Refugee Resettlement data, 1975-1981, 88T3599
- infant/child mortality, seasonal variations, US, statistics, New York, New York/Chicago, Illinois/New Orleans, Louisiana, 1870-1919, 88T4632
- informal economic sector, vendors' characteristics, US, interviews, families; 88T3906
- informal economy, female participation, US, government records, surveys; 88T3902
- instructor credibility/empathy, foreign police training program, US Office of Public Safety officials'/trainees' perceptions; interviews, document analysis; 88T3317
- integration experiences, socioeconomic aspects, Southeast Asian immigrants, US; 88T4620
- integrity level, illegal bookmakers, US, interviews, gamblers, book-makers; 88T5343
- internal labor markets, cost/commitment/reward determinants, US organizations; interviews, 88T3668
- international illegal migration analysis, migrant decision-making framework, US Simpson-Rodino Immigration Reform/Control Act critiqued; 88T4648
- intracultural communication rules/outcomes, Mexican Americans/blacks/whites, cultural similarities/differences, questionnaires, 88T3579
- Italian-American communities, US, immigrant experience; personal experience, secondary data; 88T3608
- joining armed services, self-selection, US high school students, promilitary values; questionnaires; 1976-1985, 88T3801
- labor organization, union power erosion, US; 88T3744
- land use conflicts, farmers vs urban/rural fringe residents; case study; sewage sludge, New Jersey; 88T4250
- law enforcement, future directions, US, Delphi survey; 88T4515
- lawyer explosion, US, total justice concept; book review essay; 88T4486
- learning problems, objective disability paradigm tested, US; states' special education classifications, 88T4364
- legal insanity defense, US; 88T4506
- mainstream/minority religions' interaction, structural convergence/divergence, US/Brazil/West Africa; 88T4424
- marital satisfaction/communication behavior, US vs Indian marriages, questionnaires; Kerala, Michigan; 88T4846
- mass communication studies, changing perspectives/US influences, post-WWII Japan; 88T3988
- medical control of parenting, new reproductive technologies, US/Canada/GB; 88T4738
- medical profession's history, US vs Norway; 88T4193
- Mexican migrants, network connections, US; 88T4636
- national productivity, research/development contributions, US, census data; 88T4573
- national prominence/religious affiliation relationship, US, Who's Who in America data, church membership statistics; 1986, 88T4453
- national public language policy, US, 88T4317
- national social structure models, US/GB similarities, French differences; census statistics; 88S20161
- neoconservatism, ideological/social class foundations, US/Western Europe, literature review; 88T4120
- new religious movements, freedom/regulation, GB vs US; 88T4461
- new technology use, workplace problems, Europe/US, 88T4597
- North American Jewry's funding pledges, Israel's Project Renewal ethnic identity needs, 88T4443
- nursery school children's peer culture/socialization, interactive process, US/Italy compared, participant observation, 88T4667
- Old Order Amish subculture, social changes, questionnaire, families, Iowa/Indiana/Ohio/Tennessee/Pennsylvania, 88T5053
- organizational structure, US vs Iran, causal model evaluated, interviews, organizational records; 88T3833
- participation-outcome research, methodological inconsistencies, US literature review, questionnaires; 1950-1986, 88T3845
- participatory job design, task/skill training; field studies, Sweden vs East Germany, 88T3786
- passive vs selective TV viewing patterns, US, interviews, 1982, 88T3985
- peace movement, conceptual framework, US/West Germany, 88T3943
- physical anthropology research, US social/political biases, Aleš Hrdlička's impact, 88T4558
- police discipline, US/Canada/GB; exploratory research, 88T4531
- political mobilization, immigrant groups, US/Canada/Argentina, 88T4087
- popular music, effects/politics, US vs England; 88T4328
- postfeminist culture, US, 2-book/article review essay, 88T5289
- poverty/social welfare utilization, immigrant families, US, census data, 1960-1980, 88T5236
- preschool children, US, parent/sibling demographic changes, census data; 1980, 88T4669
- private vs public "parties," US Protestantism, questionnaire survey, Reformed Church in America laity, 88T4446
- privatization, reform strategies evaluated, Norway; secondary data US, 88T4095
- productivity change-intracontractual strike activity, US manufacturing industry; government statistics; 1961-1981; 88T3706
- professional hockey players, game emotional performance, US, participant observation, 88T4026
- racial inequality, major league baseball, US; 88T4028
- rape rates, interstate differences, US, sexual liberalism, pornography consumption, demographic variables, General Social Survey, crime reports, pornography circulation statistics; 1972-1983, 88T5257
- rape victimization, public/personal responses, US/Europe, 88T5080
- relationship homophily/heterophily, US foreign advisors, advisee country counterparts; case study, police assistance program, Indonesia 1954-1964; 88T4041
- reputational status, technical research organizations, US; organizational performance/structure, network position, interviews; personnel nuclear waste management/photovoltaics research; 88T3841
- residential mobility-marital dissolution rate correlation, social integration theory; General Social Surveys, 88T4830
- residential segregation trends, blacks/Hispanics/Asians, US, census 88T3587
- science/technology strategies/priorities, France/West Germany/Sweden/Japan/UK/US, cross-national data; 88T4604
- scientists/science, increased political participation, US, ethical guidelines/responsibilities; 1940s-present; 88T4593
- "searching for a word" activity, gestures use; videotaped conversations; 88T3562
- self-esteem, US vs West German adolescents; family context variable survey; 88T4685
- sex discrimination; covert mechanisms, cross-occupational analysis, US; interviews; 88T3667 interpersonal understanding, social scientists' difficulties, Max Weber/

Karl Marx, 88T3227

Jeram

service development, WWII veterans; early vs later service entry; archival data, 88T4043

post-traumatic stress syndrome, Vietnam War veterans' adjustment, spouse's role, 88T5334

Justification

of criminal justice attitudes, US public; demographic/behavioral variables, crime victimization; news poll, 88T5081 of criminal victimization/fear of crime, elderly vs other age groups, General Social Surveys; adults, 88T5083 of sexual victimization/resistance success, female college students, situational blame model; questionnaires, inventories, 88T5250 of rape-blaming, New Bedford, Massachusetts, rape case, ethnic/sexual prejudice, newspaper accounts, 88T5066 of criminalization, high school students, US, sex, routine activities, delinquent activities; national/local surveys, Tucson, Arizona, 88T5074

Justice

of crime experience/anxiety, elderly women; interview survey, 88T5039

of crime victims' treatment, values issues, US, 88T5070

Victorian Period of prominent women, achievement recognition, Victorian/Edwardian England; reference books, 1860-1914, 88T5285

Violence Recordings of child abuse victims, videotaped testimony admissibility legislation, Texas, 88T4473

Vietnam

of agricultural collectives, socioeconomic differentiation, rural North Vietnam, 1970s, 88T4242

Vietnam War

of post-traumatic stress syndrome, Vietnam War veterans' adjustment, spouse's role, 88T5334

Wages

of household labor allocation, mobility, central Java villages, observation, interview data, 1985/86, 88T4771

Violence

of the Anthropology of Violence by Daniel Riches, review essay, of courtship violence, social class, resource balance, family violence experience, questionnaire data, 88T4756 of dangerous inmate management, Canadian/US/Scottish prisons, of filmed violence depictions, emotional response, racial/psychological/social class factors; experiment; New England, 88T5256 of live deprivation/performance > verbal discrepancy/violent crime relationship, juvenile probationers, case histories, 88T5123 of nonviolence, cultural context, Semai Senoi people, Malaysia, psycho-metric test, 88T3658 of nonviolence, sociocultural mechanisms, Zapotec Indians, Mexico, fieldwork, 88T5260
88T5254

88T4529

of researcher/subject relationship crises, ritual/structural violence, Papua New Guinea adolescent groups; fieldwork, 88T3250 of violent citizen-police confrontations, police behavior, officer gender, case studies, 1983, New York City, 88T4540 of violent vs property crime, punitive attitudes, residents, Calgary, Alberta; interviews, 88T5088

Visual Arts

of documentary photography, work images, reading/decoding issues, 88T5344

Voluntarism

of voluntary drug agencies, service provision, interorganizational cooperation, London, England; survey, 88T3855

Volunteers

of drug treatment/rehabilitation, voluntary agencies, GB, policy issues, fieldwork, 88T4997

of subjective well-being; socioeconomic characteristics, voluntary association involvement; questionnaire; adults, Sydney, Australia/Los Angeles, California/London, England; 1976, 1978, 1980, 88T3856 of volunteer hospice workers, retention/job satisfaction; personal characteristics, questionnaires, Kentucky; 88T4944

Voting

of voting sequence, algorithm constructed; 88T3292

Voting Behavior

of London council winners, existential possibility, electoral process, social homogeneity, simulation techniques, 88T3256 of election results/voting behavior, Mexico City, Mexico, 88T4102 of election results/voting behavior, Michoacán, Mexico; interviews, press data, 88T4125

of individual's voting decisions, Quebec; family, spouse; interviews; francophones; 1985; 88T4061 of parliamentary election results, Netherlands, 1986; pillarization, candidate orientations, ideology, 88T4144 of political ideas/behavior, interclass relations; consumption cleavages, questionnaire; voters, UK; 1984; 88T5195 of subjective social class voting, Canada, region, socioeconomic/social-psychological variables; election study; 1984, 88T4147 of voter registration/jury selection, spatial/racial imbalances, Los Angeles County Superior Court, California, statistical mapping, 88T4082 of voting intentions-economic conditions relationship, temporal structure, national surveys; GB; 1956-1984, 88T4121 of voting strategy sophistication committee decisionmakers; experiment, 88T4474

Wages

of comparable worth movement's potential/limitations, participants' perceptions, US; archival/documentary evidence, interviews, case studies, Contra Costa County/San Jose, California, 88T5268 of domestic production, services-goods shift, unpaid at-home work increase, technology, surveys, Canada/Netherlands/Norway/GB/US, of men's/women's full-time wage differences, US, comparable worth concept questioned, 88T3861

88T3900

Wales

of language distribution, Wales, social implications, 1981, 88T4321 of language use, educational policies, Wales, case studies, South/Mid Glamorgan conflicts, 88T4394 of retirement migration decline, England/Wales, national longitudinal study, 1970-1981, 88T4621

of standard spoken Welsh models, social status/structural integrity, dialect continua, 88T4318 of suicide rate, England/Wales, 1530-1590; socioeconomic factors, legal records, 88T3538 of Welsh Language Act adoption/administration, ideological discourse/power struggles, 88T4123

of Welsh language, planning history/cultural status, 88T4308 of Welsh revitalization, social class variation, prestige extension, of Williams, Raymond, Welsh socialist literary figure, contributions assessed, 88T4342

88T4322

of work-leisure relationship, South Wales, job category, gender; questionnaire survey, 88T4000

War

of social/political theory, peace/war neglect, Immanuel Kant's/Jonathan Schell's works, 88T4088

Water Supply of resource use patterns, Rhone River (France)delta, water system control, 88T4263

of water quality planning programs, public/private interest participation, US, survey, North Carolina, 1970s, 88T5210

Watergate Scandal

of key political symbols, consensus/exploitation uses, policy science, case study, "Watergate" newspaper headlines/editorials, 88T5189

Wealth of inherited wealth experience; interviews, 73 rich men & women;

88T4134

Weber, Max

of general value theory emergence, economic value theory/neo-Kantian trend influence, late 19th-/early 20th-century Austria/Germany, 88S20143

of interpersonal understanding, social scientists' difficulties, Max Weber/
Karl Marx, 88T3227

of religion/society relationship, India, Max Weber's notions, 88T3409 of Simmel, Georg, Max Weber's views, translated book introduction; of social science doctrine's history, Max Weber's role, 88S20148 of Western capitalism development, Max Weber vs Werner Sombart's theories, 88S20160

88T3398

Weddings

of religious weddings, motivations, French-Canadians, statistics; Quebec;
1976, 1980, 1985, 88T4736

of wedding cake/ceremonies, symbolic meanings, UK, anthropological perspective, 88T3624

Welfare Policy

of social/individual choice, welfare economics; 88T5186

Welfare Recipients of unemployment images/explanations, unemployed workers, Italy; interviews, time sheets, 1984-1987, 88T3699

Urban Development

- environmental perception researchers/urban designers, relationship problems; 88T4284
- neighboring-crime relationship; city's physical diversity; questionnaire/census/police data, Toronto, Ontario; 88T4282
- suburban development, 19th-/20th-century US, English influence; 88T4281
- suburbanization, national US vs sunbelt metropolitan patterns; census data; 88T4272
- suburbanization, US/England, Robert L. Fishman's views critiqued; 88T4288
- suburbanization, US, book-review essay; 88T4296
- urban economics, informal sector characteristics, Third World planning implications, 1965-1985; 88T4278
- urban public transit authority, living systems process analysis; 88T3816
- urban social movement concept critiqued, social movement in urban politics concept proposed, Canada; 88T4285
- urban structure, residential aspects, Cali, Colombia, census, field survey; 88T4303

Urban Education

- black urban public high school dropouts vs graduates, psychological differences; questionnaire; 88T4413

Urban Policy

- job market structure changes, San Francisco, California, city growth policy; 88T4280
- rapid urbanization, psychological/social pathologies; 88T4973

Urban Population

- mortality, endogenous vs exogenous demographic variables, large metropolitan populations; official statistics, London, England, 1675-1825; 88T4630
- Queen Street riot, 1984, Auckland, Australia, media/public/politicians' reactions; 88T3951

Urban Poverty

- urban poor, family breakdown, Mexico, questionnaire, households, Oaxaca/Reynosa; 88T5243

Urban Renewal

- urban public housing projects, dispersal trend, residents' satisfaction, interviews, Charlotte, North Carolina; 88T4294
- urban renewal, public policy initiatives, objectives/outcomes; 88T5190
- urban sociology/geography, urban managerial/institutional approach; 88T4279

Urban Sociology

- urban ethnographic studies, changing approaches; 88T3376
- Urban Life* journal name change; 88T3336
- urban sociology, changing paradigms, Japan, socioeconomic changes, 1945-1980s; 88T4297

Urban to Rural Migration

- land use conflicts, farmers vs urban/rural fringe residents, case study, sewage sludge, New Jersey; 88T4250

Urbanism

- urban primacy, cross-national analysis, economic development, peripheral vs semiperipheral world system position, UN statistics; 88T4069

Urbanization

- agricultural development, cocoa economy, Ghana, urbanization; 88T4234
- family life/social structure, post-WWII Poland, industrialization, urbanization, secondary data, statistics; 88T4845
- rapid urbanization, psychological/social pathologies; 88T4973
- suburban development, 19th-/20th-century US, English influence; 88T4281
- suburbanization, national US vs sunbelt metropolitan patterns; census data; 88T4272
- suburbanization, US/England, Robert L. Fishman's views critiqued; 88T4288
- suburbanization, US, book-review essay; 88T4296
- suicide rates, urban areas, Catholicism's impact; county-level data; US; Emile Durkheim's law tested; 88T4432
- urbanization process, Athens, Greece; historical data; 88T4290
- urbanization, India; 88T4301
- urbanization, Misiones Province, Argentina; census data; 1970-1980; 88T4295
- women's status, economic/social marginalization, peripheral nations; 88T5286

Utah

- public policy orientations, natives vs immigrants, Utah; interviews; 1984; 88T4645

Utilization

- police-related research, relevance/dissemination/awareness evaluation; questionnaire survey, interviews; operational police commanders, urban police departments; 88T4550
- seaside resorts' popularity decline, socioeconomic/cultural factors, GB; 88T4008

Utopias

- socioreligious movements, Indian groups, Latin America; 88T3931

Uttar Pradesh, India

- agricultural production, sugarcane cultivation's role, colonial India historical evidence; Gorakhpur region, Uttar Pradesh, Marxist perspective; 88S20147

Vaccination

- acquired immune deficiency syndrome, vaccine development, legal, ethical/policy considerations; 88T4922

Validity

- article selection, academic journals, editorial bias; 88T4595
- autobiographical memory models, personal vs semantic facts, experiment; university students, England; 88T3251
- no-difference research findings, eliminating validity threats; 88T3304
- quasi-experimental research, external/internal validity distinction proposed; 88T3216

Value (Economics)

- general value theory emergence, economic value theory/neo-Kantian trend influence, late 19th-/early 20th-century Austria/Germany; 88S20143

Value Orientations

- children's perceived utility/cost, Iran, interview survey, married women; 88T4662
- children's qualities/skills, parental preferences, Australia; social class ethnic background; interviews, scale; native-/Italian-born parents; 88T3485
- crime/criminal justice, value change effects, Federal Republic of Germany; research review; 88T4488
- devaluation, French army; 88T3804
- family formation/value orientations, international/age differences, Europe, economic/ideational trends; questionnaires, scales; 88T5155
- fertility, cultural perceptions, southern India, Sri Lanka; field data, 1974/1984; 88T4878
- Habits of the Heart. Individualism and Commitment in American Life* by Robert N. Bellah et al, societal addiction/dependence patterns; review essay; 88T3450
- mental health-family of origin effects; questionnaire data; 88T3503
- personality/social psychology, research methods/topics; feminist values; content analysis, journal articles; 88T5281
- value trends, college students, 1950s-1980s, questionnaire survey; 88T3628
- work motivation, related values, Africa, theoretical-methodological problems; 88T5176
- work values/cultural tradition, Japan; questionnaire; 1978; 88T3745

Values

- values, conceptual issues; 88T3435

Vancouver, British Columbia

- adolescent mothers/their children, integrated multiagency program Vancouver, British Columbia; 88T3850

Veblen, Thorstein Bunde

- technological revolution, Thorstein Veblen's The Engineers and the Price System; 88T4610

Veneral Diseases

- fertility, venereal disease effects, rural peoples, Uganda; medical-demographic survey; 88T4957
- social history of medicine, venereal disease, 19th-/20th-century reactions, Belgium; 88T4965

Venezuela

- property types/acquisition/management, female control, Guajiro cattle herders, Colombia/Venezuela; 88T3663

Verbal Communication

- humorous language pragmatics, oral Anglo-American culture, ambiguity effect; 88T4314
- love deprivation/performance > verbal discrepancy/violent crime relationship, juvenile probationers; case histories; 88T5123
- self-knowledge, tacit/practical vs articulate/discursive knowledge, research implications; 88T3534
- verbal humor, linguistic theory relevance, script-based semantic theory; 88T4315

Verstehen

- behavioral sciences, symbolic systems description/prescription, metalinguistic approach; reply; 88T3218 range delinquency, community perceptions/reactions; survey; adults, Racine, Wisconsin; article/comments/reply; 88T5121 parental satisfaction, farm families; wife's farm task participation/decision-making role; interviews; Wisconsin; 88T4799 political sophistication, US vs Swedish young adults; questionnaire; Wisconsin/Texas/Stockholm; 88T4112

tribcraft illness, death, fear of sorcery, Gnao people, Papua New Guinea; case studies; 88T3511 injuries

child sexual abuse cases, child witness testimony, rules of evidence liberalization; 88T4487 ability of children's testimony, legal proceedings, cognitive/moral development theories; 88T4495

in perceived decision-making roles, Mexican-American wives, acculturation process; questionnaire; Mexican-American/Anglo wives, southwestern US; 88T4812

men's Education

functional attainment/literacy, women, developed/developing countries, UN statistics; 88T5284

men's return to school, motivational factors/economic outcome, US, longitudinal surveys, 1968-1973; 88T5274

men's Groups

legal feminist abortion collective's organization 1969-1973, Chicago, Illinois; interviews, members; 88T4859 war on pornography, women as social control agents, Norbert Elias's theoretical perspective; 88T4497

women's cooperative associations, Tonga Kingdom (South Pacific), wealth/resource distribution; 88T5323

men's Rights

comparable worth movement's potential/limitations, participants' perceptions, US, archival/documentary evidence, interviews, case studies, Contra Costa County/San Jose, California; 88T5268

pornography, women's movement's position, UK; 88T5273

women's law as legal discipline, University of Oslo, Norway; 88T4475 women's movement, Latin America/Peru, structure/demands/strategies; 88T5293 methods

question wording, types/effects, French-language surveys, experiments; 88T3260 work

documentary photography, work images, reading/decoding issues; 88T5344

domestic production, services-goods shift, unpaid at-home work increase, technology, surveys, Canada/Netherlands/Norway/GB/US; 88T3900

informal economy, female participation, US, government records, surveys; 88T3902

informal work, employed/unemployed individuals' participation, England, interviews, households, Isle of Sheppey, Kent, 1981; 88T3754

work Attitudes

classical sociological traditions, work orientation questioned; 88T3751

employment attitudes, re-employed males, long-term unemployment, longitudinal interviews; 1981-1984; 88T3756

industrial worker behavior, productiveness/socioeconomic regulators, USSR; 88T3686 organizational perversion, object loss/separation defense mechanism, psychological theory; 88T3823

work centrality/importance, Japan vs US, interviews; 88T3703

work involvement, age differences, cohort, job characteristics, developmental aging process; surveys; 1973, 1977; 88T3740

work motivation, related values, Africa, theoretical-methodological problems; 88T5176

work Environment workplace women, US; working environment, race, official statistics, 1975-1979; 88T5267

work Experience

religious behavior/status satisfaction/women's issue opinions, Orthodox Jewish women, New York; secular influences, interviews; 88T3577

skill transfer, military training-civilian employment, national longitudinal surveys; 88T4379

work social class position, psychological/health effects, capitalist labor process, questionnaire; workers/management, California, Marxist analysis; 88T4955 work Groups

autonomous work group, Yugoslav factory; questionnaire, workers, model evaluated; 88T3787

self-managed groups, leader's role, social learning theory/

sociotechnical systems perspective; 88T3829

Swedish production, autonomous work groups, managers' motivations; interviews; unionists, employers; 1980/81; 88T3784

Work Humanization

employee quality circles, management role; interviews, questionnaires; manufacturing/chemical/pharmaceutical plants, US/GB; 88T3676

Work Leisure Relationship

free time use, technological growth's effect; secondary data; Norway, Netherlands, US, UK, Canada, 1960s-1980s; 88T4014

learning processes/work-leisure relationships, employee-run firms, West Germany; interviews; 88T3552 work-leisure relationship, Hungary, survey data; 1972-1982; 88T3994

Work Organization

agricultural sciences, research problem selection, organizational context; 88T4568

computer-aided production systems, personnel/operational impacts, mechanical engineering firms, West Germany, questionnaires, interviews, observations; 88T5174

computerization/work organization changes, women employees, Australia, case study, newspaper classified advertisement telephone room, Melbourne; 88T3764

gender relations/sexual division of labor, industrial organizations; technological innovations; case study; confectionery industry, New South Wales, Australia, 1850s-1985; 88T3741

managerial work, capitalist enterprises, structuralist research approach; 88T4232

office sex as career advancement means, office harlot typology developed, interviews; 88T5306

publicity agencies, organization/management solutions, Rome, Italy; interviews, agency representatives; 88T3739 scientific work organization variety, theoretical/technical uncertainty, research issues; 88T4560 small-scale miners' production strategies, developing countries, methodological issues, case study, Bolivia; 88T3713

supply/demand/remuneration issues, USSR, worker competition; 88T3929

work design/training, participative approach, experts' roles; 88T3750

work organization, nuclear power plant dismantling, Italy, case study; Garighano; 88T3687

workers' self activation, cognitive/communicative aspects, Sweden; 88T3736

working class consciousness/organization, southern US industries, social/economic/political conditions, interviews, historical data, 1930s-1940s; 88T3765

workplace democracy, Harry Braverman's vs C. Pateman's models; 88T3715

workplace organization, small groups' role, social science research/theory, historical survey, 1935-1981; 88T3677

Work Orientations

at-home computer work, social problems, organizational models/solutions, secondary data; 88T3683 working class structure/culture of work evolution, East European countries, statistics; 88T3720 job performance strategies/discrimination, female prison guards, male prisons, interviews, NY, Rhode Island; 88T4557

Work Skills

participatory job design, task/skill training, field studies, Sweden, US, East Germany; 88T3786

skill transfer, military training-civilian employment; national longitudinal surveys; 88T4379

Work Values

career development, work values, discontinuities during adolescence; psychological testing, cross-sectional sample; 88T4706 clinical social work, educational/practice issues, professionals' opinions, questionnaires, state society member/nonmember clinicians vs nonclinicians; 88T4215 meaning of work, cross-national analysis, surveys, workers, Federal Republic of Germany/other developed countries; 88T3794 underlying structure of work values, occupational reinforcers' indications, data analysis methods compared, questionnaire; adult Jews, Israel; 88T3300

unemployed's work ethic West Germany, empirical study criticized; 88T3383

women's work, popular work definition's impact, expanded definition proposed; 88T3695

work centrality/importance, Japan vs US, interviews; 88T3703

work ideas, oral literature, Sulka people, New Britain, Papua New Guinea, fieldwork, 1980-1985; 88T4247

work society crisis, West Germany, 4-book review essay; 88T3461 work value redefinition, postindustrial Italy; 88T3684

Welfare Services

elderly care, intergenerational family relationships, changing trends; interviews; elderly, Belgium; 1965-1985; 88T5057 health/welfare service integration/coordination, elderly, Netherlands; observations; elderly clients, service organization leaders; 88T5033
poverty/social welfare utilization, immigrant families, US; census data; 1960-1980; 88T5236 private nonprofit organization welfare policy implementation, post-WWII Netherlands, government interference justification; 88T5185

Welfare State

democratic socialism, economic vulnerability response, Australia vs Sweden; 88T5227 employment/industrial policy, state/local government conflicts, Nordic welfare states; 88T3914 psychological/physical health, middle-aged/older black women; social roles, interview survey; 88T3578
welfare changes, Sweden/Denmark, Norwegian research/planning implications; 2-book review essay; 88T4052 welfare state growth; 8-book review essay; 88T3921 welfare state, public opinion, Nordic countries; 88T3917 welfare state, Scandinavia, feminist vs liberal vs Marxist perspectives; 88T4163 welfare state/market economy relationship, research review; 88T3927

Well Being

acquired immune deficiency syndrome anxiety, treatment strategies; 88T4926
deprivation feelings, children, maternal employment, interviews; first/second graders, Tel Aviv, Israel; 88T4673 economic/social well-being relationship, traditional ethnic community organizations' contributions, first generation Japanese Americans, survey, 1964-1966; 88T5168
employment attitudes, re-employed males, long-term unemployment, longitudinal interviews, 1981-1984; 88T3756 family well-being, multivariate model, national survey data; 88T4794 health attitude changes, 20th-century US; 88T4915
love deprivation/performance > verbal discrepancy/violent crime relationship, juvenile probationers; case histories; 88T5123 mental well-being, married vs unmarried males/females, General Social Surveys; 88T4800 physical health self-assessments, adolescents, competence, psychological well-being, physical symptoms, longitudinal questionnaire data, public schools; 88T4701 psychological well-being, employed women, multiple social roles; survey; 88T3519 psychological well-being, single- vs dual-earner families, relative deprivation; interviews; 88T4786 psychological well-being/marital adjustment, mothers/voluntarily childless/infertile women, scales; 88T4750 quality of life, West Germany, 1978/1980/1984 surveys; 88T5182 subjective well-being, first-married/divorced/remarried adults, marital status, national survey data; 88T4843 subjective well-being, socioeconomic characteristics, voluntary association involvement, questionnaire, adults, Sydney, Australia/Los Angeles, California/London, England, 1976, 1978, 1980; 88T3856 usual vs successful aging, risks/strategies; 88T4660 widowhood, subjective well-being, sex differences, social support, social interaction, religion, interviews; 88T4739

Western Civilization

appetite/changing social control standards, medieval/20th-century Western society, Norbert Elias's theories; 88T3516
civilization/superego relationship, Norbert Elias's/Theodor Adorno's ideas compared; 88T3340
Elias, Norbert, work's influence, social/cultural factors; 88T3357
Quest for Excitement Sport and Leisure in the Civilizing Process by Norbert Elias/Eric Dunning, review essay; 88T4002
Quest for Excitement Sport and Leisure in the Civilizing Process by Norbert Elias/Eric Dunning, review essay; 88T4011
sociology's development, postindependence Nigeria, Western cultural influence; 88T3349
Western civilization, Norbert Elias's civilizing processes theory, applications; 88T3418

Western Europe

fertility, family formation/dissolution trends, intergenerational motivational differences, 19th-/20th-century Western Europe; 88T4797 feudalist-capitalist transition, Western Europe, ruler absolutism, case studies; 88T3875 housing policy strategies, Western Europe/US; 88T5187 immigration trends, Western Europe, post-1960s; 88T4647
neoconservatism, ideological/social class foundations, US/Western Europe; literature review; 88T4120

peace movements, Western Europe, political importance; 88T3966 political party activists, special interest group sympathy, Western Europe; questionnaire; 1978-1982; 88T4119 social democratic states/corporatist structures, Western Europe; 88T4161 socioeconomic data handbook, Western Europe; review essay; 88T3927 traditional political organization/new social movement relationship peace movement, Netherlands; questionnaires; peace activists residents, urban areas; 1985; 88T3948
Western European technological development, cultural aspects, course outline; 88T3331 worker-owners' class position, US/Western European cooperatives, stress/satisfaction impacts; secondary empirical data; 88T4160

Western Society

alternative social movements, Western societies, global approach, literature review; 88T3942
Chinese Boxer/British Luddite movements, symbolic similarities; 88T4462 employment trends, industrial vs information sectors, Western economies, technological innovations; 88T3743 inflation, socioeconomic model, 20th-century Western societies; 88T3909 international development organizations' effectiveness, Western governments' criticisms/reactions, 1980s; 88T3819 Japanese society/economy, Western notions criticized, interviews, statistics; 88T3454 population aging/affluence, Third Age modernization state, GB vs Western countries; official statistics; 88T4631 school size/catchment management, mathematical programming developments' applications, Western society vs Third World; 88T4632
social organization weaknesses, human potential waste, Western developed countries, article/comment/rejoinder; 88T3880 social science history/philosophy, nature-culture opposition, social theory, cultural/social anthropological works analyzed; 88T3629
sociopolitical developments, 20th-century Europe, social myths, influences; 88S20155
Western capitalism development, Max Weber vs Werner Sombart theories; 88S20160
Western sociology, Soviet sociologists' round-table discussion; 88T3392 women's status, Frederick Engels's work, Western feminist vs socialist scholarship; 88T3625

Western States

Chicano intermarriage, southwestern US, three-generational study, marriage records; 88T3574
childrearing expectations, predictive variables, Korean immigrant, parents, US, inventory; urban southwest; 88T4832 coevolutionary development, sedentarism/population growth/resource selection, middle/late Woodland period, midwestern US, article comments/reply; 88T3429 elderly, long-term care potential, family/friends, interviews, case managers/supervisors, Washington/Oregon, 1985; 88T5054 male adolescent delinquents, performance vs verbal IQ test scores vs deprivation, case records, IQ test scores, Boise, Idaho; 88T5122 sexual assault victimization incidence, sorority women, southwestern US university, survey; 88T5261

White Collar Crime

corporate crime, US, deterrence strategies/weaknesses; 88T5341

White Collar Workers

home-based white-collar workers' characteristics, US; 1980 Census data; 88T4203 housewives' community participation, white-collar/professional families, Japan; industrialization, urbanization; participant observation questionnaires, interviews; Tokyo; 88T4780
office sex as career advancement means, office harlot typology developed, interviews; 88T5306 psychological/physical illness/behavior, male vs female Swedish white collar workers; work/nonwork stressors/stress moderators, questionnaire; 88T3725

Whites

poverty, white, single-parent working women, in-depth interviews, respondents; 88T5240
white-suburban-middle-class homosexuals, coming-out process, interview/field data; 88T4720

Widowhood

pastoral women's behavior patterns, Il Chamus, Kenya, widowhood; 88T5314 widowhood, subjective well-being; sex differences, social support, social interaction, religion; interviews; 88T4739

Wisconsin

psychological/physical health, middle-aged/older black women, social roles interview survey; 88T3578

religious behavior/status satisfaction/women's issue opinions, Orthodox Jewish women, New York; secular influences, interviews, 88T3577

role conflict, Indian working women, Haryana villages, 88T3726 self-esteem/depression, males, single- vs dual-wage earner families, husbands'/wives' work-family role assessments, interviews, Iowa, 88T4785 southern California, British female guestworker's views, 88T3641 unemployed women, US, working environment, race, official statistics, 1975-1979, 88T5267

untraditional gender roles/family structure, GB, increased male unemployment/female employment, survey, interviews, Hartlepool, South Wales, 1984, 88T4156

women's stress response, dual-career marriages, 38-subject experiment, 88T4811 work-family interface, families with preschoolers; 1977 Quality of Employment Survey subset, 88T4683

workplaces

home computer work, social problems, organizational models/solutions, secondary data, 88T3683

home-based white-collar workers' characteristics, US, 1980 Census data, 88T4203

industrial home work development/production potential, modern world economy, 18th century-present, 88T3911

injuries, workplace sexual harassment, survey, Boone County, Missouri, 88T4196 power relations, workplace, Cuba, worker-management conflict resolution strategies, 1959-present, 88T3708

workplace democracy, Harry Braverman's vs C. Pateman's models, 88T3715

workplace organization, small groups' role, social science research/theory, historical survey, 1935-1981, 88T3677

workplace sexual harassment, British Sociological Association recommended action guidelines, 88T3335 workshops (Courses)

teaching ideological vs educational functions, democratic transition, field research, teachers' workshops, Paraguay, 88T4348

World Economy

capitalist-communist transition, social sciences' role, Russian Revolution, 88T4127

global economy, paradox management, international relations, 88T5340

global vs multinational firms, technological/economic development impact, 88T3915

industrial home work development/production potential, modern world economy, 18th century-present, 88T3911 preschool enrollment expansion, developed/less-developed countries, female labor force participation, economic/political/organizational factors, official statistics; 1965-1980; 88T4390 slave emancipation, 17th-19th century Brazil, world economy/system changes, 88T3908

women's status, economic/social marginalization, peripheral nations, 88T5286

world economy, long-wave fluctuations, Marxist Ernst Mandel's theories critiqued, 88T3928

World Problems

geopolitical/cultural/sociocultural-political problems, Japan, observation, 88T3453 global environmental crises, misperceptions, evolutionary challenge approach, 88T5209 global modeling, functions/goals/limitations, 88T5175

global problem resolution, high technology/social change potential, alternative solutions, 88T4599

social analysis, potential futures, world/US, 88T4040

World System Theory

alternative social movements, Western societies, global approach literature review; 88T3942

global system, development optimization capacity, human intellectual potential power's utility; 88T5178 globalization theory vs civilization analysis, Vytautas Kavolis's criticisms refuted, 88T3640 income inequalities, intercountry variations, Third World, economic development/political democracy/world system position models compared, statistics; 88T4145

urban primacy, cross-national analysis; economic development, peripheral vs semiperipheral world system position, UN statistics, 88T4069

world system analysis, quantitative macrosociology, econometric methods critiqued; 88T3269 conflicting community concepts, nationalist/internationalist/pacifist writings, Germany, 1914-1933, 88T5152

World War I

World War II

life-course development, WWII veterans, early vs later service entry, archival data, 88T4043

US intelligence operation, WWII, Berlin, Germany/Tokyo, Japan message deciphering, 88T3807

Worldview

Habits of the Heart: Individualism and Commitment in American Life by Robert N. Bellah et al., response, 88T3448 nonviolence, cultural context, Semai Senoi people, Malaysia, psychometric test, 88T3658 reality/causality, children's vs adults' beliefs, theoretical issues, 88T3231

shamanism, Khanty traditional society, Siberia, USSR, 88T4903

social interaction/perceptions, Australian Aboriginals-non-Aboriginals, scales; adolescents, country/city schools, South Australia, 88T3584

social movements, development/strategies/goals, global perspective, 88T3940

worldview, rural Christian youth, France, survey; 88T4693

Writers

black arts movement, "Negritude" movement's literary influence; 88T3337 literary creativity, Nobel Prize recipient/nonlaureate writers; social interaction types/experiences, biographical data, 88T4343

Writing for Publication

academic scientists, politics of knowledge, scientific publications' influence, 88T4580 alternative publications, anthropological journals; 88T4575

citation networks, journal stratification, iterative measure, 88T4564

English-language sociology journals, college/university sociology department chairpersons'/journal editors' rankings, methodological issues, published tables, 1971-1982, 88S20145 scholarly activity, author affiliations as indicators, social work field, citation analysis, professional journals; 88T5134 scientific publication rates, 107-nation comparison, Science Citation Index, 88T4559 community work project/community life satisfaction perceptions, community leaders vs general public, Rawlins, Wyoming, questionnaire; 1983, 88T5145 honor farm prisoners, organizational culture, Wyoming artistic ethnography, 88T4523

Wyoming

Young Adults

adult vs adolescent unwed fathers, self-concept/anxiety levels, questionnaire; southeastern city, 88T5320

affection/sexual intercourse attitudes, dating experience, Australian youth, questionnaire, 88T4721

alcohol consumption, longitudinal patterns, young adults, UK, National Child Development Study, 1958 birth cohort, 88T4998

contraceptive behavior/attitudes, young adults, US, individual/peer group characteristics, questionnaires, New England colleges/universities, social-psychological approach, 88T4877

drug use, male university students, Cairo, Egypt; demographic factors, questionnaire, 88T5020 marital instability/divorce, childbearing-age couples; sociodemographic/economic/attitudinal factors, interviews, Toledo, Ohio, 1978-1985; 88T4753 new parents' problems, firstborn infants' first year, longitudinal questionnaire, 88T4807

political sophistication, US vs Swedish young adults, questionnaire, Wisconsin/Texas/Stockholm, 88T4112

poverty age structure, children/young adults, US, census data, 1960s-1980s, 88T5230

team cohesion/success, ice hockey players, Helsinki, Finland, questionnaires, 88T4034

Youth

achievement orientations, rural Jat youth, Haryana, India, socioeconomic/demographic characteristics, 88T4689 job search efforts/outcome, unemployed vs employed male youth, US; National Longitudinal Survey, 1981; 88T4698

punk rockers, personality traits/family dynamics; questionnaires, scales; punk/nonpunk juvenile delinquents, institution, 88T5107

Queen Street riot, 1984, Auckland, Australia, media/public/politicians' reactions; 88T3951

work values/cultural tradition, Japan; questionnaire; 1978; 88T3745

Worker Attitudes

disadvantaged social security applicants, officials' misleading/inadequate advice, Australia; 88T4470

job attitude assessment/job redesign, traditional questionnaire critiqued, informal discussion proposed; 88T3796

manufacturing plant, change to cooperative management, employees' views, group interviews, Texrose plant, Italy; 88T3936

technological innovation adoption, production/labor force effects, newspaper industry, firm characteristics, case study; Indiana; 88T4195

work values/cultural tradition, Japan, questionnaire; 1978; 88T3745

Worker Control

autonomous work group, Yugoslav factory, questionnaire, workers, model evaluated; 88T3787

self-managed firms, historical development, Yugoslavia, postwar-present; 88T3837

worker-managed firms' efficiency, exogenous/noneconomic factors' effects; 88T3721

Worker Machine Relationship

man-technology relationship/integration, intellectuals' role; 88T3428

Worker Ownership

worker-managed firms' efficiency, exogenous/noneconomic factors' effects; 88T3721

Worker Participation decision-making participation, industrial workers, Netherlands, survey, case studies; Breman installation; 88T3714

industrial worker behavior, productivity/socioeconomic regulators, USSR; 88T3686

job attitude assessment/job redesign, traditional questionnaire critiqued, informal discussion proposed; 88T3796

learning processes/work-leisure relationships, employee-run firms, West Germany; interviews; 88T3552

organizational behavior research trends, labor/management focus; literature review, 1940s-present; 88T3793

participatory job design, task/skill training; field studies, Sweden, US, East Germany; 88T3786

union wage-bargaining power, Denmark, worker participation, 1970s; 88T3711

work design/training, participative approach, experts' roles; 88T3750

worker participation program evaluation, influence of ideas, theories, action; 88T3730 worker participation, worklife decision making, Australian public policy; 88T3697 workers' management, industrial democracies, social regulation strategies; 88T3761 workplace participation, critical rationality model, non-zero-sum power framework, case studies; 88T3728

Workers

delinquency, male workers/high school students, Kwanju, Chonnam, South Korea, questionnaire; 1980; 88T5118

employment/training program, dislocated workers, Delaware, experiment, case study; 1983; 88T3671

evening/weekend alcoholism treatment program, federal employees, US; case study; 88T5008

work-family interface, families with preschoolers, 1977 Quality of Employment Survey subset; 88T4683

workers' mutual help associations, 19th-century Cuba; 88T5326

Workers Compensation Insurance

workmen's compensation, post-WWII UK, political economy perspective; 88T4071

Working Class

authoritarian attitudes-social class relationship, Seymour Martin Lipset's measurement model critiqued; interview surveys, Netherlands; 1975-1985; 88T4138

black/working class theater, South Africa, semiotic production theory proposed; 88T4339

Chartist movement, 19th-century GB, working-class domination; documents, speeches; 88T3952 family composition, working class, England; industrialization; 88T4798 leisure lives, bingo's role, working class women, England; field research, national questionnaire survey; 88T3999 political consciousness/attitudes, working class, Canada; national survey; 88T4146

proletarianization/family, textile workers, Quito, Ecuador; census/survey data; 88T3757

residential relocation experiences, elderly women; social class; interviews; 88T5052 working class consciousness/organization, southern US industries; social/economic/political conditions, interviews, historical data;

1930s-1940s; 88T3765

working class gambling, post-1800 England; 88T4003

working class structure/culture of work evolution, East European countries; statistics; 88T3720

working class, research tendencies, Mexico; 88T4137 working class's identity/social status, Montreal, Quebec; family origins, interviews, questionnaire; French-Canadian workers/wives; 1962/63, 1984; 88T4761

Working Hours

crowd occurrences, urban areas, 18th-/19th-century England, working time structure; newspaper accounts, historical data; 88T4286

future work, hours/quality/type/viable companies, postindustrial society; 88T3710 popular religiosity, workplace conflicts, Italy; field research, Fiat auto mobile factory, Frosinone; 88T3857

social actor behavior regulation, working/leisure time/daily life, research methodology; 88T3785

voluntary night work, municipal highway department employees Quebec, work organization, questionnaire; 1985/86; 88T3742 work scheduling-family interaction relationship, construction of relational paradigm; 88T4768 work-leisure relationship, South Wales; job category, gender; questionnaire survey; 88T4000

Working Women

A Lesser Life The Myth of Women's Liberation in America by Sylvia Ann Hewlett; review essays/reply; 88T5298

activism, female office workers, facilitating/inhibiting factors, interviews, Baltimore Working Women members/nonmembers, Maryland; 88T3682 adult married women's maternal/career roles, female college students' perceptions, experiment; 88T4180

advanced capitalist societies, work/income disadvantages, women, statistics, census data, US, Italy, 1980s; 88T3694

Australian taxation law, family dealing concept, feminist/poststructuralist interpretation; 88T5275

comparable worth movement's potential/limitations, participants' perceptions, US, archival/documentary evidence, interviews, case studies, Contra Costa County/San Jose, California; 88T5268

computerization/work organization changes, women employees, Australia, case study, newspaper classified advertisement telephone room, Melbourne; 88T3764

deprivation feelings, children, maternal employment, interviews, first second graders, Tel Aviv, Israel; 88T4673 economic crises, working women's amelioration, US; census data 1930-1984; 88T3776 farm women's work, characteristics/knowledge base/remuneration economic analysis; 88T4255 female police officers, coping strategies; interviews; New York City; 88T5278

gender meanings, women's work experience, First/Third Worlds, technological development, 4-book review essay; 88T5317

household division of labor/women's employment, sociological/economic/historical analyses, 3-book review essay; 88T5303 household labor, husband's vs wife's participation; life cycle stage, panel data; white couples; 88T4820 income inequality, gender/age/household differences, Norway, labor force participation, working hours; surveys; 1970-1984; 88T4179

informal economy, female participation, US; government records surveys; 88T3902

job satisfaction, employed mothers; family variables; questionnaire Ohio; 88T3767 labor force participation, women, Kenya; socioeconomic/demographic ecological factors, survey, census; 88T3727 maternal career involvement, adolescent daughters' perceptions/adjustment/goals, fieldwork, interviews; upper-middle class families; 88T3759 occupational rank/wages/opportunities, working women, US, government service privatization; case study; municipal services, Phoenix, Arizona; 88T3696 occupational segregation/wage gap, comparable worth remedy, radical agenda; 88T5292 occupational sexual segregation, social class gender differences, Canada; census data; 1981; 88T4187

poverty, white, single-parent working women; in-depth interviews, 30 respondents; 88T5240

preschool enrollment expansion, developed/less-developed countries, female labor force participation, economic/political/organizational factors; official statistics; 1965-1980; 88T4390

psychological well-being, employed women; multiple social roles, survey; 88T3519

A Brief User's Guide to Sociological Abstracts

WHAT SOCIOLOGICAL ABSTRACTS OFFERS. . .

A collection of nonevaluative abstracts which reflects the world's serial literature in sociology and related disciplines. Each of the five issues of SA contains the following:

- 1) A Brief User's Guide;
- 2) A Table of Contents—a list of the major SA classifications with their subcategories;
- 3) A Subject Index;
- 4) An Author Index;
- 5) A Source Index; and
- 6) A Supplement—International Review of Publications in Sociology—consisting of a bibliography of book reviews drawn from the journals abstracted in the same issue. Some issues also contain Supplement(s) consisting of:
 - 7) Abstracts of Conference Papers. Cover III contains
 - 8) Abbreviations—a list of abbreviations which are currently in use

SA Reproduction Service: Sociological Abstracts Inc., and the publishers of many journals that are abstracted have contractual agreements which permit SA to provide copies of original documents (abstracts of which appear in SA). A black diamond in the citation and source index indicates that such an agreement exists. Beginning with 1984, the symbol  will appear to indicate those journals for which copies are available from University Microfilms International, Ann Arbor, Michigan. For information pertaining to costs and ordering procedures, please locate the Document Delivery Service printed throughout the issue. For additional information write to

SA Document Delivery Service

P O Box 22206

San Diego CA 92122

Selection and coverage:

Three types of journals have been distinguished in the following order of priority:

type 1 journals published by sociological associations, clubs, faculties and institutes; and periodicals containing the word 'sociology' in their titles. These are abstracted fully, irrespective of language of publication.

type 2 journals from such related areas as anthropology, economics, education, medicine, community development, philosophy, statistics, political science, etc. Such journals are abstracted selectively.

type 3 journals from the humanities and journals of general circulation wherein scholars and laymen publish discussions or criticisms of sociology and sociological topics. These journals are abstracted selectively.

CLASSIFICATION SCHEME:

Two criteria are used in the classification process: to which section of SA is the particular document most relevant, and where more than two areas can justifiably receive the document, the second criterion comes into play, to wit, in which section will the article serve the greatest "information communication" function, i.e., where will it be best or most needed. If none of the above criteria is met, the document is assigned into that section to which the subject can conceivably be of closest relation. Each area is represented by a four digit number, i.e., 0200.

0200 sociology: history and theory which subsumes the following subcategories:

02 of professional interest

06 history and present state of sociology

07 theories, ideas and systems

67 macrosociology: analysis of society

Therefore an article entitled:

"Journal Productivity of Ph.D. Sociologists" would be assigned in subcategory 02 of classification 0200. The actual classification number is 0202.

Accession Number:

An alphanumeric code, the first two digits of which represent the year of publication in SA

Author Names:

The rule is: All authors' names are presented; they appear in inverted order. Authors who have contributed to a symposium or whose names are mentioned as contributors to a document are included in the author index.

Other Types of Authorship:

Editorial (where in fact "editorial" is specified in the primary source)

Name of an institution where a collective authorship is specified as such, i.e., French Public Opinion Institute ---, this symbol is used to indicate a collective authorship where each contributor's work is summarized briefly as part of the abstract and each contributor is author-indexed.

Affiliations:

An affiliation may be the name of an institution or a home address. Where a primary source does not provide an affiliation, none appears. An affiliation is given only for the senior author

Serial Imprint Field:

The field contains the year, volume, issue, month and/or season, and page numbers. Where any of these data are omitted, they are not present in the primary source.

Abstract Entries:

Two types of abstracts are included (a) Informative: summarizes the article, provides information on the hypothesis tested, the specific method(s) of data collection, the subjects of the experiment, type of analysis (which tests, scales, etc.) used, evaluation, and results. (b) Descriptive:

- religious participation, Turkmenistan (USSR) youths; social factors; questionnaires; 88T4439
- unemployed youth, social processes/coping strategies, gender differences, participant observation, interviews, 88T3790
- unemployment, social-psychological aspects, interviews; unemployed young people, Dunedin, New Zealand, 88T4686
- Youth Employment
 - family dynamics, unemployed youths, questionnaires, interviews; employment center applicants, Ontario, 88T4704
- Youth Movements
 - "mod" revivalist movement, members' characteristics/relations/identity formation, interviews, adolescents, midwestern US; 88T3957
- Yugoslavia
 - autonomous work group, Yugoslav factory, questionnaire, workers, model evaluated; 88T3787
 - collectivist ideology, Yugoslavia, socioeconomic data; 88T4142
 - delinquent behavior, neurotic category, therapeutic vs punitive responses, empirical data, Yugoslavia, 88T5109
 - division of labor, social differentiation impact, Yugoslavia; 88T4157
 - ecological movements, strategies/positions, Germany/Yugoslavia, literature review, 88T5201
 - economic system, structural/political deficiencies, Yugoslavia, 88T3926
 - ethnic stratification/nationalism, Yugoslavia; questionnaire; adults, 88T4090
 - infant mortality rate, post-1979 debt crisis, Yugoslavia; economic policies; statistics; 88T4629
 - intergenerational occupational mobility, Croatia, Yugoslavia; social class, questionnaire; adults; 88T4224
 - intra-/intergenerational mobility, post-WWII Yugoslavia, aging theory, 88T4143
 - job satisfaction, Yugoslav workers; social class, questionnaire, 88T3729
 - leisure activities, adult Yugoslavs, social class; questionnaire, 88T394
 - quality of life, class differences, Yugoslavia; division of labor; questionnaire, 88T4148
 - religious consciousness, Yugoslav social/ethnic groups, secularization process, longitudinal questionnaire data: 1972-1984, 88T4422
 - ruling class homogeneity, Yugoslavia; 88T4149
 - self-managed firms, historical development, Yugoslavia, postwar-present; 88T3837
 - social inequality research, applied classification framework analysis, Yugoslavia, 88T4132
 - sociology's development, Yugoslavia; 88T3370
 - spatial distribution/mobility, Yugoslav social groups; demographic socioeconomic variables, 1981 census data, 88T4640

JOURNAL ABSTRACT

- ① → 83N1628 ② → Medina, Esteban (U Complutense, Madrid 3 Spain), Teorías y orientaciones de la sociología de la ciencia (Theories and Orientations in Sociology of Science), Revista Española de Investigaciones Sociológicas, 1982, 20, Oct-Dec, 7-58 (SPA) ③ → ④ → ⑤ → ⑥ → ⑦ → ⑧ →
- ⑨ → ¶ The evolution of contemporary sociology of science is surveyed relative to the Kantian notion of critical subjectivity. Its dualist origin in the SofK & philosophy of science is contrasted with its twentieth-century development in the work of Karl Mannheim, Robert Merton, & Thomas Kuhn, & in the conflict between critical theory & positivism. Positivist & normative philosophies of science are judged inadequate to address epistemological problems of subjectivity. Current research programs are explicated regarding (1) criticism of the analytical epistemological orientation of dominant contemporary philosophies of science, & (2) attempts to reorient epistemological questions in sociological terms. A. Ash

- ① Accession number.
- ② Author(s) name(s).
- ③ Author affiliation.
- ④ Title.
- ⑤ Title translation, where appropriate.
- ⑥ Source journal.
- ⑦ Year, volume, issue, date, pagination.
- ⑧ Three-letter code indicating language of article.
- ⑨ Abstract.

ASSOCIATION PAPER ABSTRACT

- ① → S15532 / SSSP / 1983 / 2080 ② → ③ → ④ → ⑤ → ⑥ →
- ⑦ → ¶ Both theoretical discussions & research presentations often minimize the practical difficulties in establishing a sample frame for a population called deviant. Classical experimental design is frequently recommended, even though inappropriate methodology impedes recruitment & the results are not necessarily representative of the "real world" population under study. The experiences of a research project studying methadone-maintained women & their infants are presented to show that researchers of populations labeled deviant must retain a fluid sample frame to best reflect the population under study & to use resources most effectively.

- ① Accession number.
- ② Association acronym.
- ③ Year of conference.
- ④ Cumulative abstract number for the specific association.
- ⑤ Author(s) name(s).
- ⑥ Author affiliation.
- ⑦ Title.
- ⑧ Abstract.

this type is not used for summarizing an experimental study; rather, it describes the contents and scope of the subject matter.

Historical Cross-references:

Whenever possible cross-reference to a document previously abstracted and which becomes the focal point of another document is given. In those instances for which a cross-reference number cannot be provided, a full reference is given. Example:

L0165

Scarr, Sandra & Weinberg, Richard A. (Yale U, New Haven CT 06520), Nature and Nurture Strike (Out) Again, Intelligence, 1979, 3, 1, Jan-Mar, 31-39.

¶A reply to R. Plowman's (no publication information available) critique of S. Scarr's & R. Weinberg's paper "The Influence of 'Family Background' on Intellectual Attainment" (see SA 27:3/J9724), & H. Munsinger's review of the adopted child literature ("The Adopted Child's IQ: A Critical Review," Psychological Bulletin, 1975, 82(5), 623-659). The need to discern mean effects in adoption studies is high-lighted by noting that mean scores show more malleability than rank order of individual scores...

Cross-references across Databases:

Abstracts of documents that appeared in two other publications by Sociological Abstracts, Inc., i.e., Linguistics and Language Behavior Abstracts (LLBA), and Social Planning/Policy, Development Abstracts (SOPODA) receive cross references rather than re-publication in sa. Example: 82M2184

Braga, Giorgio (U Trento, Italy), International Languages: Concept and Problems, ♦ International Journal of the Sociology of Language, 1979, 22, 27-49.

¶See LLBA 15:4/8105873.

Abstract Sources:

AA Author abstract.

HA Homotopic abstract (printed in journal).

Modified AA Author abstract slightly modified to conform to sa criteria.

Modified HA Homotopic abstract, slightly modified to conform to sa criteria.

AA Tr by J. Mayer Author abstract, translated by sa abstractor.

HA Tr by J. Mayer Homotopic abstract, translated by sa abstractor.

AA Tr & Modified by J. Mayer Author abstract, translated and modified by sa abstractor.

HA Tr & Modified by J. Mayer Homotopic abstract, translated and modified by sa abstractor.

Association Papers:

(Supplement Abstracts):

Association papers are always presented in a separate section of the printed issue of sa; they are not placed according to the sa classification scheme. Abstracts appear in alphabetical order by last name of senior author.

INDEXING PRACTICES:

Descriptors, or key terms, of which there are approximately 5,000, appear in boldface type in the printed Supplement Indexes. Each appears with an index phrase composed of the following elements:

- (1) the dependent variable
- (2) the independent variable
- (3) tests (measures)
- (4) population
- (5) additional information: type of study (longitudinal etc).

For nonempirical articles, the indexing criteria are elements 1 and 5.

Author Index:

All authors' names appear along with abstract number. Because authors' names are reproduced exactly from primary source, and sources vary in presentation, the same author may be represented differently in separate entries. For example:

Lee, Alfred McClung
Lee, A. McClung
Lee, A. McC.

Variant entries are not combined. Commentators' names and names of contributors to symposia are also not indexed. Authors cited within an abstract are not indexed.

Source Index:

Title and subtitle of journal; publisher's address; year; volume; issue; month or season; pagination; abstract accession number.

The annual index for the Volume is a cumulation of subject, author, and source indexes, and a list of journals that are screened regularly.

Beginning with Volume 32, 1984, each section of the SA issue will be preceded by a colored sheet which describes the content of the section that follows.

Contents:

(1) Table of Contents of this issue.

(2) Abstracts of articles under 33 subject areas

sociological abstracts...

your fast track to information you need-online or in print

Sociological abstracts

table of contents

volume 36

number 3

aug 1988
(Abstracts) (Page)

0100 methodology & research technology

0103 methodology (conceptual & epistemological)	88T5346	877
0104 research technology	T5366	879
0105 statistical methods	T5393	882
0161 models: mathematical & other	T5410	884

0200 sociology: history & theory

0202 of professional interest (teaching sociology)	T5416	885
0206 history & present state of sociology	T5432	887
0207 theories, ideas and systems	T5483	893
0267 macrosociology: analyses of whole societies	T5510	896

0300 social psychology

0309 interaction within (small) groups	T5517	899
0312 personality & culture	T5524	900
0322 leadership	---	---
0364 deviance	T5583	907
0373 social interaction/everyday life	T5585	907

0400 group interactions

0410 interaction between (large) groups (race relations, ethnicity, & group relations, etc.)	T5592	909
----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	-------	-----

0500 culture and social structure

0508 social organization	T5640	915
0513 culture	T5643	915
0514 social anthropology (& ethnology)	T5658	917

0600 complex organizations

0621 sociology of work	T5668	919
0623 military sociology	T5747	928
0624 bureaucratic structure/organizational sociology	T5754	929
0665 social network analysis	T5786	932
0674 voluntary associations	T5791	933

0700 social change & economic development

0715 social change & economic development	T5794	935
0749 market structures & consumer behavior	T5839	940
0770 capitalism/socialism—world systems	T5845	941

0800 mass phenomena

0826 social movements	T5859	943
0827 public opinion	T5875	944
0828 communication	T5892	946
0829 collective behavior	T5909	949
0842 sociology of leisure/tourism	T5912	949
0850 mass culture	T5915	950
0869 sociology of sports	T5917	950

0900 political interactions

0911 interaction between societies, nations & states	T5928	953
0925 political sociology	T5940	954

1000 social differentiation

1019 social stratification/mobility	T6001	961
1020 sociology of occupations & professions	T6035	964

1100 rural sociology & agriculture

1116 rural sociology (village, agriculture)	T6083	971
---------------------------------------------	-------	-----

1200 urban sociology

1218 urban sociology	T6108	975
----------------------	-------	-----

1300 sociology of language & the arts

1330 sociology of language/sociolinguistics	T6129	979
1331 sociology of art (creative & performing)	T6145	981
1375 sociology of literature	T6151	982

1400 sociology of education

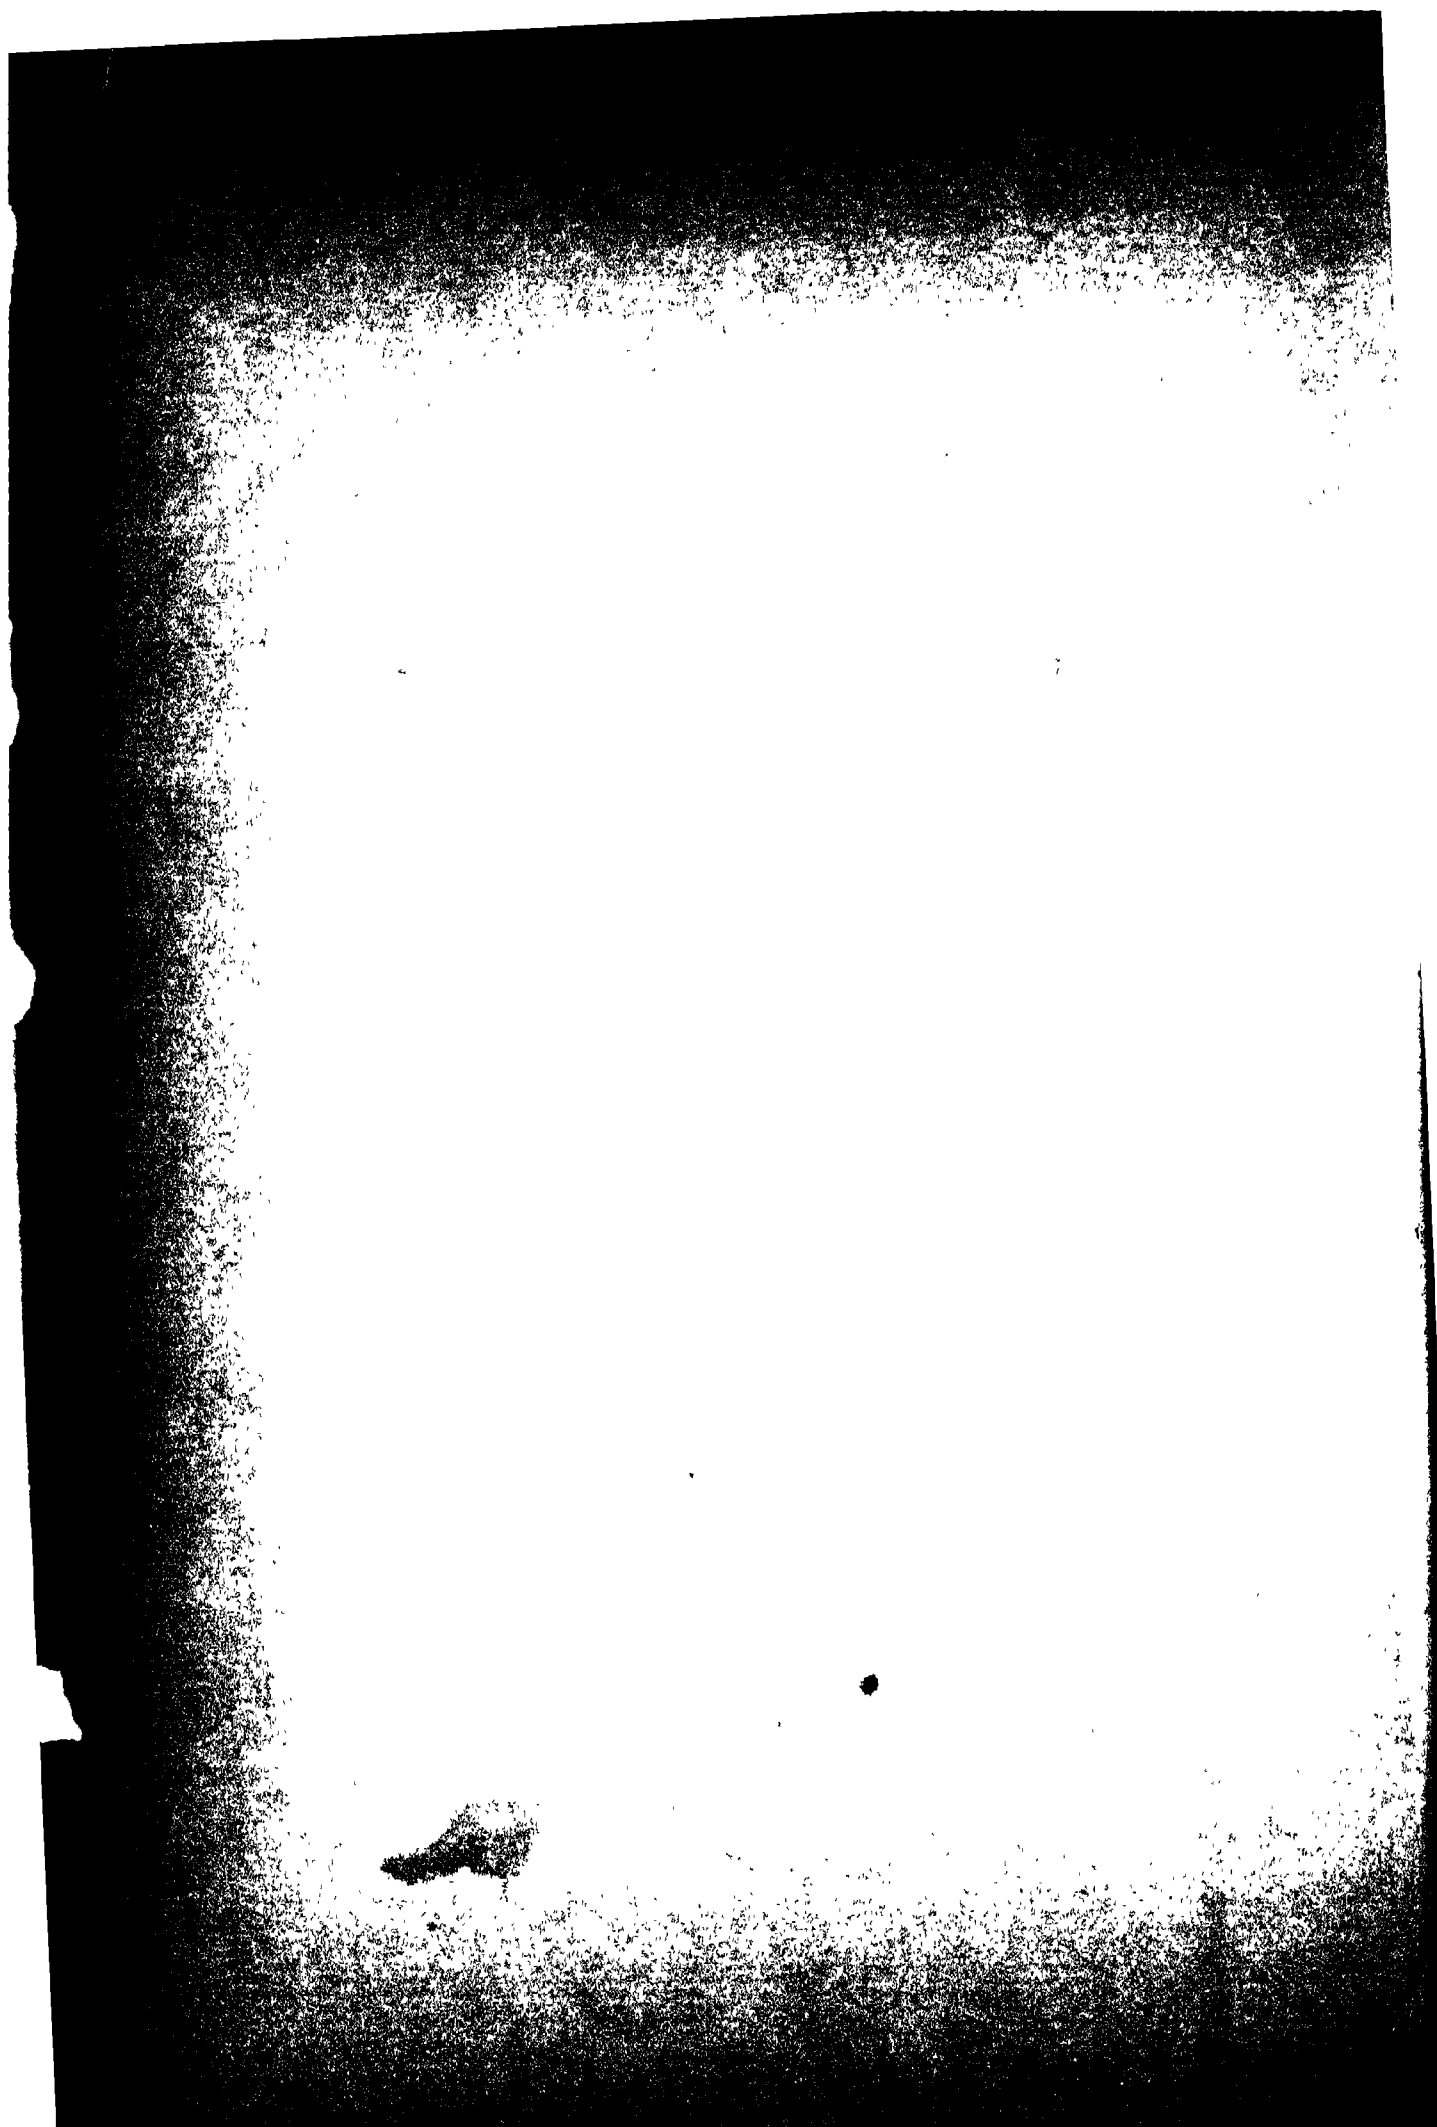

1432 sociology of education	T6156	983
-----------------------------	-------	-----

1500 sociology of religion

1535 sociology of religion	T6214	991
----------------------------	-------	-----

Copyright 1988 by Sociological Abstracts, Inc.

All rights reserved. No part of this book may be reproduced, transmitted or stored in any form or by any means, electronic or mechanical, including photocopying, recording, xeroxing, or by any information storage and retrieval system without permission in writing from Sociological Abstracts, Inc.

0100 methodology and research technology

03 methodology (conceptual & epistemological)

5346

Allen, John (Faculty Social Science Open U, Milton Keynes MK7 6AA England). Realism as Method. Antipode, 1987, 19, 2, Sept, 231-240.

Comment, 240-255

A review essay on A Sayer's Method in Social Science: A Realist Approach (London, Hutchinson, 1984 [see listing in IRPS No 43]). Associating Sayer's brand of realism within the overall development of post philosophy, primarily through a review of his earlier works & those of R Bhaskar & R Harré, its methodology is outlined & its practicality for social science research—particularly geography—is explored. It is concluded that this transcendental realism can only be justified by its ability to generate richly explanatory theories, this it does, offering a valuable edge to social theory. It transcends the opposition between positivist & humanist philosophies within geography, & presents a viable alternative that is also compatible with historical materialism. In The Practical Adequacy of Method in Social Science, Kim England, Andrew Mair, & Andrew Mair (Dept of Geography, Ohio State U, Columbus) assess the practical adequacy of this work for researchers without a long realist background by applying its methodological perspective to research projects: an abstract reconceptualization of suburbanization & a concrete approach to the geography of women's employment. It is argued that the realist method challenges researchers to think, dramatically enriching the qualitative conceptualization process, however, it may prove difficult for social scientists more comfortable with rigid methodologies & empirical generalizations. 25 References. K Hyatt

5347

Andriessen, Erik (Vrije U, NL-1007 MC Amsterdam Netherlands). Kwaliteit en kwantiteit bij opdrachtresearch (Quality and Quantity in Contract Research). ♦ Sociologische Gids, 1987, 34, 11, Nov-Dec, 463-470 (DUT)

Analysis of a number of research projects reveals the possibility of a fruitful combination of qualitative & quantitative approaches. Central questions are how to analyze qualitative data in ways that meet criteria of objectivity & generalizability, & how to combine data collected by both approaches. An integration of M B Miles's & A M Haberman's proposals (Qualitative Data Analysis: A Sourcebook of New Methods, Beverly Hills, Calif Sage, 1984) for qualitative methods with standard methods with standard quantitative procedures can solve both problems. 2 References. Modified HA

5348

Bertalan, László. Hermeneutika és pozitivizmus. III. rész (Hermeneutics and Positivism Part III). Szociológia, 1984-85, 3-4, 383-406 (HUN)

Review essay on a book by G. H. von Wright, Explanation and Understanding (Ithaca, NY, 1971 [see listing in IRPS No 43]). Abstract currently available.

5349

Bertalan, László. Pozitivizmus és hermeneutika. II. rész (Positivism and Hermeneutics. Part II.). Szociológia, 1984-85, 1-2, 181-214 (HUN)

Review essay on a book by G. H. von Wright, Explanation and Understanding (Ithaca, NY, 1971 [see listing in IRPS No 43]). Abstract currently available.

5350

Costyn, Frankie (Vlaamse Economische Hogeschool, Brussels Belgium). Het methodologische individualisme als negatief heuristisch principe (Methodological Individualism as a Negative Heuristic Principle). ♦ Tijdschrift voor Sociale Wetenschappen, 1988, 33, 1, Jan-Mar, 29-47. (DUT)

A strict form of methodological individualism is only used to criticize & eliminate other theoretical positions. In this usage, it functions as a negative heuristic principle, which is illustrated via reference to the nature of a scientific research program as outlined by Imre Lakatos

(The Methodology of Scientific Research Programmes, Cambridge, 1984). It is argued that this negative heuristic application is inspired by a dogmatic concern to defend the hard core of the scientific research program. This clearly reveals the ideological function of the principle, & is further illustrated through an analysis of the work of F. A. von Hayek, particularly his criticism of John Kenneth Galbraith's "dependence effect" (The Affluent Society, Harmondsworth, 1979). 15 References. Modified HA

88T5351

Cicourel, Aaron V. (Dept Sociology U California San Diego, La Jolla 92093). Review Article: On John R. Searle's Intentionality. Journal of Pragmatics, 1987, 11, 5, Oct, 641-660

¶ A review essay on a book by John R. Searle, Intentionality: An Essay in the Philosophy of Mind (Cambridge: Cambridge U Press, 1983 [see listing in IRPS No 43]). Of considerable interest to linguists is Searle's claim that, although the formal features of a language could be studied in a self-contained way, such study makes little sense unless the role of these features in speech acts is examined. Further, the study of the meaning of sentences should be an integral part of the study of speech acts. An essential aspect of Searle's work is the assumption of certain "preparatory conditions" associated with certain speech acts. Although many of Searle's abstract examples are useful, his work lacks a theoretical conception with realistic examples of the local & unfolding conditions of social interaction that influence what might be taking place in the mind when persons engage in speech events. Prominently absent is consideration of the negotiated aspects of intentionality, intentional content, & the search for & use of expressions by speakers over time as they seek to communicate & comprehend meaning by employing successive speech acts & nonverbal communication. 8 References. Modified AA

88T5352

Davenport, Edward (City U New York, NY 10021). The New Politics of Knowledge: Rorty's Pragmatism and the Rhetoric of the Human Sciences. ♦ Philosophy of the Social Sciences, 1987, 17, 3, Sept, 377-394

¶ A major concern of philosophers has been the attainment of knowledge untainted by human interests. Such a hope has been linked with realism & has thus come under criticism from the pragmatic viewpoint of Richard Rorty. Rorty offers powerful arguments for understanding scientific knowledge as a pragmatic consensus. He considers science as ultimately subjectively founded & politically influenced, proposing an ultimate shift from rationality to ethnocentrism. He turns not to Immanuel Kant but to G. W. F. Hegel for a philosophical foundation. The political implications of this assumption, however, appear to leave many problems with no solution but force, an alternative approach based not on shared cultural frameworks but only on shared concrete problems seems needed to solve this problem. W. H. Stoddard

88T5353

DiPorta, Leo (Dept Psychology Kansas State U, Manhattan 66506). Reification: The Word Made Flesh. Transformations, 1987, 2, 2-3, 55-56

¶ On the basis of personal experience as a child in New York City in the 1940s, the ready acceptance of grades & IQ scores as accurate measures of human worth is described. Within the Jewish subculture, & for boys, academic performance was the basis for judgment of human worth generally. This experience is interpreted in terms of the concept of reification. W. H. Stoddard

88T5354

Gillett, G. R. (Magdalen Coll, Oxford OX1 4AU England). Concepts, Structures, and Meanings. Inquiry, 1987, 30, 1-2, Mar, 101-112

¶ Jean Piaget described the nature of concepts as informational or computational operations performed in an inner milieu, enabling the child to understand the world in which it lives & acts. Concepts are, however, not merely logico-mathematical but are also conceptually linked to the mas-

	(Abstracts)	(Page)
1600 social control
1636 sociology of law	T6255	997
1653 police, penology & correctional problems	T6281	1000
1700 sociology of science
1734 sociology of science	T6294	1003
1772 sociology of technology	T6323	1006
1800 demography & human biology
1837 demography (population study)	T6335	1009
1844 human biology/sociobiology	T6380	1013
1900 the family & socialization
1938 sociology of the child	T6383	1015
1939 adolescence & youth	T6398	1016
1940 sociology of sexual behavior	T6426	1020
1941 sociology of the family	T6455	1023
1976 socialization	T6528	1030
1977 birth control (abortion, contraception, fertility, & childbearing)	T6535	1031
1978 sociology of death & dying	T6549	1032
2000 sociology of health & medicine
2045 sociology of medicine (public health)	T6550	1033
2046 social psychiatry (mental health)	T6634	1042
2079 substance use/abuse & compulsive behaviors (drug abuse, addiction, alcoholism, gambling, eating disorders, etc.)	T6656	1045
2100 social problems & social welfare
2143 social gerontology	T6678	1049
2147 sociology of crime & victimology	T6706	1052
2148 applied sociology	T6719	1053
2151 juvenile delinquency	T6730	1055
2200 sociology of knowledge
2233 sociology of knowledge	T6737	1057
2252 history of ideas	T6753	1059
2300 community development
2317 sociology of communities & regions	T6757	1061
2400 policy, planning, forecasting
2454 planning & forecasting	T6766	1063
2460 social indicators	T6773	1064
2462 policy sciences	T6777	1064
2500 radical sociology
2555 radical sociology	T6785	1067
2580 critical sociology	T6786	1067
2600 environmental interactions
2656 environmental interactions	T6788	1069
2681 disaster studies	T6798	1070
2682 social geography	T6803	1071
2700 studies in poverty
2757 studies in poverty	T6806	1073
2800 studies in violence
2858 studies in violence	T6815	1075
2884 terrorism	T6819	1075
2900 feminist/gender studies
2959 feminist studies	T6825	1077
2983 sociology of gender & gender relations	T6853	1080
3000 marxist sociology
3063 marxist sociology	T6875	1085
3100 clinical sociology
3166 clinical sociology	T6889	1087
3200 sociology of business
3268 sociology of business	T6895	1089
3300 visual sociology
3371 visual sociology	---	---

Supplements No. 151, 152, 153 & ISA Bulletin 46

Document Delivery Service

IRPS No. 43
author index
source index
subject index

918, 982, 1067, 1071, 1083, 1089

177
1091
1100
1125
cover

5363
Straver, Cees (Instit Sociaal en Seksuologisch Onderzoek, Utrecht Netherlands). Het beperkte nut van verklaren en het nut van beperkte verklaringen (The Limited Usefulness of Explanations and the Usefulness of Limited Explanations). ♦ Sociologische Gids, 1987, 34, 6, Nov-Dec, 451-462. (DUT)

Is exploration of conceptual & methodological issues that block rapprochement between qualitative & quantitative researchers. The deductive methodological model cannot provide a universal standard for valid scientific explanation; causal explanations within this model have limitations while noncausal explanations are often fruitful. A clarification of understandings & a development of linking concepts as seen as important by both groups—such as intentions & rules—may encourage closer relations. 26 References. Modified HA

5364
Van Henk de (Sociologisch Instituut Rijks U Groningen, NL-9700 AB Netherlands). De wetenschappelijkheid en de alledaagsheid van so-

ciologische verklaringen (The Scientific and Commonplace Character of Sociological Explanations). ♦ Sociologische Gids, 1987, 34, 6, Nov-Dec, 439-450. (DUT)

1 Sociologists commonly position themselves with respect to two different understandings of science: the humanistic, aimed at interpretation, & the natural scientific, aimed at explanation. However, a more fruitful distinction is that between scientific & commonplace explanations. In the evolution of knowledge through four phases—movement, controlled movement, cultural transmission, & experience steered by imagination—scientific explanation belongs to the last phase, commonsense explanation to the first three. A sociological explanation consists of both scientific & commonsense aspects. 20 References. Modified HA

88T5365

Zeller, Nancy C. D. (Indiana U, Bloomington 47405). A Rhetoric for Naturalistic Inquiry. ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1333-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8717841.

04 research methods

5366
Alwin, Duane F. & Campbell, Richard T. (Dept Sociology Instit Social Research U Michigan, Ann Arbor 48109). Continuity and Change in Methods of Survey Data Analysis. ♦ The Public Opinion Quarterly, 1987, 51, 4(2), winter, S139-S155

Since WWII, the field of survey research has experienced substantial change in methods for analysis of survey data. The basic general multivariate paradigm was established by Paul Felix Lazarsfeld, subsequently regression methods were introduced, including path analysis, structural equation models, & partial correlations. A causal approach to measurement error has been developed that relies on linear structural relations. Logistic methods include loglinear methods. In addition, interest has been in the collection of panel data. These methods have transformed the field, though simple univariate & bivariate analyses remain the most widespread methods. 106 References. W. H. Stoddard

5367
Burwell, Ronald J. (Dept Behavioral Science Messiah Coll, Grantham PA 17027). The Lost Letter Experiment: A Class Exercise in Research Methods. Teaching Sociology, 1987, 15, 2, Apr, 195-196

A technique is described to teach the use of the experimental method to undergraduate sociology students in research methods courses. Combining social variables & a natural field setting, the "lost letter" technique involves leaving stamped, addressed letters in public locations & trying to determine whether their finders place them in a mailbox as a demonstration of altruism. In an experiment conducted on the campus of a small, private, residential, suburban US liberal arts Coll, 3 letter variables (addressee, location, & type of envelope) were manipulated. Of 50 letters "lost," 65% were returned, a rate substantially higher than found in similar studies, which is attributed to the closeness of the community on this particular campus. Suggestions for adapting this technique for use in other campus settings are provided, along with ways in which different experimental variables can be manipulated so as to enhance students' knowledge of & familiarity with research methods. 5 References. K. Hyatt

5368
Ceballos, Antonio (U Trieste, I-34123 Italy). Alternative Conceptual Frameworks for the Analysis of Mobility Tables and the Log-Linear Models. Quality and Quantity, 1988, 22, 1, 31-47.

The structure vs circulation framework that has inspired the construction of pure mobility indices from mobility tables is contrasted with the absolute vs relative mobility framework proposed by J. H. Goussier, J. H. Goussier, & C. Payne (Social Mobility and Class Structure in Modern Britain, Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1980). Contrary to past beliefs, the parameters of the saturated loglinear model cannot conveniently express the structure vs circulation framework, however, by the use of odds ratios they can express the absolute vs relative mobility framework, & in this way the theoretical difficulties faced by efforts to save the older process (e.g. see SA 34:1/86Q3643) can be avoided. A contribution is made to the analysis of mobility tables through odds ratios, & the relationship between odds ratios & the interaction parameters of the saturated model is given. 6 Tables, 1 Appendix, 30 References. Modified HA

88T5369

Cutler, Stephen J. (Dept Sociology U Vermont, Burlington 05405). The A.C.E. Freshman Survey as a Baseline Instrument for Survey Projects in Research Methods Courses. Teaching Sociology, 1987, 15, 2, Apr, 121-127

1 An expanded version of SA 33 5/85S17230/ASA/1985/3848.

88T5370

Duncan, Otis Dudley & Stenbeck, Magnus (Dept Sociology U California, Santa Barbara 93106). Are Likert Scales Unidimensional?. Social Science Research, 1987, 16, 3, Sept, 245-259

1 Rensis Likert's scoring method of "summed ratings" can be justified by the Rasch Rating-Scale model (Rasch, G., "An Individualistic Approach to Item Analysis," in Lazarsfeld, P. F., & Henry, N. W. (Eds), Readings in Mathematical Social Science, Chicago: Science Research Associates, 1966, 89-107) if the assumption that the response categories are unidimensional is accurate. If, however, Likert's elaboration of the categories introduces additional latent variables into the response process, then the method may contaminate rather than improve measurement. Empirical tests are conducted using 8 political opinion items from the 1956, 1958, & 1960 American Panel Study data sets. It is concluded that the conventional Likert categories cannot be assumed to comprise a unidimensional scale in surveys of political attitudes, collapsing the categories does not overcome their shortcomings, & may confound the distinction between content & intensity. Thus, the measurement models typically used to analyze Likert data may not be as appropriate as has been assumed. 6 Tables, 17 References. K. Hyatt

88T5371

Frankel, Martin R. & Frankel, Lester R. (Bernard Baruch Coll, New York NY 10010). Fifty Years of Survey Sampling in the United States. ♦ The Public Opinion Quarterly, 1987, 51, 4(2), winter, S127-S138

1 The development of sample surveys in the US has undergone two main phases: the development of basic methods & applications, starting in 1934 with J. Neyman's "On the Two Different Aspects of the Representative Method: The Method of Stratified Sampling and the Method of Purposive Selection," Journal of the Royal Statistical Society, 1934, 97, 558-606, which set forth the basic theory, & the emergence of innovations & new techniques in the late 1960s & after. Among these have been: sampling rare populations, estimation of sampling errors for complex statistics & samples, telephone surveys, coping with decreased response rates; evaluation & control of total error, & use of pseudosample surveys. 35 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T5372

Gregory, Stanford W., Jr. & O'Toole, Richard (Dept Sociology & Anthropology Kent State U, OH 44242). Teaching Sociological Research Methods to Medical Students. Teaching Sociology, 1987, 15, 2, Apr, 128-135

tery of language, which itself involves the appropriate use of words in social & interpersonal settings. L. Vygotsky's work (eg. see Thought and Language, Hanfmann, E., & Vakar, G. (Eds), Cambridge, Mass MIT Press, 1962) on the social & interactive nature of children's thinking & the nature of language as an essentially public currency of rule-governed signs leads to the reconstruction of conceptual mastery as the acquisition of an interactive & interpersonal repertoire of tools that introduces the child to the world of those who educate it. Thus, the elements of mind constitutively involve that activity in which the determinants of meaning constrain & direct the child's linguistic development HA

88T5355

Heller, Agnes (New School Social Research, New York NY 10011), Da un'ermeneutica per le scienze sociali a un'ermeneutica delle scienze sociali (Parte seconda) (From a Hermeneutics for the Social Sciences to a Hermeneutics of the Social Sciences (Part 2)), La Critica Sociologica, 1987, 81, Apr-June, 1-13 (ITA)

Translated by Nicola Porro.

¶ (For abstract of Part I, see SA 36:2/88T3222) The meaning of "understanding" in the social sciences is discussed. It is emphasized that each person understands everyday life at a particular level, which means that a multiplicity of equally plausible understandings is possible & legitimate. Unlike philosophy, however, the social sciences are open to falsification: even if they have followed the criteria of "objectivity," some theories can be rejected once their fundamental presuppositions have been conclusively falsified. Modified HA

88T5356

Kuokkanen, Martti (Dept Philosophy U Helsinki, SF-00170 17 Finland), Conceptual Correlation: An Example of Two Social Psychological Theories, Theory and Decision, 1986, 20, 1, Jan, 1-32

¶ B. Cohen's & H. Lee's theory of social conformity (Conflict, Conformity, and Social Status, Amsterdam Elsevier, 1975) & L. Festinger's theory of cognitive dissonance (A Theory of Cognitive Dissonance, Stanford Stanford U Press, 1957) are reconstructed according to a revised form of the so-called "structuralist theory-conception" developed by Sneed & Stegmüller (no reference provided) with their collaborators. It is shown that these two ontologically & conceptually different theories can be correlated. This in turn provides an opportunity to critically compare the two theories, given that the construed conceptual correlation is sufficiently sound & that the theories are empirically testable. 38 References. Modified AA

88T5357

Laymon, Ronald (Dept Philosophy Ohio State U, Columbus 43210), Using Scott Domains to Explicate the Notions of Approximate and Idealized Data, Philosophy of Science, 1987, 54, 2, June, 194-221

¶ D. Scott's domains, ie, continuous lattices (see, eg, "Domains for Denotational Semantics" in Automata, Languages and Programming, Nielson, M., & Schmidt, F. M. (Eds), New York Springer-Verlag, 1982) are utilized to provide a mathematical model for the use of idealized & approximately true data in the testing of scientific theories. Key episodes from the history of science can be understood in terms of this model as attempts to demonstrate that theories are monotonic: they yield better predictions when fed better or more realistic data. However, monotonicity & truth of theories are independent notions. A formal description is given of the pragmatic virtues of theories that are monotonic. The stronger concept of continuity is also introduced & how it relates to the finite nature of scientific computations is shown. Finally, it is demonstrated that the space of theories also has the structure of a Scott domain. This result provides evidence of how one theory can be said to approximate another. 8 Figures, 28 References. HA

88T5358

Luke, Timothy W. (Dept Political Science Virginia Polytechnic Instit & State U, Blacksburg 24061), Methodological Individualism: The Essential Ellipsis of Rational Choice Theory, Philosophy of the Social Sciences, 1987, 17, 3, Sept, 341-355

¶ Methodological individualism can serve as a useful analytical tool in social scientific explanations. However, there are important implicit & inarticulate assumptions in the postulate of methodological individualism as it is applied in rational choice theory. It is argued that rational choice theory cannot easily address macrolevel social phenomena, because it rests on methodological individualism. Likewise, there are conceptual blindspots in choice-theoretic approaches to political analysis inasmuch as rational choice theory elliptically assumes deeper ties to an ontological, epistemological, psychological, & axiological individualism to theoretical closure. AA

88T5359

Murphy, Peter, Meaning, Truth and Ethical Value, Philosophy International, 1987, 7, 1, Apr, 35-56.

¶ A critique of the semantic basis of Jurgen Habermas's theories (eg, The Theory of Communicative Action, Boston: Beacon Press, 1984) (IRPS No 41/88c00922 & 88c00923) based on British analytic philosophy. It is suggested that Habermas confuses the meaning & reference of a word or phrase in such a way as to imply that terms with no corresponding objects are meaningless. In fact, what Habermas is discussing is better understood not as meaning but as validity. This understanding casts doubt on Habermas's attempt to show that norms are rationally justifiable. W. H. Stoddard

88T5360

Olivé, León (Instit Investigaciones Filosóficas U Nacional Autónoma México, 04510 Mexico DF), Two Conceptions of Truth and Their Relationships to Social Theory, Philosophy of the Social Sciences, 1987, 17, 3, Sept, 313-339

¶ It is argued that the concepts of "truth" & "objectivity" should be analyzed as social & epistemic concepts. Their elucidation therefore should correspond to a theory of knowledge based on a social theory. Objectivity is constrained to specific societies, & related to a limited set of actual & possible contexts of instrumental action & communication. Truth is regarded as rational acceptability under ideal epistemic conditions. Thus, objectivity is relative to societies, while truth is genuinely universal. Moreover, the analysis implies that truth can be construed as a social concept without any commitment to seeing it as objective. The success of science & its relationship to the issue of scientific objectivity, truth, & rationality can be consistently developed in connection to a nonmetaphysical realist conception in epistemology & philosophy of science. 11 References. AA

88T5361

Rouse, Joseph (Dept Philosophy Wesleyan U, Middletown 06457), Husserlian Phenomenology and Scientific Realism, Philosophy of Science, 1987, 54, 2, June, 222-232

¶ Edmund Husserl's discussion of Galilean science (see The Crisis of the European Sciences and Transcendental Phenomenology, Carr (Tr), Evanston, Ill Northwestern U Press, 1970) is often dismissed as overly instrumentalist & hostile to science. He has been explicitly criticized for misunderstanding idealization in science, for treating the world as a privileged conceptual framework, & for denying that science can, in principle, completely describe the world (because ordinary scientific concepts are irreplaceable). Here, Husserl's position concerning realism is clarified & used to show that the first two criticisms depend on misinterpretations. The third criticism is well taken. Nevertheless, this is consistent with Husserl's fundamental claim that the meanings of things are important to discuss, but are inaccessible to empirical science. 21 References. HA

88T5362

Smith, Robert B. (Social Structural Research Inc, Suite 633 North Rd Cambridge MA 02140), Linking Quality & Quantity. Philosophical Surveys as Formalizations, Quality and Quantity, 1988, 2, 3-30.

¶ (For abstract of Part I, see SA 36:2/88T3239.) A fault of many quantitative studies is inadequate fit between real-world processes & the formal aspects of the quantitative research designs as seen in their coding schemes, measurements, & analysis plans. Personal research experience—from which several examples are cited—shows that this problem can be ameliorated by following the hermeneutically informed strategy of formalization of qualitative texts. Qualitative studies offer external but not internal validity, while quantitative studies offer internal but not external validity; this approach can yield results that possess both sorts of validity. A strategy of formalization can avoid faults in present-day social science—sterility & discontinuity—and promote the achievement of dynamic continuity in social research. 41 References. Modified HA equation. An example first proposed by F. J. Anscombe ("Graph-Statistical Analysis," The American Statistician, 1973, 27, 17-21) & then extended to illustrate how the idea of influence, as developed by R. Dennis Cook (eg. see "Detection of Influential Observations in Regression," Technometrics, 1977, 19, 15-18), can be incorporated into introductory lectures on simple regression. 2 Tables, 10 References. Modified HA

01
Hans-Michael (Sonderforschungsbereich 3 U Mannheim, D-68131 Federal Republic Germany), Analysen zur Vergleichbarkeit von Friedeheitsmessungen (Analyses of the Comparability of Satisfaction Measures), Zeitschrift für Sozial Psychologie, 1987, 18, 3, 168 (GER) comparability of satisfaction measures is examined by contrasting results of 2 1984 West German surveys—the Welfare Survey & the Economic Panel—both of which interviewed a representative sample adult population ($N = 2,067$ & $8,865$, respectively). The assumption is that within the limits of the confidence interval, both surveys will have identical results for the same indicators. In general, a satisfactory comparability is shown. Only slight differences in marginal distributions are found, which are connected with different field times & variability of the interview situation & of the stimuli presentation. 4 Figures, 19 References. Modified HA

02
offi, Luca (Dpt scienze sociali U Torino, I-10124 Italy), L'ambiguità dei risultati delle analisi fattoriali (On the Ambiguities of Factor Analysis Outcomes), Quaderni di Sociologia, 1987, 33, 8, 129 (ITA) shown that the choice among available factor analysis methods is a merely technical nature. None of the main competing methods simultaneously maximizes the three main criteria for factor analysis: explanatory power, parsimony, & fidelity. Therefore, the choice of a method inevitably implies the acceptance of a hierarchy among these criteria. It is also shown that classical assumptions on the relationship between signal (common factors) & noise (unique factors) are affected by a lack of realism. Some possible consequences of this are exemplified especially to the emergence of artificial common factors, distortion of the true common factor structure, & overestimation of the explained variance ratio. 6 Figures. Modified HA

03
Rosenberg, Juan Javier (Facultad Ciencias Políticas y Sociología U Complutense Madrid, E-28040 Spain), Extending Rosenberg's Idea about Conjoint Effects, Quality and Quantity, 1988, 22, 9-64

The Logic of Survey Analysis (New York: Basic Books, 1968), Rosenberg offers an approach to sociological explanation based on contingency tables & %s. This approach offers a means to study the effect of adding independent variables on the conjoint effect of all independent variables on the dependent one. This concept is formalized by a measurement of predictability for contingency tables, which is illustrated using data from the General Social Survey to predict the behavior of individuals. The % of cases in the chosen category of the dependent variable for the most favorable combination of categories of the independent variables is used to measure predictability. A second illustration on changes in number of siblings illustrates the use of the longitudinal analysis. 9 Tables, 2 Figures, 14 References. W. H. R.

04
van der Kooij, K., Another Note on the Usefulness of MOKKEN Scaling, Psychologische Beiträge, 1986, 28, 3-4, 425-432.

Topics treated here are inspired mainly by a recent paper in this field by P. G. W. Jansen, E. E. Ch. I. Roskam, & A. L. van den Wolfer entitled "Discussion on the Usefulness of the Mokken Procedure for Parametric Scaling." Psychologische Beiträge, 1984, 26, 722-731. First, the interpretation of J. Loevinger's coefficient H as a measure of reproducibility of subjects' item responses (the Technique of Homogeneous Tests Compared with Some Aspects of "Scale Analysis" and "Item Analysis," Psychological Bulletin, 1948, 45, 507-530) is discussed. Second, the combination of coefficient H & double monotonicity in J. Mokken's scaling procedure (A Theory and Procedure of Scale Analysis, The Hague: Mouton, 1971) is treated. It is concluded that coefficient H is a useful tool in test construction. 1 Table, 19 References.

Modified HA

88T5405

Stoloff, Michael & Riley, Sarah (James Madison U, Harrisonburg VA 22807), New Software for Psychologists and Social Scientists, Social Science Microcomputer Review, 1987, 5, 3, fall, 377-383

1 A review of two new software modules for the SPSS/PC+ statistical software package—DATA ENTRY & GRAPHICS. Other software packages reviewed include COGREHAB TASK MASTER, a new cognitive rehabilitation program that enables the user to design his own therapeutic tasks; OP-CON, a software package for operant conditioning experiments; AUTOREF/PRO, used for automated generation of reference sections for manuscripts; WPS TEST REPORT, which administers, scores, & prints a personality inventory for children; PROJECTIVE DRAWING TEST, assists in the scoring of the house/tree & human drawing tests; & PSYCHLAB/MMPI, scores & interprets the Minnesota Multiphasic Personality Inventory. 6 References. F. Rasmussen

88T5406

Triebwasser, Marc A. (Central Connecticut State U, New Britain 06050), Social Science and the New Generation of Microcomputer Hardware, Social Science Microcomputer Review, 1987, 5, 3, fall, 289-303

1 An exploration of new developments in the personal computer industry & the implications of this new technology for the social sciences. Microcomputer technology is placed in a conceptual framework suitable for the analysis of applications in institutions of higher learning. Potential changes in computer use on campus are reviewed with an emphasis on compact disk-read only memory, graphics, desktop publishing, & other related new technologies. Questions regarding new hardware & software availability are addressed. F. Rasmussen

88T5407

van Cullenburg, Jan J., Kleinnijenhuis, Jan & Ridder, Jan A. de (Netherlands Press Foundation Free U Amsterdam, NL-1075 Netherlands), Artificial Intelligence and Content Analysis: Problems of and Strategies for Computer Text Analysis, Quality and Quantity, 1988, 22, 1, 65-97

1 Computer technology offers a possibility of reducing the tedium inherent in content analysis. To interpret natural language automatically, a computer program must be able to unravel the syntactic structure of sentences & to trace their meaning by using textual context, prior knowledge, & semantic variability. Several approaches to enable computer programs to perform these tasks are discussed, including approaches from the fields of cognitive psychology & artificial intelligence. While it is still impossible for computer programs to perform all these tasks, it is possible to use them to support human coders in both the coding & the data analysis stages of content analysis. 1 Table, 3 Figures, 34 References. Modified HA

88T5408

Velicer, Wayne F. & Fava, Joseph L. (Psychology Dept U Rhode Island, Kingston 02881), An Evaluation of the Effects of Variable Sampling on Component, Image, and Factor Analysis, Journal of Multivariate Behavioral Research, 1987, 22, 2, Apr, 193-209

1 An attribution of a latent variable procedure, such as factor analysis, that is sometimes cited as superior generalization from the variables sampled to the population of variables. Principal component analysis, image component analysis, & maximum likelihood factor analysis were compared to assess the effects of variable sampling. Three other independent variables were manipulated: (1) the size of the loadings or saturation, (2) the average number of variables per factor, & (3) the number of variables sampled. Five different r matrices were generated for each condition. Ten different variable samples were randomly selected. The sample pattern was then compared to the appropriate population pattern. The effects of method of analysis were relatively minor & very complex. The results with respect to degree of saturation & average number of variables per factor were clear & dramatic. Differential effects on boundary cases & nonconvergence problems were also found. 4 Tables, 49 References. HA

88T5409

Walsh, Anthony (Dept Sociology/Anthropology/Criminal Justice Administration Boise State U, ID 83725), Teaching Understanding and Interpretation of Logit Regression, Teaching Sociology, 1987, 15, 2, Apr, 178-183.

Research Methodology, Teaching Sociology. 1987, 15, 2, Apr. 191-194

† It is argued that undergraduate sociology programs too often make an artificial separation between content & method, & ignore the critical role of research. The creation of local research centers can alleviate this problem, serving the needs of students as well as the community at large. A case study is presented for the Center for Community Research, which has operated through Roanoke Coll in Va since 1983. Its programs & objectives are discussed in detail. 15 References. K. Hyatt

88T5392

Youngs, George A., Jr. (Dept Sociology & Anthropology North Dakota State U, Fargo 58105), Using Matrix Structures to Integrate

Theory and Statistics into a Research Methods Course, Teaching Sociology. 1987, 15, 2, Apr. 157-163.

† A visual device is offered that helps to provide an integration of research methods, & statistics. The device is borrowed from matrix algebra, in which data are organized in a rectangular structure with rows representing observations & columns representing variables. This arrangement highlights the need to clearly identify the appropriate variables to be included as columns in the matrix (a theoretical concern), the need to gather valid & reliable data to fill the matrix (a methodological concern), & the need to summarize a large array of data (a statistical concern). The use of matrices to portray these concerns is explored & a number of specific classroom exercises examining theoretical, methodological, & statistical issues with the use of matrices are provided. 6 Figures. 4 References. HA

05 statistical methods

88T5393

Becker, Mark P. & Clogg, Clifford C. (U Florida, Gainesville 32611), A Note on Approximating Correlations from Odds Ratios, Sociological Methods and Research. 1988, 16, 3, Feb. 407-424

† An approximate relationship between the odds & the tetrachoric r for 2×2 contingency tables is presented. The approximation is simple in form & demonstrates a close linkage between these two important measures of association. This relationship can be used to reconcile (at least in part) the two ostensibly different ways to study association or partial association. The approximation is used to relate the parameters of the common factor model & the 2-class latent structure model applied to dichotomous items. 5 Tables, 24 References. Modified HA

88T5394

Blalock, Hubert M., Jr. (Dept Sociology U Washington, Seattle 98195), Some General Goals in Teaching Statistics, Teaching Sociology. 1987, 15, 2, Apr. 164-172

† A number of explicit goals for teaching statistics to sociology students are discussed: (1) overcoming fears, resistances, & tendencies to overemphasize; (2) recognizing the importance of intellectual honesty & integrity; (3) understanding the relationship between deductive & inductive inferences; (4) learning to play the role of reasonable critic; & (5) learning to handle complexities in a systematic fashion. Illustrative examples are given to show how exercises can be tailored to the course's contents & the level of student backgrounds. 3 References. Modified HA

88T5395

Dukes, Richard L. (Dept Sociology U Colorado, Colorado Springs 80907), Teaching Statistics with Nonsimulation Games, Teaching Sociology. 1987, 15, 2, Apr. 184-190

† Several nonsimulation games for teaching statistics are described: (1) Equations involves students in selecting resources to "build" solutions to an equation; (2) Statistics equations is a variant of Equations that uses a statistic instead of a number in the left-hand side of an equation; (3) Statistics characteristics uses four statistics as goals instead of just one & is designed to help teach comparisons among various statistics; (4) Information is a "frame game" that provides a structure comprised of rules; however, the instructor provides the content. Some preliminary data evaluating the use of such games are presented. 41 References. Modified HA

88T5396

Fichtner, John (Fakultat Informatik Institut Angewandte Systemforschung und Operations Research U Bundeswehr Munchen, D-8014 Neubiberg Federal Republic Germany), On Deriving Priority Vectors from Matrices of Pairwise Comparisons, Socio-Economic Planning Sciences. 1986, 20, 6, 341-345

† A discussion of mathematical questions related to analytic hierarchy process theory, focusing on how to derive priority vectors from matrices of pairwise comparisons. Scales for priorities & their evaluation by pairwise comparisons are described, & several concrete proposals are reviewed. An axiomatic approach is shown for deciding which method is the best one. Invariance principles are motivated & formulated as axioms. The only method that fulfills all these axioms, called the logarithmic least squares method, uses the geometric row means. It is shown, however, that only one axiom would have to be replaced in order to get the widely used right eigenvector method. 11 References. Modified HA

88T5397

Hagenaars, Jacques A. (Tilburg U, NL-5000 LE Netherlands), Latent Structure Models with Direct Effects between Indicators, Latent Dependence Models, Sociological Methods and Research. 1988, 16, 3, Feb. 379-405

† A basic assumption of latent structure models is that of local independence: given the score on the latent variable, the scores on the manifest variables are independent of each other. This basic assumption is violated when test-retest effects, response consistency effects, correlated response errors, & so forth are present. However, it is possible to reformulate a latent class model in such a way that these direct relations between indicators (manifest variables) can be accounted for. The reformulation proposed here takes place within the framework of loglinear models. 4 Tables, 3 Figures, 1 Appendix, 30 References. HA

88T5398

Hamilton, Lawrence C. (U New Hampshire, Durham 03824), Graphical Views of Nonlinear Regression, Social Science Microcomputer Review. 1987, 5, 2, summer, 149-162

† Nonlinear functional forms in regression analysis are often dictated by theory or data. One problem with such forms is that nonlinear results are harder to understand. Modern microcomputer programs can aid understanding, by providing graphical displays of the implications of nonlinear equations. These displays are particularly helpful in situations such as logit regression, where all variables' effects are "interactions" that depend upon the levels of other variable. The Stata Graphics statistical program (The Computing Resource Center, Los Angeles, Calif) & the Reflex database program (Borland/Analytica Incorporated, Scotts Valley, Calif) are used to illustrate the graphical methods described in applications involving survey data on water-contamination problems. 12 Figures, 12 References. AA

88T5399

Irish, Donald P. (Dept Sociology Hamline U, Saint Paul MN 55104), A Campus Poll: One Meaningful Culminating Class Project, Research Methods, Teaching Sociology. 1987, 15, 2, Apr. 200-202

† A class project is described that facilitates synthesis of the wide range of topics covered in a social research methods class & allows students to apply classroom knowledge systematically in a realistic setting. The Peter Poll is a campus-wide opinion survey conducted by junior & senior sociology majors independently of any administrative control; since its inception in 1979 at Hamline U (Saint Paul, Minn), it has gained popularity & respect as a source of data regarding campus concerns. The project provides students with quality research experience, building the skills at interviewing techniques, hypothesis formulation & testing, computerization, report writing, budgeting, & literature review procedures. In addition, the poll serves the wider community through exposing important to the student body, administration, & faculty. K. Hyatt

88T5400

Lorenz, Frederick O. (Dept Sociology & Anthropology Iowa State U, Ames 50011), Teaching about Influence in Simple Regression, Teaching Sociology. 1987, 15, 2, Apr. 173-177

† Most introductory social science statistics courses include an abbreviated discussion of regression assumptions & the problem of outliers. An important idea in residual analysis is that all outliers are not equal; some have greater "influence" than others on the intercept & slope of the regression line.

0200 sociology: history and theory

02 of professional interest (teaching sociology)

416
ron, James N. (Stanford U, CA 94305), Data Sharing as a Public ed, W American Sociological Review, 1988, 53, 1, Feb, vi-viii omment on Robert M. Hauser's editorial (see SA 36 2/88T3323) alled for standardized data reporting in research publications & intional data sharing in the social sciences. This latter issue is exin depth in terms of the potential problems of logistics & incenthat it presents. It is argued that without adequate resources & ines to support data documentation, dissemination, & assistance to users, mandated data sharing could place serious burdens on re-ers. K Hyatt

117
iv, Elizabeth M. (Polytechnic Newcastle upon Tyne, NE1 8ST gland), Understanding Concepts in Social Science: Towards an Ef- ive Evaluation Strategy, Instructional Science, 1987, 15, 4, 1359 understanding of concepts in social science was investigated by inving 16 students in each of 2 foundation courses in social science Open U in England. The investigation was carried out using the ch paradigm of phenomenography (Marton, F., omenography-Describing Conceptions of the World Around Us," tional Science, 1981, 10, 177-200) where the content of learning as a quality rather than as a quantity. The results are described ms of two evaluation strategies: formative evaluation where the ts' understandings of the concept before the course were used to nce the teaching strategy of the remade course, & summative ation where the students' answers before & after the course were red to evaluate their learning during the course. 3 Tables, 1 Ap-5 References. Modified HA

118
shaw, Cyril S. (Dept Anthropology & Sociology U British Colum-Vancouver V6T 2B2), Workshop on Writing for International So- l Science Journals, Current Anthropology, 1987, 28, 3, June, 377

account is given of a workshop on writing for international social journals conducted Sept 1985 in Nairobi for eastern & southern scholars. Twenty participants took part in the workshop, repre-g a variety of disciplines & countries & varied levels of experience.
orkshop included both group discussions & tutorials, presentations made on what international journals seek, copy-editing, refereeing, raphy & citation, copyright, & national integrity & the interna-cene. Results were generally favorable, but it is suggested that fufferent, separate workshops should be held for more & less experi-scholars. 1 Appendix. W. H. Stoddard

119
ue, Allan G. (U Wisconsin, Madison 53706), Great Expectations
Secular Depreciation: The First Ten Years of the Social Science History Association, Social Science History, 1987, 11, 3, fall, examination of factors that led scholars to form the Social Science y Assoc (SSHA) in 1974 in an effort to "improve the quality of real explanation...by encouraging the selective use & adaptation in real research & teaching of relevant theories & methods from relat-disciplines, particularly the social sciences." The SSHA's develop-is traced from its early roots as the ad hoc committee established American Historical Assoc to explore the quantitative collection on US political history. The establishment of SSHA's constituscholarly journal is chronicled along with the operation of the in-group networks within the organization. SSHA's success in meet-major goals is evaluated, & it is concluded that its turn toward nationality has stymied their realization, particularly that of ex-ng the SSHA's publication program. Rededication & reaffirmation illed for in order to revitalize the SSHA & historical social science discipline. 8 References. K. Hyatt
342

88T5420

Fisher, Ronald J., Grant, Peter R. & Callahan, Michael J. (Dept Psychology U Saskatchewan, Saskatoon S7N 0W0), The Potential Role of Theory in the Training of Applied Social Psychologists, Canadian Psychology/Psychologie Canadienne, 1986, 27, 3, July, 231-237

¶ There are a number of deficiencies in contemporary social-psychological theory as both a knowledge base & as a guide for research & practice in applied social psychology. In principle, theory should be integrated with research & practice & should serve both a knowledge building & a guiding function for the discipline. In practice, much contemporary theory, based on laboratory experiments on intra- & interpersonal processes, is limited in its capacity to explain complex, real-world social behavior. Here, the actual & potential role of social-psychological theory in applied social psychology is discussed in relation to graduate training. The Applied Social Psychology MA/PhD program at the U of Saskatchewan is described in terms of objectives, requirements, & job placements. Results of a questionnaire survey of 17 graduates from the MA program are also reported. The role of theory in training MA students is problematic: theses are often atheoretical with an emphasis on research methodology, particularly program evaluation. The PhD program requires the integration of theory with research & consultation activities, & is attempting to increase the use of theory in the development of social programs, the amelioration of social problems, & the formation of social policy. It is proposed that social-psychological theories covering several levels of analysis are necessary to understand social behavior & to provide an adequate base for applied training. 35 References. Modified HA

88T5421

Fleck, Christian (Buro Sozialforschung, A-8010 Graz Austria), Ed- uard Marz (1908-1987) (Eduard Marz (1908-1987)), Osterreichische Zeitschrift fur Soziologie, 1987, 12, 4, 81-84,
(GER)

¶ An obituary for Austrian social scientist Eduard Marz. Aspects of Marz's life discussed include: his family background, youth & education in Vienna, involvement in leftist political groups, flight to Turkey & the US after the Nazi takeover, study of economics with Joseph Schumpeter at Harvard U, service with the US Navy, & his brief career as a U lecturer, which was cut short by McCarthyism. Marz's return to Austria in 1953, his subsequent career as a Marxist economist, historian, & sociologist, & his publications are reviewed. J. Anderson

88T5422

Kain, Edward L. (Dept Sociology Southwestern U, Georgetown TX 78626), Using a Research Team and Microcomputers to Teach Basic Sociological Principles, Teaching Sociology, 1987, 15, 2, Apr, 136-143.

¶ A way in which a small research team can use microcomputers to learn sociological methods as part of a large introductory sociology course is illustrated. Data from the research team can be used to teach a number of basic sociological principles to the larger class. In addition to beginning the process of integrating microcomputers into the classroom, this approach provides a strong empirical base for the instruction of sociology, provides students with skills as well as facts & ideas, & increases the relevance of introductory sociology by developing student-generated examples of sociological concepts. While the example is drawn from the experience of a mass class, the same principle can be applied using a sociology methods class as the research team. 4 Tables, 28 References. HA

88T5423

Kellermann, Paul, Perspektiven der Soziologielehre. Bericht über eine Tagung und eine Enquete der Deutschen Gesellschaft für Soziologie (Perspectives on the Teaching of Sociology: Report on a Conference and a Survey of the German Sociological Society), Osterreichische Zeitschrift fur Soziologie, 1987, 12, 4, 85-89,
(GER)

¶ A report on a survey of sociological institutions of education in the Federal Republic of Germany & a subsequent conference convened by the

¶ The teaching of logit regression analysis, although neglected in statistics courses within sociology, is well-suited to many data analysis situations. Researchers often deal with dichotomous dependent variables by using discriminant analysis, weighted least squares regression, or ordinary least squares (OLS) regression; however, these methods can lead to misinterpretations of the results. Logit regression allows the researcher to evaluate the impact of a set of predictor variables on a dichotomous dependent variable without these problems. It is a relatively simple technique to understand for those who already are familiar with OLS regression. The technique is presented in simple form using SPSS & SAS computer output. It is contended that the results obtainable from logit can be presented to the layperson in a way that is more intuitively understandable than any other method of presenting data tables. 1 Appendix, 3 References. Modified HA

61 models: mathematical & other

88T5410

Bezeminder, Th. & Van Acker, P. (Dept Psychology Catholic U Nijmegen, NL-6500 HE Netherlands), The Ostrogorski Paradox and Its Relation to Nontransitive Choice, The Journal of Mathematical Sociology, 1985, 11, 2, Feb, 131-158

¶ Let $Q, I, \& J$ be sets of social goods, aspects, & individuals, respectively, & consider the functions $v: Q \times I \times J \rightarrow \{-1, 1\}$ & $w: Q \times J \rightarrow \{-1, 1\}$. Two 2-stage methods for ordering Q characterized by majority vote are studied, amalgamating v first over I & then over J (method IP) or vice versa (method PI). An M Ostrogorski paradox (La Démocratie et les partis politiques [Democracy and Political Parties], 2 vols, Paris: Calmann Lévy, 1903) occurs when IP & PI give different outcomes. Conditions for this paradox & its relations to Condorcet's paradox are investigated, particularly via a scalogram structure of w . While PI seems more like direct democracy than IP, for decisions on $K \times 3$ social PI goods is transitive whereas IP may give a cyclic outcome. Extensions to richer than binary data & to decision systems other than majority vote are explored. 6 Tables, 1 Appendix, 26 References. HA

88T5411

Dewachter, Wilfried (Katholieke U Leuven, B-3000 Belgium), Het krachtenveld van de regeringsvorming in België (A Model for the Formation of Political Coalitions in Belgium), Revue Publique, 1986, 28, 4, 615-641 (DUT)

¶ Existing models for the formation of governmental coalitions do not score high in predictability for Belgium. A more complex model, covering 3 fields, 7 vectors, & 1 strong actor among a limited number of decisionmakers, fits much better. A prerequisite for a coalition is a majority within the elitist parties in Parliament. Favoring coalition formation are the decision-making capabilities of the cabinet, elite consensus on the basic values prominent in Belgian society, similarities of program among the political parties, & their capacity to manipulate issues. Hampering coalition formation are the development of partisan options, the polarization of issues, & internal dissensions within the political parties. This model stresses the combined action of strong structures & actors, which is paramount in Belgian society. 2 Figures. Modified HA

88T5412

Fan, David P. (Dept Genetics & Cell Biology U Minnesota, Saint Paul 55108), Ideodynamic Predictions for the Evolution of Habits, The Journal of Mathematical Sociology, 1985, 11, 3, June, 265-281.

¶ A dynamic mathematical model is proposed to explain how information can influence the fraction of the population with a particular habit. The model includes several important factors mentioned by M. Fishbein & I. Ajzen (Belief, Attitude, Intention and Behavior: An Introduction to Theory and Research, Reading, Mass. Addison Wesley, 1985) & by R. Bentler & G. Speckart ("Models of Attitude-Behavior Relations, Psychological Review, 1979, 86, 452-464). (1) intention is central to behavior; (2) volitional deficiency means that only a fraction of those with the intention actually carry out the behavior; (3) normative influences can affect behavior & can be modeled in analogy to the mathematical formulation used for the diffusion of innovations; (4) information from a previous behavior can influence a behavior change so that reaching for a behavior, eg, quitting smoking, is dependent on the previous habit of smoking, & (5) persuasive communications from mediated sources also can influence intent & behavior. All the influences are incorporated in a time-dependent manner. A simple survey procedure is proposed for testing the model using the habit of smoking as an example. If validated, the theory can then be used to predict the results of advertising campaigns. 3 Figures, 15 References. Modified HA

88T5413

Fershtman, Meir (School Education Tel-Aviv U, Ramat-Aviv 69978), Transitivity and the Path Census in Sociometry, The Journal of Mathematical Sociology, 1985, 11, 2, Feb, 159-189

¶ Developed is a method for calculating the tendency toward transitivity while keeping constant the number of choices that are made by each member of the group ($U_N(X_{i+})$ distribution) or the number of choices each member is chosen ($U_N(X_{+j})$ distribution). Such a calculation was suggested by S. S. Wasserman (see SA 26 3/78J3124), who used the ad census developed by P. W. Holland & S. Leinhardt (see SA 26 3/78F2096). Here, a simpler approach is presented that utilizes a path census & two supplementary functions. The technique can be used to calculate the mean & variance of other quantities, eg, mutuality & intransitivity. 7 Tables, 1 Figure, 11 References. Modified HA

88T5414

Heise, David R. (Indiana U, Bloomington 47405), Affect Control Theory: Respecification, Estimation, and Tests of the Formal Model, The Journal of Mathematical Sociology, 1985, 11, 3, June, 191-222

¶ The mathematical model for a theory of social action drawn from symbolic interactionism is respecified with new theoretical refinements. Model parameters are estimated from empirical data & are tested by simulating behaviors in role relationships. The best simulations are provided by simplifications of the original model rather than by elaborations. 3 Tables, 15 References. HA

88T5415

Romanow, Allyn L. & Sellke, Thomas (Yale U, New Haven 06520), Performance Sampling and Multiple Choices: Brownian Motion Models, The Journal of Mathematical Sociology, 1985, 11, 3, June, 223-244

¶ An attempt to extend the Brownian motion model for a decision-making process developed by A. L. Romanow (see SA 32 3/84N894). Several of the assumptions of the basic model are relaxed here, eg, no longer assumed that performance is always observed, but rather observation is intermittent. Also, models are developed for several different data collection schemes: while the original model allowed two choices, alternatives, a third choice is included here by considering a model in which a Brownian motion may cross either of two mutually exclusive boundaries. 8 Figures, 14 References. HA

1980s," which brought together French & Italian researchers in questions "immigrati" guadagnano terreno (The Question of "Immigrants Is Gaining Ground). Maria I. Maciotti discusses the situation of migrants to Italy, with particular attention to the fact that official policy defines as "political refugees" almost exclusively persons from Communist Eastern Europe; thus the many refugees arriving from Africa & Asia as a result of political upheavals are forced into a clandestine underground where they have no civil rights. In A Merano, un convegno internazionale su "Comunità e Società Oggi" (In Merano, an International Conference on "Community and Society Today"), John Fraser reports on a conference on Ferdinand Tönnies held in Merano, Italy, in Apr 1987, which celebrated the publication 100 years earlier of his Gemeinschaft und Gesellschaft (Community and Society). In Capi carismatici, assai fetida e stelle (Charismatic Leaders, Asafetida, and Stars), Maria I. Maciotti discusses the interest in magic & esoteric & parareligious phenomena in the modern world. In Il direttore di "Nigrizia" è stato licenziato (The Editor of Nigrizia Has Been Silenced), Emilio Scavazza honors the work of Alessandro Zenotelli, missionary & former editor of the Catholic journal Nigrizia, which investigated the problems of black Africa. C. Waters

06 history & present state of sociology

15432

Berger, Horst (Institut Soziologie & Sozialpolitik Akademie Wissenschaften, Otto-Nuschke-Str 10 D-1086 Berlin Federal Republic (Germany), Stand, Aufgaben und Funktion der Soziologie in der DDR (Present Position, Problems and Function of Sociology in the German Democratic Republic), Kolner Zeitschrift für Soziologie und Sozialpsychologie, 1988, 40, 1, Mar, 117-126. (GER)

A review of the development of sociology in the German Democratic Republic over the past twenty-five years. At present, the main themes of research are: sociological research on peace, social problems resulting from the scientific technological revolution, the interrelationships among economic, ecological, demographic, & social developments, changes in interests & needs of different social groups, the social causes & effects of structural changes in the population, & the social conditions conducive to linking economic & social policies. There is a need for more empirical information & improvements in methodology. 33 References. Modified HA

815433

Bernstein, Richard J. (Haverford Coll, PA 19041), Agnes Heller: Philosophy, Rational Utopia, and Praxis, ♦ Thesis Eleven, 1987, 16, 22-39.

An exploration of the role of Leszek Kolakowski's defense of utopianism ("The Concept of the Left" in Toward a Marxist Humanism, New York: Grove Press, 1968) in the development of the thought of Agnes Heller. Heller envisions utopianism as one of the characteristics of genuine philosophy. She goes on from this general conception to the more specific conception of a radical philosophy, which addresses the need to transcend a society based on subordination & superordination. Her utopia has three basic ideals: free communication, unconditional recognition of the needs of others, & the duty of self-perfection. Regrettably, her conception seems founded on too facile a dismissal of "positivist pseudo-philosophies" & an assertion of the existence of genuine philosophies opposed to them. The theory has also not been sufficiently translated into terms suited to guiding present action. W. H. Stoddard

88T5434

Hest, Heinrich (Forschungsinstitut Soziologie U Köln, D-5000 41 Federal Republic Germany), Historische Sozialforschung als Erweiterung der Soziologie. Die Konvergenz sozialwissenschaftlicher und historischer Erkenntnis Konzepte (Historical Social Research as an Extension of Sociology: The Convergence of Sociological and Historical Concepts of Cognition), Kolner Zeitschrift für Soziologie und Sozialpsychologie, 1988, 40, 1, Mar, 1-14. (GER)

It is argued that sociology & history share common ground, especially as regards theoretical formulations. Historical social research i.e., theoretically motivated research into past societies, using sociologically valid methods is developing as a transdisciplinary set of endeavors. Sociology has always been historically grounded & oriented, but its interest in social structures of the past & in patterns of change is growing. Modern theories of action require a "rehistorization" of sociological research, in order to reconstruct the interplay of meaningful actions & structural contexts. In microsociology, the role of historical events & sociopolitical change in biographies & careers is of growing interest. 56 References. Modified HA

88T5435

Bodzent, Erich & Richter, Rudolf (Institut Soziologie U Vienna, A-1013 Austria), Sociology and Urban Development Planning. A Contribution to a Competition, Österreichische Zeitschrift für Soziologie, 1987, 12, 3, 44-68.

¶ A sociological contribution to the planning of a hydroelectric power station in Vienna, Austria. Ideas of structuring the metropolitan area are introduced. Proposals include the creation of a greenbelt surrounding the town & wedge-shaped green spaces in the Ur center. A participatory model of town planning is presented that involves the citizen in the early stages of idea development, in subsequent stages, interest groups & political representatives become involved. Legal & financial issues are also discussed. 2 Figures, 2 Maps, 40 References. Modified AA

88T5436

Bohman, James F. (Saint Louis U, MO 63103), Formal Pragmatics and Social Criticism: The Philosophy of Language and the Critique of Ideology in Habermas's Theory of Communicative Action, Philosophy and Social Criticism, 1986, 11, 4, fall, 331-353.

¶ In his recent work, Jürgen Habermas has come surprisingly close to a version of the end of ideology thesis. It can be shown that this view is inconsistent with his own theory of communicative action & social learning. Moreover, on the basis of his formal pragmatics, a conception of ideology as socially caused "distorted communication" can be developed, showing that ideology in contemporary society has migrated into the realm of speech & mundane interaction. Ideological speech can occur in any of the basic social functions or uses of language, in expression, representation, & interaction. The critique of the social uses of language is the continuing contribution of the theory of ideology to social theory today. 17 References. AA

88T5437

Buchanan, James M. (Center Study Public Choice George Mason U, Fairfax VA 22030), The Economizing Element in Knight's Ethical Critique of Capitalist Order, Ethics, 1987, 98, 1, Oct, 61-75.

¶ In Frank Knight's career as an economist, he was handicapped by an intellectual ambiguity that most economists still suffer from, though his intellectual honesty forced him to the edge of a radically new vision. Knight's work in economics always relied on a maximizing paradigm. This paradigm is contrasted with the alternative catallactic paradigm. It is shown that several of Knight's criticisms of the market system rested on his acceptance of a maximizing paradigm. A catallactic revision of Knight's ethical views is argued to better suit his lasting emphasis on the moral principle of free association. W. H. Stoddard

88T5438

Chazel, François (Section Sociologie U Bordeaux II, F-33076 Cedex France), Orientamenti epistemologici e presupposti fondamentali nella Struttura dell'azione sociale (Epistemological Orientations and Fundamental Presuppositions in The Structure of Social Action), Quaderni di Sociologia, 1987, 33, 9, 5-26. (ITA)

Translated by Massimo Borlandi.

¶ A re-examination of a classic of sociological theory: Talcott Parsons's The Structure of Social Action (New York: McGraw-Hill, 1937). Its epistemological orientations include: a critique of empiricism & the establishment of sociology as an analytical science, the choice of the frame of reference of action, & the identification of the properties of systems of action- & thus the location of the object of sociology- in "common value integration." Its fundamental presuppositions include the critique of utilitarianism & the Parsonian solution to the problem of order. It is argued that Parsons was wrong in ascribing to the social order only a normative base: coercion also plays an important role in the maintenance of social order. Modified HA

German Sociological Society in Marburg in June 1986. Three principle controversies that occupied the conference & their implications for the teaching of sociology in Austria are discussed: (1) the lack of standardization in the content & organization of sociological curricula & in institutional standards, (2) disagreement about & inconsistency in setting goals & qualifications for two separate tracks of study for the Diploma & the Master's degree, as well as for programs of study for students in related majors, & (3) conflict between demands to increase the academic rigor & classical emphasis of sociological study, on one side, & concerns about expertise in empirical methods & the employment chances of graduates, on the other. 11 References. J. Anderson

88T5424

Landmeier, Reinhard (Lehrstuhl Soziologie U Munster, D-4400 Federal Republic Germany), Die unbekannte Fachgemeinschaft: Material zur Sozialstruktur der Soziologen der Bundesrepublik Deutschland (The Unknown Profession: Material on the Social Structure of Sociologists in the Federal Republic of Germany), Soziale Welt, 1987, 38, 3, 379-407. (GER)

† An investigation of the social & professional structure of German sociologists utilized faculty lists at all U's in West Germany, Austria, & Switzerland in summer 1987. Mail questionnaire responses from 79 sociologists are also reviewed. Aspects examined include sex & age structure, career patterns, & main focus of educational work. Sociologists are predominantly Ms of the older generation, but career patterns of Ms & Fs do not differ; these are determined by age rather than sex. There is little difference in research emphasis, altogether, the German sociology profession is remarkably homogeneous. 31 Tables, 29 References. Modified HA

88T5425

Lee, Raymond M. (Dept Sociology Saint Mary's Coll, Twickenham TW1 4SX England), Problems in Field Research: Some Simple Teaching Techniques, Teaching Sociology, 1987, 15, 2, Apr, 151-156.

† Two simple teaching simulations that can be used to introduce students to problems encountered in field research are described. The first simulation deals with gaining access to a research setting, while the second concerns some of the ethical difficulties that may potentially confront a field researcher. A number of reasons for using simulations in preference to student research projects are also discussed. 1 Figure, 15 References. HA

88T5426

Lindsay, R. C. L., & Holden, Ronald R. (Dept Psychology Queen's U, Kingston Ontario K7L 3N6), The Introductory Psychology Subject Pool in Canadian Universities, Canadian Psychology/Psychologie Canadienne, 1987, 28, 1, Jan, 45-52.

† Despite claims that research S pool requirements are coercive, many Canadian U psychology departments continue to require their students' participation. Following discussion of the ethical & practical issues associated with various approaches to S recruitment, findings are reported from a mailed questionnaire survey of 50 Canadian educational institutions offering programs in psychology, conducted to determine current practices with regard to recruiting students for research participation. The data indicate that participation for marks is the modal technique for obtaining undergraduate Ss, & that some departments that abandoned research requirements in the past are considering reinstating required research participation. 4 Tables, 23 References. Modified HA

88T5427

Smith, H. W. (U Missouri, Saint Louis 63121), Comparative Evaluation of Three Teaching Methods of Quantitative Techniques: Traditional Lecture, Socratic Dialogue, and PSI Format, The Journal of Experimental Education, 1987, 55, 3, spring, 149-154.

† The methods of analysis of most personalized systems of instruction (PSI) have left several questions unanswered, eg, how much of the difference is reflected in (1) content learned vs methods of grading, & (2) examination practices. In addition to examining these two questions, a third alternate class structure, the Socratic dialogue method, is compared to the traditional lecture & PSI formats on the grounds that much educational theory assumes that techniques that actively involve the student in learning are superior to those that do not. In an experiment involving 175 students, PSI was viewed more positively by students on subjective ratings, & performance outcomes were higher with this method. Further, the treatments offering the multiple testing option produced more positive subjective & performance ratings than the treatments without this option. 3 Tables, 8 References. Modified HA

88T5428

Senemchein, David (PO Box 15744, San Antonio TX 78212), Having One's Research Seized, Journal of Sex Research, 1987, 23, 3, Aug, 408-414.

† Arrests of sexologists have been rare, but examples abound of other harassments, including the Federal Bureau of Investigation's monitoring & condemnation of the Kinsey studies. However, recent arrests & seizures, including a personal experience, indicate a renewed attack on progressive critical sex research, especially when conducted by unaffiliated researchers. Widespread & profound incompetence among professionals, inflammatory & deceitful efforts by the news industry, & the punitive intervention of the state have defined a current period of moral panic over pedophilia, child pornography, & incest. The protection of data & participants is urgently recommended. The continuing collapse of professional & scientific integrity is evidenced by the abandonment of scientific guidelines, personal attack, & direct collaboration with the state. The results have included the most intense antisexual terrorist campaign against children since the nineteenth-century antimasturbation hysteria & a predatory movement against a generalized, essentialist-based concept of the pedophile. 20 References. AA

88T5429

Takata, Susan R., & Leiting, Wanda (Dept Sociology U Wisconsin Parkside, Kenosha 53141), Learning By Doing: The Teaching of Sociological Research Methods, Teaching Sociology, 1987, 15, 2, Apr, 144-150.

† A description of "learning by doing," a nontraditional approach to teaching sociological research methods. From both the faculty & student perspectives, the experiences related to the Racine Gang Project, a student research project at the U of Wisconsin, Parkside, during spring & summer 1986 are described. From the training of students to presentations during professional meetings, some of the strengths & weaknesses of this approach to teaching sociological research methods are addressed. 34 References. HA

88T5430

Turpin, Robin S., Smith, Nick L., & Darcy, Laurie A. (Syracuse U, NY 13244), Survey of Journals Publishing Evaluation Research, Evaluation Practice, 1987, 8, 2, May, 10-19.

† Data are reported from a survey of 33 journals that publish evaluation research in the fields of medicine/rehabilitation, psychology, social work & mental health, education, personnel & organizational development, & public policy. Articles appearing in these journals represent 23 professional areas. Information is provided on submissions, rejections, types of material published, & recent changes in the publication of evaluation research. 1 Appendix, 2 References. AA

88T5431

---, Cronache e commenti (Chronicles and Comments), La Critica Sociologica, 1987, 81, Apr-June, 105-130. (ITA)

† In Adriano Olivetti, un politico vero (Adriano Olivetti, a True Politician), Franco Ferrarotti critiques Renzo Zorzi's article "Noventa e Olivetti: qualche ricordo" ((Noventa and Olivetti) Some Memories of Comunità, 1986, 188, Dec, 199-220), which analyzes the political climate in Italy in the period immediately after WWII. In Antropologia Culturale e società (Cultural Anthropology and Complex Societies) Erica Tedeschi briefly reviews the contributions to the "First National Conference on the Cultural Anthropology of Complex Societies," held in Rome in May 1987. The importance for Italian anthropology of analyzing contemporary cultural processes is emphasized. In Il Terzo Congresso Mondiale di Vittimologia: prima, la vittima (The Third Global Convention on Victimology: First, the Victim), Michele C. del Re reports on the convention on victimology held in San Francisco, Calif, in July 1987. The shift of attention, in recent years, to the victim rather than the criminal & the problem of fear of crime are discussed. In Sociologia della Religione: dal Congresso Mondiale di Delhi al convegno di Padova (The Sociology of Religion: From the World Congress of Delhi to the Conference on Postmodernity in Padua), the editorial staff of La Critica Sociologica discuss the Eleventh World Congress of Sociology (1986), with focus on the themes of social change & the sociology of religion. In I problemi del razzismo: Francesi e Italiani a confronto (The Problems of Racism: Confronted by French and Italians), Claudio Marta describes the conference held in Naples, Italy, in May 1987, the subject of "The Foreigners. Seminar on Racism and Anti-Racism."

den Sozialwissenschaften (Ideas on the Improvement of Theoretical Levels in the Social Sciences), Österreichische Zeitschrift für Soziologie, 1987, 12, 4, 31-47. (GER)

From the sixteenth century onward, quantification has facilitated the progress of physics; eg. mathematical methods have led to the differentiation between experimental & theoretical physics, because mathematics allows an autonomous control of theorizing. However, the social sciences have not reached this level of differentiation, & theory production is tightly bound to the interpretation of the products of master thinkers. This situation is attributed to the qualitative nature of social science issues. It is suggested that more complete concept formation via combinatorial methods may raise the level of theorizing in the social sciences. 4 tables, 47 References. Modified AA

88T5450

Haferkamp, Hans (Dept Sociology U Bremen, D-2800 Bremen 33 West Germany), Interaction Theory in the Federal Republic of Germany: Development, Current Position, Themes, and Problems, Symbolic Interaction, 1987, 10, 2, fall, 143-165

Based on a review of the literature, the development of action & interaction theories & phenomenological sociology in post-WWII Germany is traced. At the end of the 1960s, criticisms of the prevalent neopositivist research methodology, systems theory, & the rapidly spreading critical theory, coupled with the positive reception given symbolic interactionism & ethnomethodology in the US, caused interaction theories to flourish. Today they are among the main schools of thought in West German sociology. "Interpretative" or "communicative" social research has made use of the narrative interview & life history methods, well as group discussion & participant observation, to empirically examine many highly varied subjects. The main themes of current interaction theory are: (1) conceptualizing the difference between unpremeditated behavior & meaningful action, (2) formulating a theory that covers both "structure" & "action," & (3) developing interactionist macro theory. The future of interaction theory is analyzed & assessed optimistically. 106 References. HA

88T5451

Haines, Valerie A. (Dept Sociology U Calgary, Alberta T2N 1N4), Is Spencer's Theory an Evolutionary Theory?, U American Journal of Sociology, 1988, 93, 5, Mar, 1200-1223

The explanatory form of Herbert Spencer's theory of social evolution has been persistently misunderstood in the sociological literature. The conventional interpretation that Spencer proposed a theory of immanent change is challenged to establish that his is an evolutionary theory in the modern biological sense. Proponents of the immanence interpretation have failed to grasp the role that Larmarckian & von Baerian models of change play in Spencer's theories of organic & superorganic evolution. Their case against Spencer & evolutionary theory more generally attacks a model of change Spencer had already rejected. Instead of providing support for the standard sociological definition of evolution & its corollary, the argument for deconstruction, Spencer's theory of social change points to the need for a fundamental rethinking of the terms of the debate over evolutionary theory in sociology. 39 References. HA

88T5452

Haller, Max (Graz U, A-8010 Austria), Empirische Sozialforschung als Basis für die gesellschaftliche Relevanz der Soziologie (Empirical Social Research as the Basis for the Social Relevance of Sociology), Österreichische Zeitschrift für Soziologie, 1987, 12, 3, 11-16. (GER)

Sociology's ability to contribute to the analysis & solution of basic social problems is considered essential to the justification of its existence. The best contribution sociology can make is claimed to be limited to the understanding of social connections & processes by means of an empirically based science. Employment difficulties in Austria for sociologists in comparison to other academics are shown to be exaggerated, although opportunities in sociological teaching & research are seriously lacking. Institutional & financial reasons for this problem are suggested. Improving the quality of training in methods of empirical research may both improve these opportunities & enhance sociology's contribution. 21 References. J Anderson

88T5453

Heitlage, Robert (Lehrstuhl Soziologie I U Regensburg, D-8400 Federal Republic Germany), Der "Bergerian-Approach." Hunter und Ainalays Making Sense of Modern Times als Einladung zu Peter L.

Bergers Soziologie (The "Bergerian Approach". Hunter's and Ainalay's Making Sense of Modern Times as an Invitation to the Sociology of Peter L. Berger), Kolner Zeitschrift für Soziologie und Sozialpsychologie, 1988, 40, 1, Mar, 140-153. (GER)

A review essay on a book by James D. Hunter & Stephen C. Ainalay (Eds), Making Sense of Modern Times: Peter L. Berger and the Vision of Interpretive Sociology (London & New York: Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1986 [see listing in IRPS No. 43]). Berger's sociological work is too well known to require introduction. Hunter & Ainalay seek to show that all his work—on knowledge, religion, the family, & development—has one central theme: the challenge of modern times, which—with their diverse lifestyles & boundless subjectivity & individuality—are often characterized by arbitrary behavior & lack of meaning, leaving the individual feeling lost. This potential to disorient can provoke reactionary responses. To maintain freedom & a sense of meaningfulness, Berger looks to stabilizing forces, eg. family, neighborhood, & voluntary organizations. He views religion as a universal & essential universe of symbols, which helps people deal with human limitations. The trend toward secularization destroys the feeling for "wholeness" (structural plausibility) & fosters disorientation. Rather than secularizing religion or promoting science, nation, or revolution in its place, Berger proposes "relativizing relativism" as a means of coping with modernity. 18 References. Modified AA

88T5454

Javorniczky, István, Eszmények és értékek Bibó István közigazgatási elképzeléseiben (Ideals and Values in István Bibó's Administrative Ideas), Szociológia, 1984-85, 3-4, 261-276. (HUN)

An examination of the values & ideals that had a fundamental impact on the worldview of István Bibó. Analysis of his writings on administration reveals his unconditional respect for human freedom & dignity. In his plans for administrative reform in Hungary (published as the draft of the Peasants' Party in 1946), he recommended city/county self-management that would allow for the unfolding of freedom & the democratization of the country. Modified HA

88T5455

Jenness, David (Consortium of Social Science Associations, 1625 1st NW Suite 911 Washington DC 20006), Future Patterns of Support for Sociology, U The American Sociologist, 1987, 18, 4, winter, 307-319

An organization like the Consortium of Social Science Associations operates not only as a watchdog over current problems in Washington, DC, & as a united voice in communicating priorities, but as a monitor of long-term trends in the federal/U relationships, the relationship of social & behavioral science to other science, & the general reputation of these fields. The marked improvement of the research situations from about 1950 to 1970 in part reflected a better regard for social science research, but was primarily part of a general increase in science & U support. A reversal for these fields began about 1970 that has affected fundamental & applied research, & the perceived utility of research in the conduct of government. U-based researchers should not view relative deprivation as attack, but should work to improve the entire system of research, teaching, & communication with the broader public. HA

88T5456

Kettler, David, Stehr, Nico & Meja, Volker (Dept Political & Cultural Studies Trent U, Peterborough Ontario K9J 7B8), Is a Science of Politics Possible?: The View from Mannheim, U Society, 1987, 24, 3(167), Mar-Apr, 76-82.

Karl Mannheim's writings have a political character, both because he emphasizes the political nature of the materials he subjects to sociological investigation & because he ascribes political functions to that investigation. Decisive historical evidence demonstrates that his approach is grounded in the liberal tradition. Also discussed are structural features of his thinking, including above all the typical concerns with a science of politics, the problem of historical relativism, & the rhetorical dimensions of political knowledge. AA

88T5457

Keys, Christopher B. (Dept Psychology U Illinois, Chicago 60680), Synergy, Prevention and the Chicago School of Sociology, Prevention in Human Services, 1987, 5, 2, spring-summer, 11-34.

The U of Chicago (Ill) School of Sociology & the Chicago Area Project pioneered the development of theory, research, & practice concerning juvenile delinquency & its prevention. The theories of William I. Thomas,

88T5439

Chubin, Daryl E. (Office Technology Assessment US Congress, Washington DC 20510-8025). The Political Economy of Sociology: An Interview with William V. D'Antonio, American Sociological Association, in The American Sociologist, 1987, 18, 4, winter, 331-339.

† Transcript of an interview in which William V. D'Antonio, Executive Director of the American Sociological Assoc discusses the many uses of sociology as a practical & knowledge-producing discipline, as well as a profession with many constituencies. While hailing gains in sociology's relations with Congress, the media, & other social science disciplines, he laments that too few talented students elect to pursue social science degrees. He concludes with thoughts on the certification of sociologists. HA

88T5440

Clausen, Lars (Institut Sociology U Kiel, D-2300 Federal Republic Germany). Zur Asymmetrie von Prognose und Epignose in den Sozialwissenschaften (Concerning the Asymmetry of Prognosis and Epignosis in the Social Sciences), Österreichische Zeitschrift für Soziologie, 1987, 12, 4, 21-30 (GER).

† A discussion of the type of logic required for the use of prognosis (ie, the use of future events for predictive purposes) & epignosis (ie, the use of past events for predictive purposes) in order to test sociological theorems. In reference to traditional studies, two schools of modern logic are reconciled, & a new epistemological approach to the analysis of future & past social events is suggested. 1 Figure. Modified AA

88T5441

Coenan-Huther, Jacques (U Geneva, CH-1211 Switzerland), Sociology and Decision-Making, ♦ Social Policy and Administration, 1987, 21, 2, summer, 187-199.

† Modern sociology is rediscovering the actor & his or her ability to make choices. The implications of this new perspective for applied sociology are explored, with emphasis on the specifically sociological contributions that sociologists can make to organizations. A strategy is mapped out for sociologists to follow in working with decisionmakers. 18 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T5442

Cooper, David, Agnes Heller and Our Needs, ♦ Thesis Eleven, 1987, 16, 100-101.

† An examination of the view of needs developed in the writings of Agnes Heller. Heller's works show her to be one of the few Marxist anthropologists now publishing in Europe, carrying on Karl Marx's tradition of a simultaneously philosophical & concrete study of human life. Her work addresses itself to both Western & Eastern Europe, providing a basis for resistance to the "soft fascism" that now permeates it. W. H. Stoddard

88T5443

Davison, W. Phillips (Columbia U, New York NY 10027), A Story of the POQ's Fifty-Year Odyssey, ♦ The Public Opinion Quarterly, 1987, 51, 4(2), winter, S4-S11.

† An account of the Public Opinion Quarterly from its beginning in 1937 to the present, based on personal memories of service as editor & on the memories of the other editors, rather than on documentary sources. The content has been fairly consistent over this fifty-year period, with gradual shifts associated with major world events or trends within the social sciences to increased specialization. Selection of articles has been increasingly formalized. Throughout the journal's history, finances were a source of difficulty, though many of the problems have been resolved in recent years. 3 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T5444

Fardon, Richard (U Saint Andrew's, Fife KY16 9AJ Scotland), The Faithful Disciple: On Mary Douglas and Durkheim, ♦ Anthropology Today, 1987, 3, 5, Oct, 4-6.

† An analysis of the works of British anthropologist Mary Douglas & how they embody the sociological analysis characteristic of Emile Durkheim rather than the tradition of US cultural analysts. Focusing on her latest work, How Institutions Think (UK: Routledge & Kegan Paul; & Syracuse, NY: Syracuse U Press [no publication date provided]), the development of her ideas on societal classifications, the moral/cognitive environments in which social interactions take place, the function of consumption/exchange patterns, the phenomena of risk, & the development/maintenance of worldviews is traced. Douglas uses Durkheim's mature writings to indicate how he might have applied insights about premodern societies, particularly his ideas on individualism & the value of functional explanation, to understanding contemporary ones. While Douglas's conception of "bounded rationality" & her attempt to answer charges of "sociological relativism" are critiqued, on the whole, her work poses a challenge to traditional sociological theory that proceeds from the assumption that the translation of other cultures is problematic. Photograph K. Hyatt

88T5445

Fleck, Christian, Sozialwissenschaftler sehen sich selbst. Ergebnisse einer Kurzumfrage zu aktuellen Schwerpunkten und Problemen der Sozialforschung (Social Scientists Look at Themselves. Results of a Short Questionnaire on Current Emphases and Problems of Social Research), Österreichische Zeitschrift für Soziologie, 1987, 12, 4, 28-31 (GER).

† The results of a questionnaire sent to directors of Austrian social scientific research institutions (N = 20) are summarized. Topics covered include types of research, number of researchers, changes in emphasis, sources of & problems in obtaining funding, quality of research in comparison to that of West Germany, effectiveness of US in training & recruiting, & major problems facing social-scientific research in Austria. It is concluded that Austrian social scientists clearly perceive the limitations caused by withheld funding & personnel & the poor education of students. 1 Reference. J. Anderson

88T5446

Gellner, Ernest (Dept Social Anthropology Cambridge U, CB2 3RQ England), The Political Thought of Bronislaw Malinowski, Current Anthropology, 1987, 28, 4, Aug-Oct, 557-559.

† An endeavor to bring out the unity of the political ideas of Bronislaw Malinowski & of his anthropological work, & to demonstrate contemporary relevance of his political ideas. The clue to his political position is the fact that he admired the Habsburg Empire & its multinational policy, that he considered it a kind of smaller version of a League of Nations, he also admired the British policy of indirect rule in Africa. He was a political internationalist & a cultural nationalist, what he liked in indirect rule was the fact that it perpetuated & strengthened local culture, without conferring power on an ethnically based national state. The coherent position with which he can be credited would generalize this for all mankind: protect all cultures, but do not give political powers to nations. This can be seen as the termination of the colonial system, & its replacement not by a multiplicity of independent states, but by a central government that fosters local culture but not local political power. AA

88T5447

Gollin, Albert E. (Newspaper Advertising Bureau, 1180 Ave Americas New York NY 10036), Are We Deserving of Support? Comments on David Jenness' Paper, in The American Sociologist, 1987, 18, 4, winter, 320-323.

† Commenting on the thoughts of David Jenness (see abstract in this section), it is suggested that the future of federal support for sociology & the other social sciences will depend on the continued mobilization of efforts of the Consortium of Social Science Associations & on public recognition of sociological contributions to the realization of two prime sets of values. Sociology can best affect this future by improving its record of visibly effective work in pursuit of the larger public interest. HA

88T5448

Grande, Edgar (Fachgruppe Politik-/Verwaltungswissenschaft U Konstanz, D-7750 Federal Republic Germany), Der Staat in der Sozialpartnerschaft. Eine Antikritik (The State in the Social Partnership. An Anti-Critique), Österreichische Zeitschrift für Soziologie, 1987, 12, 3, 32-43. (GER)

† A criticism of recent literature on neocorporatism & of some varieties of neo-Marxist state theory that tend to underestimate the autonomous role of the state in neocorporatist systems of policy making. Focusing on Austria's social partnership, empirical evidence is provided which indicates that the state, by using a broad range of legal & administrative instruments, has effectively been able to facilitate & even enforce consensus between trade unions & business organizations. It is argued that these activities have contributed substantially to the development & stability of Austrian social partnership; thus, the state has to be interpreted as an integral part of the system of social partnership. 41 References. AA

88T5449

Greshoff, Rainer & Loh, Werner (U Paderborn, D-4790 Federal Republic Germany), Ideen zur Erhöhung des Theoretisierungsinteresses in

T5465

Nerve, C. Joseph (Catholic U America, Washington DC 20064). The Introduction of the Social Sciences in the Catholic University of America 1895-1909, Social Thought, 1986, 12, 2, spring, 30-43.

The Catholic U of America, chartered in 1887, became the principal agent through which the modern U movement was introduced into US higher education. It was pioneering when, in 1895, it included economics, politics, & sociology in its first curriculum in the arts & sciences which were still being offered only at the graduate level. Both theoretical & practical concerns were manifest from the beginning. Though department of politics could not be organized for many years, the first professors of economics & sociology shared an interest in the contemporary labor movement. William J. Kerby, an Iowa priest who had been at Louvain for his doctorate, became the founding chairman of the department of sociology, through which he undertook to begin the professionalization of social work under Catholic auspices. 48 References. AA

T5466

Pohorles, Ronald (Innsbruck U, A-6020 Austria). Über die Notwendigkeit, das sozialwissenschaftliche Wissen näher an die Gesellschaft zu rücken (On the Necessity of Moving Social-Scientific Knowledge Closer to Society), Österreichische Zeitschrift für Soziologie, 1987, 12, 3, 21-24 (GER)

The proportion of social scientists engaged in sociological research in Austria is regarded as encouraging, but the funding for this research is said to be alarmingly low, which in turn is held responsible for the frustrations inherent in practically relevant research. Shortcomings in sociologists' attempts to provide expert proposals at the local level point to the need for an intermediate theory between general theories of social change & application-oriented recommendations. The binding of theoretical interests to concrete problems is emphasized. The most important task of sociology is argued to be the prevention of social disintegration. J. Anderson

T5467

Polanyi-Levitt, Kari & Mendell, Marguerite (Dept Economics McGill U, Montreal Quebec H3A 2T5). Karl Polanyi: His Life and Times, Studies in Political Economy, 1987, 22, spring, 7-39

The text of the introduction to Democracy, Fascism and Industrial Civilization: Selected Essays of Karl Polanyi (Hungarian translation, Budapest: Gondolat, 1986). Focusing on the origins & evolution of Karl Polanyi's ideas, much biographical information previously unavailable to English-language scholars is presented, & the way in which events shaped his thinking is chronicled. Polanyi's life is divided into five periods marked by three emigrations. The early periods comprised his childhood & growing up in Hungary, terminating in 1905 with the death of his father; his activities in the Hungarian student movement, & his service in the Austro-Hungarian cavalry during WWI. The radical convictions of the Polanyi family & the intellectual & political climate of pre-war Budapest were seminal influences on Polanyi's life-long commitment to socialism. The turbulence of early twentieth-century Europe, racked by war & economic crisis, was documented in Polanyi's early writings & formed the basis for his investigation of the origins of the twentieth century's dilemmas. Polanyi's emigration to Vienna, Austria, marked the beginning of a new period. In Vienna, he commenced a serious study of economics & sociology, & became an intimate observer of contemporary history. The rise of Hitler & fascism precipitated his emigration in 1933 to England, where he found his real vocation as a teacher. The publication of The Great Transformation (Boston, 1957), written during a three-year appointment at Bennington Coll, Vt., led to his first full-time academic appointment as a Visiting Professor of Economics at Columbia U, New York, NY, & the third emigration. It is argued that Polanyi's departure from the study of contemporary economic history during his years at Columbia did not represent a radical break with the concerns apparent in his earlier work. Through the study of earlier, non-market societies, Polanyi hoped to demonstrate the exceptional nature of contemporary market society & to lay the foundations for a comparative economic history. Modified AA

T5468

Radnoti, Sandor. A Critical Theory of Communication: Agnes Heller's Confession to Philosophy. ♦ Thesis Eleven, 1987, 16, 104-111

Two crucial grounding hypotheses of emancipatory social philosophies are now collapsed—that outbursts of dissatisfaction can lead through destruction toward redemption, & that the needs of social groups can be articulated by being imputed to those groups from outside. Emancipatory philosophy now needs to achieve a philosophical theory of communication. The theory advanced by Jürgen Habermas interprets communication & truth in terms of the possibility of consensus; Agnes Heller, in contrast, proposes a more radical theory of communication that aims at debate among true values, & at communication among comprehensive philosophies with different assumptions. On this basis, Heller suggests the possibility of a world of preliminary consensus. W. H. Stoddard

88T5469

Rhoades, Lawrence J. (c/o American Sociologist-U Missouri, Columbia 65211). The Political Economy of Sociology: An Interview with David Goslin, National Research Council, U The American Sociologist, 1987, 18, 4, winter, 324-330

¶ Transcription of an interview in which David A. Goslin responds to a variety of questions concerning the relationship between the federal government & the political economy of sociology. He addresses the identity of sociology in Washington, DC, the treatment of behavioral & social sciences as a special case in scientific policy, the greater acceptability of the behavioral sciences, the battle of 1981, the recurring need for reviews of the discipline, the roles of the National Research Council & the National Academy of Sciences, the current status & rising prospects of the social sciences, & emerging areas of national concern. HA

88T5470

Saage, Richard (U Göttingen, D-3400 Federal Republic Germany). Vertragsdenken als frühbürgerliche Gesellschaftstheorie (Hobbes, Locke, Rousseau) (Contractualism as Early Bourgeois Social Theory (Hobbes, Locke, Rousseau)), Österreichische Zeitschrift für Soziologie, 1987, 12, 4, 48-59 (GER)

¶ The social contract theories of Thomas Hobbes, John Locke, & J.-J. Rousseau are examined in their historical contexts in an effort both to explain their differences & to demonstrate in what ways they typify early bourgeois political thought. The relation between state & society in each theory is linked to the status of private property in the state of nature & the degree to which the original contract emphasizes social obligation or possessive individualism, & it is suggested that different degrees of economic development in England & France partly account for the differences between theories. The distinction between sovereignty contract & social contract in each theory marks a break from feudal thought, & the different priorities given to the two types of contract are discussed. The significance of contractualism for modern political theory is considered. AA Tr & Modified by J. Anderson

88T5471

Shalin, Dmitri N. (Dept Sociology Southern Illinois U, Carbondale 62901). Socialism, Democracy and Reform: A Letter and an Article by George H. Mead, Symbolic Interaction, 1987, 10, 2, fall, 267-278

¶ This presentation of a selection from George Herbert Mead's correspondence with Henry Northup Castle & his little-known series of five articles on the issues of war & democracy should renew an interest in Mead's political writings & reform activities. It should also draw the attention of sociologists to the substantial body of unexplored, unpublished writings, which will hopefully continue to be investigated. 21 References. Modified HA

88T5472

Sproule, J. Michael. Propaganda Studies in American Social Science: The Rise and Fall of the Critical Paradigm. ♦ The Quarterly Journal of Speech, 1987, 73, 1, Feb., 60-78

¶ During the 1920s & 1930s, a critical framework for analysis of social influence, called propaganda analysis, gained sway in US social science. The epistemic rationale of the paradigm was its ability to explain the phenomenon of modern mass persuasion. The paradigm's ideological appeal came through its ability to widen citizen participation in society & its match with postwar disillusionment & Depression-era skepticism. By the late 1930s, the epistemic germ of propaganda analysis was weakened by the growing tendency to equate science with statistical & experimental methods, & its ideological roots were withered by attacks on social critics & demands for academic aid in national mobilization. Critical propaganda studies were displaced by a rival paradigm, called communication research, which was able to render useful & politically noncontroversial wartime & postwar service to government & private grantors. HA

Ernest Burgess, & Robert Park emphasized the continuity & similarity between deviant & normal individuals, the potent influence of the social context in shaping behavior, & the community as the primary cause, preventive agent, & cure of deviance. Clifford Shaw & Henry McKay's quantitative research supported the zonal theory of Ur development that predicted high delinquency rates in socially disorganized communities near the central city. Their qualitative life histories of delinquents supported the continuity view of delinquents & explicated the social influences that promoted delinquency. The Chicago Area Project has a fifty-year history of preventing delinquency by developing indigenous talent to work with local youth & improve community conditions. This Chicago example demonstrates the value of prevention programs that emphasize the synergy of theory, research, & practice, the importance of social & community levels of analysis, the combination of quantitative & qualitative research methods, & the use of citizen participation. 33 References. HA

88T5458

Lantis, Margaret (Dept Anthropology U Kentucky, Lexington 40506), Two Important Roles in Organizations and Communities, WM Human Organization, 1987, 46, 3, fall, 189-199

† A discussion of the relationship between leader & followers, based on research conducted in social psychology, political science, & political anthropology. Leadership is defined as a person's influence on those considered to be followers to behave differently from the way they would have acted otherwise. A list of leadership abilities & skills is provided, stressing qualities of (1) inspiration & mobilization, or definition of need & proposed satisfaction of need, & (2) effective organization & management of effort for satisfaction. The source of legitimization of the leader—inside or outside his/her group, & whether human or supernatural must also be considered. With respect to followers, discussed are: their various motivations for following a leader, type of appeal in the relationship, & goal orientations of leader-follower unit. The situation in which a group & its leader(s) communicate & operate affects the relationship. Thus, the functioning of the leader-followers relationship must be a situation-relevant group process. The implications of the analysis for social anthropologists are considered. 76 References. Modified AA

88T5459

Longstaff, S. A. (Atkinson Coll York U, North York Ontario M3J 1P3), Daniel Bell and Political Reconciliation, WM Queen's Quarterly, 1987, 94, 3, autumn, 660-665

† An essay on a book by Howard Brick, Daniel Bell and the Decline of Intellectual Radicalism: Social Theory and Political Reconciliation in the 1940s (Madison, U of Wisconsin Press, 1986), praising Brick's discussion of the protracted "crisis of ideology" that beset the anti-Stalinist Left in the 1930s & 1940s, & accepting his assumption that Bell's early writings constitute a particularly complex & reverberant response to the political shocks of the 1937-1952 period. Issue is taken, however, with Brick's hermeneutical focus on Bell's writings alone, arguing that any account of the general deradicalization of Bell & his generation can ill afford to overlook the marked changes in their career opportunities & other privileges & deprivations that took place after the war. In this connection, Brick's relative neglect of Bell's mostly unarticulated interest in Kabbalah & other aspects of Judaism is particularly problematic. AA

88T5460

Martelanz, Wolfgang, Wirtschaft und Soziologie—die unterschätzte Praxisrelevanz einer akademischen Disziplin (Economy and Sociology—The Underestimated Practical Relevance of an Academic Discipline), Österreichische Zeitschrift für Soziologie, 1987, 12, 3, 25-27. (GER)

† A question about the proper occupational place for the pure science of sociology is raised, given the frequency with which sociology is practically applied by people in other disciplines. It is argued that the greatest professional chances for sociologists in the future are in macroeconomics, in various areas dealing with microelectronics & rationalization of production, & in the generation of social policy. Opportunities for sociologists in the world of business, & adjustments they must make to enter it successfully, are discussed. 4 References. J. Anderson

88T5461

Misgeld, Dieter (U Toronto, Ontario M5S 1A1), Modernity and Social Science: Habermas and Rorty, Philosophy and Social Criticism, 1986, 11, 4, fall, 355-372.

† An examination of modernity & postmodernity, as they have emerged in recent discussion between critical theorists & theorists of postmodernity. The position of critical theory from Max Horkheimer's & Theodor W. Adorno's Dialectic of Enlightenment (New York: Herder & Herder, 1972), to Jürgen Habermas's Theory of Communicative Action (IRPS No. 41/88c00922 & 88c00923) is reviewed with reference to J. Lyotard's critique of metanarrative conceptions of history (The Postmodern Condition, Minneapolis, U of Minnesota Press, 1984) & Richard Rorty's critical discussion of both positions (see IRPS No. 33/86c00638). The relation between the social sciences, the theory of democracy, & competing conceptions of modernity emerges as the central issue. It is argued that Habermas's theory alone manages to link the themes discussed; however, it contains foundational features to which Rorty's skeptical criticisms may be applied productively. Elements of Habermas's theories of social science & modernity can be preserved because they meet Rorty's requirement that inquiry contribute to the development of democracy, particularly because Habermas recognizes the subjects of social research as its potential critics. 42 References. Modified AA

88T5462

Mucha, Janusz (Instytut Socjologii Jagielloński U, 31-007 Kraków Poland), Polish Humanism in a Communist World: Stanisław Ossowski, WM Society, 1987, 24, 4(168), May-June, 70-77

† An analysis of the humanistic sociology of Stanisław Ossowski, one of the leading Polish scholars in the field. He studied philosophy, art, & social sciences between 1915 & 1923. He was interested in classical theorists & positivism, but also in Marxism & post-WWI US sociology. Ossowski's whole activity meant linking the two roles of sociologists in explaining & changing the world. Even when interested in explaining he was strongly antipositivistic & discussed several reasons why sociology should not resemble natural sciences. Analyzing different kinds of social order, he was in favor of the order of agreements, which is the combination of the interference of many centers of thought & decisions & the coordination of activities by one common center of social planning. Ossowski also discussed relations between social structure & social consciousness, class & racial ideologies, & the role of the individual in historical processes. AA

88T5463

Nilson, Sten Sparre (U Oslo, Blindern N-0316 3 Norway), To gangse fem konfliktlinjer. Gjensyn med Stein Rokkans historiske valg sosiologi (Five Plus Five Dimensions of Conflict: The Historical Sociology of Stein Rokkan Revisited), Tidsskrift for samfunnsforskning, 1987, 28, 6, 519-542. (NOR)

† The late Stein Rokkan proposed five different cleavage lines to be politically dominant in Norway: territorial, sociocultural, & religious dimensions of conflict & the opposition in the commodity & labor markets. Though it is agreed that these are the cleavages on which Norway's party system was undoubtedly founded, it is argued that five others are also of historical importance: oppositions between the sexes, between different age groups, & between creditors & debtors & conflicts over new technology & concerning relations with other countries. The recent dealignment of voters & weakening of their attachment to parties have increased the importance of specific issues, & may bring about a renewed salience of these latter conflict dimensions. Historical examples are provided of the efforts of various groups to mobilize in support of particular causes. 2 Tables. Modified HA

88T5464

Nowotny, Helga (Institut Wissenschaftstheorie und Wissenschaftsforschung U Wien, A-1010 Austria), Sozialforschung und gesellschaftliche Entwicklung (Social Research and Social Development), Österreichische Zeitschrift für Soziologie, 1987, 12, 3, 7-16. (GER)

† A discussion of the reciprocal relation between social development & social science. Several studies are reviewed in which varying social conditions are claimed to yield different emphases in social science research. A new pressure for social science to examine its own determining conditions is attributed to its increasing use for the furthering of political ends. The problem of whether social science research can be at all useful in political decision making is complicated by the short-term & short-sighted employment of social scientists by politicians to investigate problems requiring more lengthy & more anticipatory study. In this respect Sweden is much further advanced in its public support of social research than such countries as Austria. J. Anderson (Inner Goods). Rome: Janua, 1986). Two of the authors take part in a discussion. Renée Reggiani mentions the most interesting aspects of the book: its examination of the role of the writer in the advanced industrial society & of the relationship between author & publisher, & its regular reference to the situation in Italy. Miriam Mafai discusses the actions of critics & the public to any book, & the possibility of "bibliotheca". Dacia Maraini investigates further the function of the writer in society. Franco Ferrarotti describes the origins of the research for this book in the 1960s. Eugenia Tantuoci questions whether the introduction of electronic technology (ie, the use of a word processor rather than a typewriter) is changing the nature of writing. Romolo Runcini expands this with a discussion of writing in relation to anthropological change & epistemes. Roberto Cipriani is optimistic that the technological advances will have the effect of raising literary & aesthetic standards. Mariella Maciotti explains that the focus of the book was on publishers & editors, though some authors were also interviewed. C. Waters

88T5482

Letters from Readers: Disenthralling Sociology. ♦ WM Society, 1987, 24, 5(169), July-Aug, 3-5
Replv, 5

¶ Comments on Irving Louis Horowitz's article, "Disenthralling Sociology" (see SA 36:1/88T1210) are offered by Jack L. Roach & Janet K. Roach (Dept of Sociology, U of Connecticut); Stan Cohen (Inst of Criminology, Hebrew U of Jerusalem, Mount Scopus, Israel); Reinhard Bendix (Dept of Political Science, U of California, Berkeley); William A. Donahue; Ralf Dahrendorf; George C. Homans (Dept of Sociology, Harvard U, Cambridge, Mass); William N. Dunn (Graduate School of Public & International Affairs, U of Pittsburgh, Pa); Julius Rivera (Dept of Sociology, U of Massachusetts, Amherst); & Patricia M. Shields (Dept of Political Science, Southwest Texas State U, San Marcos). Most contributors are in agreement with Horowitz's arguments concerning the corruption of sociology by those who favor an ultra-Left ideology. The Roaches, however, doubt that such a contingent exists: though there are US sociologists who consider themselves Marxists &/or socialists, their beliefs & practices are hardly nefarious, as Horowitz portrays them. In his reply, Irving Louis Horowitz (Dept of Sociology, Rutgers U, New Brunswick, NJ) reiterates his warnings about the threat posed by the "new ideologues" to sociology & the dangers inherent in politicizing the discipline. He argues that the fate of the discipline is inextricably linked to that of democratic society. K. Hyatt

07 theories, ideas, & systems

88T5483

Ahlsen, Akhter, Principles of Univid Experience: The Girdle of Aphrodite. ♦ Journal of Mental Imagery, 1987, 11, 2, summer, 1-52
A psychological theory, in order to provide useful operational effects, must involve information gathering with new expression & performance of the organism. Processes in the focus & the periphery, as in recall & forgetting, therefore, must be seen as merging somewhere. Likewise, normal & altered states of consciousness merge somewhere to generate a view of reality that provides an altered or mythic origin to experiential & informational nuclei in consciousness. A view of focus & periphery, focus & unividness, based on the Stein Image Experiment, is offered for a wider interpretation of psychological phenomena involving the origin of social belief & guilt in consciousness, & its relationship with symbols of torture, self-imagery, & water symbols. 2 Figures, 26 References. HA

88T5484

Alexander, Jeffrey C. (Dept Sociology U California, Los Angeles 90024), La logica teorica oggi: il pensiero sociologico alla luce della Struttura di Parsons (Theoretical Logic Today: Sociological Thought in the Light of Parsons's Structure). Quaderni di Sociologia, 1987, 33, 9, 27-42 (ITA) Translated by Gaspare Nevola.

The questions crucial to sociological theory are specified: the nature of action of the prototypical actor, & the nature of the order that exists between actors. It is shown how the failure to provide satisfactory answers to these questions produced a series of theoretical impasses in the history of sociological thought. These crises are described in logical rather than historical or social terms, ie, as produced by the inability to surmount the limitation imposed by certain presuppositional positions. The works of Karl Marx, Emile Durkheim, & Max Weber are discussed as progressively more successful theoretical attempts to deal with these logical problems. In conclusion, it is shown how the work of Talcott Parsons beginning with The Structure of Social Action (New York: Free Press, 1937)—represents an explicit resolution of the logical dilemmas within which the theoretical founders of sociology struggled. Modified HA

88T5485

Andress, Hans-Jürgen (Fakultät Soziologie U Bielefeld, D-4800 Bielefeld, Republic Germany), Spezifikationsfehler und unbeobachtete Heterogenität in Regressionsmodellen für Übergangsrate. Ein Plädoyer für bessere soziologische Theorien (Specification Error and Unobserved Heterogeneity in Rate Models: A Plea for Better Sociological Theories). Kolner Zeitschrift für Soziologie und Sozialpsychologie, 1988, 40, 1, Mar, 93-116 (GER)
An investigation of the effects of omitted variables on specification error in rate models. It is shown that the omission of important exogenous variables has worse consequences—from a theoretical viewpoint—in rate models than in classical linear regression models. Using simulated data, it is shown empirically how sample size, censoring, & correlation of exogenous variables affect the estimates of a misspecified model. Various models are tested (exponential, Weibull, Cox, & compound models) & it is found that, independently of the specific model, all estimates are seriously biased, if the omitted variable has strong effects on the rate. It seems that there is no easy statistical solution to the specification problem. The conclusion is therefore a plea for better substantive theories & data. 3 Tables, 2 Figures, 30 References. Modified HA

88T5486

Bourdin, Alain (Centre recherches sociologiques U Toulouse II, F-31058 Cedex France), Raymond Ledrut, une pensée exploratrice (Raymond Ledrut, an Exploratory Thinker). Cahiers Internationaux de Sociologie, 1987, 34, 83, July-Dec, 411-420. (FRE)

¶ A review of the work of Raymond Ledrut. Beginning as an Ur sociologist, Ledrut was also an epistemologist, anthropologist, & philosopher. His mind was critical, questioning, & analytical, & he was an excellent debater. Several of his most important books are discussed here, including two that deserve greater attention: La Revolution cachée ([The Hidden Revolution], Tournai: Casterman, 1979) & La Forme et le sens dans la société ([Form and Meaning in Society], Paris: Librairie des Meridiens, 1984). 10 References. Modified HA

88T5487

Carter, Richard B. (Dept Philosophy U Maryland Baltimore County, Catonsville 21228), Political Animals and Social Animals as Biologically Meaningful Categories. Human Studies, 1988, 11, 1, Jan, 65-86

¶ The question addressed is whether Homo is properly to be considered as a political animal, or is best understood as merely a form of social animal that has evolved particularly complex survival stratagems. Based on the published work of contemporary Swiss zoologist, Adolf Portmann (Animals as Social Beings, New York: Viking Press, 1964), it is argued that there are solid grounds for distinguishing between social & political animals, & that Homo inhabits the realm of the political animal. 15 References. Modified AA

88T5488

Coleman, Jules (Yale U, New Haven CT 06520), Competition and Cooperation. Ethics, 1987, 98, 1, Oct, 76-90

¶ During Frank Knight's career in economics his theoretical & normative views were seldom in equilibrium, making it possible to find support in his work for varied views. An attempt is made to elucidate Knight's own basic tendency. The standard paradigm in economics is argued to be the market paradigm, for which the basic model is the perfectly competitive market, & law, politics, & morality are justified as solutions to market failure. In other words, cooperation is a response to the failure of competition. Knight, however, holds that competition in itself is a form of cooperation. His view in effect is that the market is a product of an underlying consensus & that market institutions best permit cooperation. W. H. Stoddard

88T5473

Strathern, Marilyn (Victoria U Manchester, M13 9PL England). The Persuasive Fictions of Anthropology. Current Anthropology. 1987, 28, 3, June, 251-270.

Comments, 270-277, Reply, 277-281.

¶ The history of British social anthropology reveals a dramatic change between Sir James Frazer & Bronislaw Malinowski. The nature of the change is illuminated by analysis of the change between the modernist & postmodernist epochs in anthropological writing. Each generation creates its own sense of history: modernists regard Frazer as failing to deal with the technical problem of elucidating alien concepts by putting them into social contexts; postmodernists recover diverse ironies from the writings of anthropologists, including Frazer, stimulated by their own play with contexts. Frazer is out of context in both cases, because of the kinds of books he wrote; he did not organize his book in a modernist way, nor did it develop out of the contextualizing exercise of Malinowskian anthropology that postmodernists seek to overcome. Ultimately postmodernist anthropology must be viewed as a new type of exercise with its own distinctive problems & its own distinctive focus on fictionalization that shapes its reading of the past. Comments are offered by M. R. Crick (School of Social Sciences, Deakin U, Victoria, Australia), by Richard Fardon (U of Saint Andrews, Fife, Scotland), by Elvin Hatch (Dept of Anthropology, U of California, Santa Barbara), by I. C. Jarvie (Dept of Philosophy, York U, North York, Ontario), by Rik Pinxten (Rijksuniversiteit-Gent, Belgium), by Paul Rabinow (Dept of Anthropology, U of California, Berkeley), by Elizabeth Tonkin (Centre for West African Studies, U of Birmingham, England), & by Stephen A. Tyler & George E. Marcus (Dept of Anthropology, Rice U, Houston, Tex), with a Reply by Marilyn Strathern that focuses on the misunderstanding of the original account by Jarvie as proposing an opposition between science & fiction. The special responsibility of the anthropologist is to monitor the problems of misunderstanding & social breakdown in Western civilization & in their own profession. 82 References. Modified HA

88T5474

Szacki, Jerzy (U Warsaw, PL-00-325 Poland), Florian Znaniecki: A Philosopher Turned Sociologist. ♦ The Polish Sociological Bulletin, 1985, 1-4(69-72), 5-18.

¶ Florian Znaniecki is recognized in Polish intellectual history both as a sociologist & as a philosopher. However, his philosophical work now receives too little attention, especially from sociologists. Znaniecki's thought can be understood as a precursor of the antipositivist breakthrough, based on his emphasis on values in philosophy & on creativity. He interpreted values as infinitely variable; also, in his view, values were originally created by human minds but could take on an independent existence in the realm of culture. These ideas remained influential in his work as a sociologist, especially in its theoretical content. W. H. Stoddard

88T5475

Tommissen, Piet, Requiem ter ere van James Burnham (Requiem for James Burnham). ♦ Tijdschrift voor Sociale Wetenschappen, 1988, 33, 1, Jan-Mar, 48-57. (DUT)

¶ A review of the work of James Burnham (1905-1987), who was once at the center of a controversial, worldwide debate. After years as a militant in the US Trotskyist movement, he gradually abandoned his faith in the Communist solution. This change brought him reproach & isolation, but he continued to defend his anti-Communist position & his own political ideology. His activities as a specialist in political philosophy are examined here. His works are listed in chronological order, & the most important are briefly analyzed, especially two considered most relevant today: The Managerial Revolution: What Is Happening to the World? (New York: Day, 1941), & The Machiavellians: Defenders of Freedom (Chicago: Regnery, 1943). HA Tr & Modified by C. Waters

88T5476

Turner, Jonathan H. & Maryanski, Alexandra R. (U California, Riverside 92521), Sociology's Lost Human Relations Area Files, in Sociological Perspectives, 1988, 31, 1, Jan, 19-34.

¶ An examination of sociology's first human relations area files, which were developed by Herbert Spencer. These files, contained primarily in the fifteen-volume Descriptive Sociology (1873-1934), summarize ethnographic & historical data on diverse types of societies. It is argued that both sociology & anthropology would be far more interesting disciplines if they followed Spencer's lead in collecting & cataloguing cross-cultural & historical data in ways that would facilitate theorizing about human social organization. 1 Figure, 19 References. Modified HA

88T5477

Vaa, Mariken, Hvem skriver i Tidsskrift for samfunnsforskning? (Publishing in the Social Sciences: The Case of the Tidsskrift for samfunnsforskning). Tidsskrift for samfunnsforskning, 1987, 28, 543-568. (NOR)

¶ The scientific publishing system in Norway is briefly reviewed with some recent studies of publication patterns among Norwegian sociologists. All manuscripts submitted to the Tidsskrift for samfunnsforskning between 1981 & 1984, inclusive ($\Sigma N = 207$) are analyzed with regard to the characteristics of their authors & referees. Results indicate that 20%-33% of Norwegian sociologists, political scientists, & social anthropologists in research or academia have submitted manuscripts during this period, with an acceptance rate of about 50%. Perusal of national bibliographies for other works by these authors reveals that this group is more productive than the average social scientists in Norway, for almost 40% also published books during this period. They are quite active in writing for more general journals as well. 7 Tables. References. Modified HA

88T5478

Wagner, Ina, Grundlagenorientierung und Praxisbezug als Elemente soziologischer Forschung (Orientation of Basis and Relation to Practice as Elements of Sociological Research). Osterreichische Zeitschrift für Soziologie, 1987, 12, 3, 18-20. (GER)

¶ The need for sociology to work more closely with those who apply it is examined. The growing possible applications of sociology to political decision processes & the unavailability of sociological expertise to those affected by these processes are discussed, & arguments for social science detached from the interests of those applying or affected by it are rejected. The crucial role of the US in this process, & the relatively backward state of Austria in this respect, are considered. The importance of providing sociological services to grass-roots organizations is emphasized & the financial problems involved are noted. J. Anderson

88T5479

Weinstein, Deena (Dept Sociology DePaul U, Chicago IL 60614), Review Essay: Return to the Sources of Modern Sociological Theory. The Social Science Journal, 1987, 24, 4, Oct, 457-459.

¶ A review essay on the first four books in the Masters of Social Theory Series (John H. Turner [Ed], Beverly Hills: Sage Publications, 1985): Jonathan H. Turner, Herbert Spencer: A Renewed Appreciation; Robert Alun Jones, Emile Durkheim: An Introduction to Four Major Works; Randall Collins, Max Weber: A Skeleton Key; & Whitney Pope with Lucetta Pope, Alexis de Tocqueville: His Social and Political Theory (see listings in IRPS No. 43). These works are aimed at a wide spectrum ranging from undergraduate students to social theorists. The books provide as much information about the variety of ways to read about social theory as they do about the theorists themselves. Modified AA

88T5480

Wilde, R. de & Vries, G. de (Faculteit Algemene Wetenschappen Rijks U Limburg, NL-6200 MD Maastricht Netherlands), De constructie van historische continuïteit: Disciplinegeschiedenis en het verleden van de sociologie (The Construction of Historical Continuity: Disciplinary History and the Part of Sociology), in Mens en Maatschappij, 1987, 62, supplement, 56-71. (DUT)

¶ An examination of various techniques used—implicitly or explicitly by historians of sociology to trace the continuity in their discipline's past as to contribute to its present identity. It is argued that in all cases historical continuity is constructed in a finalistic way, taking present-day ideas about sociology & its tasks as a starting point for writing the history of the discipline. The historical distortions that emerge from this finalistic bias are illustrated using examples from the works of Herbert Spencer & A. W. Small. Suggestions are offered for writing the history of sociology in a nonfinalistic manner. Modified HA

88T5481

—, La produzione del libro come bene di consumo (The Production of Books as Consumer Goods). ♦ La Critica Sociologica, 1987, 81, Apr-June, 25-43. (ITA)

¶ The transcript of a tape-recorded discussion concerning the book by Franco Ferrarotti, John Fraser, Maria I. Macioli, & M. Micheli, La produzione del libro come bene di consumo (The Production of Books

1988, 22, 1, Feb, 23-44.

It is argued that some of the present difficulties experienced by the process of development can be overcome by a macrocomparative historical analysis of the qualitative differences between the long-term development of the capitalist center & periphery, as well as on the strikingly different developmental trajectories to be seen within the Third World. Furthermore, Marxism in general, & the dependency approach in particular, though more suitable than alternative paradigms for such a historical comparative task, present certain limitations that can only be dealt with by the creation of new tools for the study of the noneconomic spheres (especially the political) HA

88T5499

Neale, Walter C. (Dept Economics U Tennessee, Knoxville 37996), Institutions. U Journal of Economic Issues, 1987, 21, 3, Sept, 77-1206

Institutions may be operationally identified as the rules governing & explaining activities in social situations as defined by the members of each culture. The rules may be derived from observations of activities, the folkviews by asking why people are doing what they are doing. These operations allow analysts to escape the classifications of their disciplines & cultures, avoid (without prejudice) dealing with excessively generalized functions, or deriving institutional rules from motives; to analyze changing institutions & the relationships of ceremonial & biological activities in the terms of each culture. AA

88T5500

Papp, Zsolt, Cselekvésméleti szintéziskísérlet: a racionalitástól a kommunikatív racionalitásig (Jurgen Habermas) (An Attempt at Synthesis in the Theory of Action: From Rationality to Communicative Rationality (Jurgen Habermas)), Szociológia, 1984-85, 1-2, 69-98 (HUN)

Jurgen Habermas, in Die Theorie des kommunikativen Handelns [The Theory of Communicative Action], Suhrkamp, 1981 [see IRPS 88c00922 & 88c00923], discusses two major problems: the separation between economic & communicative action, & the history of philosophy & sociology. Habermas particularly concerns himself with the work of Max Weber in relation to both these problems. His approach to Weber & to other theorists concerned with these problems is outlined & appraised, emphasizing the centrality for Habermas of the theory of communicative action. Modified HA

88T5501

Paul-Lesy, Françoise (U Franche-Comte, F-25030 Besançon Cedex France), E. Durkheim: la mesure du bio-social (E Durkheim The Measurement of the Biosocial), Cahiers Internationaux de Sociologie, 1987, 34, 83, July-Dec, 281-289 (FRE)

A discussion of Emile Durkheim's Le Suicide ([Suicide], publication date not given). Durkheim was the first to focus attention on suicide as a social fact, by pointing out the stability of the suicide rate for a given society, & its variability from one society to another. Although it might appear at first that Durkheim bases his evaluation on purely social consequences & phenomena, it is shown that in fact he measures both biological & social factors. Modified HA

88T5502

Pervin, Lawrence A. & Furnham, Adrian (Rutgers U, New Brunswick NJ 08903), Goal-Based and Situation-Based Expectations of Behaviour, European Journal of Personality, 1987, 1, 1, Mar, 37-44.

An examination of the effects of situation characteristics & personal (motivative) characteristics on perceived probability of behavior, 20 Ss rated the probabilities of 16 behaviors for each of 16 situations (representing all combinations of 4 situation categories & 4 goal categories). Ratings were completed for both Self & Other. Both situation & goal characteristics were found to influence expected behavior, with the effect of the latter being greater. However, ratings associated with facial behavior & affect were more influenced by situation characteristics. Generally, Other ratings were more influenced by situation characteristics than were Self ratings, a reversal of the effect known as the "actor-other bias." The utility of the goal concept as a personality construct & as a construct useful in the study of social cognition is emphasized. 2 Tables, 31 References. HA

88T5503

Ruigliano, Enzo, Canetti, la massa e il potere (Canetti, the Masses and Power), Quaderni di Sociologia, 1987, 33, 9, 104-116. (ITA)

1 The contribution of Elias Canetti (Masse und Macht [The Masses and Power], Hamburg: Claussen Verlag, 1960) to the sociology of the masses is analyzed. Three aspects of the originality of Canetti's approach are pointed out: (1) In contrast to the Freudian psychoanalytical method, Canetti analyzes the masses from within. (2) According to Canetti, the process of institutionalization of the masses follows the primary need to create among individuals the conditions of equality lost during the formation of social relations, which inevitably include relations of power. (3) Canetti affirms that it is full equality, realized in the masses, that gives birth to all attempts at social justice, egalitarian theory, & utopian aspiration. Without this collective experience of equality, there would never be major political movements or hopes for political change. In this sense, the masses are the only true alternative to established power. Modified HA

88T5504

Schatzki, Theodore Richard (Dept Philosophy U Kentucky, Lexington 40506-0027), Overdue Analysis of Bourdieu's Theory of Practice, Inquiry, 1987, 30, 1-2, Mar, 113-135

1 Pierre Bourdieu's theory of practice (Outline of a Theory of Practice, Nice, Richard [Tr], Cambridge: Cambridge U Press, 1976) combines the first analysis by a social theorist of the practical intelligibility governing action with an exciting perspective on how the structure of social phenomena determines, & is itself perpetuated, by action. Bourdieu, however, misinterprets his own theory of intelligibility as a theory of the causal generation of action & attempts to analyze the underlying structure of intelligibility with a set of fundamental oppositions that structure the social phenomena in the worlds through which people live. It is argued that practical intelligibility has no underlying structure, that the fundamental oppositions apply at best to traditional societies alone, & that these oppositions do not even structure intelligibility in such societies but are only a descriptive scheme with which a social scientist can reconstruct social phenomena in them. The outline of a more adequate account of practical intelligibility is also presented. HA

88T5505

Segady, Thomas W. (Dept Sociology U Denver, CO 80208), Rationality and Irrationality: New Directions in Weberian Theory, Critique, and Research, Sociological Spectrum, 1988, 8, 1, 85-100

1 "Rationalization" is the central dynamic guiding much of Max Weber's substantive work. However, his exact meaning for this term remains unclear, as does the nexus between "rationality" & "irrationality," which is often a theme underlying his efforts. Recent contributions toward clarifying both these concepts, as well as understanding the link between them, have been made in Germany & the US. This has been accomplished through critiques, attempted refinements of Weber's notion of rationality, & efforts in theory & research to utilize the potential of his conceptual approach. Although Jurgen Habermas's most recent efforts have been widely recognized, there have been numerous, significant works by other authors to clarify & develop the notion of rationality. An attempt is made here to bring together the broad base of emerging literature, & to describe the possibilities for the productive extension of these developments. 1 Table, 51 References. HA

88T5506

Smith, John H. (Dept German U California, Irvine 92717), Utopian Hegel: Dialectic and Its Other in Poststructuralism, The German Quarterly, 1987, 60, 2, spring, 237-261

1 The position of Hegelian dialectics in Derridean poststructuralism is as ambiguous as it is significant. The various strategies within contemporary theory that attempt to circumscribe the influence of G. W. F. Hegel make his "place" more problematic. Here, four different Derridean strategies—the reinterpretation of earlier displacing translations, the hermeneutics of dialogue & dialectic, inadequate spatial imagery, & rhetorical deconstructions—are explored critically revealing the "utopian" character, in both the positive & negative senses of the terms, of the poststructuralist dialogue with Hegel. AA

88T5507

Thompson, Robert Allan (Union Experimenting Colls & Us, Yellow Springs OH 45387), The New Egoism: An Individualized Space Age Reality, Dissertation Abstracts International, A. The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1553-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8717069.

88T5489

Corradi, Consuelo (via Cassia 858, I-00189 Rome Italy). Surrender-Catch: The Contribution of Kurt H. Wolff to the Epistemology of Qualitative Analysis, Philosophy and Social Criticism, 1987, 12, 1, spring, 31-50.

¶ Surrender-&-catch is a two-fold concept formulated by Kurt H. Wolff (Surrender and Catch, Experience and Inquiry Today, Dordrecht & Boston: Reidel, 1976). "Surrender" indicates a phenomenological openness to knowledge, a cognitive attitude suspending received notions in order to meet a phenomenon, or individual, in its own categories. "Catch" is the result of such unconditional exposure. After discussing the relevance of Wolff's concept to epistemology, it is applied to a specific example of life-history research in an Ur slum. 32 References. AA

88T5490

Ditz, Gerhard W. (Bryant Coll, Smithfield RI 02917-1284). Smith et Keynes: la religion dans la philosophie économique (Smith and Keynes. Religion in Economic Philosophy). Cahiers Internationaux de Sociologie, 1987, 34, 83, July-Dec, 307-338. (FRE)

Translated by Yvonne Roux.

¶ A comparative study of the philosophy of Adam Smith & John Maynard Keynes examines their work from the perspective of religion. The convergence of their views as political thinkers is noted, but oppositions are pointed out in many aspects of thought. Calvinist ethics, natural freedom, asceticism & sensualism, the monastic vows of poverty, chastity, & obedience, providential design, & original sin. 19 References. Modified HA

88T5491

Dryzek, John S. (U Oregon, Eugene 97403). Complexity and Rationality in Public Life. ♦ U Political Studies, 1987, 35, 3, Sept, 424-442.

¶ Increasing complexity in the contemporary world calls into question prevailing notions of rationality in public policy & political life. Even in their most refined forms, instrumental-analytic strategies of decision are inherently limited when confronted with complexity. Communicative rationality, rooted in the intersubjective understanding of competent actors, could cope more effectively with complex social problems. By implication, political institutions grounded in instrumental rationality may be less effective than those providing for reasoned discourse among concerned actors. 1 Figure. HA

88T5492

Fabre, Jean-Bernard (Dept Communication U Ottawa, Ontario K1N 6N5). L'Utopie amoureuse: un courant utopique négligé (The Utopia of Love: A Neglected Current of Utopianism). Cahiers Internationaux de Sociologie, 1987, 34, 83, July-Dec, 365-375. (FRE)

¶ Technocratic utopias, based on equal rights & political economy, have tended to dominate human dreams. Here, however, a different kind of utopia is discussed: what is called the utopia of love. Several examples in French literature are examined: in the works of François Rabelais, the Marquis de Sade, Restif de la Bretonne, & especially nineteenth-century writer Charles Fourier. It is suggested that this type of utopia values the emotions, the present, & the richness & multiplicity of human relationships. Thus it functions as a critique of normative rationality & destructive social practices. 49 References. Modified HA

88T5493

Fehér, Ferenc. Freedom and the 'Social Question' (Hannah Arendt's Theory of the French Revolution). Philosophy and Social Criticism, 1987, 12, 1, spring, 1-30.

¶ A critical assessment of Hannah Arendt's interpretation of the French Revolution specifically & of revolutions in general (On Revolution (see SA 15:3/67C4953)). In Arendt's view, the American Revolution was not merely a genuine revolution, but the prototypical revolution, in that it successfully established a new political constitution in which power was equivalent to participation. The French Revolution failed to establish such an order, because there was no preliminary experience of liberty in the old world; rather, it left a liberticidal tradition for revolutions. Arendt develops this interpretation through an account of the life of the Marquis de Lafayette, in which she attempts to determine whether the French Revolution had an "American option." In fact, any such option was the least likely course for it. The execution of the king led to a state of affairs where justice consisted not in punishing acts but in destroying dangerous abstractions & symbols. At the same time, the Revolution adopted negative social strategies that helped to create its liberticidal traditions. Arendt fails to appreciate this, & her contrast between the morphology of the American & French revolutionary attitudes is also arguable. Arendt's call for resolutely avoiding any mixing of social goals into political goals, or preserving the primacy of freedom, is not adequate to resolve the issues of the French Revolution. W. H. Stoddard

88T5494

Finsterbusch, Kurt (U Maryland, College Park 20742). The Sociological Literature on Nuclear Issues. ♦ U Sociological Inquiry, 1988, 58, 1, winter, 22-48.

¶ The question of the existing & potential role of sociologists in the nuclear debate is addressed by sketching some of the major nuclear issues & gauging the extent of professional attention that sociology has accorded them. Thirteen sociological journals appearing between 1945 & 1986 are reviewed to gauge the coverage of nuclear issues involving military & defense policies & societal impacts of responses to the arms race, nuclear threat, & nuclear energy. 1 Table, 1 Appendix, 52 References. Modified HA

88T5495

Hauck, Gerhard (Kolmarer Str 88, D-6740 Landau/Pfalz, Federal Republic Germany). Habermas, die Magie und die Universalität der Vernunft (Habermas, on Magic and the Universality of Reason). ♦ Peripherie, 1987, 7, 27, winter, 41-50. (GER)

¶ With attention to E. E. Evans-Pritchard's Magic and Witchcraft among the Zande (Frankfurt, 1978), Jürgen Habermas's attempt to failure to establish a universally valid conception of rationality is described. It is argued that Habermas's thought represents an ethnocentric transfiguration of the Western conception into universal validity. 18 References. Modified HA

88T5496

Johnson, Doyle Paul (U South Florida, Tampa 33620). The Brain-Mind Relation, Religious Evolution, and Forms of Consciousness: An Exploratory Statement. ♦ U Sociological Analysis, 1988, 49, spring, 52-65.

¶ It is proposed that Julian Jaynes's theory of the evolutionary transition from a bicameral mind to consciousness (The Origins of Consciousness in the Breakdown of the Bicameral Mind, Boston: Houghton Mifflin, 1976) corresponds roughly to Robert Bellah's "historic" stage of religious evolution (see SA 12:8/64B3726). This synthesis provides a perspective for relating the physiological level of brain organization, the subjective level of religious experience & consciousness, & large-scale patterns of social organization & change. Jaynes's model of language & brain processes is compared briefly with our contemporary understanding (derived from George Herbert Mead & others) of the internal conversations that are part of the subjective experience. As an alternative to evolutionism, it is suggested that both Jaynes's & Bellah's theories can be applied to alternative forms of mentality that may exist in any historical stage with varying degrees of acceptance. A major distinction among different people in this regard is their need for external authority & the self-autonomy, especially in coping with stress. 27 References. HA

88T5497

Luhmann, Niklas (Fakultät Soziologie U Bielefeld, D-4800 Federal Republic Germany). Warum AGIL? (Why AGIL?). Kolner Zeitschrift für Soziologie und Sozialpsychologie, 1988, 40, 1, Mar, 127-139. (GER)

¶ The concept of action cannot be defined arbitrarily. Talcott Parsons ("Some Problems of General Theory in Sociology" in Social Systems and the Evolution of Action Theory, New York, 1977) thought he had discovered four minimal components of the concept of action, based on a cross-tabulation of two binary distinctions. He therefore proposed a general framework of action theory based on these two distinctions. Here, an attempt is made to reformulate the fundamentals of this theory using the concept of self-referential systems. The question of who introduces the distinctions is discussed. A differentiation according to the Parsonian matrix occurs whenever a system draws & cross-tabulates these distinctions; but there is no objective or logical necessity to start with specific distinctions. The only necessity is to draw a distinction. To know which distinctions are used, it is necessary to observe the self-referential operations of the system. Modified HA

88T5498

Mouzelis, Nicos P. (London School Economics & Political Science, Aldwych WC2A 2AE England). Sociology of Development: Reflections

system which follows from the fact that the state's capacity to design the conditions of interest intermediation is limited by constraints (eg. interest power relations). Consequently, investigations into the genesis & maintenance of corporatism may not be confined to an exclusively state-centered approach. 25 References AA

88T5516

----, Populist Exchange, Journal of Social Policy, 1985, 16, 2, fall, 38-41.

† An exchange of comments among Frank Riessman, Harry Boyte, & S. M. Miller on the ideas advanced in Robert M. Bellah's Habits of the Heart. Individualism and Commitment in American Life, (Berkeley: U of California Press, 1985). Emphasis is given to the nature of US populism & its relation to the Left. W. H. Stoddard

The British Journal of Sociology

A leading British journal in its field.
Published Quarterly.
Recent articles include:

- | | |
|--------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------|
| Aristocracy and meritocracy in merchant banking | S. D. Chapman |
| Spectator violence at football matches | Eric Dunning et al |
| Mugging as a moral panic | P. A. J. Waddington |
| Has there been a British intelligentsia? | M. S. Hickox |
| Class identification of married working women | Pamela Abbott and Roger Sapsford |
| Capitalism and the history of worktime thought | Chris Nyland |
| On powerlessness and meaninglessness | Robert Travis |
| Catholic grievances in Northern Ireland | Kassian A. Kovalchek |
| Age at marriage | Katherine Kiernan and Sandra Eldridge |
| Where have all the craftsmen gone? | Roger Penn |

The British Journal of Sociology is published in March, June, September and December.

The annual subscription to Volume XXXVIII (1987) is £32 ($55).

Single copies are £9.50 ($17).

Subscription enquiries to:

Routledge Journals, 11 New Fetter Lane, London EC4P 4EE (01-583 9855)

ROUTLEDGE JOURNALS

88T5508

Wells, Paul (Catholic U America, Washington DC 20064). The Dunamis. ♦ The Review of Metaphysics, 1987, 40, 4(160), June, 657-674.

† The dominant rationalistic view in Western thought contrasts with two main alternative views, a belief in the irrational & a belief in experience. All three beliefs represent abstractions from the ultimate reality. Three types of reality are distinguished: ultimate conditions, individual privacies, & the dunamis (power/potential/dynamic). Nine major ways of encountering the dunamis are identified, as are six characterizations of the dunamis. The status of the dunamis as an ultimate is proposed. W. H. Stoddard

88T5509

West, David (School Interdisciplinary Human Studies U Bradford, BD7 1DP England). Power and Formation: New Foundations for a Radical Concept of Power, Inquiry, 1987, 30, 1-2, Mar, 137-154.

† A radical concept of power is proposed that identifies social processes that influence people's actions by molding their beliefs or desires. Despite his libertarian intentions, Steven Lukes (see Power: A Radical View, London: MacMillan, 1974) fails to guard against this paternalistic implication. His view still implies that it is the social critic who is in the best position to identify the real interests of an oppressed group. Here, it is argued that power should be conceived of as an intrusion on the formative practices of people. It is possible to identify power as an unwanted influence on the processes in which people form & discover interests while maintaining that interests can only be self-ascribed. This solution requires a concept of formation as both irreducibly social & yet potentially free. Neither Michael Foucault nor Jurgen Habermas can provide such a solution, despite some valuable insights. Future political theory should address the influences of power on formative practices that are actual rather than idealized, that are productive rather than reflective, & that involve the whole person rather than merely the intellect. Modified JH

67 macrosociology: analyses of whole societies

88T5510

Bellah, Robert (U California, Berkeley 94720). Populism and Individualism. ♦ UM Social Policy, 1985, 16, 2, fall, 30-33.

† Individualism & populism are closely linked traditions in US politics. A major weakness of populist politics is its reliance on personal enthusiasm, single issues, & voluntary associations all of which prevent the building of sustained political action & organization. Localism is the strong point in individualistic populist politics, but also a source of its weaknesses. Though US politics represents itself as anti-institutional, institutional activities have supported many movements. Ethical principles must provide the resources to strengthen populist politics. W. H. Stoddard

88T5511

Geller, Daniel S., The Impact of Political System Structure on Probability Patterns of Internal Disorder. ♦ UM American Journal of Political Science, 1987, 31, 2, May, 217-235.

† A stochastic interpretation of domestic conflict processes is presented, determining the probabilistic patterns of type & magnitude of political violence & examining the effects of system structure on those patterns. Q-factor analysis of 68 political variables, using secondary data on 93 nations, indicates that, (1) centrist regimes suppress civil violence more quickly & efficiently than either polyarchic or personalist systems, (2) turmoil is more likely to occur in polyarchies than in centrist nations, & (3) internal war is less probable in either polyarchic or centrist systems than in personalist states. In short, centrist systems manifest less violence, & for briefer durations, than either polyarchic or personalist states. Indeed, in the long run the future levels of internal war (none, moderate, or high) for personalist nations are equiprobable, irrespective of the current level of violence. The distribution is unique to the personalist group of states & suggests that revolutionary behavior is strongly associated with this system structure. 5 Tables, 2 Figures, 1 Appendix, 45 References. HA

88T5512

Mutz, Gerd (Munchner Projektgruppe Sozialforschung e V, Dachauerstr 189 D-8000 Munich 19 Federal Republic Germany). Arbeitslosigkeit in der Dienstleistungsgesellschaft (Unemployment in the Service Society). Soziale Welt, 1987, 38, 3, 255-281. (GER)

† Based on a review of statistical evidence concerning employment in the different economic sectors in West Germany, especially in the 1970s & 1980s, it is argued that the increase of employment in the service sector—which some studies expected to compensate for the decline of jobs in the production sector—is now coming to an end. The growing unemployment in certain branches & occupations within the service sector is also noteworthy. Unemployed service sector workers generally remain unemployed longer than those in the production sector; & there are few opportunities for unemployed production workers to transfer to the service sector. It is therefore predicted that the postindustrial society will be characterized by a constant rate of unemployment. 9 Tables, 44 References. Modified HA

88T5513

Podgórecki, Adam (Dept Sociology Carleton U, Ottawa Ontario

KIS 5B6). Polish Society: A Sociological Analysis. ♦ Praxis International, 1987, 7, 1, Apr, 57-78.

† Attempts to shift the focus of attention of Polish sociology toward presenting the global picture of Polish society are summarized, & differences between the present Polish social structure & that existing before WWII are described. The importance of the recognition of infrastructure operating within Polish society is stressed. The most significant studies concerning social stratification are identified, & an attempt is made to link these studies with various attitudes that characterize modern Polish lifestyles. These include the fiddling attitude of survival, instrumentality, spectacular principledness, & "all-thumbs" meta-attitude. Focus on how these crucial attitudes structure the social structure in general, with attention to their impact on the Solidarity Movement. 30 References. Modified AA

88T5514

Sio, Arnold A. (Dept Sociology & Anthropology Colgate U, Hamilton NY 13346). Marginality and Free Coloured Identity in Caribbean Slave Society. Slavery and Abolition, 1987, 8, 2, Sept, 166-182.

† A historical analysis of three problematic issues related to the question of the identity of the free people of color in Caribbean slave society: their culture & social organization, (2) their unity & group consciousness, & (3) the style & goals of their political activity. Existing research views their culture as based on the upper stratum, who are said to have emulated the lifestyle of the dominant group, but little is actually known about the culture of the majority during slavery. It is proposed that their culture & social organization involved a carryover from the slave community that was modified as the free people of color became differentiated. With regard to unity & consciousness, it is clear that the growth of a sense of identity was a continuous process & developed with their consciousness as a group. Only a small number of the free people of color were involved in articulating goals & in providing political leadership. Although considered conservative by some, these goals were in fundamental opposition to the existing structure of ruling white-dominated society. 41 References. Modified AA

88T5515

Traxler, Franz (Verwaltungsakademie des Bundes, Mauerbachstr 41 A-1140 Vienna Austria). Sozialpartnerschaftsanalyse kontroversell. Anmerkungen zur Kontroverse N. Dimmel/A. J. Noll - E. Grande (Social Partnership as a Matter of Controversy: Debate between N. Dimmel/A. J. Noll & E. Grande). Österreichische Zeitschrift für Soziologie, 1987, 12, 4, 74-80. (GER)

† Comments are offered on a debate between E. Grande ("Konfliktsteuerung zwischen Recht und Konsens" [Managing Conflict between Law and Consensus] in Sozialpartnerschaft in der Krise [Social Partnership in Crisis], Gerlich, P. Grande, E., & Müller, W. C. (Eds), Wien, 1985) & N. Dimmel & A. J. Noll (see SA 36:1/88T2448) on the preconditions of Austria's system of macrocorporatist governance ("social partnership"). This debate focuses on the question of how relevant the state in general & the law in particular are for the development & persistence of this system. It is argued that a favorable legal framework equipping the cooperation of the collective actors (interest associations) involved with state support is a necessary but not a sufficient condition for this

0300 social psychology

09 interaction within (small) groups

88T5517

Banks, J. S. & Gasmi, F. (Dept Political Science & Dept Economics 1 Rochester, NY 14627), Endogenous Agenda Formation in Three-Person Committees, Social Choice and Welfare, 1987, 4, 2, June, 133-152

* An analysis of a three-person voting game in which two or three players have the ability to choose alternatives to be considered. Once the set of possible alternatives & the structure of the voting procedure are known, the players can solve for the outcome. Thus, the actual choice over outcomes takes place in the choice of alternatives to be voted on, i.e., the agenda. An equilibrium to this agenda-formation game is shown to exist under different assumptions about the information relative to the order of the players in the voting game. This equilibrium is computed & found to possess certain features that are attractive from a normative point of view. 16 Figures, 6 References. HA

88T5518

Foltin, R. W., Brady, J. V., Fischman, M. W., Emurian, C. S. & Dominitz, J. (Dept Psychiatry & Behavioral Sciences Johns Hopkins School Medicine, Baltimore MD 21205), Effects of Smoked Marijuana on Social Interaction in Small Groups, Drug and Alcohol Dependence, 1987, 20, 1, Sept, 87-93

* An investigation of the effects of marijuana smoking on social interaction. Adult M volunteers (N = 12), all regular marijuana users, were divided into 4 groups in a residential laboratory setting where they stayed for up to 18 days. Their days were divided into 3 periods: private work activity, task performance, & social access—before & during which they smoked 4 cigarettes containing active marijuana or placebo. Video & audio monitoring revealed a general increase in social interaction with marijuana use across all groups, however, drug effects were a function of the baseline amount of interaction & varied within different groups of individuals. 1 Figure, 16 References. Modified HA

88T5519

Gray, Louis N. & Stafford, Mark C. (Washington State U, Pullman 99164), On Choice Behavior in Individual and Social Situations, U.S. Social Psychology Quarterly, 1988, 51, 1, Mar, 58-65

* L. N. Gray's & L. Tallman's model of individual choice (see SA 32 4/8400832) is extended to explain the choice behavior of groups. Data collected during experiments with 60 M Coll students tend to support the model for dyadic interactions, & show how group choice behavior differs from individual choice behavior. Groups are less likely than individuals to choose a behavior with low relative worth, & are more likely to engage in a behavior if its relative worth is high. A general application of the model to groups larger than dyads is also presented. 2 Tables, 2 Figures, 15 References. Modified HA

88T5520

Katorich, Michael A. (Dept Sociology Texas Christian U, Fort Worth TX 76129), Identity, Time and Situated Activity: An Interactionist Analysis of Dyadic Transactions, Symbolic Interaction, 1987, 10, 2, fall, 187-208

* A symbolic interactionist perspective is used to discuss situated identities as linked to the projection of shared futures. A theoretical discussion is provided on how interactionists have defined identities & conceptualized the future, including definitions of identities as instrumental or categorical, & general depictions of the future as restoring or externalizing. A videotaped role-playing experiment involving dyads (N = 24) constructing a job interview is described. Analysis demonstrates how the process of linking interpersonal situated identities to broader future-oriented concerns involves the construction of four distinct but interrelated empirical shared futures: the performable, patterned, implied mandatory, & codified futures. Further, the construction of identities & projection of futures involves a negotiated reality whereby interactants reassert, bolster, challenge, & reframe identities. 59 References. Modified HA structuring a job interview is described. Analysis demonstrates how the process of linking interpersonal situated identities to broader future-oriented concerns involves the construction of four distinct but interrelated empirical shared futures: the performable, patterned, implied mandatory, & codified futures. Further, the construction of identities & projection of futures involves a negotiated reality whereby interactants reassert, bolster, challenge, & reframe identities. 59 References. Modified HA

88T5521

Maryanski, A. R. (Dept Sociology U California, Riverside 92521), African Ape Social Structure: Is There Strength in Weak Ties?, Social Networks, 1987, 9, 3, Sept, 191-215

* Prominent hypotheses on the structure of African ape social organization are examined from a network perspective. Data on chimpanzee & gorilla social ties are summarized & assessed with respect to the hypotheses. Contrary to most of the literature on African apes, a network analysis of social ties reveals that chimpanzees & gorillas have similar structural arrangements in their respective patterns of social organization. M. S. Granovetter's weak tie mode of integration of a population at the macrolevel (see SA 22 2/74G7473) is used to explain the data. 1 Table, 65 References. HA

88T5522

Skvoretz, John (Dept Sociology U South Carolina, Columbia 29208), Models of Participation in Status-Differentiated Groups, U.S. Social Psychology Quarterly, 1988, 51, 1, Mar, 43-57

* Six models of participation in status-differentiated groups are proposed, & their fit is examined with data from 31 6-person discussion groups, composed of white undergraduates at a southern US U, which vary systematically in sex composition from entirely M to entirely F. The 6 models share a common framework in which participation is viewed as the outcome of 2 processes: (1) a process by which chances to participate are channeled to group members, & (2) a process by which chances are taken (or not) by the group members to whom they are allocated. The models differ at the level of specific assumptions about these processes. eg, in the baseline model, chances are allocated equally to group members & each member has the same likelihood of taking a chance to which he or she is exposed. The best-fitting models are the basic hierarchy model, first proposed by William J. Horvath (see SA 14 1/66B8346), & a variant of this model in which higher-status actors are more likely than lower-status actors to take chances to which they are exposed. Neither model, however, provides completely satisfactory accounts of the data, suggesting the need for further study of how status differentiation affects participation in small group task-oriented discussions. 6 Tables, 1 Figure, 29 References. HA

88T5523

Witte, Erich H. (Dept Psychology U Hamburg, D-2000 13 Federal Republic Germany), Behaviour in Group Situations: An Integrative Model, U.S. European Journal of Social Psychology, 1987, 17, 4, Oct-Dec, 403-429

* A comparison of classical studies in small group research, using a model with normative & informational components that are integrated hierarchically. This model is utilized to reconstruct data in such different areas as, eg, social facilitation, autokinetic effect, conformity studies, equity theory studies, & prisoner's dilemma. Links with research in social cognition are identified. 2 Tables, 52 References. Modified HA

Kölner Zeitschrift für Soziologie und Sozialpsychologie

Begründet als „Kölner Zeitschrift für Soziologie“ durch Leopold von Wiese (1948–1954).
Fortgeführt als „Kölner Zeitschrift für Soziologie und Sozialpsychologie“ durch René König (1955–1985).

Herausgegeben von Prof. Dr. Friedhelm Neidhardt, Universität zu Köln, Prof. Dr. M. Rainer Lepsius, Universität Heidelberg und Prof. Dr. Hartmut Esser, Universität zu Köln
Redaktionssekretär: Dr. Heime von Alemann, Forschungsinstitut für Soziologie der Universität zu Köln

Beirat:

Prof. Dr. Alois Hahn, Universität Trier,
Prof. Dr. Siward Lindenberg, Universität Groningen,
Prof. Dr. Walter Müller, Universität Mannheim,
Prof. Dr. Helga Nowotny, Universität Wien,
Prof. Dr. Fritz Sack, Universität Hamburg

Inhaltsübersicht Heft 1/1987

Abhandlungen

Rose Laub Coser: Machtverlust und Statusgewinn: Ein Schritt zur Gleichstellung der Geschlechter
Rainer Paris und Wolfgang Sofsky: Über eine Methode der Interaktionsmacht
Jürgen Osterhammel: Joseph A. Schumpeter und das Nicht-Ökonomische in der Ökonomie Peter A. Berger: Klassen und Klassifikationen.
Zur „neuen Unübersichtlichkeit“ in der soziologischen Ungleichheitsdiskussion
Klaus Allerbeck und Wendy J. Hoag: Probleme offener Fragen in der zeitvergleichenden Umfrageanalyse Edeltraud Roller: Zur Reliabilität und Validität der Messung politischer Überzeugungssysteme

Berichte und Diskussionen

Hans Haferkamp: Theorie sozialer Probleme.
Kritik der neueren nordamerikanischen Problemsoziologie Gerhard Wagner und Heinz Zipprian: Tenbruck, Weber und die Wirklichkeit.
Ein Diskussionsbeitrag
Friedrich H. Tenbruck: Ein Diskussionsbeitrag? Erwiderung auf Gerhard Wagner und Heinz Zipprian

Literaturbesprechungen

Nachrichten und Mitteilungen / Nekrolog
Tagungsberichte / Ankündigungen

Bezugsbedingungen 1987

Jahresabonnement DM 128,— Studentenabonnement (gegen Studienbescheinigung) DM 72,— Einzelheft DM 40,— •
(jeweils zuzügl. Versandkosten)

Zu der Zeitschrift erscheint jährlich ein Sonderheft.
Jedes Sonderheft wird je nach Umfang berechnet und den Abonnenten im Erscheinungsjahr mit einem Nachlaß von 25 % des jeweils ermittelten Ladenpreises geliefert.

Westdeutscher Verlag

Postfach 5829 · D-6200 Wiesbaden

...ant effects because student alienation is influenced by a series of complex environmental factors. The Dean Alienation Scale was administered to 41 high school students (N = 431) at a coeducational public school of a Catholic school in the northeastern US. There were no significant differences in terms of total alienation & powerlessness. Private school students, however, were more isolated, while public school students had higher levels of normlessness. It is concluded that the school's influence may be confined to either limiting or exacerbating already existing feelings of alienation. 27 References Modified HA

88T5533

Casler, Lawrence, Elsinore as a Total Institution: Shakespeare's Hamlet in Light of Goffman's Asylums, U Bulletin of the Menninger Clinic, 1987, 51, 6, Nov, 551-560

...ing Goffman has described the depersonalization & dehumanization of inmates of total institutions, as well as the strategies employed by the caretakers (Asylums: Essays on the Social Situation of Mental Patients and Other Inmates, Garden City, NY: Anchor Books, 1961). Goffman's analysis provides a useful perspective from which to view Hamlet & enables the reader to gain new insights into the play. Questions concerning Hamlet's madness & his vacillation yield consistent answers within the framework Goffman provides. 20 References HA

88T5534

Charuty, Giordana, Le Mal d'amour (Love-Sickness), L'Homme, 1987, 27, 3(103), July-Sept, 43-72 (FRE)

A discussion of the illness referred to as love-sickness or F hysteria was on numerous studies in history, anthropology, & popular medicine in France, Italy, & Spain. It is argued that hysteria, under its apparent diversity of behaviors, is an attempt to assert one's sexual identity by putting the symbolic reference marks that are used to socially construct the coherence & originality of customary representations of hysteria come from the relatedness of three definitions: morphological, psychic, & social of femininity & its shortcomings. Therapeutic rituals for returning to hysterical Fs the sensual pleasure of their identity as Fs have been passed down from the Renaissance to this century, it is suggested that there are social practices of the F collective that fulfill the same function in modern society. 3 Illustrations, 78 References Modified HA

88T5535

Clanton, Gordon (Dept Sociology San Diego State U, CA 92182), A Historical Sociology of Sex and Love, Teaching Sociology, 1987, 15, 3, July, 307-311

A course is described that examines the historical development of human emotions, including sexual emotions. One-third of the course, which has been taken by 2,000+ students, examines love, sex, & marriage in Western culture. A simplified historical account discusses the Greeks, the early Christians, the medieval aristocracy, the Puritans, the Victorians, & the twentieth century. Assignments include readings, approaches to reading, & a specific writing assignment. The pedagogic uses of history as revealed by this course are considered. 9 References. W H Stoddard

88T5536

Cook, William Lewis, Jr. (U Connecticut, Storrs 06268), Reciprocity of Consistency: Implications for Forecasting the Outcome of Relationships, Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1897-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8722613.

88T5537

Cooms, Dorothy Ayers (U Waterloo, Ontario N2L 3G1), Female Suicide and Wife Abuse: A Cross-Cultural Perspective, U Suicide and Life-Threatening Behavior, 1987, 17, 3, fall, 194-204

Data from a number of societies indicate that wife abuse may be one of the most significant precipitants of F suicide. Anthropological analysis indicates that in some societies, F suicide is a culturally recognized behavior that enables the weak to influence the strong &/or take revenge on those who oppress them. Data from field research conducted among the Ili-speaking people of the Kaliai electoral district in West New Britain Province, Papua New Guinea, between 1966 & 1981 & in 1985 are compared to data from other New Guinea ethnic groups & to findings from other Oceanic, African, & South & North American societies. Case studies of F suicides in Kaliai are presented. Analysis suggests that if a woman's support group does not defend her when she is the victim of violence that passes the bounds of normative behavior, her suicide may be revenge suicide, intended to force others to take action against the abusive husband. Anthropologists' insights into the cultural context of domestic violence & suicidal behavior can enhance the research of suicidologists in this area. 27 References Modified HA

88T5538

Dijkster, Anton J. M. (Dept Social Psychology U Amsterdam, NL-1018 XA Netherlands), Emotional Reactions to Ethnic Minorities, U European Journal of Social Psychology, 1987, 17, 3, July-Sept, 305-325.

Questionnaire data from 334 Dutch adults in Amsterdam are analyzed to assess the role of emotion in intergroup relations with 3 major ethnic minorities—Surinamers, Turks, & Moroccans. Results indicate 4 categories of emotion strongly associated with ethnic attitudes: positive mood, anxiety, irritation, & concern. The influence that proximity had on ethnic attitudes could be explained by the specific emotional experience as related to levels of ethnic proximity. Emotion also exhibited the ability to differentiate between the qualitative aspects of various forms of ethnic contact. 5 Tables, 1 Figure, 44 References. Modified HA

88T5539

Dikaïou, Maria, Sakka, Despina & Haritos-Fatouros, Mike (Dept Philosophy/Education & Psychology Aristotle U, Thessaloniki 54006 Greece), Maternal Attitudes of Greek Migrant Women, International Migration/Migrations Internationales/Migraciones Internacionales, 1987, 25, 1, Mar, 73-86.

Attitudes toward childrearing practices, particularly with respect to personal & social training, are examined among 4 groups: two groups of Greek migrant mothers in West Germany, a return group, & nonmigrant Greek women (N = 20, 20, 27, & 24, respectively). Groups were controlled for age, education, employment, financial situation, type of family, & length of stay abroad or/ & since return home. Questionnaire data subjected to orthogonal factor analysis reveal that return mothers were more controlling, restrictive, & overprotective with their children, than any other group. The childrearing practices of migrant mothers in West Germany tended to be more similar to the controls. None of the groups of migrant mothers differentiated their attitudes toward boys & girls; sex-specific attitudes were only found among the controls. Results are discussed in relation to sociocultural factors influencing maternal attitudes of migrant women. 5 Tables, 20 References. Modified AA

88T5540

Driver, Edwin D. (Dept Sociology U Massachusetts, Amherst 01075), Self-Evaluations and Altruistic Behavior, Journal of Social Psychology, 1987, 127, 4, Aug, 393-394

Questionnaire data from 68 U students are analyzed to evaluate the relationship between positive self-evaluation & altruism as posited by J. Rushton (Altruism, Socialization, and Society, Englewood Cliffs: Prentice-Hall, 1980). Results neither confirm nor refute Rushton's hypothesis. Problems in definition & measurement are discussed. 5 References. F Rasmussen

88T5541

Elster, Jon (Inst Social Research, Oslo Norway), Debolezza della volontà e problema del free-rider (Weakness of Will and the Free-Rider Problem), Quaderni di Sociologia, 1987, 33, 8, 74-94. (ITA) Translated by Paolo Perulli.

An investigation of akrasia or weakness of will, which is defined as a free-rider problem within the person. The starting point of the discussion is T. C. Schelling's research in ergonomics (eg, see "Ergonomics, or the Art of Self-Management," American Economic Review, 1978, 68, Papers & Proceedings). After discussing the free-rider problem in collective action, analogies & differences with the intrapersonal case are considered. Intrapersonal applications of Schelling diagrams are examined, & two types of causal connection are considered. Solving the weakness of will problem for the individual may be a precondition for solving the free-rider problem for the community; conversely, people may take collective action to achieve what they are unable because of weakness of will—to do individually. 5 Figures Modified HA

88T5542

Felton, Barbara J. (Dept Psychology New York U, NY 10003), Co-hort Variation in Happiness: Some Hypotheses and Exploratory Analyses, International Journal of Aging and Human Development, 1987, 25, 1, 27-42.

Research on historical & age differences in well-being suggests that co-

12 personality & culture

88T5524

Andersson, Lars, Mullins, Larry C. & Johnson, D. Paul (Psychosocial Medicine Karolinska Instit, Box 60205 S-104 01 Stockholm Sweden). Parental Intrusion versus Social Isolation: A Dichotomous View of the Sources of Loneliness. ♦ Journal of Social Behavior and Personality, 1987, 2, 2(2), 125-134

† Within the loneliness research of recent years, a distinction has become accepted between emotional & social isolation. In "Reflections on the Present State of Loneliness Research," R. S. Weiss (see abstract in this section) argues that emotional isolation is better understood than social isolation. Attachment theory suggests that neglect in early childhood may lead to relational problems in later life; but parental intrusion could also cause difficulties by limiting the child's potential for adequate self-development. Retrospective data from 207 elderly women in Stockholm, Sweden, indicate that loneliness is greater among the group who suffered from parental intrusiveness as evident by this group's tendency to narcissistic difficulties. It is concluded that either too much or too little parental control can lead to loneliness. 14 References. Modified HA

88T5525

Angulo, Julio (School Social Work Arizona State U, Tempe 85287). Three Meanings of Food: The Psychological, Ecological and Symbolic Perspectives, Transformations, 1987, 2, 2-3, 33-37

† Three theories of the meaning of food are contrasted: the psychological, ecological, & symbolic perspectives. Their strengths & weaknesses are noted, & their central concepts identified. W. H. Stoddard

88T5526

Baldwin, John D. (U California, Santa Barbara 93106). Habit, Emotion, and Self-Conscious Action. ♦ Sociological Perspectives, 1988, 31, 1, Jan, 35-57

† Although George Herbert Mead's theory integrated habit with cognitive & emotional processes, most symbolic interactionists have taken an overly cognitive position that neglects habit. The sharp contrast between the two positions supports the argument that sociology has drifted toward highly cognitive theories in the past half century. Mead's theory shows that it is not necessary for sociology to neglect habit or emotion, & that it is possible to integrate habit, emotions, & self-conscious action in one internally consistent theory. 65 References. Modified HA

88T5527

Birtchnell, John (MRC Social Psychiatry Unit Instit Psychiatry, De Crespigny Park London SE5 8AF England). Attachment-Detachment, Directiveness-Receptiveness: A System for Classifying Interpersonal Attitudes and Behaviour. ♦ The British Journal of Medical Psychology, 1987, 60, 1, Mar, 17-27

† A system of describing attitudes toward others & ways of relating is presented. The system is constructed around two dimensions, one concerned with closeness vs separateness, the other with dominance vs submissiveness. Each dimension has two extreme positions, each of which incorporates a range of attitudes & types of behavior that are systematically described. The two extremes of the closeness-separateness dimension are attachment & detachment, while the two extremes of the dominance-submissiveness dimension are directiveness & receptiveness. This system lends itself to the development of measures that place an individual on each of the two dimensions. It also provides a conceptual framework within which to frame hypotheses that will have relevance both to clinicians & to researchers. An important consideration is the effect a person occupying a particular position within the system has on the attitude & behavior of others. 2 Figures, 43 References. Modified HA

88T5528

Blackmore, Susan (U Bristol, B58 1TH England). Where Am I?: Perspectives in Imagery and the Out-of-Body Experience. ♦ Journal of Mental Imagery, 1987, 11, 2, summer, 53-66

† Based on a review of the literature on the out-of-body experience (OBE), it is proposed that the OBE is an "illusion of reality." OBE involves the substitution of the normal input-driven model of the external world by an internally generated model in "observer" perspective. It is predicted that people who have OBEs should be more likely to use different viewpoints & to switch viewpoints when required. Analysis of 3 case studies confirms that those having OBEs are more likely to use the observer perspective in recall of dreams but not of real-life events. Ss are better able to switch viewpoints in imagery & report clearer & more vivid images from different viewpoints. 6 Tables, 38 References. HA

88T5529

Bornwasser, Manfred & Bober, Johannes (Psychologisches Inst Westfälischen Wilhelms-U, D-4400 Münster Federal Republic Germany). Individual, Social Group and Intergroup Behavior. Some Conceptual Remarks on the Social Identity Theory. ♦ European Journal of Social Psychology, 1987, 17, 3, July-Sept, 267-276

† A discussion of the group concept proposed by H. Tajfel (Human Groups and Social Categories Studies in Social Psychology, Cambridge University Press, 1981), & J. C. Turner ("Towards a Cognitive Redefinition of the Social Group" in Social Identity and Intergroup Relations, H. Tajfel, H. (Ed), Cambridge University Press, 1982). It is posited that group formation & intergroup behavior cannot be explained by the similarity of group members. Only the consideration of group structure & the differentiation of partially individual & partially structural attributes of the group members results in a conceptually adequate theory of group formation & intergroup behavior. 21 References. Modified HA

88T5530

Brannigan, Augustine & Lynch, Michael (U Calgary, Alberta T2N 1N4). On Bearing False Witness: Credibility as an Interactional Accomplishment. Journal of Contemporary Ethnography, 1987, 16, 2, July, 115-146

† The trial court, particularly during the cross-examination process, is a social occasion wherein the credibility of individuals is tested, unlike most everyday social interactions, where credibility is generally not challenged. A case study is presented of the perjury trial of a M defendant in Canada using data from ethnographic interviews conducted with the judge & attorneys, observation, & analysis of transcribed tape recordings of the cross-examination process in order to elucidate how credibility (or lack of it) is established. It is argued that the prosecutor's cross-examination strategy places the defendant in a "witness's dilemma" an untenable choice between claiming to have acted unreasonably or agreeing to the prosecutor's accusations. The defendant responds by giving delayed & qualified answers, expressing apparent confusion about questions, & agreeing with the prosecutor in only a hypothetical & minimized way. The prosecutor, in turn, reflexively exposes these responses & frames them as attempts to evade accusation. Thus, credibility is assessed via reference to the reasonableness of both the witness's explanations of events & his/her comportment on the stand. 38 References. Modified HA

88T5531

Buhrke, Robin A. & Fuqua, Dale R. (Dept Counseling U North Dakota, Grand Forks 58202). Sex Differences in Same- and Cross-Sex Supportive Relationships. Sex Roles, 1987, 17, 5-6, Sept, 339-352

† Previous research on social support networks is extended to include consideration of their multidimensionality in an investigation of differences in the same- & cross-sex supportive relationships of Ms & Fs. Focus is on variations in terms of the frequency & patterning of interactions, level of intimacy or closeness, diversity of interactions, & interpersonal perceptions. Differences in degree of relationship satisfaction as a function of these factors are also explored. Questionnaire data (N = 352 undergraduates) subjected to multivariate analysis of variance indicate significant gender differences in the qualities & characteristics of supportive same- & cross-sex relationships. These differences are discussed in detail along with some implications of the findings. 3 Tables, 35 References. K. Hyatt

88T5532

Calabrese, Raymond (Educational Administration & Supervision Wichita State U, KS 67208-1595). A Comparative Analysis of the Effects of Alienation on Public and Private School Females. The Journal of Psychology, 1987, 121, 3, May, 237-242

† The extent of the influence of the school environment (private Catholic vs public) on the student's level of alienation, particularly the dimensions of isolation, normlessness, & powerlessness, was investigated. It was hypothesized that substantially different school settings would have no sig-

...deep-rooted sense of inferiority. Extreme narcissism compensates for the self-esteem that participants lacked before taking up the sport, & this sense serves a socially & psychologically therapeutic function. In addition, the exaltation of power & physical perfection are shown to parallel the fascist beliefs of Nazism, though the bodybuilding cult is by no means political. 35 References. K. Hyatt

88T5551

Almer, Paul (Dept Psychology U Exeter, EX4 4QG England), Factor Analysis and Personality Theory, European Journal of Personality, 1987, 1, 1, Mar, 21-36.

A discussion of the factor analytic approach to personality, focusing on problems in personality questionnaires that contribute to factorial confusion. It is argued that the apparent disparity of results can be accounted for by technical defects in the chosen factor analytic method. Another source of disagreement lies in the interpretation of what are essentially the same factors. 73 References. Modified HA

88T5552

Kloskowska, Antonina, Symbolic Values in Social Conflicts, The Polish Sociological Bulletin, 1985, 1-4(69-72), 19-29.

A system of theoretical assumptions about symbolic values in human development. On its basis, some criticisms of Florian Znaniecki's work are outlined. The perspective advanced is further applied to the development of Western art in the nineteenth & twentieth centuries. H. Stoddard

88T5553

Tempert, Wolfgang (Max-Planck-Institut Bildungsforschung, Lentzeallee 94 D-1000 Berlin 33 Federal Republic Germany), Soziobiographische Bedingungen der Entwicklung moralischer Urteilsfähigkeit (Sociobiographical Conditions of Moral Development), Kolner Zeitschrift für Soziologie und Sozialpsychologie, 1988, 40, 1, Mar, 62-92 (GER).

Assumptions about the social conditions that give rise to individual moral development, formulated by Emile Durkheim, Jean Piaget, Lawrence Kohlberg, Martin I. Hoffmann, James Garbarino, & Urie Bronfenbrenner are outlined & discussed. Using an interactionist model of socialization processes, an attempt is made to reconstruct systematically the pattern of sociobiographical conditions of moral development, & to specify all the conditions for the transitions to conventional & nonconventional thinking. Some complex hypotheses resulting from this attempt are taken up in case analyses, & tested on a sample of 21 young, skilled West German workers, with whom a series of interviews & observations were conducted from 1980 to 1987. 3 Tables, 64 References. Modified HA

88T5554

Lester, David (Richard Stockton State Coll, Pomona NJ 08240), Suicide and Sibling Position, Journal of Individual Psychology, 1987, 43, 3, Sept, 390-395.

Studies relating sibling position to suicidal behavior were reviewed, & the data combined. The findings revealed more first-borns & middle-borns & fewer only & last-born children among completed suicides, for attempted suicides, there were fewer only & first-borns & more middle-born & last-born children. 3 Tables, 29 References. AA

88T5555

Lippitz, Wilfried (Im Gensterfeld 27, D-5900 Siegen Federal Republic Germany), Das Werden eines Ich. Biographische Rekonstruktion fröhenkindlicher Sozialisation am Beispiel von Sartres Idiot der Familie (The Formation of an Ego. Biographical Reconstructions of Early Socialization, Exemplified by Sartre's Idiot der Familie), Zeitschrift für Sozialisationsforschung und Erziehungssoziologie, 1988, 8, 1, Jan, 40-53. (GER)

A critical reading of Jean-Paul Sartre's biography of Gustave Flaubert, Idiot der Familie (The Idiot of the Family), German edition, Reinbeck, Hamburg, 1985), focusing on the first volume. Sartre uses socio-psychological, psychoanalytic, & social-philosophical interpretation models to explain how Flaubert in his youth developed the ability to resist efforts to place him into the image of his parents & siblings. It is argued that Sartre's interpretation is unconvincing because it is encumbered with the systematic weakness of the social-ontological considerations derived from Sartre's early work L'Être et néant (Being and Nothingness) German edition, Reinbeck, Hamburg, 1982 (1943)). 18 References. Modified HA

88T5556

Lloyd, Linda, Armour, Philip K. & Smith, Richard J. (c/o Armour-U Texas Dallas, Richardson 75083-0688), Suicide in Texas: A Cohort Analysis of Trends in Suicide Rates, 1945-1980, Journal of Suicide and Life-Threatening Behavior, 1987, 17, 3, fall, 205-217.

An attempt to clarify the recent epidemic of teenage suicides in suburban Tex communities using an age-cohort analysis of mortality & vital statistics data from the State Dept of Health. Suicide rates were calculated & plotted for white Ms aged 15-19 in 1945 & for each 5-year age cohort entering the late teenage years through 1980. Analysis confirms the ever-increasing risk factor associated with the age 15-19 period, in addition, as the 1945 cohort aged, their suicide rates also increased, supporting earlier findings that the suicide risk factor increases with age. A curvilinear tendency in suicide rates is indicated, which is consistent with national & international trends. The data suggest that the ever-increasing self-destructiveness of teenagers is a function of universal SE & psychological factors as well as age & generational effects. 5 Tables, 2 Figures, 18 References. Modified HA

88T5557

Lortie-Lussier, Monique (School Psychology U Ottawa, Ontario K1N 6N5), Minority Influence and Idiosyncrasy Credit: A New Comparison of the Moscovici and Hollander Theories of Innovation, European Journal of Social Psychology, 1987, 17, 4, Oct-Dec, 431-446.

S. Moscovici's model of minority influence (Social Influence and Social Change, London: Academic Press, 1976) & E. P. Hollander's model of idiosyncrasy credit ("Leadership and Social Exchange Processes," Social Exchange, Advances in Theory and Research, New York: Plenum Press, 1980) were compared in an experiment conducted with 16 discussion groups composed of 4 M undergraduates & a confederate. Their task was to rank-order unanimously 10 proposals to remediate Ur problems, to which the confederate attempted to have one more added, thus introducing a norm change. Two variables were manipulated: status of the innovator (minority vs elected leader), & ideological criterion for innovation (avant-garde vs reformist). It was predicted that the consistent behavioral style of the minority would make him more influential under the avant-garde condition than under the reformist condition, whereas the idiosyncrasy credit of the leader would make him influential under the reformist condition. Although the adoption hypotheses failed to be supported, the evaluations of the confederate were consistent with both the Moscovici & Hollander models. While the minority confederate's action gained him visibility & distinctive attributions of determination & assurance, the leader confederate's initiative cost him his competence & cooperation credits. Strategies devised to adopt the innovation or to reject it pointed to the importance of interactive networks within the majority & to the decisive role played by group leaders for the innovator's influence to be exerted. These findings lead to speculation that Hollander's theorizing could be complementary to Moscovici's in accounting for the diffusion of minority influence. 3 Tables, 40 References. HA

88T5558

Marsh, Herbert W. (Dept Education U Sydney, New South Wales 2006 Australia), Masculinity, Femininity and Androgyny: Their Relations with Multiple Dimensions of Self-Concept, Journal of Multivariate Behavioral Research, 1987, 22, 1, Jan, 91-118.

Data from self-report instruments completed by 962 high school students are used to examine the relationship between masculinity (MS) & femininity (FM) & multiple dimensions of self-concept. Androgyny theory predicts that both MS & FM will contribute positively & uniquely to self-concept, but previous research, typically relying on undifferentiated self-concept measures, has found the unique contribution of FM to be nil. In contrast, analysis shows that MS & FM each contributed positively & uniquely to the prediction of well-differentiated facets of self-concept. Consistent with a new model to explain MS-FM/self-concept relations, the differentiated additive model, the relative contribution of MS & FM varied substantially depending on the area of self-concept; F contributed more positively to the self-concept facets for which girls had higher self-concepts than boys, & in some areas the contribution of FM was more positive than the contribution of MS. Contrary to predictions for interactive androgyny models & the sex-typed model, MS-by-FM interactions were not significant & the effects of MS, FM, & MS-by-FM did not depend on gender. The social desirability of MS-FM items, whether they were negatively or positively valued, was more highly correlated with the self-concept responses than whether the items were MS or FM. 7 Tables, 54 References. HA hort factors explain at least part of the variation in adults' reports of well-being. Theoretical arguments suggest that it is the bases of people's evaluations of their well-being that reflect the characteristic socializing influences of their cohort. Portraits of two cohorts of older adults are drawn from historical & sociological sources & hypotheses about cohort-specific values are tested with data collected by J. Veroff, E. Douvan, & R. A. Kulka, The Inner American: A Self-Portrait from 1957-1976 & Mental Health in America: Patterns of Help Seeking from 1957 to 1976, New York: Basic Books, Inc., 1981 (both titles). Findings do not support the idea that happiness among the adults who produced the post-WWII baby boom is uniquely linked to concerns with marriage & children. Results do provide partial support for the view that adults born before 1900 are distinctive from other cohorts in that their happiness levels are more closely linked with survival needs & more firmly wedded to Protestant ethic values. 7 Tables, 35 References. Modified HA

88T5543

Foa, Uriel G., Salcedo, Linda N., Tornblom, Kjell Y., Garner, Miriam, Glaubman, Hannanah & Teichman, Meir (Temple U, Philadelphia PA 19122), Interrelation of Social Resources: Evidence of Pancultural Invariance, Journal of Cross-Cultural Psychology, 1987, 18, 2, June, 221-233

† Survey research on the interrelationship among interpersonal resources was conducted in 5 cultures: those of Israel, the US, the Philippines, Sweden, & Spanish-speaking Mexican Americans (Ns ranging from 45 to 220 Ss). In spite of differences in language, instrument format, & age of Ss, the results support the notion that the interrelationship of resources may be cross-culturally invariant. 2 Tables, 1 Figure, 6 References. Modified HA

88T5544

Gulster, George (Urb Studies Program Coll Wooster, OH 44691), Identifying the Correlates of Dwelling Satisfaction: An Empirical Critique, Environment and Behavior, 1987, 19, 5, Sept, 539-568

† A critique of previous residential satisfaction research based on the actual-aspirational gap approach. It is posited that virtually all such work has been misspecified because it has employed aggregated, linear statistical models to estimate the relationship between features of the residential environment & the associated levels of satisfaction. Empirical specifications should be disaggregated by household type & should allow for non-linear relationships between residential context & their associated levels of satisfaction. A statistical analysis is presented employing this formulation, based on a 1980 sample of homeowners (N = 434) in Minneapolis, Minn. 4 Tables, 1 Figure, 43 References. Modified HA

88T5545

Garden, Anna-Maria (London Business School, Sussex Pl Regents Park NW1 England), Depersonalization: A Valid Dimension of Burnout?, Human Relations, 1987, 40, 9, Sept, 545-559

† Questionnaire data from midcareer MBA students (N = 138) are used to assess the concept of depersonalization as a component of burnout in a non-human-service occupation. The Myers-Briggs Type Indicator was utilized along with a 210-item stress questionnaire. Analysis reveals that depersonalization was not a salient construct in the occupational setting considered. Problems in operationalization are discussed. 6 Tables, 29 References. F. Rasmussen

88T5546

Giles, Howard & Johnson, Patricia (Dept Psychology U Bristol, BS8 1TH England), Ethnolinguistic Identity Theory: A Social Psychological Approach to Language Maintenance, International Journal of the Sociology of Language, 1987, 68, 69-99

† The variables & mechanisms involved in language maintenance in interethnic exchanges are examined from the perspective of social-psychological & ethnolinguistic identity theory. Questionnaire data obtained from adolescent Welsh-English bilinguals are used to investigate ethnolinguistic differentiation in Wales, focusing on Rs' (1) identification with the ethnic group, (2) perceptions of the degree of cognitive alternatives to the status of Wales vis-à-vis Britain, (3) multiple group memberships & boundaries, & (4) attitudes concerning use of the Welsh language. Results showed that Rs identified strongly with their Welsh group membership. Support was derived for the hypothesis that anticipated language maintenance would be influenced by ethnic identification & insecure social comparisons. Based on the data obtained, a revised version of ethnolinguistic identity theory is proposed & implications of this revised theory for related theories of second-language acquisition & ethnic language attitudes are considered. It is suggested that the proposed model sheds light on some of the complex conditions affecting the manner in which ethnic minorities modulate their distinctive ethnolinguistic styles in interactions with outgroup speakers & begins to specify important psychological parameters of language maintenance & erosion. 2 Tables, 1 Figure, 65 References. P. Farrell

88T5547

Jeffery, Ian A. & Jeffery, C. R. (3308 Robinhood Rd, Tallahassee, FL 32312), Toward an Interdisciplinary Social Psychology: Linking Organism and Environment, International Social Science Review, 1987, 62, 3, summer, 128-136

† Emerging within psychology is a new model that brings together previously dichotomous orientations of behaviorism & cognition in a reconceptualization called "biological behaviorism." The new cognitive linkage between stimulus & response is brain & neural events, an understanding of which comes from an interdisciplinary core of behaviorism, genetics, psychobiology, & learning theory. It is suggested that social psychology can make good use of this new cognitive psychology in its efforts to better understand social behavior. AA

88T5548

Jensen, Mark P. (Dept Psychology Arizona State U, Tempe, AZ 85287), Gender, Sex Roles, and Attitudes toward War and Nuclear Weapons, Sex Roles, 1987, 17, 5-6, Sept, 253-267

† An examination of the relationship between sex-role orientation & attitudes toward war & nuclear weapons, based on measures of sex-role orientation (the Masculinity & Femininity subscales of the Bem Sex Role Inventory) completed by 156 undergraduate students. Two specific classes of hypotheses regarding the possible relationships among sex variables were tested, masculinity, femininity, masculinity \times femininity interaction, & gender \times sex-role orientation. Results provide support only for the femininity hypothesis, i.e., that attitudes toward war are associated with feminine traits. However, neither masculinity nor femininity was found to be the only mediator of the gender/war attitude relationship, indicating that sex-role orientation (especially masculinity) should be given less emphasis when examining the relationship between gender & attitudes toward war. 2 Tables, 1 Appendix, 20 References. Modified AA

88T5549

Kirsch, Irving & Hyland, Michael E. (Dept Psychology U Connecticut, Storrs 06268), How Thoughts Affect the Body: A Meta-theoretical Framework, The Journal of Mind and Behavior, 1987, 8, 3, summer, 417-434

† The rise of cognitive psychology has heralded a revival of interest in the mind-body problem. As a heuristic, it has been suggested that the terms & body terms be thought of as complementary descriptions of the same event (Hyland, M. E., "Do Person Variables Exist in Different Ways," American Psychologist, 1985, 40, 1003-1010). Complementarity precludes causal relations between mental & physiological events & instead posits identity relations between these two types of variables. It has also been proposed that for all causal sequences linking one state to another, there is a corresponding causal sequence of physiological states (Kirsch, I., "Response Expectancy as a Determinant of Experience and Behavior," American Psychologist, 1985, 40, 1189-1201). Rather than being mind-body philosophies, complementary & causal isomorphism are shown to be logical consequences of virtually all modern philosophies, including those that are currently most prominent. The heuristic value is demonstrated with respect to empirical questions and psychophysiological phenomena. Complementary & causal isomorphism are also used to reconceptualize situational & behavioral variables as causes & consequences of cognitions. 4 Figures, 44 References. HA

88T5550

Klein, Alan M. (Dept Sociology/Anthropology Northeastern U, Boston MA 02160), Fear and Self-Loathing in Southern California: Narcissism and Fascism in Bodybuilding Subculture, The Journal of Psychoanalytic Anthropology, 1987, 10, 2, spring, 117-137

† An examination of the psychocultural impetus behind the rise in popularity of bodybuilding as a sport & as a subculture in the US, using data obtained during participant observation at a prominent gym in Venice, Santa Monica, Calif, between 1979 & 1985. It is argued that narcissism & fascism are the main elements underlying this phenomenon & that the bodybuilding subculture is one in which members relate to the outside world through an arrogant veneer of superior fitness in order to com-

88T5546

Orth, Bernhard (Psychologisches Institut U Hamburg, D-2000 13 Federal Republic Germany). Formale Untersuchungen des Modells von Fishbein & Ajzen zur Einstellungs-Verhaltensbeziehung: I. Bedeutsamkeit und erforderliches Skalenniveau (Formal Investigation of Fishbein and Ajzen's Model of the Attitude-Behavior Relationship I. Meaningfulness and Required Level of Scales). Zeitschrift für Sozial Psychologie, 1987, 18, 3, 152-159 (GER)

- † The theory of meaningfulness of numerical statements is applied to I. Ajzen's & M. Fishbein's model of the attitude-behavior relationship, i.e., the theory of reasoned action (see, eg. Understanding Attitudes and Predicting Social Behavior, Englewood Cliffs, NJ: Prentice-Hall, 1980) in order to determine what level of measurement of the variables is required for empirical applications of the model. It is shown that attitudes & subjective norms may be measured on interval scales if the so-called "basic model" is tested, however, the "specific model," which is usually tested, requires ratio scales for the measurement of behavioral & normative strength of belief, evaluation, & willingness to comply. Moreover, the relative weights of the model can only be interpreted if the measurement scales are mutually dependent in a specific way. Thus, proper empirical tests of the theory of reasoned action cannot be performed by the use of scaling methods that yield interval scales at most. 1 Table, 1 Appendix, 30 References. Modified HA

88T5567

Perlman, Daniel & Joshi, Purushottam (School Family & Nutritional Sciences U British Columbia, Vancouver V6T 1W5). The Revelation of Loneliness. ♦ Journal of Social Behavior and Personality, 1987, 2, 2(2), 61-76

- † Both direct & indirect evidence suggests that lonely people are reluctant to reveal their condition perhaps because they do not realize they are lonely, believe revealing loneliness would evoke negative reactions, feel they should solve their own problems, or do not believe others can help them. Conditions under which people are most likely to discuss their loneliness are identified. It appears that such revelation is related to the nature of the loneliness itself, sex, personality traits, having friends, & interpersonal trust. Loneliness seems to be discussed more often with family & friends than with helping professionals. A preliminary agenda is outlined for research on the disclosure of loneliness. 1 Figure, 25 References. Modified HA

88T5568

Roland, Alan (26 West 9th St, New York NY 10011). The Familial Self, the Individualized Self, and the Transcendent Self: Psychoanalytic Reflections on India and America. ♦ The Psychoanalytic Review, 1987, 74, 2, summer, 237-250

- † An attempt to integrate psychoanalytic, historical, & social scientific perspectives in a comparison of the psychological development & functioning of the self in India & the US. It is argued that via the principle of adaptation, psychic structures & their interrelationships will develop somewhat differently & form different gestalts in different sociocultural contexts & in the face of different adaptational tasks & childrearing practices. Based on personal experience with psychoanalytic work in both settings, it is concluded that the development of the psyche is a matter of the development of three selves: familial, individualized, & transcendent (spiritual). Particular emphasis is on the difference between the Indian familial self & the individualized self prominent in the US. The transcendent or spiritual self plays a large part in Indian personality, society, & culture, however, its importance has not been recognized by the Western psychoanalytic community, which is reluctant to address the major role of religion & magic in Indian culture, preferring to reduce this integral aspect of the Indian psyche to a form of psychopathology. 16 References. K. Hyatt

88T5569

Russell, Joyce E. A. & Rush, Michael C. (417 Stokely Management Center U Tennessee, Knoxville 37996). The Effects of Sex and Marital/Parental Status on Performance Evaluations and Attributions. Sex Roles, 1987, 17, 3-4, Aug, 221-236

- † The effects of an employee's sex & marital/parental status on performance evaluations are examined. It was expected that the performance of working mothers with preschoolers would be less favorably evaluated than the same level of performance by either Ms or singles. Undergraduates enrolled in introductory psychology classes in a large, U midwestern U participated in a $2 \times 2 \times 2$ crossed factorial design experiment to examine the effects of rater sex, target employee sex, & target employee marital/parental status (single vs married with 3 children ages 1, 3, & 5) on the evaluations & attributions ascribed to a poor-performing employee. Findings indicated that all effects tested using rater sex as a variate were nonsignificant, but that there was significant interaction for the target employee's sex by marital/parental status for performance evaluations & attributions. This interaction revealed that of the 4 groups of employees depicted as having the same level of poor performance, the most favorable evaluations were given to the married mother, while the harshest evaluations were given to the single F. These results underscore the importance of investigating the influences of extraorganizational factors on the performance appraisal process & the importance of examining attributions of performance in order to interpret & understand subsequent performance evaluations & recommendations. 2 Tables, 20 References. Modified AA

88T5570

Sachdev, Itesh & Bourhis, Richard Y. (Dept Applied Linguistics Birkbeck Coll U London, WC1H 0PD England). Status Differential and Intergroup Behavior. ♦ European Journal of Social Psychology, 1987, 17, 3, July-Sept, 277-293

- † Using a variant of the minimal group paradigm of H. Tajfel & J. C. Turner ("An Integrative Theory of Intergroup Conflict" in The Social Psychology of Intergroup Relations, Austin, W. G. & Worchel, S. [eds], Monterey, Calif: Brooks/Cole, 1979), the independent effects of status difference on intergroup behavior were investigated in an experimental study of U students ($N = 120$). Ss categorized into groups of differing status with 2 levels of category salience, rated the creativity of products ostensibly produced by ingroup & outgroup members. Results indicated a main effect for group status but none for salience. Equal status groups discriminated against each other, & high & equal status group members were more discriminatory against outgroups & more positive about their own group membership than were low status group members. Low status group members, in contrast, engaged in significant amounts of outgroup favoritism. 4 Tables, 38 References. Modified HA

88T5571

Salvatori, Mariolina (Dept English U Pittsburgh, PA 15260). Thomas Hardy and Eugenio Montale: In Mourning and in Celebration. Journal of Aging Studies, 1987, 1, 2, summer, 161-185

- † A discussion of how old people face the fear of death. The views of innumerable poets, playwrights, novelists, & biographers on the subject can complement the views of scientists, since the literary views are, in heightened form, an expression of the emotions that the average individual may be reluctant or unable to voice. The ways in which two poets, Thomas M. Hardy & Eugenio Montale, came to terms with the death of their wives are examined. The elegies they wrote in their wives' memory represent two paradigmatic ways in which old individuals' particular relationship to the past may determine the way in which they confront the death of their spouses & their own mortality. 1 Addendum, 36 References. Modified HA

88T5572

Shotland, R. Lance & Craig, Jane M. (Pennsylvania State U, University Park 16802). Can Men and Women Differentiate between Friendly and Sexually Interested Behavior?. ♦ Social Psychology Quarterly, 1988, 51, 1, Mar, 66-73

- † Research indicates that Ms perceive people to be more interested in sex than do Fs & are less able than Fs to differentiate among liking, love, & sexual involvement. Here, it is examined whether Ms can differentiate between friendly & sexually interested behavior. Videotapes of 5 couples, each showing a M & a F behaving in either a friendly or a sexually interested fashion, were shown to 166 Coll students, who then completed a Likert-type questionnaire & sexual interest scales on which they described the couples' interactions. Using a $2(\text{sex of S}) \times 2(\text{M intent}) \times 2(\text{F intent}) \times 2(\text{sex of actor})$ design, with sex of actor as a within-S factor, multivariate analyses of variance indicate that Ms perceive both Ms & Fs as having more sexual interest than do Fs, & both Ms & Fs differentiate between friendly & interested behavior. It is concluded that (1) Ms & Fs have different thresholds for the perception of sexual intent, & (2) members of either sex can make errors, depending on their perceptual threshold & the emotivity of the actors. The gender difference in the perception of sexual intent is thought to result from the Ms' greater sexual appetite, which the M uses as a model for the attribution of the appetites of others. 2 Tables, 29 References. Modified HA

88T5559

Möller, Paul H. (Dept Sociology Potchefstroom U Christian Higher Education, 2520 Republic South Africa). Mellanby on Cuba and China. ♦ International Journal of World Peace 1987, 4, 3, July-Sept, 3-5.

† Jean Mellanby's article (International Journal on World Peace 1987, 4, 1, Jan-Mar 23-32) on Armando Valladares's Against All Hope (London: Hamish Hamilton, 1986) & Nien Cheng's Life and Death in Shanghai (London: Collins, 1986) places qualitative research methods in sharper focus. Both these books, which are life documents of prisoners in total institutions, one in a Cuban & one in a Chinese prison, stand next to other life histories. They will also become classics, because the value of such documents & histories lies in their subject matter. On the level of meaning, every prisoner in a total institution has an immediate access to it that is superior to that of any noninhabitant. The exportation of the cognitive & subjective contents of their prisoners' life is thus of importance. Modified AA

88T5560

Morgan, Rick L. & Heise, David (Educational Testing Service, Princeton NJ 08540). Structure of Emotions. ♦ Social Psychology Quarterly 1988, 51, 1, Mar, 19-31.

† Interesting structures emerge in scaling analyses of emotions when stimuli are confined to terms that are relatively free of cognitive & behavioral connotations. The dimensional structure of the lexicon of pure emotion adjectives was examined in 2 studies in which Coll students ($2N = 549$) rated various affective descriptors in terms of evaluation, potency, & activity. Study 1 focused on 99 emotion adjectives rated on semantic differential scales. Results revealed a bimodal distribution of emotions with regard to pleasantness, further distinctions in terms of activation, & a third dimension representing flight/fight. Study 2 obtained dissimilarity ratings for a representative subset of the terms, nonmetric multidimensional scaling replicated the dimensions in Study 1 with a clarified third dimension. None of the results conform strictly to a circumplex model of emotion; rather, they suggest that emotions are hedonically polarized feelings. Activation appears to be the main discriminating factor in positive emotions, but activation & a sense of potency combine in discriminating negative emotions. These results encourage a dimensionally based cybernetic approach to emotion research. 4 Tables, 3 Figures, 22 References. Modified HA

88T5561

Mueller, Ulrich, Chanowitz, Benzion & Langer, Ellen (Zentrum Umfragen Methoden & Analysen e.V. Postfach 5969 D-6800 Mannheim 1 Federal Republic Germany). Individual-Adjustment Behavior versus Group-Welfare Behavior. Towards a New Conceptual Framework for the Study of Free-Riding: Theory and the Results of an Experimental Study. European Sociological Review 1987, 3, 3, Dec, 203-228.

† A review of the experimental literature on real Ss' behavior in social dilemmas with free-rider options displays unstable results: in particular, whether the social dilemma, modeled as a cooperative game with a Pareto-deficient solution or as a market transaction over some public good, influences the outcome. This divergence reveals a serious shortcoming of the theoretical framework for previous studies of free riding. It is proposed here that noncooperativeness be operationalized as individual-adjustment behavior, & cooperativeness as group-adjustment behavior, both of which are defined in terms of welfare microeconomics. Free riding can occur in both types under quite different conditions. Hypotheses based on this model were tested using an experimental procedure in which each of 50 undergraduates interacted with 4 simulated partners in a free-rider situation. Results confirm some but not all of the several hypotheses. 7 Tables, 3 Figures, 68 References. Modified HA

88T5562

Mullins, Larry C., Johnson, D. Paul & Andersson, Lars (International Exchange Center Gerontology U South Florida, Tampa 33620). Loneliness of the Elderly: The Impact of Family and Friends. ♦ Journal of Social Behavior and Personality 1987, 2, 2(2), 225-238.

† A review of the literature on loneliness shows that being alone & being lonely are not necessarily coincident. A useful conceptual framework separates two states that cause loneliness: social isolation & emotional isolation. This distinction may help in understanding the different impact of family & friends on loneliness among the elderly. Interviews with 131 residents of a high-rise for the elderly in a large city in Fla show that those with no children & grandchildren were less lonely than those with children & grandchildren. However, among those with existing relationships, amount of contact with family had no impact on loneliness, while increased contact with neighbors & friends reduced loneliness. These findings emphasize the need to examine the distinction between social & emotional isolation & the impact of relationships. 3 Tables, 32 References. Modified HA

88T5563

Mullis, Fran Yancey, Kern, Roy M. & Curlette, William L. (Dept Counseling & Psychological Services Georgia State U, Atlanta 30303). Life-Style Themes and Social Interests: A Further Factor Analytic Study. ♦ Individual Psychology 1987, 43, 3, Sept, 339-352.

† A contribution to the development of the Life Style Personality Inventory (LSPI) Wheeler, M. S., Kern, R. M., & Curlette, W. L., "Factor Analytic Scales Designed to Measure Adlerian Life Style Themes," Journal of Individual Psychology 1986, 42, 1-16), confirming the previously defined themes of conforming, controlling, exploiting, & displaying inadequacy, & exploring the relationship of the themes for a social interest factor. Five expert Adlerian judges categorized each inventory item into the lifestyle theme they believed it to represent, based on descriptions of the themes; data were gathered from a sample of 1,010 persons. The final analysis of the data used 147 items from the LSPI. A 5-point Likert-type scale was used for all items. The results of the interjudge study indicated better than chance agreement on item placement between the judges & the authors of the LSPI. However, the hypothesis that the proportion of correct choices of lifestyle themes by the judges would be the same for all judges was not supported. The hypothesized lifestyle themes & social interest index were confirmed by factor analysis. A significant finding was that the index measuring social interest was the most important factor in explaining the data: social interest is of great theoretical & practical significance in Adlerian psychology. Also, the feasibility of working with four major categories in attempting to explain behavior was supported. 3 Tables, 23 References. Modified AA

88T5564

Nelson, Marie Coleman (91 Patricia Pl, Clifton NJ 07012). Immunitization Factors in Development of the African Personality: Preliminary Observations. ♦ The Psychoanalytic Review 1987, 74, 2, summer, 217-236.

† Western psychoanalytic theories of identificatory & defensive processes, as well as notions concerning optimal childrearing practices, ego maturation & the development of the self-consciousness, & the psychological dimensions of thought processes, are challenged via an investigation of the life experiences of 5 nonclinical African adults in Kenya. These individuals, raised in Ru areas but resettled in Ur ones later in life, have been able to surmount a variety of obstacles & problems without harboring grievances against God, the government, or the people who raised them, & without developing psychological disturbances. Their ability to mobilize their energies in the face of great adversity is attributed to (unknown) psychobiological factors, attitudes toward health & illness, & cultural factors different from those in the West, including childrearing beliefs & practices, worldviews, attitudes toward achievement, & the experiential/affective sense of self & relationships. It is concluded that psychoanalysis must undergo a radical reorientation in order to become more applicable in diverse sociological contexts. 12 References. K. Hyatt

88T5565

Noricks, Jay Smith, Agler, L. Helen, Bartholomew, Margaret, Howarth-Smith, Susan, Martin, David, Pyles, Steve & Shapiro, William (Dept Anthropology California State U, Chico 95929). Age, Abstract Thinking, and the American Concept of Person. American Anthropologist 1987, 89, 3, Sept, 667-675.

† A replication of a comparison by Richard A. Shweder & Edmund J. Bourne ("Does the Concept of the Person Vary Cross-Culturally?" in Marsella, A. J. & White, G. M. [Eds], Cultural Conceptions of Mental Health and Therapy, Philadelphia: Riedel Publishing, 1982, 97-137) of conceptualizations of the personhood of close acquaintances of residents of Chicago, Ill., & Bhabaneswar, India. The same questionnaire as in the original study was employed in interviews with 36 Ms & 47 Fs aged 24-89 residing in Chico, Calif, obtaining 3,243 responses. The Californians' responses differ significantly from those of Shweder's & Bourne's Oriya Indians on the dimension of concrete vs abstract thinking, but not as much so as the responses of their Chicago sample. Older US Rs are much more similar to the Indian sample, a finding that requires explanation. 9 Tables, 12 References. W. H. Stoddard poses that a social-linguistic analysis of loneliness offers more promise than Weiss's theory based on the physiology of emotion. In Past the Reflection and Through the Looking-Glass: Extending Loneliness Research, Peter Suedfeld (U of British Columbia, Vancouver V6T 1Z3) suggests the integration of loneliness research with such fields as environmental psychology, personology, & motivational psychology, & incorporating theories of adaptation level, arousal, & attribution. In On the Usefulness of Phenomenological Methods, Joseph P. Stokes (Dept of Psychology, U of Illinois, Chicago) points out two important aspects of Weiss's reflections: his explicit call for increased theoretical work & his implicit call for a more phenomenological approach to the subject of loneliness. Examples of phenomenological approaches that might be useful are presented. 20 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T5581

Weller, Leonard (Dept Sociology & Anthropology Bar-Ilan U, 52100 Ramat Gan Israel). Philosophies of Human Nature and Perception of Physical Attractiveness, Social Behavior and Personality, 1987, 15, 1, 101-104.

¶ An examination of the effects of social perceptions of differential perception of beauty. The influence of one's philosophy of human nature on perceptions of beauty is specifically addressed. Sixty-two Ss rated passport photographs on a 5-point scale. They also completed Wrightsman Philosophies of Human Nature Scale (Wrightman, L. Assumptions about Human Nature: A Social-Psychological Approach, Calif. Brooks/Cole, 1974). Positive correlations were obtained for 4 of the 6 subscales: (1) altruism vs selfishness, (2) strength of will & rationality vs lack of will & irrationality, (3) variability vs stability, & (4) complexity vs simplicity. 1 Table, 7 References. Modil HA

88T5582

Wertsch, James (Dept Communication U California San Diego, La Jolla 92093). Collective Memory: Issues from a Sociohistorical Perspective, The Quarterly Newsletter of the Laboratory of Comparative Human Cognition, 1987, 9, 1, Jan, 19-22.

¶ An examination of collective memory, not as the product of group functioning as integrated memory systems but as mediated by collective tools or instruments. The use of complex verbal texts as such tools is examined. The languages that groups speak have a powerful influence on this activity & thus on the nature of memory. 12 References. W. Stoddard

22 leadership

No Abstracts In This Issue

64 deviance

88T5583

Gurevitch, Z. D. (Dept Sociology Hebrew U Jerusalem, Mount Scopus 91905 Israel). The Other Side of Dialogue: On Making the Other Strange and the Experience of Otherness, The American Journal of Sociology, 1988, 93, 5, Mar, 1179-1199.

¶ The central assumption of phenomenological & related approaches holds that the possibility of mutual understanding & communication in interpersonal relations is contingent on the supposition of the sameness of self & other. Under this assumption, the otherness of the other is conceived as an obstacle to achieving mutual understanding. Thus, the categories of stranger & strangeness are not considered constitutive of interpersonal communication, & consequently, are analyzed either in terms of social role or as a methodological device. This assumption is examined by focusing on the process of "making the other strange," which involves the disengagement of the other's presence from his or her familiar, taken-for-granted identity. The other is thereby rendered "other," i.e., opaque & irreducible in his individuality. This suspension of taken-for-granted understanding opens up the possibility of a creative & critical search to understand the other & allows distinguishing among selves. Without possibility, the picture of interpersonal communication remains incomplete. The discussion of the principles underlying this process & of its implications for an analytical account of interaction is followed by examples from everyday occurrences of making strange. 51 References.

88T5584

Schiller, Gregory Charles (U California, Santa Barbara 93106). Pursuit of Masculinity, a Study in Homosexual Sadomasochism, Dissertation Abstracts International, A, The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1544-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8719639.

73 social interaction/everyday life

88T5585

Byrne, Noel Thomas (Rutgers State U, New Brunswick NJ 08903). *The Temporal Organization of Behavior in Public Places: A Study in the Sociology of Timing Practices, * Dissertation Abstracts International, A, The Humanities and Social Sciences*, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1906-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8723224.

88T5586

Fielding, Nigel (Dept Sociology U Surrey, Guildford GU2 6XH England). Competence and Culture in the Police, ♦ Sociology, 1988, 22, 1, Feb, 45-64.

¶ Assessments of the achievement of competence in organizations often obscure the relationship between external or formal criteria of competence & those of members. Efforts to reform police practice may founder on the lack of fit between the terms in which outsiders & members construe competent practice. In order to approach this matter, it is initially necessary to specify the terms in which members attribute competence to practice at incidents, & to examine the formal & informal constraints & goals that influence their action. Ethnographic field research on community policing in 2 US & 2 GB Ur settings is examined to illustrate these issues. 44 References. HA

88T5587

Freeman, Sue (U California, Irvine 92717). *Verbal Response Data: Predictors of Social Structure, * Dissertation Abstracts International, A, The Humanities and Social Sciences*, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1551-A-1552-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8719497.

88T5588

Lutz, Wolfgang (Sektion Marxismus-Leninismus Karl-Marx DDR-7010 Leipzig German Democratic Republic). Alltag und Alltagsbewusstsein (The Everyday and Everyday Consciousness

88T5573

Shooter, John (Dept Psychology U Nottingham, NG7 2RD England). Remembering and Forgetting as Social Institutions. The Quarterly Newsletter of the Laboratory of Comparative Human Cognition, 1987, 9, 1, Jan, 11-19.

- † A social constructivist approach to remembering & forgetting is presented, based on a view of speech as serving primarily to coordinate social action. The selectivity of memory & the role of demands for social control & accountability in guiding its selections are emphasized, following the ideas of F. C. Bartlett (Remembering: A Study in Experimental and Social Psychology, London: Cambridge U. Press, 1932). Current research on memory is examined from this perspective & is criticized as still relying on dualistic assumptions that are only suited to one of many possible forms of social praxis. W. H. Stoddard.

88T5574

Simons, Richard C. (Dept Psychiatry Health Sciences Center U Colorado, Denver 80262). Psychoanalytic Contributions to Psychiatric Nosology: Forms of Masochistic Behavior. Journal of the American Psychoanalytic Association, 1987, 35, 3, 583-608.

- † The major strengths & weaknesses of current psychiatric nosology are summarized, & various forms of masochistic behavior are discussed as one illustration of how psychoanalysis can contribute to the continuing evolution of psychiatric nosology. Masochistic behavior is separated into behavior in which there is a predominantly conscious link between pleasure & pain, & behavior in which that link is predominantly unconscious. Both categories are further separated into normal & pathological forms. The current diagnostic category of dysthymic disorders is then discussed, with consideration given to the contribution that psychoanalysis can make toward the classification & delineation of this heterogeneous diagnostic category. 1 Table, 3 Figures, 60 References. HA.

88T5575

Sulek, Antoni (U Warsaw, PL 00-325 Poland). Life Values of Two Generations: From a Study of the Generation Gap in Poland. ♦ The Polish Sociological Bulletin, 1985, 1-4(69-72), 31-42.

- † Conflict between the life values of different generations in Poland is examined using questionnaire data from 1,220 high school students in Warsaw & 2,004 of their parents. Life values of the two generations are compared & professional backgrounds of parents are examined as influences on them. Youth are found to value satisfactions gained in small groups more highly than satisfactions gained in large groups. The psychological, social, & historical reasons for this are considered. The generalizability of these results is briefly examined. 3 Tables, 12 References. W. H. Stoddard.

88T5576

Togonu-Bickersteth, Funmi (Dept Psychology U Ife, Ife-Ife Nigeria). Chronological Definitions and Expectations of Old Age among Young Adults in Nigeria. Journal of Aging Studies, 1987, 1, 2, summer, 113-124.

- † An examination of chronological definitions of old age & expectations about old age held by young adults in Ife-Ife, Nigeria. Data from structured interviews of 113 persons aged 18-35 were supplemented by secondary analysis of data collected from an earlier questionnaire survey of 432 old persons in Ife-Ife. With respect to chronological definitions of old age, the observed patterns of definition confirm general tendencies reported by previous researchers in Western societies. Concerning expectations about old age, the data point to the centrality of the place of offspring in the definition of a good old age. While chronological definitions of old age may show similarity of patterns across cultures & therefore assume the semblance of universal laws, old age expectations are much more culturally specific because of their interdependence with the beliefs, norms, values, & other SE patterns extant in a particular society. 8 Tables, 20 References. HA.

88T5577

Turner, Ralph H. (U California, Los Angeles 90024). Personality in Society: Social Psychology's Contribution to Sociology. ♦ Social Psychology Quarterly, 1988, 51, 1, Mar, 1-10.

- † A model of socialization is proposed in which individual personalities are seen as intervening variables in the maintenance, disruption, & modification of culture & social structure. Four integrative approaches to socialization are compared & assessed in relation to the model. Dominant values or themes, basic personality structure, generalization from interpersonal experience, & structural functionalist approaches all assume some pattern of integration in society & in personality, & all specify relationships between the two. However, none is clear about all stages in the cycle from societal influence on socializing situations to personality & to the eventual return influence of personality on society. A modified functionalism emphasizing mutual accommodation rather than functional integration is proposed, incorporating the generalization from interpersonal experience approach to describe part of the socialization cycle. 1 Figure, 59 References. HA.

88T5578

Valadez, Joseph & Cignat, Remi (Harvard Inst International Development, 1 Elliott St Cambridge MA 02163). On the Ambiguities of a Sociological Analysis of the Culture of Narcissism. ♦ The Sociological Quarterly, 1987, 28, 4, Dec, 455-472.

- † An analysis of three sets of ambiguities underlying sociological analyses of the new culture of narcissism: (1) the differential importance of childhood experiences & the contradictory cultural norms that regulate the placement of the adult self in time & space, (2) the problem of whether these contradictions result from the structural characteristics of postindustrial societies or, alternatively, from the transition from a system of stratification based on production skills to one based on consumption patterns, & (3) the universal, unintentional, & invariant properties attributed to sociopsychological responses to anomie. Examination of these ambiguities enables a specification of additional analyses & appropriate methodologies needed for a sociological understanding of narcissism. 103 References. Modified HA.

88T5579

Wasserman, Ira M. (Eastern Michigan U, Ypsilanti 48197). Cohort, Age, and Period Effects in the Analysis of U.S. Suicide Patterns: 1933-1978. ♦ U Suicide and Life-Threatening Behavior, 1987, 17, 3, fall, 179-193.

- † Multiple classification analysis is used to examine the impact of age, period, & cohort effects on white M suicide rates in the US between 1933 & 1978. Seven models are specified using age-specific national suicide data, & the Shazam ordinary-least-squares computer package is employed to estimate the models' logit coefficients. Period effects are found to be weaker than age & cohort effects for explaining shifts in suicide patterns during this period. However, the fact that the three effects are measured indirectly may limit the validity & robustness of the findings; however, this preliminary information can be used to develop a pooled cross-sectional time-series model to further examine longitudinal suicide behavior. 4 Tables, 40 References. Modified HA.

88T5580

Weiss, Robert S. (Work & Family Research Unit Downtown Center U Massachusetts, Boston 02125). Reflections on the Present State of Loneliness Research. ♦ Journal of Social Behavior and Personality, 1987, 2, 2(2), 1-16. Comments, 17-62.

- † An exploration of the field of loneliness research, based on a personal history of involvement in this field. Two basic conceptions are distinguished: the loneliness of emotional isolation & the loneliness of social isolation & doubts about current knowledge of both are expressed. In Further Reflections on the Present State of Loneliness Research, Daniel Perlman (School Family & Nutritional Sciences, U of British Columbia, Vancouver V6T 1W5) addresses the issues of the rapid growth of loneliness research, definitions as minitheories, types of loneliness, & loneliness in a life-span perspective. In Research and Theory on Loneliness: A Response to Weiss's Reflections, Warren H. Jones (Dept of Psychology, U of Tulsa, Okla) welcomes Weiss's insights into conceptual weaknesses of the field, but sees his doubts about the empirical work as largely misplaced. In Models and Methods in Loneliness Research: Their Status and Direction, Raymond F. Paloutzian & Aris S. Janigan (Dept of Psychology, Westmont Coll, Santa Barbara, Calif) discuss three issues in loneliness research: the limits of the emotional/social distinction, the need for additional methods, & the lack of support for the cognitive discrepancy model. In Further Reflections on Loneliness Research: Commentary on Weiss's Assessment of Loneliness Research, Norman R. Schulz, Jr., & DeWayne Moore (Dept of Psychology, Clemson U, South Carolina) suggest a need for evaluation of individual differences in parent-child relationships over time & provide a sociobiological interpretation of the loneliness of social isolation. In Loneliness: Physiological or Linguistic Analysis? Linda A. Wood (Dept of Psychology, U of Guelph, Ontario N1G 2W1) suggests that increased attention to the nature of attachment & to its changes over the life-span would be beneficial, & pro-

0400 group interactions

10 interaction between (large) groups (race relations, ethnicity, & inter-ethnic relations)

88T5592

Alexander, C. (Dept Social Work U Sydney, New South Wales 2006 Australia). From Dreamtime to Nightmare: The Voices of 168 Aboriginal (Ex-)Prisoners in New South Wales. ♦UM The Australian and New Zealand Journal of Sociology, 1987, 23, 3, Nov, 323-342

‡ An investigation of the rate & causes of recidivism among aboriginal offenders in New South Wales, Australia. The archival records of 154 aboriginal prisoners released during 1983 were analyzed, & interviews were conducted with 100 aboriginal prison inmates, 68 aboriginal ex-inmates, & 30 state officials & service providers. The interviews with prisoners & ex-prisoners examined their economic circumstances, use of alcohol & drugs, & attitudes toward prison programs. The majority were unemployed at the time of their offense & had (or expected to have) less than $100 available on release. There is clearly a failure to rehabilitate offenders. Some recommendations are made concerning presentencing procedures, prison administration, & postrelease support schemes. 11 Tables, 15 References. Modified HA

88T5593

Andriamanana, Sarah R. (U Texas, Austin 78712). Chinese Immigration to California and to Madagascar: A Comparative Study. * Dissertation Abstracts International, A. The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1329-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8717357.

88T5594

Atemie, Josiah Dagogo (Brown U, Providence RI 02912). Ethnicity and Migrant Adaptation in Port-Harcourt, Nigeria. * Dissertation Abstracts International, A. The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1892-A-1893-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8715448.

88T5595

Bell, Ella Louise (Case Western Reserve U, Cleveland OH 44106). The Power within: Bicultural Life Structures and Stress among Black Women. * Dissertation Abstracts International, A. The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1895-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8722233.

88T5596

Bertin, Irving N. (U New Mexico, Albuquerque 87131). Suicide among American Indian Adolescents: An Overview. ♦UM Suicide and Life-Threatening Behavior, 1987, 17, 3, fall, 218-232

‡ Many US Indian tribes & pueblos have become concerned over the dramatic increase in their suicide rates over the last decade, particularly among adolescent & young adult Ms. However, there is much intertribal variation in suicide rates. Factors that may account for this variability are explored using data from past research among American Indians as well as studies of suicide among blacks & Hispanics in Los Angeles, Calif, & high school students in Kan & Mich. Chronic & acute stressors found to be important in the etiology of suicide are examined in detail, & a number of factors that characterize tribes with high suicide rates are identified, failure to adhere to traditional ways of living, religion, clans, & societies, & the resulting chaotic family structures & high rate of adult alcoholism. The roles of adoption of Indian children into Anglo families, boarding schools, & high unemployment are also discussed. Some suicide prevention & intervention programs are briefly described. 66 References. Modified HA

88T5597

Borrero, I. Michael (F Heller Graduate School Brandeis U, Waltham MA 02254). Citizens in Limbo: An Economic Analysis of Puerto Ricans in the U.S.. * Dissertation Abstracts International, A. The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1895-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8722491.

88T5598

Clark, E. Culpepper & McKerrow, Raymie E., The Historiographical Dilemma in Myrdal's American Creed: Rhetoric's Role in Rescuing a Historical Moment. ♦UM The Quarterly Journal of Speech, 1987, 73, 3, Aug, 303-316

‡ In An American Dilemma: The Negro Problem and Modern Democracy (New York: Harper & Row, 1962), the Swedish economist Gunnar Myrdal argued that race relations in the US would improve because democratic liberalism created a dilemma between existing racial practice & the national ideology. The resulting dilemma, he argued, disposed white America to gradual, progressive change. Not only did Myrdal's value-laden sociology find its way into US jurisprudence through footnote 11 to Brown v. Board of Education, but also it appealed to liberal opinion leaders who were encouraged by the prospect for change through gentle social engineering. Among those leaders was an influential group of historians who helped spread the Myrdalian gospel & in so doing acquiesced in its ideological determinism. Here it is described how the deterministic perspective robbed civil rights historiography of some of its drama & it is shown how a rhetorical approach to documents can restore the vividness of a historical moment. HA

88T5599

Conversi, Daniele. Teorie dell'etno-nazionalismo (Theories of Ethnonationalism). ♦UM La Critica Sociologica, 1987, 81, Apr-June, 71-88 (ITA)

‡ A review of research on ethnicity, nationalism, & what is referred to as nationalism of the periphery or ethnonationalism. The dichotomy between nationalism of the nation-state & ethnonationalism, or nationalism without a state, is discussed. Some of the theories that have emerged recently in the field of "sociology of nationalism," especially in the Anglo-Saxon countries, are critically examined. 66 References. C. Waters

88T5600

Davidson, Chandler (Dept Sociology Rice U, Houston TX 77251). Ethnic Jokes: An Introduction to Race and Nationality, Teaching Sociology, 1987, 15, 3, July, 296-302

‡ A skit depicting an angry confrontation between a white professor & a black student over a racial joke used at the opening of a course in race & nationality to create immediate interest in the question of how to interpret jokes. Students are asked to fill out a questionnaire dealing with matters raised in the skit. Then they are assigned a field project designed to measure the incidence of ethnic joking on campus & collect other information on the subject. The skit, in combination with the field research findings of which are discussed in class, provide an important link between common student experiences & rather abstract issues in race relations. The five-session introduction to racial joking is a provocative introductory section to the course. 1 Table, 1 Figure, 14 References. HA

88T5601

Deosaran, Ramesh (Dept Sociology U West Indies, Saint Augustine Trinidad). The Social Psychology of Cultural Pluralism: Updating the Old, Plural Societies, 1987, 17, 1, May, 54-77

‡ A social-psychological analysis of race relations in the Caribbean generally & Trinidad & Tobago specifically. The history of race relations & of anthropological & sociological research on the subject is recounted. It is argued that a new approach is needed to uncover the characteristics of social interaction in the multicultural postindependence society. A social-psychological approach is recommended in which (1) the unit of analysis is the individual, (2) the cognitive structures of individuals are measured, (3) the ways in which perceptions of social situations are affected by these cognitive structures are determined, & (4) the responses to these perceptions & the behavior they elicit from other racial groups are examined. An experimental approach to these questions is favored. 1 Table, 78 References. W. H. Stoddard

Deutsche Zeitschrift für Philosophie, 1985, 33, 4, 348-352 (GER)

1 The necessity of a differentiated approach to the study of the formation of socialist consciousness in order to understand the absorption of socialist ideology is discussed. In "Karl Marx und Probleme des Alltagserkennens" ([Karl Marx and Problems of Everyday Perception], Deutsche Zeitschrift für Philosophie, 1983, 11), K. Gossler developed the ideas on the everyday & everyday consciousness found in Karl Marx's economic writings. Here, an attempt is made to develop a Marxist-Leninist concept of everyday consciousness. Everyday consciousness is regarded as the expression of certain forms of social relations, among which the concrete-historical relationship between individual & society is of primary importance. C. Waters

88T5589

Lutz, Wolfgang (Sektion Marxismus-Leninismus Karl-Marx-U., DDR-7010 Leipzig German Democratic Republic). Noch einmal zum Alltag (Once More on the Everyday). Deutsche Zeitschrift für Philosophie, 1987, 35, 9, 828-831 (GER)

1 A reply to Toni Hahn's criticisms (see SA 35 4/87R7198) of Wolfgang Lutz's article on everyday consciousness (see abstract in this section). Two criticisms in particular are addressed: (1) the distinction between everyday activity & immediate social forming activity (gesellschaftsgestaltender) separates individual & society undialectically, & (2) this distinction is better suited to the analysis of capitalist than of socialist society. It is maintained that understanding the dialectical relationship between individual & society presupposes being able to distinguish between them. The reciprocal interaction of individual self-maintenance & social formation is discussed, along with social problems that could be aided by this approach, i.e. worker motivation & political participation. J. Anderson

88T5590

Patzelt, Werner J. (Lehrstuhl Politikwissenschaft U Passau, D-8390

Federal Republic Germany). Ein alltagsanalytisches Paradigma? (II) Bericht über das ethnomethodologische Schrifttum und den Forschungsstand (A Paradigm for the Analysis of Everyday Life? Review of the Ethnomethodological Literature and the "State of the Art," Part II). Neue Politische Literatur, 1984, 29, 1, 3-49 (GER)

1 An attempt is made to develop a conceptual & theoretical integration of the ethnomethodological approach. Based on a review of the literature, genres of ethnomethodological publications are identified: classical texts, readers, monographs; introductory articles; papers dealing with special aspects of ethnomethodology, e.g. its role in the field of the social sciences, its connections with other sociological or philosophical perspectives, theories, & approaches; discussions of selected ethnomethodological concepts, & critical assessments of the ethnomethodological approach. Modified AA

88T5591

Patzelt, Werner J. (Lehrstuhl Politikwissenschaft U Passau, D-8390 Federal Republic Germany). Ein alltagsanalytisches Paradigma? (II) Bericht über das ethnomethodologische Schrifttum und den Forschungsstand (A Paradigm for the Analysis of Everyday Life? Review of the Ethnomethodological Literature and the State of the Art, Part II). Neue Politische Literatur, 1984, 29, 2, 187-204 (GER)

1 (See abstract of Part I in this section.) A distinction is made between general ethnomethodology dealing with the ethnomethodological perspective & its conceptual framework as a whole- & special ethnomethodologies: empirical studies on different topics of everyday life carried out within the ethnomethodological perspective. Ethnomethodological research in the following areas is described: "doing science," conversational analysis, the everyday routines of organizations, education & socialization, criminological studies, the social organization of justice & psychiatric treatment, & social & political communication. Attempts to introduce the ethnomethodological approach into political science are discussed & an outline of useful tasks for ongoing ethnomethodological research is offered. Modified AA

PUBLIC ENTERPRISE
A Quarterly Journal

INTERNATIONAL CENTER FOR PUBLIC ENTERPRISES IN DEVELOPING COUNTRIES

Vol. 7, Nos. 3-4 (May-August 1987) - Special Thematic Issue on STRATEGIC MARKETING PLANNING IN PUBLIC ENTERPRISES
Guest Editor K. L. K. Rao

Public Enterprises, Market Controls and Barriers to Competitive Behaviour - K. L. K. Rao and R. G. Tagat

Marketing Planning Culture and Strategic Formulation - An Empirical Study - M. Sachse

Market Segmentation and Strategic Decision: A Nigerian Case Study of Public Enterprises - B. A. Fubara

Product Development in Public Enterprises: The Case of Air Tanzania, A Public Enterprise in the Air Transportation Industry - M. S. S. El-Namaki

Pricing Planning and Strategy in Public Enterprises - Y. K. Alagh

The Marketing Strategy of Public Enterprises in Industrial Products: The Case of Venezuela - J. Kelly De Escobar

Food Marketing Strategies in Public Enterprises in Developing Countries: The Case of Milk Marketing in Zimbabwe - K. C. Katsande

Marketing Organization, Marketing Planning and Decision Making in a Public Enterprise: Case Study of ENCI - J. Quijandria Salmon

Promotional Options and Strategy Formulation: Case Studies of Advertising Strategy in Indian Public Enterprises - R. G. Tagat
Selected Bibliography

Subscription rates for USA: one year US $ 45, two years US $ 80, institutional subscription US $ 200 per year.

All ICPE publications can be ordered directly from ICPE, Titova 104, 61108 Ljubljana, Yugoslavia or from KUMARIAN PRESS INC., 630, Oakwood Ave., Suite 119, West Hartford, CT 06110-1505, tel. (203) 524-0214

88T5614

Lattas, Andrew (Dept Anthropology U Adelaide, South Australia 5001), Savagery and Civilisation: Towards a Genealogy of Racism, ♦ Social Analysis, 1987, 21, Aug, 39-58

‡ An exploration of the cultural constructions of aboriginality in the dominant class discourses in the penal colony of New South Wales (Australia) between 1788 & 1830. Theoretically based on Michel Foucault's work, the framework for a historical analysis of white-black relations in Australian society is presented in the form of a genealogy of racism. The symbolically constructed otherness of Aborigines was discursively manufactured as part of a dominant class strategy for incorporating the Les into bourgeois notions of rationalism, morality, & discipline. As an inversion of the hierarchical structures of white society, Aborigines represented a discredited form of democratic republicanism where humanity was governed more by the primitive, sensuous differentiations of the body than by the more subtle rational & abstract discriminations of the mind & legal system, & which represented the dangers of democratic similitude. Aborigines were often seen as not susceptible to the spiritual individualizing structures of philanthropy, education, & the legal system; rather, an explicit discussion emerged on the need for genocide, which had its ideological roots in the scientific rationalism of modern society that was also sponsoring the development of democratic movements. 19 References. Modified AA

88T5615

Leiman, Melvin, The Political Economy of Racism: Radical Perspectives and New Directions, ♦ The Insurgent Sociologist, 1987, 14, 3, fall, 73-110

‡ The conditions that an adequate Marxist analysis of racism must meet are outlined. Several important contributions to the radical critique are identified & assessed, & an attempt is made to formulate an alternative theory of racism based on competitive & monopolistic sectors of the economy, skilled & unskilled labor requirements, & secular & cyclical developments in the capitalist economic system. The history of racism & the economy in the US since the 1940s is recounted. It is argued that periods of expansion have favored reductions in racism, in the present period, however, the political consciousness of the white Wc is the crucial determinant of whether economic stagnation will lead to renewed racism or the end of capitalism. 40 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T5616

Leslau, Avraham, Krausz, Ernest & Nussbaum, Sara (Bar-Ilan U, Ramat-Gan 52100 Israel), Feelings of Discrimination among Iraqis and North-Africans in Israel, Plural Societies, 1987, 17, 1, May, 34-44

‡ Members of the Oriental Jewish population in Israel occupy disadvantaged positions in comparison with members of the Western Jewish population. Interview data from 147 Iraqi & 122 North African M household heads aged 25-55 are used to examine factors associated with feelings & personal experience of discrimination. Significant effects are found for educational level, but not for dwelling unit characteristics, subjective intergenerational mobility, or origin group. 4 Tables. W. H. Stoddard

88T5617

Li, Wen Lang, Two Generations of Chinese Americans: Differentials in Education and Status Attainment Process, Plural Societies, 1987, 17, 1, May, 95-107

‡ An analysis of 1980 US Census data on Chinese Americans to assess their SE advancement & to examine & contrast the SE differentials between native-born & foreign-born Chinese Americans. Results indicate that the average earnings of the native-born were not much higher than those of the foreign-born. The relative disadvantage of the native-born was especially pronounced among the highly educated. The relationship of career choice patterns to income is discussed, focusing on the economic impact of public sector employment. 9 Tables, 20 References. Modified HA

88T5618

Liebersohn, Stanley & Waters, Mary C. (U California, Berkeley 94720), The Location of Ethnic and Racial Groups in the United States, Sociological Forum, 1987, 2, 4, fall, 780-810.

‡ The distinctive regional & Ur locational patterns of 33 ethnic groups in the US are analyzed from two perspectives using 1980 US Census data. First, who are the numerically important groups in each region? Second, from the perspective of the groups themselves, where are they spatially concentrated? It is hypothesized that the forces generating distinctive ethnic locational patterns are strongest at the time of the initial settlement; thus the longer a group has been present in the US, the less geographically concentrated it will be. This is found to be true for most ethnic groups except blacks & American Indians, whose specific social & political situations explain their particular concentrations have diminished over time. Moreover, although the 1975-1980 patterns of internal migration (analyzed through a Markov chain model) are tending to reduce some of the distinctive geographic concentrations in the nation, this will still not fully eliminate distinctive ethnic concentrations. Groups differ in their propensities to leave or enter each area in a way that reflects the existing ethnic compositions of the areas. Thus even with the massive level of internal migration in the nation, there is no evidence that the substantial ethnic linkage to region is disappearing. 7 Tables, 22 References. Modified HA

88T5619

Lujan, Carol Keams Chingo (U New Mexico, Albuquerque 87131), American Indians and Imposed Law: The Impact of Social Integration on Legal Perceptions among Two Southwestern Tribes, ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1324-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8713296.

88T5620

Ma, Rong (Brown U, Providence RI 02912), Migrant and Ethnic Integration in Rural Chifeng, Inner Mongolia Autonomous Region, China, ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1546-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8715531.

88T5621

Maler, Elvira (Teachers Coll Columbia U, New York NY 10027), The Adjustment of Three Generations of Soviet Immigrants from Riga, Latvia, to Life in the United States, ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1895-A-1896-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8721149.

88T5622

Mejer, Jan (U Hawaii, Hilo 96720), Marxist and Neo-Marxist Interpretations of Ethnicity, U Sociological Focus, 1987, 20, 4, Oct, 251-264

‡ A revised version of SA 33 1/85S16800/NCSA/1985/1149.

88T5623

Mitchison, Amanda, Scots Myths, U New Society, 1987, 82, 1301, 4 Dec, 18-20

‡ A discussion of the highland Scots, the Gaels, of Glasgow & how they exemplify Scotland's carefully nurtured view of its own history. Linguistic & cultural differences between highland & lowland Scots & the maintenance of highland traditions in Glasgow are described. The popular perception of Scotland's past is a tribute to the imagination & proselytising powers of eighteenth- & nineteenth-century romanticism, which, by implication, made every true Scotsman a highlander at heart & has overcome a history of sensible pragmatism. 2 Photographs. F. Rasmussen

88T5624

Mucha, Janusz, Ethnicity or Class. Economic Interpretations of Ethnic Relations in American Society, ♦ Europa Ethnica, 1987, 44, 1, 9-16

‡ A review of three books employing economic interpretation of ethnic relations. William Julius Wilson, The Declining Significance of Race: Blacks and Changing American Institutions (Chicago: U of Chicago Press, 1980 [1978]); Stanley Lieberson, A Piece of the Pie: Blacks and the White Immigrants since 1880 (Berkeley: U of California Press, 1980); & Stephen Steinberg, The Ethnic Myth. Race, Ethnicity, and Class in America (Boston: Beacon Press, 1981). All three books are shown to emphasize the importance of economic class over race in understanding current conflicts. The thesis that ethnic divisions will diminish with declining economic inequalities is criticized for (1) ignoring the fact that inequalities are actually increasing, & (2) ignoring evidence of upwardly mobile ethnic groups striving to maintain their identities. J. Anderson

88T5602

Falcón-Rodríguez, Luis Miguel (Cornell U, Ithaca NY 14853). Puerto Ricans on the Mainland: An Analysis of Labor Market Standing, 1970-1980. * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1323-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8715601.

88T5603

Georgenski, Julie D. (US International U, San Diego CA 92131). Nature of and Differences in Adjustment to and Valuing of the American Culture among Refugees from Eastern Europe, the Middle East, and African Countries. * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1547-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8720628.

88T5604

Giambelli, Rodolfo. Scontri razziali in Gran Bretagna (Race Riots in Great Britain). ♦ La Critica Sociologica, 1987, 81, Apr-June, 56-70 (ITA).

† The problem of racial discrimination & the relations among ethnic groups of differing cultural & religious backgrounds in GB are examined, drawing on numerous studies. The mechanisms whereby different groups are inserting themselves into the structure of GB society or which are leading to increased confrontation are investigated. Particular attention is given to the recent UK riots involving the colored population. A detailed analysis of the three major groups that compose this population is presented: those whose ethnic origins are in India, Pakistan, & the West Indies. The ways in which this population is disadvantaged as regards housing, education, & employment are discussed. 17 References. Modified HA.

88T5605

Goddijn, Hans. Horkheimer over het antisemitisme (Horkheimer on Anti-Semitism). ♦ Tijdschrift voor Sociale Wetenschappen, 1988, 33, 1, Jan-Mar, 1-28 (DUT).

† Drawing on an earlier study of the Frankfurt school & the way that the Jewish problem was introduced into it (see SA 35 5/87R9287), an analysis is presented of the five publications that Max Horkheimer devoted to anti-Semitism. Their divergent characteristics reveal Horkheimer's varied & many-sided approach to the Jewish problem & anti-Semitism. 12 References. Modified HA.

88T5606

Griffiths, Curt Taylor, Verbury, J. Colin & Wenfer, Linda F. (School Criminology Simon Fraser U, Burnaby British Columbia V5A 1S6). Canadian Natives: Victims of Socio-Structural Deprivation?. ♦ Human Organization, 1987, 46, 3, Fall, 277-282.

† National statistics are used to examine native victimization in Canada, with focus on sociostructural conditions & the consequences of the neo-colonial or minority position that natives occupy in Canadian society. It is argued that the field of victimology must move beyond the traditional focus on victim-offender relationships & include as a victim anyone who experiences physical or mental suffering or death as a result of cruel intention, self-infliction, accident, or sociopolitical subordination. The development & implementation of policies & programs to assist natives can only be accomplished with a clear understanding of the historical & contemporary status of native peoples & the consequences of this status for how native peoples live & die. 28 References. AA.

88T5607

Hödl, Gunther (U Klagenfurt, A-9020 Austria). Über den Reichtum kultureller Vielfalt—der Beitrag der kleinen Völker (On the Wealth of Cultural Plurality: The Contribution of Small Peoples). ♦ Europa Ethnica, 1987, 44, 1, 1-8 (GER).

† The importance of relatively small ethnic groups in enriching the culture of dominant groups, & the necessity of preserving the small cultures themselves, are addressed with specific reference to the past thousand years of ethnic development in the Alpine-Adriatic area of Central Europe. The fates of several small cultures during the mass migrations of the early Middle Ages & throughout colonization by Venice, Hungary, & Austria are recounted, & explanations are suggested for the recent political weakness of Central European countries. The Slovenes, stateless for 1,500 years & today distributed among four countries, are cited as an outstanding example of the ability of small groups to retain their national & cultural identities. The importance of recognizing the Slovene contribution to Austria & preserving the language & culture is emphasized.

sized 4 References. AA Tr & Modified by J. Anderson

88T5608

Hudgins, John Lee (Duke U, Durham NC 27706). Changes in Solidarity and Stratification among Black Americans. * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1323-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8718419.

88T5609

Keir, Scott S. (U Texas, Austin 78712). Middle Class Black Families in Austin, Texas: An Exploratory Analysis of Husbands and Wives. * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1327-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8717452.

88T5610

Klecolt, K. Jill & Sayles, Marnie (Dept Sociology Louisiana State U, Baton Rouge 70803). Television and the Cultivation of Attitudes toward Subordinate Groups. Sociological Spectrum, 1988, 8, 1, 19-33.

† An analysis of the relationship between frequency of viewing TV news & crime dramas, & adherence to an ideology of individualism, using questionnaire data from a representative sample of US adults (N = 1,909). Attitudes toward women, blacks, & the poor were examined among members of these groups & among white Ms. Among women & blacks, exposure to TV news increases group consciousness, while viewing crime dramas decreases personal efficacy. Among white Ms, an association is found between exposure to crime drama & endorsement of individual rather than structural causes of inequality. TV news, by contrast, fosters a belief that women's unequal status is due to structural sources. 2 Tables, 39 References. Modified HA.

88T5611

Klitroeff, Alexandros (Queens Coll, Flushing NY 11367). Greek Wartime Attitudes towards the Jews in Athens. ♦ Forum on the Jewish People, Zionism and Israel, 1987, 60, summer, 41-51.

† Attitudes of Greek gentiles toward their Jewish compatriots during WWII are examined using various historical sources, with focus on the political & social variables influential in shaping them. It is argued that two primary factors were the degree of assimilation of the Jewish community & the level of the national resistance movement in different areas. A case study of Athens shows that anti-Semitism was rare, rather, the antifascist resistance movement readily incorporated Jews into its ranks, & community members participated in sheltering their Jewish neighbors from the Nazis. K. Hyatt.

88T5612

Koehnmann, Nancy Lee Harris (Cornell U, Ithaca NY 14853). The Resettlement Process of Southeast Asian Refugee Adolescents: Making It American. * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1895-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8724190.

88T5613

Lambert, Wallace E. (Psychology Dept McGill U, Montreal Quebec H3A 1B1). The Fate of Old-Country Values in a New Land: A Cross-National Study of Child Rearing. Canadian Psychology/Psychologie Canadienne, 1987, 28, 1, Jan, 9-20.

† A program of research is described in which the values of young parents from 4 recent immigrant groups to North America (Italian Canadians, Greek Canadians, Japanese Canadians, & Portuguese Americans) were compared with the values of comparable SC groups of parents residing in each of the old countries, & with comparable groups of established Canadian or US parents. The value domain focused on was child rearing. All Ss (40 couples from each group) were parents of a 6-year-old child. The results of analysis of data from home interviews & observation provide support for the general methodology used to determine when values change & when they do not change. The findings also elucidate the process of value adjustment for a variety of immigrant groups, & illustrate how & how much each group accommodates its pattern of values to North American norms, & how each group also maintains particular old-country values. It is argued that behavioral research of this type is needed to reduce concerns about ethnic diversity on the part of residents of the host country, & to ease the adjustment of newcomers. 1 Table, 2 Figures, 11 References. Modified HA.

88T5637

Waters, Mary Catherine (U. California, Berkeley 94720). The Process and Content of Ethnic Identification: A Study of White Ethnicity in Suburbia. * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1325-A
Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8718202.

88T5638

Williams, David Paul, III (Arizona State U, Tempe 85287). The Contribution of Selectively Focused Print Coverage to the Negative Stereotyping of a Challenging Group. * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1896-A
Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8722039.

88T5639

Zaphiropoulos, Miltiades L. (28 Yale Rd, Hartsdale NY 10530). Ethnocentricity in Psychoanalysis: Blind Spots and Blind Alleys. Contemporary Psychoanalysis, 1987, 23, 3, July, 446-462
1 An exploration of the degree to which US psychoanalytic theory, training, & practice are ethnocentric. The issue of adherence or allegiance to one's own cultural background is discussed in terms of the difficulties it presents for the accurate assessment & diagnosis of patients from different backgrounds. Psychoanalysis itself is shown to be ethnocentric in its extensive use of culturally specific myths, reliance on linguistic skills, & assumptions about the role of patient & therapist & the therapeutic situation. Some suggestions are offered to help psychoanalysts avoid ethnocentric blind spots that could lead them to pursue therapeutic blind alleys. An appreciation of cultural differences, as well as commonalities in the general experience of acculturation, is necessary. 23 References. K Hyatt

acta sociologica

JOURNAL OF THE SCANDINAVIAN SOCIOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION

Acta Sociologica is published by Norwegian University Press (Universitetsforlaget) and the Scandinavian Sociological Association. The purpose of the journal is to present research results of international standard within the fields of sociology and societal research. Articles are normally written by Scandinavian sociologists, but contributions from sociologists outside Scandinavia are also welcome.

Contents No. 1, 1988: The articles differ in scope and theoretical starting point and represent a variety of issues within the field of sociology.

Writers

Jurgen Habermas

Gunnar Olofsson

Aino Saarnen

Leena Alanen

Articles

Historical Consciousness and Post-Traditional Identity: Remarks on the Federal Republic's Orientation to the West

After the Working-class Movement? An Essay on What's 'New' and What's 'Social' in the New Social Movements

Feminist Research: In Search of a New Paradigm?

Rethinking Childhood

• • • Research Notes • Book Reviews • • •

Publisher: Norwegian University Press (Universitetsforlaget)
PO Box 2959 Tøyen, 0608 Oslo 6, Norway. Tel. No. (472) 67 76 00

Mail to: Norwegian University Press (Universitetsforlaget),
PO Box 2959 Tøyen, 0608 Oslo 6, Norway

☐ I wish to become a subscriber from No. 1 - 1988

Subscription price 1988 USD 59.00, postage included.

acta sociologica

JOURNAL OF THE SCANDINAVIAN SOCIOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION

Name:

Address:

☐ cheque enclosed ☐ please send invoice
Issues will be sent to you as soon as payment is received.

Norwegian University Press

Subscriptions Dept., P.O. Box 2959 Tøyen, N-0608 Oslo 6, Norway

88T5625

Neill, Donald Montgomery (Harvard U, Cambridge MA 02138), The Struggles of the Boston Black Community for Equality and Quality in Public Education: 1959-1987, * Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1896-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8722693.

88T5626

Nielsen, Jørgen S. (Selly Oak Colls, Birmingham B29 6LQ England), Islamic Law and Its Significance for the Situation of Muslim Minorities in Europe: Report of a Study Project, ♦ Research Papers: Centre for the Study of Islam and Christian-Muslim Relations, 1987, 35, Sept, 1-58.

¶ An examination of the situation of Muslim groups in Europe, with focus on conflicts in family law between the social & cultural vs legal spheres. Other areas of actual or potential confrontation, eg, burial, mosque building, & education, are also examined. The nature of Islamic law is summarized, & it is concluded that the Muslim presence in Europe today constitutes a major challenge to European concepts of national & cultural identity. Recommendations are suggested to governments & Muslim & Christian organizations for mitigating intercultural conflict. 1 Bibliography, 4 Appendixes. Modified AA

88T5627

Rappoport, Leon (Dept Psychology Kansas State U, Manhattan 66506), Three Themes on the Reduction of the Beirut Ghetto, 1982, Transformations, 1987, 2, 2-3, 52-54.

¶ Examined are (1) the striking parallels between the Israeli attacks on Beirut, Lebanon, in 1982 & the Nazi attacks on the Warsaw (Poland) ghetto in 1944, (2) the close fit between the Israeli actions & depth psychology theories predicting the reproduction of traumatic experience, & (3) the inadequacy of the epistemologies by which national leaders calculate the interests they claim to serve. Discussion emphasizes the internal contradiction of the Israeli policy: by attempting to improve military security in this fashion, they have enhanced the international status of their enemies & thus reduced security. AA

88T5628

Renz, Byron B. (U Northern Iowa, Cedar Falls 50614), Portuguese-Language Broadcasting in Linguistic and Cultural Maintenance in Northern California, ♦ International Journal of the Sociology of Language, 1987, 68, 21-40.

¶ In an effort to assess the role of radio broadcasting in linguistic & cultural maintenance, the case of the Portuguese-speaking community of northern Calif is investigated. The area in question, which contains the second largest concentration of Portuguese speakers in the US, was chosen because conscious efforts were being made there to use broadcasting as a tool of language maintenance. Information was gathered by means of in depth personal interviews with both broadcasters & nonbroadcast community leaders (N = 14 each group). Results reveal that, (1) there was firm agreement that the broadcasts served as a reinforcement mechanism for linguistic & cultural values, (2) both groups ranked highly the potential & the performance of broadcasting as an institution in language & culture maintenance, (3) all Rs strongly desired that the Portuguese language in broadcasts be kept free from English interference, & (4) Rs were somewhat divided over the question of whether a relatively formal or a less educated form of the language should be used on the air. Overall, the study provides support for the contention that the electronic media constitute a major factor in the preservation of bilingualism. 7 Tables, 11 References. P. Farrell

88T5629

Romero, Mary, El Paso Salt War: Mob Action or Political Struggle?, WM Aztlan, 1985, 16, 1-2, 119-143.

¶ An examination of the little-known Salt War that occurred in El Paso, Tex, in 1878, between the native Spanish-speaking populations & the Anglo-Americans wishing to take over the area & its resources. A comparative analysis is offered of both the minority & majority reports of the incident presented during the Congressional investigation into the causes of the disturbance. Analysis reveals the hitherto unacknowledged perspective of the Mexican community on the war, & reveals the ethnocentric bias in the two major accounts of the episode published by Anglo historians. Support is obtained for the contention made by contemporary Chicano writers that the Salt War was a people's revolt rather than an example of mob action: the Mexicans were driven to violence in an effort to retain usage of natural resources on community land in the face of Anglo efforts to exploit them. The war is thus situated within a structural economic context rather than one of cultural misunderstanding. K. Hyatt

88T5630

Russell, James W. (Dept Sociology Eastern Connecticut State U, Willimantic 06226), Class and Nationality Relations in a Texas Border City: The Case of El Paso, WM Aztlan, 1985, 16, 1-2, 217-239.

¶ A revised version of SA 32 5/84S16582/ASA/1984/3773

88T5631

Santamaría, Ulysses (9 rue des Anglais, F-75005 Paris France), Black Jews: The Religious Challenge or Politics versus Religion, Archives Européennes de Sociologie, 1987, 28, 2, 217-240.

¶ Sociological & historical analyses are offered of the origins of black Hebrews in the US. Focus is on their distinctive racial & cultural history that sets them apart from the larger black & Jewish communities, however, within this apparently homogeneous community, there are marked differences in religious ideology, beliefs, & practices, ranging from Orthodox Judaism to Christianity. The sociohistorical processes that led to the creation of the black Jewish community are explored from the late nineteenth century, along with the sources for & validity of the discourse of legitimization that allowed its members to recognize themselves as a unique group. It is argued that there is a significant relationship between US black consciousness of their blackness & their lack of a historical past & the emergence of black Muslims & Hebrews: the religious phenomenon grew from social & cultural needs to establish an identity, & were largely fueled by the political, racial, & social climate of the post-WWI period into the 1960s. Parallels are also drawn to early Jewish communities within American ethnic groups that may have established the grounds for the emergence of Judaism among early black slaves in the US. 41 References. 1 Hyatt

88T5632

Schafer-Taylor, Mary (Temple U, Philadelphia PA 19122), Factors Influencing Educational Outcomes for Indochinese Students in 11 Public Elementary Schools of Philadelphia, * Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, Dec, 1547-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8716463.

88T5633

Segura, Denise Anne (U California, Berkeley 94720), Chicanas as Mexican Immigrant Women in the Labor Market: A Study of Occupational Mobility and Stratification, * Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, No 1324-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8718154.

88T5634

Tuck, Steven A. (Dept Sociology George Washington U, Washington DC 20052), Economic Segmentation and Racial Attitudes, WM The Sociological Quarterly, 1987, 28, 4, Dec, 513-522.

¶ Potential contributions of the economic segmentation framework to stratification research to the explanation of racial attitudes & beliefs are explored. The impact of sectoral location on whites' views about the institutional production of racial inequality is examined using data from telephone interviews with a national sample of 372 white adults. The findings indicate that, unlike the effects of traditional stratification variable position in the segmented economy exerts no unique influence on racial orientation. 2 Tables, 1 Appendix, 30 References. Modified HA

88T5635

Turpen, Twila Faye (U New Mexico, Albuquerque 87131), Cohesion, Inequality, and Interethnic Conflict in Territorial New Mexico, Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1324-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8718488.

88T5636

Voik, Robert William (U Illinois, Urbana 61801), An Historic Analysis of the Functions and Reproduction of the Navajo Reservation, * Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1905-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8721776.

0500 culture and social structure

08 social organizations

88T5640

O'Neill, Dennis H. (Palomar Coll, San Marcos CA 92069). Computerized Systems for Recording Kinship Data: A Review Essay, Social Science Microcomputer Review, 1987, 5, 2, summer, 233-239

¶ To be useful in anthropological kinship studies, microcomputer database systems must not only keep kinship records, but be able to graphically display the relationship between many relatives on the same screen/printed page in a family tree pattern, quickly updating it as new information is obtained on affinal & consanguinal ties within the extended family system. They also must permit the recording of all types of marriage patterns across different societies & of both biological & socially recognized lines of descent. Five inexpensive software packages currently available as genealogical databases for the IBM PC are evaluated: Genealogy on Display, Family History, FT-ETC, Family Ties, & Personal Ancestral File. Major drawbacks & benefits of each are discussed, with particular reference to their appropriateness for anthropological research. 1 Table. K Hyatt

88T5641

Pfeffer, Georg (Freie U Berlin, D-1000 33 Federal Republic Germany). The Vocabulary of Anglo-Saxon Kinship, L'Homme, 1987, 27, 3(103), July-Sept, 113-128

¶ Kinship terms in the Germanic language of the Anglo-Saxons can be reconstructed for the M side only, since the terms for Fx have been neglected by historical linguistics. However, even with this partial knowledge, Floyd G. Lounsbury's thesis regarding Germanic systems of kin classification ("A Formal Analysis of Crow- and Omaha-Type Kinship Terminologies" in Goodenough, W. (Ed), Explorations in Cultural Anthropology: Essays in Honor of George Peter Murdock, New York: McGraw-Hill, 1964) can be rejected. The details of the Anglo-Saxon nomenclature reveal deviations from Lounsbury's "Omaha Type III". When the idea of diachronic affinity is given due recognition, however, the Anglo-Saxon nomenclature may be viewed as a system of alternating symmetric exchange. As such, a prescription would imply direct contradictions to the canonical rules disqualifying "prohibited degrees" of relatives, the pre-Christian terminological order can be reconstructed only by a close comparison of Old English & Old German kinship terms. 4 Figures, 33 References. Modified HA

88T5642

Ryali, Rajagopal (Auburn U, Montgomery 36117). Componential Analysis and Kinship Terms, ♦ Quarterly Journal of Ideology, 1987, 11, 1, Jan, 61-69

¶ Anthropologists have been employing a very useful & effective procedure in analyzing semantic components of sets of lexical items known as "ethnoscience". In using componential analysis, it is assumed that a contrast of every item with every other item within a taxonomical group would delineate the most significant semantic components of a given lexical item. Also, ethnoscience enables one to probe into the "insider's" view of a culture. Here, Telugu (South Indian) kinship terms are analyzed with the aid of three different sets of questionnaires (N not provided) administered as part of fieldwork done in India. A summary of the denotative meanings of Telugu kin terms is provided, & the importance of connotative meanings considered. AA

13 culture

88T5643

Assayag, Jackie (Centre études Inde & Asie Sud, Paris France). Le Cadavre divin. Célébration de la mort chez les Lingāyat-Vīraśaiva (Inde du Sud) (The Divine Corpse. The Celebration of Death among the Lingāyat-Vīraśaiva (Southern India)), L'Homme, 1987, 27, 3(103), July-Sept, 93-112 (FRE)

¶ A description of the celebration of death among the Lingāyat-Vīraśaiva of Karnataka, southern India, based on 1980-1983 field research, supplemented by census data & information from various studies. It is shown how this sect-like organization, made up of several hierarchized castes, borrows burial practices from the abnegation model of the Brahman caste, with which it is in conflict. The funeral rites enact the totality of the sect's ideological conceptions & treat the deceased so as to identify him with a divinity, a symbolic transposition that expresses the Lingāyat ideal of devotion. 46 References. Modified HA

88T5644

The Chinese Culture Connection (Chinese U Hong Kong, Shatin New Territories), Chinese Values and the Search for Culture-Free Dimensions of Culture, An Journal of Cross-Cultural Psychology, 1987, 18, 2, June, 143-164

¶ A survey instrument of Chinese values was constructed & administered to U students (N not specified) in 22 countries around the world. An ecological factor analysis of results reveals 4 dimensions of cultural valuing; scores on 3 of these factors were found to correlate with 3 of the 4 derived in a Western survey of work-related values conducted by G. Hofstede (Culture's Consequences: International Differences in Work-Related Values, Newbury Park, Calif: Sage, 1980). Findings strongly suggest the robust value dimensions of collectivism & compassion. While the dimension Confucian work dynamism, identified in the Chinese survey, was unrelated to any of Hofstede's, this factor did correlate with economic growth from 1965 to 1984. This evidence confirms the validity of instruments developed outside a Western cultural tradition for use in behavioral science research. 4 Tables, 2 Figures, 36 References. Modified HA

88T5645

Codaccioni-Meistersheim, Anne, La Corse, l'en-vie, la mort. De communauté à la modernité: un frein au développement de l'imaginaire insulaire? (Corsica, Envy, Life and Death. From Community to Modernity. An Impediment to Development in the Island Imagination?), ♦ Peuples Méditerranéens/Mediterranean People, 1987, 38-39, Jan-June, 105-121 (FRE)

¶ Some reflections prompted by a qualitative study of tourism in Balagne, northwestern Corsica (20 semidirected interviews, no further details given) are presented, taking as their starting point the Corsican proverb "What kills Corsica is envy!" It is suggested that envy is repressed in poor, Ru societies such as the traditional one in Corsica; but it reappears in a society undergoing modernization, especially when it is affected by tourism. Corsican society is hampered by a system of clientelism & assistance; the envy that is now being released there favors consumption rather than production, & thus cannot aid development. Modified HA

88T5646

Cruz, Jon David (U California, Berkeley 94720). The Politics of Popular Culture: Black Popular Music as "Public Sphere", Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1322-A-1323-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8717951.

88T5647

Dow, James (Dept Sociology & Anthropology Oakland U, Rochester MI 48063). On the Evolution of the Capacity for Culture, Current Anthropology, 1987, 28, 4, Aug-Oct, 549-551

¶ David Rindos (see SA 36:2/88T3639) raises important question about the relation between biological & cultural evolution, but answers them in excessively complex ways. The problem is not to explain how genes can benefit by giving up direct control of behavior, but to explain why human symbolic communication has gone as far as it has, even generating a capacity for lying. This process needs to be understood in the context of the special human social system that made communicative

JOURNAL OF ASIAN CULTURE

Devoted to articles written by graduate students in various fields in Asian Studies.

Published every fall by Graduate Students in Asian Studies at UCLA.

Subjects of past articles include:

Modern Chinese Film; Court Ritual Music of Korea; The Poets of the Shinkokinshu; Japanese Linguistics; Chinese Myths; Japanese War Propaganda Films; Religious Practices in Sri Lanka.

Subscription rates: $5 per year for Students; $7 per year for Non-students and $10 per year for Institutions. Make checks payable to Journal of Asian Culture and mail to East Asian Languages and Cultures Department, 290 Royce Hall, UCLA, Los Angeles, CA., 90024.

Please send all editorial inquiries and manuscript submissions to the above address.

88T5657

Thiers, Jacques (UACNRS 91164 U Corsc, F-20250 France). Idéologie diglossique et production de sens (Diglossic Ideology and the Production of Meaning). ♦ Peuples Méditerranéens/Mediterranean Peoples, 1987, 38-39, Jan-June, 139-152. (FRE)

¶ A discussion of the concept of diglossia & its relevance for cultural identity in Corsican society. It is suggested that a "diglossic ideology" determines consciousness of the future; it is a logical binary system that admits of only one alternative; i.e., identity is understood only in terms of its conservation or extinction. Thus there can be no real project found on the semantics of acculturation. Vicious circles & exaggeration of meaning prevail in political debates about identity & language; to avoid this, a pragmatic approach is proposed, which assumes the reality of language practices, cultural productions, & the solidarity rooted in everyday life. 1 Appendix. Modified HA

14 social anthropology

88T5658

Aberle, David F. (Dept Anthropology & Sociology U British Columbia, Vancouver V6T 2B2). Distinguished Lecture: What Kind of Science Is Anthropology?, American Anthropologist, 1987, 89, 3, Sept., 551-566

¶ A consideration of anthropology as historical science, i.e., science that deals with irreversible phenomena. Anthropology is historical in dealing with changes over time in entities & groups of entities with traceable continuity, & scientific in using systematic methods for choosing among competing hypotheses about the nature & order of the changes & about the explanations of those changes. Defining "ethnology" as the division of anthropology that deals with the cultures of peoples alive when described, it is argued that although many ethnologists reject historical reconstruction, it is vital for the theoretical development of historical science. Examples of such reconstruction in ethnology can be found in the works of Alfred L. Kroeber, Harold E. Driver, & Joseph Jorgensen. Given the probabilistic & nondeterministic character of the historical sciences, however, the past is not fully recoverable, nor, indeed, is the future predictable. It is suggested that anthropologists consider how movement from sovereign states to world society might be achieved. 1 Figure, 74 References. Modified AA

88T5659

Bartels, Edien. Clitoridectomie bij de Masai: een voorstel tot andere interpretatie (Clitoridectomy among the Masai: A Proposal for a Different Interpretation). ♦ Sociologische Gids, 1988, 35, 1, Jan-Feb., 68-72. (DUT)

¶ In a discussion of "Clitoridectomie bij de Masai: een poging tot interpretatie" ([Clitoridectomy among the Masai: An Interpretation], see SA 36:1/88T1564), it is argued that Irene Ubbink's stand against the Western feminist movement is unclear. Her analysis of the practice of clitoridectomy among the Masai is contested, & her misinterpretation of certain conceptions & local standards are elaborated on. 9 References. M. Barker

88T5660

Ben-Ari, Eyal (Dept Sociology & Social Anthropology Hebrew U Jerusalem, Mount Scopus Israel 91905). Pygmies and Villagers, Ritual or Play? On the Place of Contrasting Modes of Metacommunication in Social Systems, Symbolic Interaction, 1987, 10, 2, fall, 167-185

¶ An examination of how social activities & relations are maintained despite actors holding to divergent definitions of these activities & relations. Focus is on an ethnographic account of two groups that participate in joint activities but interpret them differently: the Mbuti Pygmies of the Belgian Congo & their neighboring Bantu villagers (Turnbull, Colin M., The Forest People, New York: Doubleday, 1961). It is argued that the maintenance of continued interactions between such groups is facilitated by the grounding of the divergent interpretations of these interactions in contrasting modes of metacommunication: ritual & play. Some theoretical & comparative issues raised by the analysis are explored. 54 References. HA

88T5661

Friedman, Jonathan (Inst Ethnology & Anthropology U Copenhagen, DK-1168 K Denmark). Crick's Cracks. ♦ Social Analysis, 1987, 21, Aug., 80-83. Reply, 84-91

¶ A critical response is offered to Malcolm Crick's "Tracing the Anthropological Self: Quizzical Reflections on Field Work, Tourism and the Ludic" (see SA 34:5/86Q9607). Crick confuses poststructuralism with the version of structuralism developed by Oxford anthropologists such as E. W. Ardener. More generally, Crick accepts the dissolution of theory & offers no theoretical agenda or insights, only a series of casual generalizations that do not grasp the reality of the world where anthropology practiced. In The Chosen and the Damned, Or the Importance of Ben Jonathan, Malcolm Crick (School of Social Sciences, Deakin U, Victoria, Australia) points out Friedman's tendency to write of other anthropologists in a hostile & abusive tone. The need for an anthropology of anthropology is agreed to, but the need to base this on a single theoretic paradigm is not. Friedman would benefit from greater openness to subjectivity & uncertainty; such self-awareness would make Friedman a better polemicist. W. H. Stoddard

88T5662

Kirch, Patrick V. & Green, Roger C. (Dept Anthropology U Washington, Seattle 98195). History, Phylogeny, and Evolution in Polynesia, Current Anthropology, 1987, 28, 4, Aug-Oct., 431-443. Comments, 443-450. Reply, 450-456.

¶ In the study of evolution, biological or cultural, a critical element is methodology for distinguishing homologous from analogous characters. The historical knowledge this requires must be sought in the phylogeny of the modern groups under study & their common ancestors. Polynesian societies are a well-defined case of cultural divergence for which specific shared ancestor traits can be distinguished from convergent developments due to common selective pressures through the application of methods for determining cultural groups' phylogenetic relationships (Romney, A. K., "The Genetic Model and Uto-Aztecan Time Perspective," Davidson Journal of Anthropology, 1957, 3, 35-41; & Vogt, E. J., "The Genetic Model and Maya Cultural Development" in Vogt, E. J. & Ruz, L. A. [Eds], Desarrollo Cultural de los Mayas [Cultural Development of the Mayas], Mexico, DF: U Nacional Autónoma de México, 1964, 9-48) to recent archeological & historical linguistic work. A series of hypotheses regarding major factors underlying divergence & convergence in Polynesia is proposed for empirical testing. Comments are offered by Peter S. Bellwood (Australian National U, Canberra), R. J. D. Dunnell (Dept of Anthropology, U of Washington, Seattle), Tom D. (Dept of Anthropology, Yale U, New Haven, Conn.), Chris Gosden (Dept of Archaeology, La Trobe U, Bundoora, Victoria, Australia), Chandler W. Rowe (Bernice P. Bishop Museum, Honolulu, Hawaii), John Terrell (Field Museum of Natural History, Chicago, Ill.), Evon Vogt (Dept of Anthropology, Harvard U, Cambridge, Mass.), R. L. W. Sch (Field Museum of Natural History, Chicago, Ill.), & Ralph Gardn White (PK 13,500 Punaauia, Tahiti, French Polynesia), with a Reply by Kirch & Green. 4 Figures, 142 References. Modified HA

88T5663

Knauff, Bruce M. (Emory U, Atlanta GA 30322). Reconsidering Violence in Simple Human Societies: Homicide among the Gebusi of New Guinea, Current Anthropology, 1987, 28, 4, Aug-Oct., 457-482. Comments, 482-488. Reply, 489-500

¶ Homicide rates among the Gebusi of lowland Papua New Guinea are among the highest yet recorded. Records of 129 deaths from homicide between 1940 and 1982 (out of 394 total deaths recorded in a genealogical survey) are used to test three common theories of human violence: sociobiological theory, fraternal interest-group theory, & learning socialization theory. All three theories' predictions are strongly disconfirmed. The seemingly exceptional nature of Gebusi homicide is in certain respects surprisingly similar to the dynamics of violence in highly decentralized & egalitarian societies. On the basis of a review of evidence from several such societies, a theory of violence in egalitarian human societies is proposed, based on recognition of a pattern of dissociated, compartmentalized violence. Comments are offered by Martin Daly & Mary Wilson (Dept of Psychology, McMaster U, Hamilton, Ontario), Lela Donald (Dept of Anthropology, U of Victoria, British Columbia), George E. B. Morren, Jr. (Dept of Human Ecology, Cook Coll, Rutge U, New Brunswick, NJ), Keith F. Otterbein (Dept of Anthropology adaptive, in which communication originally took place largely among kin. The high value given to encoded information thus made cultural capacity an evolutionary advantage. 2 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T5648

Graña, César, The Bullfight and Spanish National Decadence. ♦ WM Society, 1987, 24, 5(169), July-Aug., 33-37

Translated by Danielle Selti.

† The tradition of bullfighting in Spain is discussed as an example of "cultural nationalism." The cultural history of Spain is traced from the eighteenth century, & it is shown how the bullfight represented a fusion of popular & aristocratic forms. During the final stages of Spanish decadence, i.e. social & political deterioration, the bullfight emerged as a symbolic phenomenon that served to reinforce a certain picaresque view of life & the ability to transcend problems—particularly poverty—through a cocky, self-assured defiance & communal sense of celebration. Though bullfighting has always been a "skeleton in the closet of the Spanish cultural world," decried by intellectuals & aesthetes, it has maintained an exalted status in art, poetry, music, & the hearts of the Spanish public. K. Hyatt

88T5649

Heller, Agnes (New School Social Research, New York NY 10011), The Human Condition. ♦ Thesis Eleven, 1987, 16, 4-21

† An exploration of the problem of "human nature," centered on the problem of the human capacity for good, evil, & mixed good & evil. An interpretation of human nature is proposed that addresses this question. Human life is seen as the result of a process of self-domestication in which social regulation has replaced instinctive regulation. Historicity exists within this condition & is pervaded with tension between social norms & individual diversity. The self exists as a characteristic of a socially regulated entity, but is not a product alone but also a source of the social system; one of its crucial characteristics is long-term memory. The existence of the self is what makes possible the uniquely human condition of suffering. W. H. Stoddard

88T5650

Hutnyk, John (Dept Anthropology U Melbourne, Parkville Victoria 3052 Australia), The Authority of Style. ♦ Social Analysis, 1987, 21, Aug., 59-79

† A theoretical discussion of issues related to anthropological writing, fieldwork, & the authority of scholars to produce authoritative works. The author's right to write is also examined. Focus is on the work of three anthropologists: Paul Rabinow, Kevin Dwyer, & James Fernandez—with particular attention to Rabinow's & Fernandez's pronouncements about the "text metaphor" for ethnography. 59 References. Modified AA

88T5651

Kondou, Alex (School Sociology U New South Wales, Kensington 2033 Australia), The Question of 'Corruption' in Nepal. ♦ WM Mankind, 1987, 17, 1, Apr., 15-29

† Ethnographic material is used to examine a set of Nepalese cultural practices known as natabad-cryabad, which in the political arena implies "favoritism of friends & relatives." The meaning that favoritism has for Nepalis in their everyday encounters with central administration, the forms these interactions take, & their cultural significations are explored. A comparison is made to the way that favoritism is constructed by Western intellectuals, i.e. as corruption & how this contributes to political agitation & segmentation within Nepalese society. The sociological concept of power is used to explore this conflict between two opposing ideologies, that favored by Western intellectuals, who advocate the adoption of "impartiality" in government, & that which is inherent in the Hindu traditional mode of statecraft, wherein the notion of the "favor," & thus, "partiality," is a paramount cultural value. It is argued that the intellectuals lack a power base, thus, they are distanced from both the state & the masses, & their political views fall largely on deaf ears. 29 References. Modified HA

88T5652

Kovács, I. Gabor, A kalendárium a korlátozott fejlődés tipikus kommunikációs eszköze. 1730-1820 (The Calendar as a Typical Means of Communication for Limited Development, 1730-1820). Szociológia, 1984-85, 3-4, 217-237. (HUN)

† An examination of changes in the function & form of the social existence of the calendar as an institution of communication in Hungary. The development of the calendar is traced to early capitalist development, with the increased significance of time & dates. The evolution of the additional calendar's structure, content, functions, & cultural place is traced from the sixteenth through nineteenth centuries. It is shown the calendar was associated with the common & lower gentry & so as an organic element of their lifestyle. Though this SC was on the economically & culturally, it did not abandon traditional forms of production & technology because of limited development in general. The calendar reflected this contradiction, & can be regarded as the communication of limited development. Modified HA

88T5653

Kruitthof, C. L., Brasserie 'Chez Lipp': Institut ter distinctie (Brasserie 'Chez Lipp' An Institute for Distinction). ♦ Tijdschrift voor Sociale Wetenschappen, 1988, 33, 1, Jan-Mar., 58-65 (DUT)

† The process of institutional change is illustrated via a case study: Chez Lipp, a restaurant in Paris that was opened in 1880 by the Alsatia Leonard Lipp under the name "Brasserie des Bords du Rhin." It was taken over by the Auvergnat Marcellin Cazès, who used his great public relations skills to develop the restaurant into a place where the most famous men of letters & politicians met to discuss their problems. Over the years, however, the restaurant became a gathering place for snobs. Thus the institutionalization of distinction became an institute for distinction. 9 References. Modified HA

88T5654

Michaels, Eric (School Humanities Griffith U, Nathan Queensland 4111 Australia), The Last of the Nomads. The Last of the Ethnographies or "AN Anthropologists are Liars". ♦ WM Mankind, 1987, 17, 1, Apr., 34-46

† A review essay on a book by Fred R. Myers, Pintupi Country. Pintupi Self. Sentiment, Place and Politics among Western Desert Aborigines (Washington, DC: Smithsonian Institution Press, 1986 (see listing in IRP: No. 43)). Though this portrait of the Pintupi aborigines in Australia is judged to be largely accurate, questions are raised concerning whether the work is able to achieve a new synthesis of ethnography & the theories that criticize it. It is argued that ethnographies, because they record unrepeatable events that preclude objective measurement, are ripe sources of potential "intellectual irresponsibility in anthropology." In addition, ethnographic methodology tends to marginalize reflexive concerns that might allow for a better fit between theory & evidential data thus improving interpretation. This work lacks a clearly delineated mode to replace the reductionist, structural analyses it critiques, & as a result produces a rather unclear picture of Pintupi social structure & how the processes of social reproduction operate. Though significant contributions are offered to a theory of nomadism & its political consequences, epistemological questions are raised concerning whether the work will be of value within the discourse of its cultural subject, i.e. the aborigines themselves. 18 References. K. Hyatt

88T5655

Nicolas, André, ... Et mourir de plaisir? And Die of Pleasure?. ♦ Peuples Méditerranéens/Mediterranean Peoples, 1987, 38-39, Jan-June, 161-195 (FRE)

† An analysis of how Corsican society has functioned since it became (politically) part of France in 1768. As Corsica has nearly always been under an outside force, it cannot be analyzed as an autonomous organism. In its relationship with France, it functions as a subsystem in an asymmetrical coupling. The evolution of social processes in this situation is traced, & it is shown that they can lead ultimately to self-extinction. Modified HA

88T5656

Secondi, Nicolas & Santoni, Jean-Pierre, La Question du père: éléments clés pour une "analyse" du problème corse (The Question of the Father. Key Points for an Analysis of the Corsican Problem). ♦ Peuples Méditerranéens/Mediterranean Peoples, 1987, 38-39, Jan-June, 131-138 (FRE)

† An analysis of sociocultural & psychological traits in Corsican society. Inwardly traditional but now undergoing rapid external changes, Corsica is perceived as being in a cultural crisis. There has been an explosion of reference marks, notably the symbolic figure of the father, which help constitute individual & group identities. This partly explains current outbreaks of violence: there is a demand for recognition, maturity, & identification. Conflicts that used to be settled within the family are now thrust into the social & political spheres. This appeal to the symbolic father needs to be taken into account by politicians & the state. Modified HA

0600 complex organization

21 sociology of work

88T5668

Adler-Karlsson, Gunnar (Institut International Social Philosophy, CP 79 I-80071 Anacapri Italy). The Choices to Be Made, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 2, 115-117.

¶ If society is to avoid unemployment while technology increases productivity, there are two possible ways of doing so: increased level of material living or decreased total working time. Capital owners & leaders of labor unions typically endorse an increased standard of living. The unemployed usually favor reduced hours of work. A survey of 481 persons in Sweden, conducted in autumn 1983, reveals general support for reduced working hours, a finding of other published studies as well. 13 Tables, 9 Figures, 1 Appendix, 38 References. Modified HA

88T5669

Anson, Ofra & Anson, Jon (Dept Sociology Health Ben Gurion U Negev, 84105 Beer Sheva Israel). Women's Health and Labour Force Status: An Enquiry Using a Multi-Point Measure of Labour Force Participation, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 1, 57-63.

¶ Previous research indicates that working women are healthier than housewives, the unemployed are less healthy than those currently employed, & transitions into & out of paid work may be particularly associated with poor health. Data on 20,557 white Fs without severe, chronic impairments taken from the 1979 US National Health Interview Survey were divided into 5 employment status categories, which were then compared on 6 measures of self-reported health & illness behavior, age, SES, marital status, & age of youngest child variables were controlled. As expected, long-term employees were the healthiest, followed by the recently employed, the unemployed & housewives were indistinguishable in terms of health, while the recently unemployed were the least healthy. This pattern held for both the total sample & the subsample of married mothers ($N = 10,447$). Implications of the dynamic relationship between employment status & health are discussed. 2 Tables, 1 Figure, 39 References. Modified HA

88T5670

Armstrong, Peter (Dept Management Studies Huddersfield Polytechnic, Queensgate West Yorkshire HD1 3DH). Engineers, Management and Trust, ♦ Work, Employment and Society, 1987, 1, 4, Dec, 421-440.

¶ It is argued that the characteristic lack of engineering representation in British senior management is partly a consequence of the prevailing conception of what management is actually about. As compared to certain other capitalist economies, British conditions have favored such management activities as the search for long-term finance & strategic marketing over product & process improvement. This system of priorities, massively perpetuated in management writings & education, is now embedded in the British definition of what management is. Aspirants to senior positions, which necessarily involve considerable decision-making discretion, need to demonstrate their trustworthiness in such terms. Insofar as the managerial credentials of professional engineering rest on its position of authority within productive labor, they are out of key with the conception of management dominant in GB. For many years the profession has tried to overcome this by adding managerial subjects to engineering education. However, so long as management is conceived of as a distinct field of study in its own right, such a strategy can do no more than place engineers in the position of comparative amateurs competing with full-time specialists. 55 References. HA

88T5671

Bauer, Fritz, Der Zusammenhang zwischen der Quantität der an Bildschirmarbeitsplätzen verausgabten Arbeit und der empfundenen Belastung durch Bildschirmarbeit (The Connection between the Quantity of Labor Expended at Video Terminal Workplaces and the Perceived Strain from Video Terminal Work), Osterreichische Zeitschrift für Soziologie, 1987, 12, 3, 85-92. (GER)

¶ Questionnaire data ($N = 650$ Austrian Rs) are examined to show the relationship between the quantity of work carried out daily at video terminals & the subjective conditions of workers. Methods for measuring workers' perceptions of different types of strain, health, dangers to health, & quantity of work are described. A systematic r between perceived strain & both long-term duration & average daily amount of video terminal work is discovered, which is attributed in part to other workplace factors, eg. light & chairs. Suggestions for further research are presented. 3 Tables. J. Anderson

88T5672

Beer, William R. (Dept Sociology Brooklyn Coll, NY 11210). Replete Ignorance: Social Science and Affirmative Action, ♦ WM Socie 1987, 24, 4(168), May-June, 63-69.

¶ Although affirmative action has been a highly controversial social policy in the US for over twenty years, practically no research has been done on its effects. Here, some initial steps toward such policy analysis are taken. The "fallacy of inferred discrimination," which claims that differential occupational distributions of racial & ethnic groups & the sex are the result of discrimination, is refuted. Previously published data are examined to show that: (1) most black Americans, Fs of all groups, white Ms are opposed to preferential hiring & quotas, & (2) affirmative action compliance is not economically efficient. Affirmative action was implemented forty years ago in India, to combat preferential hiring school admissions for lower castes, but it has not been effective & has spread animosity. Modified AA

88T5673

Beggs, John J. & Chapman, Bruce J. (Centre Economic Policy Research Australian National U, Canberra ACT 2601). Australian Strike Activity in an International Context: 1964-85, The Journal of Industrial Relations, 1987, 29, 2, June, 137-149.

¶ A cross-national comparison of strike activity statistics, utilizing data from Australia & 13 other countries for 1964-1985. Differences in industrial dispute data between countries are analyzed, & problems inherent in comparing these data are considered. To be meaningful reflections industrial relations environments, international dispute data must control for independent influences on strikes, & multiple regression techniques are suggested for more useful analysis. This methodology is applied to the Australian industrial relations system, & results are discussed. 3 Tables, 2 Figures, 9 References. Modified HA

88T5674

Bemmels, Brian (Faculty Business U Alberta, Edmonton T6 2R6). The Effect of Grievants' Gender on Arbitrators' Decisions, Industrial and Labor Relations Review, 1988, 41, 2, Jan, 251-262.

¶ Results of an investigation of the gender of grievants relative to the decisions of arbitrators in 104 job discharge cases in Alberta indicate that other things equal, Fs were twice as likely as Ms to have their grievance sustained, in cases where the grievance was sustained, Fs were 2.7 times more likely than Ms to receive full rather than partial reinstatement; in cases where suspension was imposed in place of discharge, Fs receive on average, a suspension 2.1 months shorter than Ms. These results are consistent with those of studies of the treatment of Fs in the criminal justice system. 3 Tables, 36 References. HA

88T5675

Berki, Sándor, Vezetés: alku vagy tudomány? (Esettanulmány egy automatizált üzem munkaszervezetéről) (Management Bargain Science? [Case Study on the Labor Organization of an Automated Factory]), Szociológia, 1984-85, 3-4, 297-310. (HUN)

¶ Abstract not currently available

88T5676

Bielby, Denise D. & Bielby, William T. (Dept Sociology U California, Santa Barbara 93106). She Works Hard for the Money: Household Responsibilities and the Allocation of Work Effort, ♦ American Journal of Sociology, 1988, 93, 5, Mar, 1031-1059.

¶ Data from the 1973 & 1977 Quality of Employment Surveys are used to test the assumption that women allocate less effort to work because their family & household responsibilities ($N = 531$ Fs & 938 Ms in 1973 & 469 Fs & 986 Ms in 1977, with primary focus on the 1977 data). R

State U of New York, Buffalo), Marc Howard Ross (Dept of Political Science, Bryn Mawr Coll, Pa.), & H. U. E. Thoden Van Velzen & W. Van Wetering (Dept of Cultural Anthropology, U of Utrecht, Netherlands), with a Reply by Knauff that discusses simple societies & Melanesia; simple societies in historical context, & sociobiology. 7 Tables, 1 Figure, 2 Appendixes, 243 References. Modified HA

88T5644

Krache, Waud H. (Dept Anthropology U Illinois, Chicago 60680), "Everyone Who Dreams Has a Bit of Shaman": Cultural and Personal Meanings of Dreams—Evidence from the Amazon. ♦ Psychiatric Journal of the University of Ottawa/Revue de Psychiatrie de l'Université d'Ottawa, 1987, 12, 2, June, 65-72

¶ It is symptomatic of the neglect of dreams in anthropology even by psychological anthropologists, that the categories of ethnographic description of dream belief are still largely those established 50 to 100 years ago. The frequently repeated attribution to primitive cultures of a belief that dreams are "experiences of the wandering soul during sleep" goes back over a century to Edward B. Tylor (Researches into the Early History of Mankind, 1865), & the notion of a category of "culture pattern dreams" (dreams of messages from a supernatural being) that resist psychological interpretation, goes back fifty years to J. S. Lincoln (The Dream in Primitive Cultures, Baltimore: Williams & Wilkins Co, 1935). A few more probing studies of traditional dream beliefs show that primitive beliefs about dreams may be subtle & complex, & may sometimes provide insights into the dreaming process. Similarly, a few full & empathic accounts of "culture pattern dreams" show that such dreams may also carry deeply personal meanings. Both of these points are illustrated by evidence on dreams & dream beliefs collected in field research with the Parintintin Indians of Brazil, who hold dreams to be vehicles of shamanic power, as well as by dreams & beliefs described by other anthropologists. 11 References. HA

88T5645

Lacourse, Jonée (Dept sociologie U Montreal, Quebec H3C 1J7), Réciprocité positive et réciprocité négative: de Marcel Mauss à René Girard (Positive and Negative Reciprocity: From Marcel Mauss to René Girard), Cahiers Internationaux de Sociologie, 1987, 34, 83, July-Dec, 291-305 (FRE)

¶ The different forms of positive reciprocity (eg, exchange of gifts, courtesies) are generally considered as in the classical sociology & anthropology of Claude Lévi-Strauss & Marcel Mauss to be mechanisms of social cohesion. Two recent challenges to this approach are examined. Pierre Clastres (see, eg, La Société contre l'État [Society against the State], Paris: Editions de Minuit, 1974) considers negative reciprocity

(eg, the exchange of blows, abduction, vendettas) to be a factor of preservation of the primitive social order. René Girard (see, eg, La Violence le sacré [Violence and the Sacred], Paris: Grasset, 1972) tries to demonstrate that reciprocity, both positive & negative, is a factor of social disorganization. A critical examination of these different viewpoints shows that it is impossible to establish a link between positive reciprocity & social cohesion, or between negative reciprocity & social disorganization. 21 References. Modified HA

88T5646

Lentz, Carola (FB Philosophie und Sozialwissenschaften Institut Ethnologie Freie U Berlin, D-1000 41 Federal Republic Germany), Zwischen "Zivilisation" und "eigener Kultur": Neue Funktionen ethnischer Identität bei indianischen Arbeitsmigranten in Ecuador (Between "Civilization" and "Own Culture"—New Functions of Ethnic Identity for Indian Migratory Workers in Ecuador), Zeitschrift für Soziologie, 1988, 17, 1, Feb, 34-46 (GER)

¶ An investigation of ethnicity among the Indians who migrate from the highlands of Ecuador in search of work in the Ur centers & plantations of the coast, based on fieldwork in both areas. It is shown that ethnic boundaries are not rendered obsolete by the integration of Indian migrants into the capitalist labor market, & that the Indians do not assimilate as mestizos. The emergence of a new Indian ethnic consciousness composed of both traditional & non-Indian elements, is seen as an important part of the pattern of migration, exploitation, & marginalization. Indian migrants reject the notion of being inferior, & proudly assert their own culture & civilization. In the towns & plantations, ethnic pride facilitates regional solidarity & links with the rural places of origin; in the countryside, it transforms interethnic relations. 42 References. Modified HA

88T5647

Remotti, Francesco (U Turin, I-10124 Italy), Catégories sémantiques de l'éros chez les Wanande du Zaïre (Semantic Categories of Eros among the Wanande of Zaïre), L'Homme, 1987, 23(103), July-Sept, 73-92 (FRE)

Translated by Simone Avallé-Hotelier.

¶ An investigation of the concepts used among the Wanande—an agrarian society of northern Kivu, Zaïre—to describe erotic, sexual activities. Such concepts are part of lexical families formed around terms meaning to cut, to fell trees, to conquer a territory, to strike a fire, to vanquish & to impose oneself. These lexical families express the domination of men over the forest. They reveal the asymmetrical relationship between M & F, & also show that the Wanande identify themselves not with the culture but with the process of making it. 15 References. Modified H

Document Delivery Service

The costs of reproduction are: US $0.25 per reproduced page. Orders must be PREPAID (unprepaid orders cannot be acknowledged or returned) and sent to SOCIOLOGICAL ABSTRACTS, INC. (P.O. Box 22206, San Diego, CA 92122, USA) together with the SA accession number and the complete citation of the document to be reproduced. To calculate price per document, multiply the number of pages as indicated in the citation of the abstract by US $0.25 and add a US $1.50 search fee per document. POSTAGE is EXTRA. Below is a table for postage fees that vary by weight/size of paper.

No. of Pages	US & Canada Postage Fee	All Other Countries
		Postage Fee	Air Mail Surface
1-5	$0.39	US $1.40	US $1.00
6-10	$0.73	$2.24	$1.90
11-15	$1.07	$2.78	$2.30
16-20	$1.41	$3.32	$2.75
21+	Additional multiples as above

CONFERENCE papers are available ONLY when the following notation precedes the text of the abstract: © "Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search and postage. Length: pp." For copies of paper without this notation, write directly to the author, whose address is listed in the citation.

ment, & a decomposition of the M-F wage gap confirms the assertion that both the industrial & occupational structures represent important & separate aspects of the wage determination process. Wage discrimination exists against Fs in each occupation, particularly in the periphery, in two occupations, it is shown that in the absence of such discrimination, Fs would actually earn more than Ms. Results demonstrate the value of an improved representation of occupation 3 Tables. Modified HA

88T5685

Crawford, Alex, Plant, Martin A., Kreitman, Norman & Latham, Richard W. (Renfrew Council Alcohol Community Services Centre, Queen St Paisley PA1 2TU Scotland). Unemployment and Drinking Behaviour: Some Data from a General Population Survey of Alcohol Use, British Journal of Addiction, 1987, 82, 9, Sept, 1007-1016.

† The drinking habits of unemployed & employed Ms in GB (N = 1,028) were investigated using data from interviews & self-report 7-day diaries. Results show that unemployed Ms were particularly likely to binge drink & to report adverse effects from consuming alcohol. It is suggested that (1) the choice of consumption variables may influence the outcome of research in this area, & (2) unemployed men may be exposed to greater risks from drinking alcohol. 6 Tables, 69 References. Modified HA

88T5686

Creese, Gillian (Dept Anthropology & Sociology U British Columbia, Vancouver V6T 1W5). The Politics of Dependence: Women, Work and Unemployment in the Vancouver Labour Movement before World War II, ♦ Canadian Journal of Sociology/Cahiers canadiens de sociologie, 1988, 13, 1-2, winter-spring, 121-142.

† The way that gender relations structured women's experiences in the Vancouver labor market & the labor movement before WWII are addressed. The social construction of women as dependents of men, regardless of their individual situation, affected the conditions women faced in the workplace & when unemployed. Women did not have an established right to work, so they also had no right to unemployment relief. Since patriarchal gender relations affected workers' experiences in the workplace & throughout civil society, gender also structured Wc politics. The strategies that the Vancouver labor movement adopted to address issues of women's work & the problem of unemployment were premised on the dependence of women within the family, & sought to preserve domesticity as the primary sphere for Wc women. During the depression of the 1930s, however, unemployed women began to challenge the centrality of patriarchal relations in Wc politics by demanding equal treatment for the unemployed regardless of marital status or sex. 3 Tables, 45 References. HA

88T5687

Cucić, Viktorija (Instit Social Medicine Statistics & Health Research Medical Faculty, Dr Subotica Str 15 11000 Belgrade Yugoslavia). Some Experiences of Yugoslavia in Solving of Unemployment, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 2, 209-212.

† Unemployment is one of Yugoslavia's most serious problems. Several factors account for it. Ru-Ur migration & discrepancies between education & market demands are most important. The typical unemployed Yugoslav is F, under age 30, & the graduate of a secondary or high school. Measures undertaken to combat unemployment are numerous & extend from the national government to each work organization. Organized efforts by young people themselves are especially important for solving the problem. 1 Table. Modified HA

88T5688

Daniewicz, Susan Carney (Iowa State U, Ames 50010). Changing Attitudes toward Women's Employment, * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1897-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8721877.

88T5689

Dankbaar, Ben (Rijks U Limburg, NL-6200 MD Maastricht Netherlands). New Production Concepts, Management Strategies and the Quality of Work, ♦ Work, Employment and Society, 1988, 2, 1, Mar, 25-50.

† Recent writings on "new production concepts," new technologies, & work organization have engendered a certain optimism regarding the future quality of work in industry. Some of the literature on this subject is reviewed, & some examples are presented of work organization in the West German car industry in connection with the introduction of new technologies. Attention is paid to the roles of management & workers representatives in the process of reorganization. Different approaches toward the reintegration & reprofessionalization of production work are identified & discussed. The West German legislation on codetermination provides the works councils & unions with some possibilities to intervene & to influence management's choices. 5 Figures, 22 References. HA

88T5690

Dawson, P. (U Southampton, SO9 5NH England). Computer Technology and the Redefinition of Supervision: A Study of the Effects of Computerisation on Railway Freight Supervisors, * Dissertation Abstracts International, C European Abstracts, 1987, 48, 4, winter 662.

Unavailable from UMI; contact the degree-granting university.

88T5691

Dickson, Tony, McLachlan, Hugh, Prior, Phil & Swales, Kim, Th. Crisis of the Unions, U New Society, 1987, 81, 1288, 4 Sept, 9-11.

† A discussion of union recognition at the IBM plant in Greenock, Scotland, citing it as an example of the failure of trade union strategy. Two broad categories for the failure are identified: (1) the pattern of employment, management, & industrial relations in the company; & (2) the experience of trade unionism among employees. Basic union tactics & strategy have emerged over the years out of the context of the traditional manufacturing sectors in which unionism was strongest. The British economy has undergone fundamental changes so that the nature of employment for a growing proportion of the LF is radically different. This requires a fundamental revision of the basis on which trade unionism must appeal to existing & potential members. F Rasmussen

88T5692

Fliger, Tony (Dept Sociology U Warwick, Coventry CV4 7AL England). Review Article: Flexible Future? New Technology and the Contemporary Transformation of Work, ♦ Work, Employment and Society, 1987, 1, 4, Dec, 528-540.

† A review essay on books by: Eric Batstone & Stephen Gourlay (with Hugo Levie & Roy Moore), Unions, Unemployment and Innovation (Oxford: Basil Blackwell, 1986); David Clutterbuck (Ed), New Pattern of Work (Aldershot: Gower, 1985); W. W. Daniel, Workplace, Industrial Relations and Technical Change (London: Frances Pinter, 1987); Arthur Francis, New Technology at Work (Oxford: Clarendon OUP, 1986); Colin Gill, Work, Unemployment and the New Technology (Cambridge: Polity, 1985); Instit of Manpower Studies for NEDO (Changing Working Patterns: How Companies Achieve Flexibility to Meet New Needs (London: NEDO, 1986); & Kate Purcell, Stephen Wood, Alan Waton, & Sheila Allen (Eds), The Changing Experience of Employment: Restructuring and Recession (Basingstoke: Macmillan, 1986 [see listings in IRPS No. 43]). These seven works describe the current restructuring of industrial relations, conditions of employment, & organization of work tasks as a function of the introduction of new workplace technology in GB. Gill reviews the process & products of both office & shop floor automation, with focus on how these influence the philosophies of managers & engineers regarding job design. Francis explores the conflicts of interest inherent in task/organizational design decisions, & argues that the impact of technological changes on employment levels must be assessed within the context of wider economic & political factors. The NEDO report describes patterns of management activity among employers in engineering, food & drink, retail, & financial services, & reveals significant differences in flexibility. Clutterbuck's collection generally offers a positive view of the new technologies. The work edited by Purcell et al is a compilation of case studies that describes the gendered character of the technical division & hierarchy of labor, emphasizing the control of new technology by Ms. Other contributions focus on new management strategies & priorities that have evolved in the face of the restructuring of production & industrial relations. Daniels presents results of a survey of managers & union representatives that document their general acceptance of new technologies. Batstone & Gourlay use mail survey & case study data to analyze union organizations & different aspects of management strategy in larger workplaces. It is concluded that more adequate analyses of the contemporary social structure & class experience in GB are needed than are provided in these works in order to fully understand the complexities of the many forms of restructuring that are currently occurring. 11 References. K. Hyatt gression & ordered probit analyses show that, on average, women allocate more effort to work than do men. Further, the sex difference is substantial when men & women with comparable family situations & market human capital are compared. Experiments on sex differences in standards of "personal entitlement" & research on sex-segregated workplaces provide an alternative to the economists' perspective. An argument is made for an integration of human capital models, research on social equity, & structural theories of work organization in order to provide a more complete explanation of men's & women's orientations toward work & family. 5 Tables, 32 References. Modified HA

88T5693

Eraly, Alain (Instit sociologie travail U Libre Bruxelles, B-1050)

88T5677

Blyton, Paul, Dastmalchian, Ali & Adamson, Raymond (Inst Sci & Technology U Wales, Cardiff CF1 3NS), Developing the Concept of Industrial Relations Climate, The Journal of Industrial Relations, 1987, 29, 2, June, 207-216.

† A discussion of the concept of an organizational climate & the application of that concept to industrial relations activities. Six dimensions of industrial relations climate are outlined relating to: (1) cooperation, (2) trust, (3) mutual regard, (4) joint participation, (5) apathy, & (6) hostility. It is suggested that other branches of industrial relations research could benefit from similar cross fertilization of concepts from allied disciplines, & proposals for additional research are offered. 58 References. Modified HA

88T5678

Bolwijn, P. T. & Brinkman, S. (c/o Brinkman Postbus 218 NL-5600 MD Eindhoven Netherlands), Japanese fabrieken: verdelen en beheersen (Japanese Factories: Divide and Control), M&O, 1987, 41, 5, Sept-Oct, 294-308. (DUT)

† A striking characteristic of Japanese factories is the extent of process control. From both technical & social viewpoints, the labor & production system is controlled down to the very last detail. The characteristics of management & organization that underlie this are examined, & shown to be loosely interwoven with Japanese culture. It is argued that Western factories cannot & should not attempt to copy these Japanese models. 3 Figures, 10 References. Modified HA

88T5679

Borzeix, Anni & Linhart, Daniele (Laboratoire sociologie travail, 2 rue Conte F-75003 Paris France), La Participation: un clair-obscur (Participation: Chiaroscuro), ❖ Sociologie du Travail, 1988, 30, 1, 37-53. (FRE)

† Some reflections on worker participation in France today, based primarily on a recent study (Anni Borzeix et al., Sur les traces du droit d'expression [On the Track of the Right to Expression], Paris: CNAM, 1985). New forms of employee participation in firms shift the boundaries between formal & informal spheres. They tend to transform informal into open participation, & help form new communities within firms. Since the 1970s, a new conception of how economic efficiency should be attained has led to the discovery of different forms of worker professionalism, which take into account what is actually performed, not merely the prescribed tasks. Supported by new technologies, this concept emphasizes the role of the workshop & favors an ideology of participation & "transparency" (accountability) to replace the ideology of SC antagonisms. Modified HA

88T5680

Brand, Dionne, Black Women and Work: The Impact of Racially Constructed Gender Roles on the Sexual Division of Labour. Part One, Fireweed, 1987, 25, fall, 28-37.

† It is argued that the driving themes of the women's liberation movement in the US & Canada have been applicable primarily to the situations of white, Mc women, while the experiences of black women of all SCs have been largely excluded from feminist discourse. An analysis is presented of ways that capitalist relations of production from colonial days to the present have structured the conditions of black women's lives. Focus is on the continued exploitation of black F domestic workers. For feminism to be relevant to black women, it must acknowledge how their oppression is rooted as much as in their race & SC as in their sex. 7 References. K. Hyatt

88T5681

Broda, Jacques (Centre recherche ecologie sociale, 2 rue de la Charité F-13002 Marseille France), Le Syndrome des "3 P": pression horaire, pression hiérarchique, pas de perspective professionnelle (The

"3 P" Syndrome: Time Pressure, Hierarchical Pressure, No Career Prospects), ❖ Sociologie du Travail, 1988, 30, 1, 19-36. (FRE)

† The effects of the work environment on physical & mental health well-being, especially regarding fatigue & depression, are investigated in an interview survey of unskilled F workers (N not given) at an agribusiness firm in Marseille, France, having 1,000 employees. Focus is on Fs aged 35-45 having 1 or 2 children. Rs worked as operators or supervisors of packaging machines, etc. Many of their responses are quoted verbatim. Three major factors are identified as harmful: (1) the pressure of work schedules, especially because of shift work, & also because of the "double work day" resulting from Fs' household responsibilities; (2) hierarchical pressure, i.e., the sense of close, hostile supervision by the managers, & (3) the lack of any career prospects. 1 Figure. Modified HA

88T5682

Brosse, Hans-Georg, Schulze-Boing, Matthias & Wohlrab-Sahr, Monika (Inst Soziologie U Marburg, D-3550 Federal Republic Germany), Zeitarbeit: Konturen eines "neuen" Beschäftigungsverhältnisses (Temporary Work: Outlines of a New Employment Pattern), Soziale Welt, 1987, 38, 3, 282-308. (GER)

† Statistical evidence from many sources is gathered in the first systematic overview of the temporary work segment of the labor market in West Germany &, of some aspects, in France. The average daily number of people employed in this way, while still only 0.3% of the entire LF, has grown rapidly in recent years, up to 70,000 in 1986. Since about 74% of these employment situations last fewer than 3 months, the number of persons engaged in temporary work over 1 year may be 3 times the daily average. The occupational structure of this market has changed over the past 10 years, from an emphasis on office work to industrial & also highly qualified occupations. Temporary work is used mainly in the core sector of industry, & to a lesser extent in the service sector. The business of temporary work organization itself consists of a large & growing number of small agencies, together with a few big units that cover about 50% of this particular market. 6 Tables, 31 References. Modified HA

88T5683

Bussing, André (Abteilung Medizinische Statistik und Dokumentation RWTH Aachen, D-5100 Federal Republic Germany), Arbeitsplatzunsicherheit und Antizipation von Arbeitslosigkeit als Stadien des Arbeitslosigkeitsprozesses (Job Insecurity and Anticipation of Unemployment as Stages in the Process of Unemployment), Soziale Welt, 1987, 38, 3, 309-329. (GER)

† Job insecurity & anticipation of unemployment are considered to be distinct & important stages of the process of unemployment. An investigation of their potential psychosocial & psychophysical impact review recent research in this field, & describes an empirical study. Blast furnace workers (N = 180) at 2 neighboring steel companies in Saarland, West Germany, completed written questionnaires containing various scales concerning health, stress, work satisfaction, autonomy, social support, etc. The 75 workers at Company A had secure jobs, while the 10 at Company B all experienced job insecurity because of the firm's poor economic situation. No differences were found in reported psychosomatic complaints or job stress, but workers at Company B had lower job satisfaction & reported feelings of lack of control. The latter, especially, is generally associated with health problems. Several variables (eg, social support) interact with job insecurity in predicting psychosomatic complaints. These interactive effects are analyzed with respect to the buffer & coping hypotheses. 3 Tables, 1 Figure, 65 References. Modified HA

88T5684

Connors, Patricia Joan & Kemp, Alice Abel (c/o Kemp-Dept Sociology U New Orleans, LA 70148), Gender Differences in Labor Market Wages: A Comparison of Industrial Sector Effects and a Decomposition within Four Occupations, The Social Science Journal, 1987, 24, Oct, 429-442.

† Current research suggests that the reason Fs earn less than Ms may be due to either industrial segmentation, occupational segregation, or both. Researchers focusing on one structure tend to neglect or inadequately represent the other. Here, the simultaneous impact of industrial sector & gender on imputed wages is examined using data from the 1976 Current Population Survey on a subset of 5,565 white adults working in 4 occupations: accounting, managing & administration, bookkeeping, & packing/wrapping. These occupations were previously identified as being relatively internally homogenous on measures of task performance so as to minimize within-occupational differences in M & F work. Regression analyses illuminate interoccupational differences in the process of wage attainment.

ture emergenti del lavoro e decisioni manageriali (New Work Cultures and Managerial Decisions). Quaderni di Sociologia, 1987, 33, 8, 3-17. (ITA)

† An overview of the ideas presented at a seminar on "Emerging Work Cultures," organized by the University Instit of European Studies in Turin, Italy, in Nov 1986. New cultural trends relating to work that are emerging in Europe are discussed. The idea that altering the DoFL is better for both workers & employers is gaining ground. Also, the quality of work & of life are increasingly perceived as interdependent, & the idea of equal opportunity for Ms & Fs is becoming almost commonplace. The problems to be confronted now concern the translation of such ideas into organizational structures & managerial practices. The way in which new technologies will be applied is a very important factor, their effect on human work depends more on managerial decisions than on properties of the technology itself. 19 References. Modified HA

88T5702

Glass, Becky L. (Dept Sociology State U New York, Geneseo 14454). A Rational Choice Model of Wives' Employment Decisions. Sociological Spectrum, 1988, 8, 1, 35-48.

† Factors that influence married women's employment decisions are studied within the context of the social exchange model of decision-making developed by Hubert Blalock & Paul Wilken (Intergroup Processes, New York: Free Press, 1979). It is proposed that wives' estimations of the utility of employment are influenced by three hierarchically ranked goals (family's financial adequacy, maternal care of young children, employment as a source of personal fulfillment), & by an interest in maximum joint profit, i.e., taking their husbands' goals & utilities into account. The relative importance of these factors are compared for full-time employed, part-time employed, & nonemployed married women, using interview data gathered in 1981 from 607 adult Fs in NC. Findings indicate that husbands' support of wives' LF participation is the best predictor of wives' employment, even over level of family income. Possible interpretations are discussed. 4 Tables, 34 References. Modified HA

88T5703

Golden, Miriam (Wesleyan U, Middleton CT 06457). The City as Factory: Workers' Control in Turin. ♦ U.S. Socialist Review, 1987, 17, 5(95), Sept-Oct, 43-58.

† Throughout the twentieth century, the city of Turin, Italy, has maintained an unusually pure & persistent We culture. Several major tendencies have been evident in this culture: productivism, workerism, council democracy, avant-gardism, apoliticism, & localism. However, these ideas & tendencies have limitations that will eventually create problems for the Turinese. At some point, the Left will govern in Italy, & then a tradition that has long ignored the state will have to learn how to control it. In fact, one likely eventuality is conflict of the Turinese labor movement with even a leftist state over control of the factories. W. H. Stoddard.

88T5704

Halaby, Charles N. (Dept Sociology U Wisconsin, Madison 53706). Action and Information in the Job Mobility Process: The Search Decision. ♦ American Sociological Review, 1988, 53, 1, Feb, 9-25.

† Current sociological models of job mobility suppress the intervening action & information mechanisms that link structural constraints to job shifts. To remedy this, core features of structural-mobility models are joined to key elements of economic approaches to job change in an analysis of the employed worker's decision to search the market for a better job. Data are drawn from the 1977 Quality of Employment Survey of a national probability sample of 1,204 US workers aged 16-64. The analysis highlights the complementarity of structural & action approaches by conceptualizing the forces governing the search decision in terms of the principal dimensions—opportunities & achievement gains—underlying job-mobility models. The basic framework is extended to include the quality of a worker's initial screen of a prospective job as a mechanism that promotes search. The concepts of opportunities, gains, & screen quality are then used to explain M-F differences in mobility orientations. The empirical findings both reinforce structuralist assumptions & underscore the promise of applying to the study of mobility processes the kind of action approach recently advocated by James S. Coleman (see SA 34-4/86Q7332). 7 Tables, 48 References. Modified HA

88T5705

Handy, Priscilla Wing (U Illinois, Urbana 61801). The Work and Politics of Stevedoring in Rio de Janeiro, 1903-1964. * Dissertation Abstracts International, 4. The Humanities and Social Sciences 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1904-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8721649.

88T5706

Hibbard, Judith H. & Pope, Clyde R. (U Oregon, Eugene 97403). Employment Characteristics and Health Status among Men and Women. Women and Health, 1987, 12, 2, summer, 85-102.

† Differences in job characteristics of US Ms & Fs during the 1970s are examined in terms of social support & integration through work, intrinsic work characteristics & satisfaction, & occupational status. In addition, associations between job characteristics, health, & marital/parental status are investigated. Data from a 1970/71 household interview survey of enrollees in a northwest region of the Kaiser-Permanente group health care program (N = 1,490), supplemented by information from Rs' medical records over a 7-year period, indicate important differences in the characteristics of jobs held by Ms & Fs & in the relative importance of these to health status. Some family responsibilities interact with job characteristics to affect health status for women, single motherhood, in combination with low social support & integration at work, is particularly related to poor health. More current longitudinal studies are needed to investigate whether these effects have changed over time with change in women's LF participation & attitudes toward work. 5 Tables, 18 References. Modified HA

88T5707

Holmqvist, Berit & Andersen, Peter Bøgh (Dept Information & Media Sciences U Aarhus, DK-8200 N Denmark). Work Language and Information Technology. Journal of Pragmatics, 1987, 11, 3, June, 327-357.

† Empirical findings from two research projects on work language are presented: one project investigated communication in a Danish car repair shop, the other communication in the Postal Giro Office in Stockholm, Sweden. The heavy interdependence between communication & the working context is stressed: tasks, work organization, role, shared knowledge & values, & social relations. A list of demands that a theory must meet in order to provide a systematical basis for studying work language is constructed, & indications for how knowledge about work language may be useful in selected areas of the field of informatics are presented. 1 Figure, 25 References. HA

88T5708

Holter, Øystein Gullvag, Catering for the Oil: Catering and the Reproduction of the North Sea Communities. Economic and Industrial Democracy, 1987, 8, 1, Feb, 81-110.

† An examination of the role of the catering employee in the offshore oil installation work structure. In the Bering Sea off Norway oil rigs employ 1,200 catering workers who provide services for operator personnel. These employees work & live offshore for 2-week periods for approximately 66% of the year. A rising proportion (42% in 1985) of the caterers are Fs, working in an otherwise almost totally M environment. The role of the catering group in the reproduction of the North Sea installations as social communities is examined, focusing on the institutionalization of new work & life patterns. 2 Figures, 25 References. Modified HA

88T5709

Jones, Gill (Thomas Coram Research Unit Instit Education, 41 Brunswick Sq London 2C1 England). Young Workers in the Class Structure. ♦ Work, Employment and Society, 1987, 1, 4, Dec, 487-508.

† The sociological study of youth has tended to focus on either age & generation, or SC & gender. Attempts to integrate the two approaches have been largely unsuccessful. The longitudinal & cross-sectional dimensions of stratification are explored, producing a framework for examining SC differences in youth in GB. Analysis of the intergenerational & intragenerational mobility of young workers, using two large national data sets, the 1979/80 General Household Surveys (N = 12,036 Rs aged 16-29), & the National Child Development Study, (of a cohort born in 1958, interview data used here are from 12,537 Rs in 1981), leads to the identification of a typology of "Youth Class." This empirically based typology incorporates the notions of process & structure in a longitudinal SC schema appropriate to the study of young people. 8 Tables, 2 Figures. 1 Appendix, 29 References. Modified HA

Belgium). Sur la critique de la division du travail (On the Critique of the Division of Labor). Journal de Sociologie du Travail, 1988, 30, 1, 5-18 (FRF)

† A paper presented at the symposium on Georges Friedmann, held in Brussels, Belgium, Oct 1987. The critique of the DoFL is one of the bases of Friedmann's work. Friedmann's reformulation of Karl Marx's three definitions of this concept: societal division, functional division within the organization, & division of tasks are examined. The consequences of the fragmentation of work for the workers themselves are considered, & the various explanations of a paradox that concerned Friedmann are discussed: why employees seem to accept an alienating situation. Modified HA

88T5694

Fain, Terri C. & Anderton, Douglas L. (U Illinois, Chicago 60680). Sexual Harassment: Organizational Context and Diffuse Status. Sex Roles, 1987, 17, 5-6, Sept, 291-311

† An attempt is made to assess the effects of three factors that have been hypothesized to account for sexual harassment in the workplace: power inequalities, sexual heterogeneity, & diffuse status characteristics. Following a review of the literature on organizational stratification & previous sexual harassment studies, results of a study of sexual harassment among US federal employees are reported (see US Merit Systems Protection Board, Office of Merit Systems Review & Studies, Sexual Harassment in the Federal Workplace: Is It a Problem?, Washington, DC: Government Printing Office, 1981). Analysis of questionnaire data (N not specified) reveals seven distinct types of harassment; their occurrence is examined as a function of workgroup size, sexual composition, occupational type, educational achievement, ethnic/marital status, & age. Multivariate analysis reveals that diffuse status is the most powerful determinant of sexual harassment, ie, those status groupings & stereotypical age/race/gender attitudes that arise outside the organization & are carried into it by individual workers. It is concluded that theories of gender-related behavior within organizations may be inadequate if the larger context of social-sexual relations is not considered; implications for future research are discussed. 9 Tables, 40 References. K. Hyatt

88T5695

Farber, Henry S. (Dept Economics Massachusetts Inst Technol, Cambridge 02139). The Recent Decline of Unionization in the United States. U Science, 1987, 238, 4829, 13 Nov, 915-920

† The dramatic decline in unionization during the last decade is investigated using data from the US Census Dept's 1977 & 1984 Current Population Surveys. First, it is found that only a small fraction of the decline in unionization can be accounted for by shifts in LF structure. Second, there has been a substantial drop in demand for union representation among nonunion workers that can be accounted for by an increase in their job satisfaction & a decrease in their reports that unions improve wages & working conditions. Finally, there has been a substantial increase in employer resistance to unionization that is likely to have made it more difficult for unions to organize even those workers who desire union representation. Increased foreign & nonunion domestic competition (particularly in deregulated industries) may be key underlying causes of these changes. 7 Tables. HA

88T5696

Farkas, Zoltan. A termelési magatartás mint érdekkérvényesítés (Production Behavior as an Assertion of Interest). Szociologia, 1984-85, 1-2, 53-67 (HUN)

† The behavior of workers in production is socially determined by relations of interest assertion within the factory. The concrete opportunities of interest assertion & the factors determining its extent are analyzed. It is suggested that power is not a general determinant of the extent to which interests are realized; this is determined rather by the interest relations & by the relations of power crystallized in the position of interest realization of individuals & groups. It is the position of interest assertion that cuts actual interest out of interest in general, & it is actual interest that is the basis of the objectives that express interest. 1 Diagram. Modified HA

88T5697

Farrell, Stephen W., Kohl, Harold W. & Rogers, Todd (Inst Aerobics Research, 12330 Preston Rd Dallas TX 75230). The Independent Effect of Ethnicity on Cardiovascular Fitness. U Human Biology, 1987, 59, 4, Aug, 657-666.

† An examination of differences in fitness-related variables due to ethnicity among F teachers in a large Ur school district in Dallas, Tex.

part of a comprehensive employee health promotion program, a multi-component health & fitness baseline assessment was conducted of 1,96 women using data from a self-administered health & lifestyle questionnaire, body composition measures, submaximal treadmill stress test, & other clinical & blood chemistry measures. The entire F sample was divided into white, black, & Mexican-American (N = 1,316, 518, & 133 respectively) subgroups based on self-reported ethnic identity. Univariate analyses reveal a significantly lower mean treadmill time for black women than for white or Mexican-American women. Multiple linear regression analysis leads to the conclusion that black women in this population have a significantly lower level of cardiovascular fitness relative to white or Mexican-American women, & that these differences can be partially explained by ethnicity independent of the effects of other fitness related variables. Implications for worksite health promotion programs that target ethnically mixed populations of women are discussed. 3 Tables, 25 References. Modified HA

88T5698

Ferre, Ralph (Dept Social Theory & Institutions University Col North Wales, Bangor LL57 2DG). Subcontracting in Steel. Work, Employment and Society, 1987, 1, 4, Dec, 509-527

† Research on the UK construction industry has identified growth in the use of subcontractors as one explanation for the increased number of small firms (& self-employed workers) in that industry. Other research suggests that there has been growth in the use of contractors in the manufacturing industry. Data from the steel industry (company data for 81 firms & questionnaire & interview data from employers & other informants (N not given)), suggest that the construction industry pattern has been replicated in steel; the increased use of subcontractors has accompanied the increased use of contractors. At BSC Port Talbot (Southern Wales), for example, an informal cartel of established, local contractor has been replaced by large national contractors who make use of "cow boy" subcontractors. These subcontractors are economically dependent on the larger firms, but are legally distinct. The fact that the steel industry's experience is so similar to that of the construction industry raises doubts about the "special" circumstances thought to have led to the growth of subcontracting in construction. 17 References. Modified H/

88T5699

Florito, Jack (U Iowa, Iowa City 52242). Political Instrumentality: Perceptions and Desires for Union Representation. Journal of Labor Research, 1987, 8, 3, summer, 271-289

† The concept of union political instrumentality (ie, union influence on general elections or legislation) is examined in light of theoretical literature & contemporary trends in union political activity. The practical importance & applicability of the political instrumentality concept is demonstrated in empirical models of nonunion worker voting intent in union representation elections. Here, analysis of data from the 1977 Quality of Employment Survey (N = 471 Rs) indicates that workers perceiving higher levels of union political instrumentality are significantly more likely than others to indicate a pro-union voting intent. Given (1) the importance of political vs economic activity as a defining characteristic of labor movements & (2) recent increases in political activity by U unions, these results have significant implications for future union organizing & political instrumentality. 4 Tables, 34 References. Modified HA

88T5700

Furnham, Adrian & Rose, Maria (Dept Psychology University Col London, WC2 England). Alternative Ethics: The Relationship between the Wealth, Welfare, Work, and Leisure Ethics. Human Relations, 1987, 40, 9, Sept, 561-573.

† A discussion of the Protestant work ethic (PWE) & alternative belief systems. Measures of four ethics are selected, developed, & evaluated—wealth, welfare, work, & leisure—using questionnaire data from 86 Rs. Variables that have been identified as important predictors of the PWE are evaluated as predictors of the 4 alternative ethics. Analysis reveals several correlations between PWE & other scales: PWE beliefs were positively associated with capitalist economic beliefs, postponement of gratification, & internal & powerful other locus-of-control beliefs, but negatively associated with leisure & welfare ethics. 3 Tables, 22 References. F. Rasmussen

88T5701

Gallino, Luciano (Dipartimento scienze sociali U Torino, I-10124 Italy), Ca

88T5720

Makó, Csaba. A bürokratikus és a kvázi-bürokratikus kontroll a munkafolyamatban (Bureaucratic and Quasi-Bureaucratic Control in the Labor Process of Work). Szociológia, 1984-85, 1-2, 25-43 (HUN)

† An examination of the types of control exercised in the labor process, based on Hungarian empirical data. Emphasis is given to bureaucratic & quasi-bureaucratic forms of control. Characteristically, workers are required to perform certain managerial tasks during production, but only those who occupy a central position in the work process can make the leadership pay for this work. Other workers typically display retreating & indifferent behavior. A more comprehensive compromise of interests between the investment of labor & the benefits granted for it would lead to a general increase in the activity of workers. 1 Appendix. Modified HA

88T5721

Mallier, A. T. & Rosser, M. J. (Dept Economics Coventry Polytechnic, CV1 5FB England). Changes in the Industrial Distribution of Female Employment in Great Britain, 1951-1981. ♦ Work, Employment and Society, 1987, 1, 4, Dec, 463-486

§ In each decade between 1951 & 1981, the F LF in GB grew in absolute numbers & relative to the M LF. However, there was tremendous variation in the pattern of change across different industrial sectors, which is analyzed using Census of Population employment data standardized to the 1968 Standard Industrial Classification. Although the cyclical & substitution theories of the demand for F labor offer a partial explanation for the different patterns of change observed, it is also necessary to take into account other relevant features of individual industries, eg, the proportion of the F LF in manufacturing industries employed in production-related manual jobs. 6 Tables, 2 Figures, 12 References. HA

88T5722

Mann, Arthur J. & Smith, Robert (U Puerto Rico, Rio Piedras). Public Transfers, Family Socioeconomic Traits, and the Job Search Behavior of the Unemployed: Evidence from Puerto Rico. ♦ World Development, 1987, 15, 6, June, 831-840

† The theoretical & empirical associations between the job search efforts of the unemployed in Puerto Rico & the SE characteristics of the family are explored. Taken as a point of reference is that certain supply-side phenomena may contribute to Puerto Rico's high open unemployment rate. Analyses of Dept of Labor & Human Resources statistics (N = 7,500 households) & household interview/questionnaire data (N = 476 Rs) obtained in 1983 indicate the existence of what can be labeled "luxury unemployment", ie, government-provided transfer payments generate disincentive effects with respect to the job market behavior of the unemployed. Moreover, the dependency status of the individual within the family group also leads to lower job search effort. 5 Tables, 1 Appendix, 7 References. Modified HA

88T5723

Maříková, Iva & Klus, Pavel (Ústav výzkum kultury, Prague Czechoslovakia). Kulturní zájmy a potřeby dělníků (na příkladu jednoho z mimopražských průmyslových závodů) (Cultural Interests and Needs of Workers). Sociologický časopis, 1987, 23, 6, 636-647 (CZE)

† Abstract not currently available

88T5724

McBride, Stephen (Dept Political Studies Lakehead U, Thunder Bay 'P' Ontario P7B 5E1). The State and Labour Markets: Towards a Comparative Political Economy of Unemployment. Studies in Political Economy, 1987, 23, summer, 141-154.

† The return of high unemployment in Western countries has been accompanied by considerable debate about the likely future course of events & about how to respond to the economic crisis. Literature on two schools of thought is reviewed, the postemployment society school, as represented by Andre Gorz, John Keane, & John Owens (eg, Gorz, Andre, Farewell to the Working Class, London, 1982), which considers a return to full employment neither feasible nor desirable & focuses on how a benign postemployment society might be achieved; & the full-employment society school, represented by Goran Therborn (Why Some Peoples Are More Employed than Others: The Strange Paradox of Growth and Unemployment, London, 1986), which regards full employment as feasible & desirable. A survey of empirical literature indicates that full employment remains feasible, & that the postemployment society theorists are overly deterministic in their interpretation of social & economic trends. Modified AA

88T5725

Mottaz, Clifford J. (Sociology Dept U Wisconsin, River Fall 54022). An Analysis of the Relationship between Work Satisfaction and Organizational Commitment. ♦ The Sociological Quarterly, 1987, 28, 4, Dec, 541-558

† The interrelationships between individual characteristics, work rewards, work satisfaction, & organizational commitment are investigated using questionnaire data obtained from 1,385 workers representing a variety of occupational groups at 6 diverse organizations in a midwestern US metropolitan area. Generally, the data suggest that individual characteristics have very little impact on either satisfaction or commitment while work rewards are found to be better predictors of satisfaction than commitment. In addition, satisfaction & commitment have reciprocal effects, however, it appears that satisfaction has a significantly greater effect on commitment than the reverse. 4 Tables, 1 Figure, 57 References. Modified HA

88T5726

Munz, Rainer & Pelz, Monika (Neulinggasse 10, A-1030 Vienna Austria). Berufsorientierung und Arbeitslosigkeit (Job Orientation and Unemployment). Soziale Welt, 1987, 38, 3, 330-349 (G:R)

† In an investigation of the effects of job orientation on unemployment & job-finding strategies, in-depth interviews were conducted with 37 M & 29 F long-term unemployed (ie, several months to several years) in Austria in 1985/86. Ss were of differing ages & professional status, & included voluntary job leavers as well as laid-off workers. Four clusters are identified: (1) people who are strongly job oriented & experience unemployment as a severe crisis; (2) beginners, who fail to find an apprenticeship or first job; these young people are often in conflict with the family, & risk the marginalization experienced by group 3; (3) the repeatedly unemployed who often show symptoms of ill health, alcoholism & stress related to insecurity of livelihood; many of this group also feel the stress of work more than the stress of unemployment; & (4) the voluntarily unemployed, primarily Fs who quit work to have a child, or persons who quit a job they disliked & are willing to wait for something suitable. Not surprisingly, this last group show the conditions under which life without a job can be managed: financial security, social acceptance, ability to structure everyday life, & the chance of vocational reintegration. 27 References. Modified HA

88T5727

Muszynski, Alicja (Dept Sociology U Regina, Saskatchewan S4S 0A2). Race and Gender: Structural Determinants in the Formation of British Columbia's Salmon Cannery Labour Forces. ♦ Canadian Journal of Sociology/Cahiers canadiens de sociologie, 1988, 13, 1-2, winter/spring, 103-120

† The industrialization of the fisheries of British Columbia began in the late nineteenth century with the canning of salmon for export to GB. Fish was an essential staple in the diet of the native peoples living in the Pacific Northwest, & its capture & processing was a vital part of their economic activity. Salmon cannery sought a factory LF at the cheapest possible wage. To the extent that native peoples continued to meet subsistence needs, at least partially, through the native economy, when employed for wages they did not have to be paid the full costs of the production & reproduction of their labor power. Of all the groups employed, native women & their children received the lowest wages & least secure conditions of employment. The use of race & gender by salmon cannery as a means of creating a LF & paying it the lowest wages possible, according to the ability of each group to partially realize subsistence needs through precapitalist relations of production, is examined. Special attention is given to the place of native women in this process, using data from personal accounts & official statistics. 2 Tables, 23 References. HA

88T5728

Nay, Leslie Ann (U Wisconsin, Madison 53706). Determinants of Concession Bargaining in the Airline Industry. ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1550-A-1551-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8714740.

88T5729

Nelson, Margaret K. (Dept Sociology & Anthropology Middlebury Coll, VT 05753). Providing Family Day Care: An Analysis of Home

88T5710

Jouet, Josiane (Dépt UST Centre national études télécommunications, 38-40 ave du Général-Leclerc 92131 Issy-les-Moulineaux France). Les Usages professionnels de la micro-informatique (The Professional Use of Personal Computers). ♦ UM Sociologie du Travail, 1988, 30, 1, 107-123 (FRE)

† To examine how personal computers are used at home for occupational purposes, 20 F & 40 M owners of personal computers or Minitel terminals in Paris, France, were interviewed. It is found that this type of use corresponds to an idealization of work, an increase of occupational autonomy, & a privatization of the work sphere. The borders between work & leisure & between the public & private spheres become blurred. The advantages of personal computers are their flexibility & fun aspects, which increase personal satisfaction in intellectual & independent occupations. Modified HA

88T5711

Kalleberg, Arne L. (U North Carolina, Chapel Hill 27514). Strukturelle tilnærminger til studiet av arbeidsmarkedet. En litteraturreview (Structural Approaches to Studying Labor Markets: A Review Essay). Tidsskrift for samfunnsforskning, 1987, 28, 5, 461-470 (NOR)

Translated by Stig P. Pettersen.

† In recent years there has been a virtual explosion of research by sociologists & economists on the nature & consequences of labor markets. Some of the important themes that characterize this research are summarized, & illustrated via a review of some recent books. The Economic Institutions of Capitalism by Oliver Williamson (New York: Free Press, 1985), Segmented Work, Divided Workers: The Historical Transformation of Labor in the United States, by David M. Gordon, Richard Edwards, & Michael Reich (New York: Cambridge U Press, 1982), Classes, by Erik Olin Wright (London: Verso, 1985), Dividers in the Labor Market, by Tom Colbjørnsen (Oslo: Norwegian U Press & Oxford: Oxford U Press, 1986), & Work and Politics: The Division of Labor in Industry, by Charles F. Sabel (New York: Cambridge U Press, 1982) (see listings in IRPS No. 43). 12 References. Modified HA

88T5712

Kern, Horst & Schumann, Michael (Georg-August-U Gottingen, D-3400 Federal Republic Germany). Limits of the Division of Labour. New Production and Employment Concepts in West German Industry. Economic and Industrial Democracy, 1987, 8, 2, May, 151-170

† It is argued that the strategies & methods of capitalist rationalization are at a turning point in their development. This change includes new forms in the use of labor within the main sectors of industry (eg. professionalization). While these new concepts provide openings for many workers, they also exclude other sectors of the LF. The argument has engendered scientific & political debate in West Germany, which, it is suggested, gives support to the position that new concepts of production exist. 3 Tables, 16 References. Modified HA

88T5713

Koslowsky, Meni (Dept Psychology Bar-Ilan U, Ramat-Gan Israel). Antecedents and Consequences of Turnover: An Integrated Systems Approach. Genetic, Social, and General Psychology Monographs, 1987, 113, 3, Aug, 269-292

† Most turnover models try to identify relevant antecedents or the sequence leading to an individual's resignation from an organization. A comprehensive systems approach is presented that views turnover as part of a process that contains individual & organizational consequences with positive & negative implications. Concepts such as the role of stress, reciprocal cause-effect relationships, & attitudinal changes over time are integrated into the model. The interdependence of the different parts are analyzed & implications for management presented. Appropriate research designs & relevant issues for further investigation are discussed. 1 Figure, 71 References. HA

88T5714

Lammers, Cornelis J., Meurs, Pauline L. & Mijs, Ton A. (Instit Sociologie U Leiden, NL-2313 AV Netherlands). Direct and Indirect Participation in Dutch Firms and Hospitals. Organization Studies, 1987, 8, 1, 25-38.

† An examination of whether shopfloor participation reinforces or thwarts the functioning of a Works Council in the Netherlands, based on interview & questionnaire data collected in 1976/77 in the cross-national Industrial Democracy in Europe research project (N = 16 firms) & in 1978 from hospitals (N = 14). The analysis identifies a few significant correlations only between indices of direct & of indirect participation. Results suggest that, particularly in hospitals, employees who ascribe more influence to a Works Council have less autonomy & upward influence with respect to core activities in their own work situation. In general, key-persons & rank-&-file in hospitals see more eye to eye on the matters than in firms. Modified HA

88T5715

Leicht, Kevin Timothy (Indiana U, Bloomington 47405). The Economic and Non-Economic Consequences of Union Membership: Contextual Analysis. ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1328-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8717851.

88T5716

Lynch, Lisa M. & Sandver, Marcus H. (Massachusetts Instit Technology, Cambridge 02139). Determinants of the Decertification Process: Evidence from Employer-Initiated Elections. ♦ UM Journal of Labor Research, 1987, 8, 1, winter, 85-91

† An analysis of why workers choose to decertify a union as their bargaining unit in employer-initiated representation elections, using data from the National Labor Relations Board monthly election report (1977-1981). Variables examined include size of the election unit, region, industrial classification, type of incumbent union, & the state of the local economy. While the findings reveal a concentration of elections on the West Coast, there is no significant difference in the ability of unions there to "win" decertification elections. 2 Tables. Modified HA

88T5717

Madison, Patricia Lee (U Pittsburgh, PA 15260). Effects of Unemployment on the Black Married Males' Self-Esteem and Family Relations. ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1548-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8719308.

88T5718

Maggard, Sally Ward (Dept Sociology U Kentucky, Lexington 40506-0027). Women's Participation in the Brookside Coal Strife: Militance, Class, and Gender in Appalachia. Frontiers, 1987, 9, 16-21

† A coal mine strike in Harlan County, Ky, mobilized large numbers of Wc women in 1973/74, & led to the formation of the now-famous Brookside Women's Club, featured in the academy award-winning film Harlan County, U.S.A. Women moved from an early role in the strike of "standing-by-their-men" to an independent role, shaping the very nature & outcome of events. Here, the high degree of involvement by women in this labor dispute is explored, focusing on the interplay of SC & gender forces. Analysis of interview data (N not provided) reveals how gender ideology & interests shaped participation, including form of protest activity, duration of involvement, & impact of protest activity on women's lives. Women made difficult choices to engage in disorderly conduct in direct defiance of traditionally defined gender roles, but also in a manner that never seriously challenged the idea that their proper place was "in the home." Living in an area where economic independence for Wc women was rare, Fs acted to protect access to M-earned wages; however, when the strike ended, they had to be able to "go home" again. It is concluded that relationships inside households, not just workplace relationships, affect women's participation in SC protest. Modified A

88T5719

Maguire, Michael (Policy Research Instit, 105 Botanic Ave Belfast BT7 1NN Northern Ireland). Work, Locality and Social Control. ♦ Work, Employment and Society, 1988, 2, 1, Mar, 71-87.

† The argument that nonwork issues influence social control in the workplace is supported by evidence (from 200 interview Rs & 189 questionnaire Rs) from a study of social relations in a Northern Ireland telecommunications plant. It is suggested that the locality in which a factory situated has an important influence on internal plant relations; in the context of Northern Ireland, the replication of locality social relations in the workplace had the effect of weakening collective resistance in the plant. Large-scale job losses & introduction of new work practices, a consequence of technological change in the telecommunications industry, imposed these important weaknesses in the structure of workplace organization. 56 References. Modified HA

01605). Relationships among Type A Behavior, Employment Experiences, and Gender: The Minnesota Heart Survey. Journal of Behavioral Medicine, 1987, 10, 4, Aug, 323-336

- † The relationship between Type A behavior & 3 job factors—work hours, occupational mobility, & supportive interactions with colleagues—is compared for Ms & Fs. Employed adults aged 25-74 (N = 2,512) from the Minneapolis-St. Paul, Minn. metropolitan area were interviewed, assessed for physiological & behavioral risk factors for coronary heart disease, & administered the Jenkins Activity Survey, a written questionnaire measure of Type A behavior. Two-way analysis of covariance reveals no sex differences in unadjusted Type A behavior scores; in fact, controlling for work hours, women had more Type A characteristics than men. Results suggest that high Type A scores are related to long work hours, high occupational mobility, & nonsupportive interactions with colleagues, which are more typical of the M work environment. 4 Tables, 41 References. K. Hyatt

88T5738

Stanley, Liz (Dept Sociology U Manchester, M13 9PL England), Essays on Women's Work and Leisure and 'Hidden' Work, ♦ Studies in Sexual Politics, 1987, 18, 1-61

- † A summary of substantive & theoretical feminist contributions to the literature on work & leisure in women's lives, with focus on conceptual, methodological, & policy implications of this perspective. The importance of historical data sources for illuminating the changing nature of F work/leisure relationships is stressed, & three such interrelated data sources—diaries & autobiographies, the Mass Observation Archive at the U of Sussex (England), & oral history writing projects in various countries—are examined in depth. A study is described that entailed observations of public workers, eg, police officers, garage attendants, road workers, grocery clerks, shopkeepers, & taxi/bus drivers, in Rochdale, a small town in the greater Manchester area of England. Findings demonstrate that women who work in public places do not have the same right to privacy as do their M counterparts, & are constantly subject to sexual harassment. It is argued that women's work in such public, as well as ostensibly private, places is continually defined by Ms' reactions & considered open ground for intrusion. 9 Photographs, 55 References. K. Hyatt

88T5739

Szakmary, Gary A. (Moog Inc, East Aurora NY 14052), Innovative Development of Human Resources in a Developing Country, U The Journal of Creative Behavior, 1987, 21, 2, 155-159.

- † It is proposed that organizations that truly value their employees will tend somewhat naturally to engage in "participative management," which will foster creativity & allow the organization to respond more readily to change & challenge. Reported here is the experience of one such organization as it attempted to do something it had never done before—build & staff a sophisticated manufacturing facility, requiring highly refined employee skills, in a remote town located in a developing country, the Philippines. Focus is on the role played in the project by a staff function, human resources development, & the creative plan they devised to meet their part of the challenge. Candidates for employment were extensively screened & tested in the Philippines, & those hired were brought to the US for intensive training. The plant opened on schedule & the entire project was highly successful. Modified AA

88T5740

Vlačil, Jan (Instit Philosophy & Sociology Czechoslovak Academy Sciences, Jilská 1 CS-110 00 Prague), Sociologie práce a její význam pro sociální prognózu (Sociology of Work and Its Significance for Social Prognosis), Sociologický časopis, 1987, 23, 6, 562-575. (CZE)

- † An examination of the current state of sociological research on work, giving special attention to the intensification of production, the humanization of labor, introduction of new technology, changes in the employment structure, working hours & professional & territorial mobility, manual work & brainwork, qualified & unqualified work, mechanization & automation, preparation for & adaption to work, stimulation & motivation, self-realization & satisfaction, & democratization of management. Emphasis is given to the need for social enforcement of technical innovations & to continuously increasing participation of workers in decision making. The necessity of a systematic evolution of the sociology of work & the stimuli given to it by the demand for social development are pointed out. 8 References. Modified HA

88T5741

Warner, Malcolm (Management Coll, Greenland Henley-on-Thames Oxon RG9 3AU England), Industrial Relations in the Chinese Factory, The Journal of Industrial Relations, 1987, 29, 2, June, 217-232

- † Industrial relations & personnel activities in Chinese factories (N = 246) are examined to determine whether a new model of industrial relations is emerging in the People's Republic of China. Despite changes in the workplace, reform of the labor market, & increasing specialization & professionalization, China has neither embraced Western style capitalism nor adopted workers' self management. Instead, these changes are thought to reflect wider economic reforms, & must be interpreted in a wider context than comparable changes in Western society. 3 Tables. Modified HA

88T5742

Williams, David Paul (F. Heller Graduate School Brandeis U, Waltham MA 02254), The Political Economy of Coal Mine Safety and Its Contribution to the Theory of the Welfare State, ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1900-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8722497.

88T5743

Wolfe, Jerri Lynn (Oregon State U, Corvallis 97331), Employment Experience and Job Satisfaction of New Mothers, ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1328-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8717052.

88T5744

Wright, Roosevelt, Jr., King, Shirley Wesley, Berg, William E. & Creecy, Robert F. (Graduate School Social Work U Texas, Arlington 76019-0129), Job Satisfaction among Black Female Managers: A Causal Approach, Human Relations, 1987, 40, 8, Aug, 489-506.

- † The relationship between job satisfaction & aspects of the individual & work organization is examined using survey data from 41 minority Fs employed in human service organizations in 5 southwestern states. Multivariate causal modeling procedures are employed to identify & assess: (1) the causal interrelationships among various predictors of job satisfaction, (2) the amount of variance in job satisfaction that can be explained by the model, (3) the relative importance & priority of the predictors included in the model, & (4) the magnitude of the direct & indirect causal effects of the predictors on job satisfaction. 3 Tables, 2 Figures, 42 References. F. Rasmussen

88T5745

Zimmer, Lynn (Dept Sociology State U New York, Geneseo 14454), Tokenism and Women in the Workplace: The Limits of Gender-Neutral Theory, U Social Problems, 1988, 35, 1, Feb, 64-77

- † The concept of tokenism has been used widely to explain many of the difficulties Fs face as they enter traditionally M occupations. Tokenism explains Fs' occupational experiences & their behavioral responses to those experiences in terms of their numerical proportion, suggesting that barriers to full occupational equality can be lowered by the hiring of more Fs in organizations that are highly-skewed M. It is suggested that the tokenism hypothesis has not been subjected to rigorous testing & that existing research does not support the concept. It is concluded that a gender-neutral theory such as tokenism is of limited value in explaining the experiences of either Ms or Fs in a society where gender remains important. Further, the focus on tokenism may hinder Fs progress to the extent that it turns our attention away from an analysis of the effects of sexism in the workplace & the society as a whole. 76 References. Modified HA

88T5746

---, Labor & Society: Social Concertation, ♦ Labour and Society, 1987, 12, 3, Sept, 317-467.

- † Social concertation has recently become quite popular both in industrial relations parlance & in practice in industrialized as well as developing countries. Economic problems & social conflicts have spurred the growth of central framework agreements or social pacts between labor & management & government, & given new life to consultation bodies, tripartite structures, & other informal ways of promoting consensus & participatory decision making on a macrolevel. This special issue of Labor & Society, introduced by Elimane Kane, with a foreword by Efrén Córdova, provides a fresh assessment of some of the better-known at-

Based Work, US Social Problems, 1988, 35, 1, Feb, 78-94

† Family day care is examined as a site in which to explore the personal & social consequences of home-based work. Data were obtained from a questionnaire sent in 1986 to all registered day care providers in Vermont ($N = 225$) & from 1986 interviews with 28 registered & 34 unregistered family day care providers. The motivation for offering family day care is described, along with constraints on the autonomy of family day care providers. Some additional economic, personal, & political consequences of home-based work are examined. Although family day care might be considered a booming success, it is argued that this success rests on the secondary status of Fs in the LF & on the unpaid labor of Fs at home. 1 Table, 56 References. HA

88T5730

Pargart, Jane L. (Dalhousie U., Halifax Nova Scotia B3H 3J5). Class Consciousness among the Zambian Copper Miners, 1950-1968. ♦ Revue canadienne des études africaines/Canadian Journal of African Studies, 1987, 21, 1, 53-77

† The SC consciousness & political potential of African workers has long been a contested issue, particularly in the case of the Zambian copper miners during the 1950s & 1960s. This group was considered a labor aristocracy & had a strong worker & trade union consciousness, whether this extended to an appreciation of the emerging SC structure & necessity of joining with other workers on a national basis to collectively improve their position has been debated. SC consciousness is redefined as a nonlinear process with seven distinct stages, & evidence of its existence within the Zambian LF from colonial times is provided. It is argued that these miners were able to transcend racial divisions & were quite committed to the nationalist cause, reasons behind their initial withdrawal from politics are described. The miners' political consciousness did not become fully developed until after the nationalists gained power, they continue to lead popular opposition against state power. 40 References. K. Hyatt

88T5731

Pichierri, Angelo (Dipartimento di scienze sociali U. Torino, I-10124 Italy). Diagnosi e strategie nel declino della siderurgia europea (Diagnosis and Strategy in the Decline of the European Steel Industry). ♦ Quaderni di Sociologia, 1987, 33, 8, 18-48. (ITA)

† An analysis of the decline of the European steel industry, drawing on numerous studies, empirical research since the 1960s, & colloquiums of industry experts. The 1974 economic crisis merely accelerated the decline, which had begun much earlier. The inability of most of the actors involved to take into account available indicators is explained by an unlucky combination of structural characteristics of the industry (cyclical features, time needed for strategy implementation, & barriers to exit) & subjective beliefs. For many years, the typical behavior of most steel industry actors was parametric rationality (do as before) or overcompensation (do as before, but more). In few cases was decline perceived & dealt with before the crisis. Increasingly, strategies of management of decline are being adopted, aimed at lowering & distributing the social & economic costs of the contraction of the industry. Because of its nature & costs, this strategy is generally implemented by actors, i.e., national governments & the Commission of the European Economic Community other than those directly involved. 55 References. Modified HA

88T5732

Porket, J. L. (26 Crescent Gardens, Eastcote Ruislip Middlesex HA4 8TA England). Social Policy and Employment in the Soviet Union. ♦ Social Policy and Administration, 1987, 21, 2, summer, 109-126

† In its narrow sense, Soviet social policy is a realm of transfer payments & free or subsidized services. It is intended by the régime to fulfill a number of major functions, eg, demographic investment, development & maintenance of physical & mental capabilities, manipulation of the LF, income maintenance, satisfaction of specific individual & group needs & interests, & political socialization. It has led to important social policy measures, eg, the minimum wage, creation & preservation of meaningless jobs, the narrowing of earnings differentials, & subsidies on meat & dairy products. This social policy, together with the nature of command socialism, produces tension, eg, between efficiency & inefficiency, egalitarian & antiegalitarian tendencies in the economic sphere, incentive & disincentive, & compliance & nonpolitical deviance. These tensions have not been eased during the Mikhail Gorbachev administration, being of systemic origin, they will continue to exist as long as the nature of command socialism remains unchanged. 6 Tables. Modified AA

88T5733

Ratcliff, Kathryn Strother & Beglan, Janet (Dept Sociology U Connecticut, Storrs 06268). Unemployed Women: When "Social Support" Is Not Supportive. US Social Problems, 1988, 35, 1, Feb, 54-63

† An analysis of 1983/84 interview data collected in upstate NY from 89 unemployed Fs regarding job orientations, the nature of support they received from others while unemployed, & their perceptions of the unemployment period. While the Fs reported close & extensive social support networks, the content of the messages from those networks about work was often not supportive. The nature & extent of this nonsupport is documented & the effect of a nonsupportive social support network is analyzed. Findings suggest that while some unemployed Fs suffer from lack of close friends, a more common pattern may be for a F to be surrounded by caring others who may undermine her by denying the legitimacy of an activity she regards as important. 2 Tables, 22 References. Modified HA

88T5734

Regalia, Ida (IRES Lombardia, Milan Italy). Partecipare al sindacato. Forme, modelli, ipotesi di lavoro (Workers' Participation in the Trade Union Movement: Forms, Patterns, Proposals for Interpretation). ♦ Quaderni di Sociologia, 1987, 33, 9, 43-72. (ITA)

† An investigation of workers' participation in the trade union movement based on research in progress on union relations within the tertiary sector in Italy (details not given) & other pertinent studies. Among the possible forms & patterns of employees' behavior, success varies over time & different situations according to a complex set of variables, involving both the unions' strategies & the workers' interests & propensity to be involved in collective action. A review of the Italian case suggests that the observed decline in previously identified forms of workers' involvement does not necessarily indicate a general decline in participation in the union movement; it may rather reveal structural changes in the workers' orientation toward collective action & representation, & the emergence of new demands. 1 Table, 1 Figure, 48 References. Modified HA

88T5735

Reskin, Barbara F. (U. Illinois, Urbana 61801). Bringing the M-Back In: Sex Differentiation and the Devaluation of Women's Work. ♦ Gender & Society, 1988, 2, 1, Mar, 58-81

† To reduce sex differences in employment outcomes, they must be examined in the context of the sex-gender hierarchy. The conventional planation for wage gap job segregation is incorrect because it ignores men's incentive & ability to preserve their advantages by establishing rules that distribute rewards. The primary method through which dominant groups maintain their hegemony is by differentiating the subordinate group & defining it as inferior, & hence meriting inferior treatment. It is argued that neither sex-integrating jobs nor implement comparable worth will markedly improve women's employment status because Ms can subvert these mechanisms or even change the rules which rewards are allocated. As evidence, it is shown that occupational integration has failed to advance Fs appreciably, & that comparable worth is not likely to be much more effective. Instead, political analysis & political solutions are needed. 1 Figure, 97 References. HA

88T5736

Ruzicka, Richard (Institut Philosophy & Sociology Czechoslovak Academy Sciences, Jilská 1 CS-110 00 Prague). Spoleten vlastnictví, způsob života a zájmy (Social Ownership, Way of Life and Interests). ♦ Sociologický časopis, 1987, 23, 6, 545-561. (CZ)

† The essence of ownership is its role in resolving problems of social production & development; it cannot be understood solely in terms of means of production. Within socialist society, the discontinuity of relations of production permits the generalized special interest to replace general interest, weakening the social character of the satisfaction needs & the realization of interests. The all-social economic interest the all-social structure of interests can only come into being within contradictions of this generalized domination by special interests, a force of the economic interdependence of people's lives as embodied in the structure of organizing interests. 14 References. Modified HA

88T5737

Sorensen, Gloria, Jacobs, David R., Jr., Pirie, Phyllis, Folsom, / on, Luepker, Russell & Gillum, Richard (Division Preventive & Behavioral Medicine U Massachusetts Medical School, Worcester

¶ Prescriptive models of definition, diagnosis, & resolution dominate traditional management literature focused on conflict management. However, developments in organization theory suggest a need to revise traditional models, to incorporate an expanded concept of conflict. Recent studies depict organizations as political entities where conflict is continual & becomes the essence of the organization, & suggest that insiders tend to repress overt conflict. This poses serious challenges to traditional models of conflict resolution that focus on confrontation. Organizations need to discover less overt & more naturalistic means of conflict management, consistent with the ways that disputes manifest themselves in the organization. One is to encourage individuals who, because of their position or specific skills, are able to adopt an informal mediation-like role. These mediators may be able to surface conflict & resolve differences in ways that more overt interventions cannot. 1 Reference. Modified AA.

88T5774

Lajevardi, Jalil (US International U, San Diego CA 92131), Perceptions of Female Managers by Male and Female Subordinates, *Dissertation Abstracts International, 4 The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1550-A.
Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8720620.

88T5775

Lammers, C. J. (Rijks U Leiden, NL-2313 AV Netherlands), Ver-gankelijkheid en duurzaamheid van idealtypen in de organisatie-theorie (Transience and Persistence of Ideal Types in Organization Theory), U Mens en Maatschappij, 1987, 62, supplement, 72-87 (DUT).

¶ It is argued that though supposedly new theories, typologies, & models are advanced regularly, basic sociological modes of thinking about organizational developments, processes, & structures remain very much the same. The plausibility of this thesis is demonstrated via the example of "ideal types" of organization, several models of which are compared. Reasons for the discrepancy between the persistence of organizational genotypes & the labels attached to them are explored using insights on rediscoveries & multiple discoveries from the sociology of science. The dilemma created by the desirability of knowledge & practitioners' demands for utilization of the results of organizational theory & research is discussed. 4 Figures. Modified HA.

88T5776

McCarthy, Florence E. & Feldman, Shelley (Coll Human Ecology Cornell U, Ithaca NY 14853), Administrative Reforms in Bangladesh: Incorporation or Democratization?, International Journal of Contemporary Sociology, 1987, 24, 3-4, July-Oct, 99-111.

¶ An analysis of the contradiction faced by political regimes in Bangladesh who require, yet fear, mass support to establish & maintain political hegemony. It is argued that lasting political support requires a restructuring of established dependencies between political control by the state, Ur interests, & Ru elites. The reliance of those in power on bureaucratic elite alliances to manage & direct Ru affairs is examined, along with competition among the military, civil servants, entrepreneurs, & professional politicians for a share of national power & resources. The inability of regimes to mediate the interests among SC factions & solve problems of legitimacy has meant that those in power have been unable to negotiate or radically change approaches to infrastructural development. The segmented & uneven growth of political & Ru infrastructural development & the consequences of this for Ru stability are highlighted. While recent moves to decentralize administrative control & decision making may bring government closer to the people, continued denial of their access to & sharing of power & resources weakens support for regimes & contributes to generalized disaffection. Without significant change in the relation to those in power to the Ru majority, structured instability may lead to more authoritarian regimes. AA.

88T5777

Moore, Kees, Booth, Peter & Duncan, Keith R. (Dept Accounting & Finance U Otago, Dunedin New Zealand), Sheltered Employment Strategies in Five Countries, ♦ Social Policy and Administration, 1987, 21, 2, summer, 127-138.

¶ A description of sheltered employment strategies & an analysis of policy options regarding them. In studies conducted of organizations in GB, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Sweden, & the US, personnel at all managerial levels were interviewed (N not given) to learn their views of how sheltered employment should be organized at the national, enterprise, & work performance levels. Additional data were drawn from official documentation & from work activity observation. Results indicate that successful enterprises not only were well informed of the dominant industry philosophy but had their own clearly articulated interpretation of it. A number of policy options are seen to emerge from the patterns observed. 1 Table, 3 Figures, 8 References. Modified HA.

88T5778

Pfeffer, Jeffrey & O'Reilly, Charles A., III (Graduate School Business Stanford U, CA 94305), Hospital Demography and Turnover among Nurses, U Industrial Relations, 1987, 26, 2, spring, 158-173.

¶ There has been increasing interest in examining turnover at the organizational level of analysis. In a questionnaire sample of executives at 250+ hospitals, turnover among nurses was found to be negatively related to the local unemployment rate & positively related to 2 demographic measures assessing the degree of inequality or heterogeneity in length of service. Turnover here is shown to be related to heterogeneity among cohorts, not individuals or groups. The results are consistent with earlier studies that have shown the importance of organizational demography for understanding turnover & demonstrated important differences in the way in which demography can be measured. 3 Tables, 44 References. Modified HA.

88T5779

Richardson, R. Jack (McMaster U, Hamilton Ontario L8S 4L8), 'A Sacred Trust': The Trust Industry and Canadian Economic Structure, U La Revue Canadienne de Sociologie et d'Anthropologie/The Canadian Review of Sociology and Anthropology, 1988, 25, 1, Feb, 1-22.

¶ Within the realm of financial institutions, the Canadian trust industry has recently developed into a set of institutions, & now challenges the domestic hegemony of the banks. At the same time, this industry has become integrated into several of the dominant Canadian conglomerates, thus blurring the traditional division between financial & nonfinancial institutions. The recent transformation in the structure of the trust industry is examined & integrated into an analysis of similar structural transformations within the Canadian economy at large. The social significance of these processes is suggested. 6 Tables, 64 References. HA.

88T5780

Shapira, Zur (School Business Hebrew U Jerusalem, Mount Scopus Israel), Preference for Job Attributes: Tradeoffs from Present Position, U Industrial Relations, 1987, 26, 2, spring, 146-157.

¶ Successful implementation of incentive systems in organizations depends in part on accurate assessment of employee preferences for different job attributes. Traditionally, such preferences are measured by the use of rating scales to determine the attractiveness of job attributes. Here, senior executives of a large electronics firm (N = 56) were asked in personal interviews to make direct tradeoffs between five attributes: salary, interest & challenge, authority, influence on company policy, & status. The data were analyzed by means of minimizing a least square loss function to estimate tradeoff coefficients. Analysis shows that the higher a manager's position on a certain attribute, the more important this attribute is relative to others. The tradeoff method's advantages for understanding the processes by which job attributes acquire their relative importance are discussed. 2 Tables, 1 Figure, 17 References. HA.

88T5781

Smith, S. L. (Faculty Technology Open U, Milton Keynes MK7 6AA England), Information Technology: Taylorisation or Human Centred Office Systems, Science and Public Policy (SPP), 1987, 14, 3, June, 159-167.

¶ In a discussion of key approaches to organization & new technology in the context of banking services, the application of Taylorism (breaking down jobs into smaller, technically interdependent parts) is contrasted with a human-centered approach. Neither is thought to give sufficient attention to what organizational changes might mean for service sector employees at managerial & clerical levels, given the diversity of service tasks in small units. Inappropriate assumptions about work organization in banking have limited productivity gains, despite recent technical changes. A more imaginative approach to systems design & technology agreements will be required in the future. 1 Figure, 9 References. Modified HA.

here. The consequences of these innovations on the structures of organization, employment, & qualification, & on the modes of management & social regulation are examined. It is suggested that, through these adaptations, a new model of firm is emerging. Modified HA

88T5764

Feldman, Steven P. (Weatherhead School Management Case Western Reserve U., Cleveland OH 44106). The Crossroads of Interpretation: Administration in Professional Organization. In Human Organization 1987, 46, 2, summer, 95-102.

* In his theory of bureaucratic organization, Max Weber distinguished bureaucratic authority from the authoritarian nature of collegial organizations that historically preceded it. This distinction is essential for understanding organizations that are characterized by a large number of professional workers. The administrative process of a law school is analyzed in terms of the role that hierarchical authority plays in collegial organization. Two major points are developed: (1) since two different kinds of decision making structures are involved in professional organization: collegial & hierarchical, the interpretive process that is used to define the situation becomes extremely important, & (2) since professional organization is fundamentally collegial, persons in positions of hierarchical authority cannot stay in office without the confidence of their colleagues. The concept of goodwill is introduced for investigation of the ways in which hierarchical authority is integrated & maintained in an environment of collegial relations. 29 References. Modified HA

88T5765

Golembiewski, Robert T., Hilles, Richard & Daly, Rick (Dept Political Science U Georgia, Athens 30602). Some Effects of Multiple OD Interventions on Burnout and Work Site Features. The Journal of Applied Behavioral Science 1987, 23, 3, Aug, 295-311.

† Described is how an organization development (OD) effort using theory driven interventions reduced level of burnout & improved group properties & turnover rates in a corporate human resources (HR) staff. Using an 8 phase model to estimate burnout level & 10 Work Environment Scales, data were gathered via a survey administered 5 times over a two-year period (N ranging from 31-37). Analysis reveals that the level of burnout, initially high among the HR staff, diminished & remained reduced for at least 4 months after the last planned intervention, although this improvement decayed somewhat following 9 more months & a major reorganization. The improvements in group properties & the turnover rate, however, persisted & were even enhanced. It is found that personnel changes do not explain the improvements, & that the research design probably generated a conservative estimate of effects. It is cautioned, however, that this effort focused on persons in an active mode with respect to approaching their work, even though they were in advanced phases of burnout; orthodox, high-stimulus OD designs might not prove as effective for those in a passive mode. 6 Tables, 1 Figure, 30 References. Modified HA

88T5766

Griffeth, Rodger W. & Hom, Peter W. (Dept Management Louisiana State U, Baton Rouge 70803). Some Multivariate Comparisons of Multinational Managers. In Multivariate Behavioral Research, 1987, 22, 2, Apr, 173-191.

† In an examination of different methods for clustering of nations, organizational attitudes & perceptions of 1,768 managers, from 15 Western nations employed by a multinational corporation were surveyed. The divergent views revealed by their questionnaire responses are discussed in terms of reconciling these differences, the need for additional research comparing competitive & alternative interpretations of smallest space analysis, & the use of independent methods (eg, cluster analysis). 2 Tables, 5 Figures, 45 References. Modified HA

88T5767

Grzyb, Gerard J. (U Wisconsin, Oshkosh 54901). Corporate Culture and Cultures in the Corporation. In Wisconsin Sociologist, 1988, 25, 1, winter, 25-34.

† A critical analysis of popular works on corporate culture shows cultural management to be a new strategy in management's long struggle to dominate the work process. Weaknesses are identified that will likely prevent this strategy from bringing about unchallenged managerial control. Managers can never prevent workers from engaging in a cultural process that seeks to adapt managerial culture to fit worker goals. 18 References. Modified HA

88T5768

Javor, Istvan. Szervezeti hatalmi struktúra, retardáció regulátorok és a vállalkozási innovációs hajlám (Organizational Power Structure, Retarding Regulators and Inclination of the Enterprises toward Innovation). Szociologia, 1984-85, 3-4, 277-296 (HUN).

† An attempt to explain why the inclination of Hungarian enterprises toward innovation is low, using the perspective of the sociology of organizations. It is argued that a distorted organizational power structure has engendered supply activities that, retarded & burdened with sanctions, serve to maintain & strengthen this power structure. Consequently, incentives & regulators that would have promoted organizational innovation are hindered or annihilated. The complexity of variables & processes within a given enterprise is emphasized. 27 References. Modified HA

88T5769

Johnston, George Pierson, III (Virginia Polytechnic Instit & State U, Blacksburg 24061). The Relationship among Organizational Involvement, Commitment, and Success: A Case Study of Amway Corporation. Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1890-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8719018.

88T5770

Kaufman, Allen, Karson, Marvin & Sohl, Jeffrey (U New Hampshire, Durham 03824). Corporate Factionalism and Corporate Solidarity in the 1980 and 1982 Congressional Elections. In Journal of Political and Military Sociology, 1987, 15, 2, Fall, 171-186.

† An examination of whether the corporate sector is able to develop a unified position to influence the public policy process, based on an analysis of corporate political action committee donations of $25,000+ to US House of Representative candidates in 1980 (N = 224 donations to 591 candidates) & in 1982 (N = 322 donations to 634 candidates). In both years, corporations fragmented by pursuing different donation strategies, & cohered by shunning candidate groupings favored by labor unions in 1980 & by supporting a group of probusiness candidates to whom conservatives were indifferent in 1982. The fragmentation followed sectoral lines in apparent competition for political advantage, while the coherence suggests "class-wide" interests. Implications of ongoing statistical research for understanding the current debate on corporate political behavior are explored. 3 Tables, 3 Figures, 23 References. Modified HA

88T5771

Kenny, Graham K., Butler, Richard J., Hickson, David J., Cray, David, Mallory, Geoffrey R. & Wilson, David C. (Dept Management San Diego State U, CA 92182). Strategic Decision Making: Influence Patterns in Public and Private Sector Organizations. Human Relations, 1987, 40, 9, Sept, 613-631.

† An investigation of the influence of internal & external units on strategic decision making in public & private sector organizations, using interview data (N not specified) on 150 cases of such processes in 30 organizations in GB. The analysis focuses on the involvement & influence of interested units relative to decision topics. Results indicate that some topics involved many interest units while others involved relatively few. Ways of comparing decision-making processes, including a classification of both decision topics & interested units, are suggested. 7 Tables, 48 References. F Rasmussen

88T5772

Kleser, Alfred (Faculty Business Administration U Mannheim, D-6800 1 Federal Republic Germany). From Asceticism to Administration of Wealth. Medieval Monasteries and the Pitfalls of Rationalization. Organization Studies, 1987, 8, 2, 103-123.

† Medieval monasteries are analyzed on the basis of Max Weber's concept of the process of rationalization, since they represent an important episode in this process. They were the first deliberately designed organization in the Occident. These rationally designed work organizations & the Puritan work ethic created by the monks led to the accumulation of immense wealth that was incompatible with the ideal of an ascetic life conducted in poverty. Thus, medieval monasteries, leaving no room for self-determination, provide the first example of the 'iron cage' of bureaucracies. 1 Figure, 35 References. HA

88T5773

Kolb, Deborah M. (Harvard Law School, Cambridge MA 02138). Dealing with Organizational Conflict: Implications from Theory. Negotiation Journal, 1987, 3, 2, Apr, 123-125.

person monastery data from Ronald L. Breiger, Scott A. Boorman, & Phipps Arabie ("An Algorithm for Clustering Relational Data with Applications to Social Network Analysis and Comparison with Multidimensional Scaling." Journal of Mathematical Psychology, 1975, 12, 328-383). 3 Tables, 2 Figures, 18 References. W. H. Stoddard

74 voluntary associations

88T5791

Entin, David Hudson (Boston U, MA 02215), Missions of Antipoverity Organizations: Change and Survival, * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1329-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8718239.

88T5792

Lee, Yoon Mo (Loyola U, Chicago IL 60611), Authoritarianism and Political Socialization in Voluntary Organizations: The Case of Koreans in the Chicago Area, * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1323-A-1324-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8718287.

88T5793

Tinker, Irene (Equity Policy Center, 4818 Drummond Ave Chevy Chase MD 20815), Street Foods: Testing Assumptions about Informal Sector Activity by Women and Men, Current Sociology/La Sociologie Contemporaine, 1987, 35, 3, winter, 1-110

† It is argued that inaccurate/incomplete data on the activities of "invisible entrepreneurs" in developing countries has misled planners & contributed to the failure of many development projects. In particular, the economic activities of Ru women have been neglected, leading to their increased impoverishment. After reviewing the scant literature on these invisible entrepreneurs, an in-depth profile of street food vendors is presented, a group that has been ignored because their activities are defined by development planners as transitional or peripheral, & by municipal authorities as illegal. The Street Foods Project involved interviews with & observations of vendors in provincial towns in 7 countries—the Philippines, Indonesia, Bangladesh, Senegal, Nigeria, Egypt, & Thailand between 1982 & 1986. Sellers were categorized by type of food & location of operation. Differences were revealed between the activities of M & F vendors though the income generated by street vending is critical to their family's survival, women are increasingly disadvantaged. A household survey of a random sample of street vendors' customers (N not provided) reveals the high demand for street food & the centrality of this activity to the Ur economy. Additional research is recommended to: (1) link the street food trade to natural food systems, (2) explore environmental issues surrounding such microenterprises, & (3) examine the differential values of M & F microentrepreneurs. 4 Tables, 313 References. K. Hyatt

SOMEONE has been looking for a magazine like SOMATICS — either you or someone you know. Give one of them a gift subscription. Here's how:

SOMATICS
1516 Grant Avenue, Suite 220
Novato, California 94947

Please enter my subscription to Somatics. I enclose:

- ☐ $10.00 for an individual subscription of one year.
- ☐ $15.00 for an institutional subscription of one year.
- ☐ $18.00 for an individual subscription of two years.

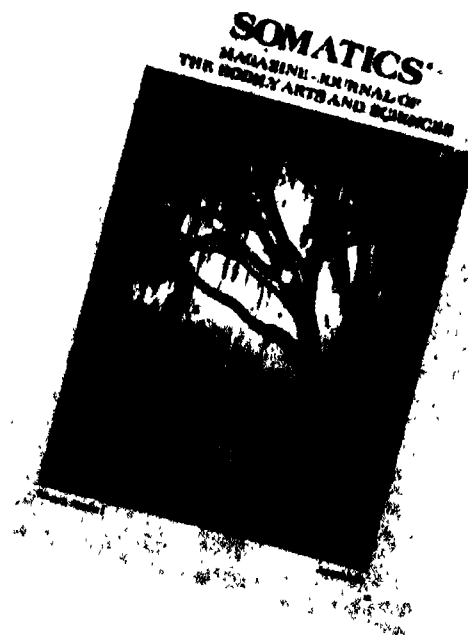

Name _____

Address _____

City _____

State _____

Zip _____

88T5782

Teulings, Ad W. M. (Sociology Organization Research Unit Instt Sociology 11 Amsterdam, NL-1012 WX Netherlands), A Political Bargaining Theory of Co-Determination—An Empirical Test for the Dutch System of Organizational Democracy, Organization Studies, 1987, 8, 1, 1-24

¶ Dutch Works Councils elected bodies of employee representatives influence strategic managerial decisions via the formal legal capacity to interrupt the process of decision making at some point before its implementation, ie. to halt the labor process by means of a work stoppage in traditional collective bargaining. An empirical study of Works Council politics, comparing fieldwork data on 2 samples (336 firms in 1980 & 63 firms in 1984), shows a strong but complex interrelationship between the use of legal interventions & of legitimate nonstatutory means of power. Influential, leading Works Councils follow a rational-political or a radical strategy. The economic crisis increases the gap between this vanguard of interrelated Works Councils & a majority of isolated Councils abstaining from action or accommodating by bureaucratic ritualism. 4 Tables, 2 Figures, 21 References. HA

88T5783

Vernon, Raymond, Ethics of Transnationalism, IBM Society, 1987, 24, 3(167), Mar-Apr, 53-56

¶ A discussion of transnational corporations (TNCs) & the issue of ethics. TNCs are distinguished from national enterprises in two respects: (1) some of their properties are located in foreign countries, & production can be shifted from one country to another, & (2) international transactions between affiliates of a transnational network are transactions internal to the TNC, & the terms are under the control of the TNC. Ethical implications of these features are compared with those of national industries that expand & contract according to their ability to compete in international markets. The need for guidelines for TNCs is discussed, & the many problems inherent in their development are assessed. F. Rasmussen

88T5784

Warner, Darrell Bruce (Case Western Reserve U, Cleveland OH 44106), The Influence of Organizational Stage of Development and Intraorganizational Level on Interorganizational Exchange, Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1905-A-1906-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8722243.

88T5785

Whitley, Richard (Manchester Business School Victoria U, Booth St West M15 6PB England), Taking Firms Seriously as Economic Actors: Towards a Sociology of Firm Behaviour, Organization Studies, 1987, 8, 2, 125-147

¶ The growth of large firms controlling & coordinating a wide range of resources & economic activities means that they have become significant economic actors whose choices & activities make a difference to economic outcomes. Three major sets of issues are raised: (1) the actions of firms are interdependent & collectively determine market behavior, (2) as significant economic actors, the organization & operating procedures of firms become important in understanding overall patterns of resource combination & use, & (3) the processes by which firms with particular characteristics become significant economic actors controlling substantial resources require elucidation. This leads to the consideration of general social processes & structures &, in particular, a consideration of how economic power relations structure firm behavior. Additionally, interdependencies between firms & other political-economic agencies have become more important & raise questions about the appropriate level of analysis for understanding firm behavior. 78 References. Modified HA

65 social network analysis

88T5786

Gorzka, Patricia A. (State U New York, Stony Brook 11790), International Networking: An Experience of American and Chinese Pediatric Nurses, Issues in Comprehensive Pediatric Nursing, 1986, 9, 5, 305-313

¶ The networking experiences of a group of US nurses participating in an educational exchange in the People's Republic of China are discussed. Exchange discussion centered on commonalities of concerns, eg. education of nurses, staffing patterns, well-child vs ill-child care, major health problems of childhood, clinical nursing techniques, patient education, & organizational policies. Participants became aware of the common core of caring that unites nurses throughout the world & its power to advance the health of the world community. 3 References. HA

88T5787

Gould, Roger V. (Dept Sociology U Arizona, Tucson 85721), Measures of Betweenness in Nonsymmetric Networks, Social Networks, 1987, 9, 3, Sept, 277-282

¶ Betweenness has commonly been regarded as a centrality measure than can only be employed with symmetric networks. Here, it is shown that computation of absolute partial betweenness scores is unproblematic for nonsymmetric networks as well, as long as ordered pairs of points are considered. The maximum absolute score is also derived, making it possible to compute "relative" betweenness scores that can be compared across nonsymmetric networks. 2 Figures, 5 References. HA

88T5788

McClain, Carol Shepherd (Center Social & Behavioral Sciences U California, San Francisco 94143), Some Social Network Differences between Women Choosing Home and Hospital Birth, Human Organization, 1987, 46, 2, summer, 146-152

¶ A comparison of the social network characteristics of women who planned to give birth at home with those who chose 1 of 2 types of in-hospital childbirth services, based on open-ended, semistructured interviews conducted with 45 women choosing home birth, 37 women choosing in-hospital alternative birth center care, & 32 women choosing conventional labor & delivery care. Rs were interviewed once during their pregnancies & again within 2 months postpartum. Women choosing home birth involved members of their social networks, particularly friends as opposed to relatives, in both their pregnancies & birthing experiences. Women choosing birth in the hospital tended, rather, to restrict social network involvement in their pregnancy & childbirth experiences to their husbands or partners. These patterns were reciprocal inasmuch as home-birth mothers were also more personally involved in the pregnancies & births of their friends than were hospital-birth mothers. The findings suggest that for women delivering at home pregnancy & childbirth have regained something of their former place within the domestic world of women & their families. 3 Tables, 18 References. AA

88T5789

Scott, John (Dept Sociology U Leicester, LE1 7RH England), Social Network Analysis, Sociology, 1988, 22, 1, Feb, 109-127

¶ A report on the development of social network analysis, tracing its origins in classical sociology & its more recent formulation in social scientific & mathematical work. It is argued that the concept of social network provides a powerful model for social structure, & that a number of important formal methods of social network analysis can be discerned. Social network analysis has been used in studies of kinship structure, social mobility, science citations, contacts among members of deviant groups, corporate power, international trade exploitation, class structure, & many other areas. A review of the formal models proposed in graph theory, multidimensional scaling, & algebraic topology is followed by extended illustrations of social network analysis in the study of community structure & interlocking directorships. 2 Figures, 77 References. HA

88T5790

Snijders, Tom A. B. & Stokman, Frans N. (Dept Social Sciences U Groningen, NL-9712 GC Netherlands), Extensions of Triad Counts to Networks with Different Subsets of Points and Testing Underlying Random Graph Distributions, Social Networks, 1987, 9, 3, Sept, 249-275

¶ Triads provide important information on the structure of social networks as revealed by sociometric data. A structural analysis of possible triad types is presented & used to develop an approach to triad censuses. Emphasis is given to identifying differences between choices within & between subgroups defined by characteristics independent of the network structure—eg. sex in relation to friendship choices. Methods are presented for within, between, & simultaneous analysis, & are applied to the Sam-

0700 social change and economic development

15 social change & economic development

88T5794

Arts, Wil. Naar een opleving van de economische sociologie? Recent literatuur over de problematische relatie tussen economie en sociologie (Toward a Revival of Economic Sociology? Recent Literature on the Problematic Relation between Economy and Sociology). In Mens en Maatschappij, 1988, 63, 1, Feb, 87-98. (DUT)

† A review essay on books by: (1) J. J. Klati, Filosofie van de economische wetenschappen (Philosophy of the Science of Economics), Leiden, the Netherlands: Martinus Nijhoff, 1987). (2) W. N. A. Klever, Archeologie van de economie. De economische theorie in the Griekse Oudheid (Archeology of the Economy. The Economic Theory in Greek Antiquity), Markant, 1986). (3) Economie, sociologie en psychologie: visies op integratie (Economy, Sociology, and Psychology: Visions on Integration), Keizer, P. K., & Soeters, J. (Eds.), Assen/Maastricht, the Netherlands: Van Gorcum, 1987). (4) Richard Swedberg, "Economic Sociology, Past and Present" (see SA 35 5/87R9602). (5) Th. Kutsch & G. Wiswede, Wirtschaftssoziologie (Economic Sociology), Stuttgart, Federal Republic Germany: Ferdinand Enke Verlag, 1986). (6) "Structures of Capital" (Zukin, S. & DiMaggio, P. [Eds.], Theory & Society, 1986, 15, 1-2 (see abstracts in SA 35 2)). & (7) K. Brunner, Mensbeeld en 'Maatschappij'-opvatting (Human Image and "Societal" View), Rotterdam, Netherlands: Rotterdamse Monetair Studies No. 26 (see listings in IRPS No. 43)). Practitioners of other social sciences look up to economy-as-a-science with veneration, sometimes mixed with suspicion. In these works, the viewpoint of economy as "the queen of the social sciences," comparable to the theoretical tradition of natural science, is demonstrated. M. Barker

88T5795

Bialón, Lidia (Instytut Economic & Social Sciences Warsaw Technical U., PL-00-061 Poland). Research and Development Potential of Polish Industry, Scientometrics, 1987, 12, 3-4, Sept, 163-177.

† A methodology for the investigation of research intensity in industry is described. Data collected by the Chief Central Statistical Office of Poland are used to determine the research intensity levels of Polish industries. This approach can also be used to plan development in industry. 4 Tables. Modified HA

88T5796

Blacking, John (Queens U., Belfast BT7 1NN Northern Ireland). Development Studies and the Reinvention of Tradition, In World Development, 1987, 15, 4, Apr, 527-532.

† Comparative studies of development have practical significance for the UK in three ways: (1) the presence of common problems in developed & developing countries, (2) the influence of developing countries on problems of European countries, & (3) the usefulness of comparative studies in developing general models of social transformations. An anthropological approach to development, in which commonalities between pre-Ur & Ur societies are recognized, is recommended. Though the UK is a developed country, it shares many problems with developing countries, as well as their cultural diversity. A need is seen to reinvent the culture of the UK through rational choices. 16 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T5797

Bort, John R. (Dept Sociology/Anthropology/Economics East Carolina U., Greenville NC 27834). The Impact of Development of Panama's Small-Scale Fishermen, In Human Organization, 1987, 46, 3, fall, 233-242.

† Panama's fisheries have been increasingly integrated into international seafood marketing systems over the past several decades. This has been stimulated by high international market prices for shrimp & the efforts of international development agencies. Over the past two decades the traditional small-scale fisheries of Panama have undergone rapid & dramatic change as a result. The transition that has occurred in the small-scale fisheries in the area of Azuero Peninsula is traced, & the resulting structural changes in fishing & marketing patterns are examined. The analysis indicates that formerly more diversified small-scale fishermen have become increasingly specialized. They have become dependent on world markets. Relationships to resources have changed, the importance of capital investment in fishing equipment has increased, & middlemen have emerged as major beneficiaries of the changes in the small-scale fisheries. 3 Tables, 25 References. HA

88T5798

Cassis, Y. (U Geneva, CH-1211 4 Switzerland). Merchant Bankers and City Aristocracy, In The British Journal of Sociology, 1988, 39, 1, Mar, 114-120.

Reply, 121-126.

† A critique of S. D. Chapman's arguments (see SA 34 5/86R1165) concerning the position of bankers in late nineteenth-century British society. Chapman refutes the view that bankers were integrated into aristocratic circles, & maintains that the rise of nonaristocratic groups of merchant bankers, private bankers, & merchants was a significant feature of London's SE vitality & position as the center of international financial activity. Analysis of various social indicators (particularly education & marriages) reveals that city bankers were strongly integrated into the landed aristocracy. Differences between business achievement & SS are emphasized. In Reply to Youssef Cassis, S. D. Chapman (Dept of History, U of Nottingham, England) continues to question whether all merchant bankers were totally integrated within the indigenous landholding aristocracy. Rather, there was a diverse cultural mix of ethnic minorities who entered merchant banking & established successful dynasties, some of which formed liaisons with the aristocracy over a period of generations. Thus, there was no "City aristocracy" as Cassis describes it, problems of definition are addressed. K. Hyatt

88T5799

Dickens, David R. & Rucker, Robert E. (Dept Sociology U Nevada, Las Vegas 89154). Perspectives and Conceptions of Development in Third World Nations, International Journal of Contemporary Sociology, 1987, 24, 1-2, Jan-Apr, 45-56.

† The modern concept of development is a product of a long-standing Western intellectual concern with progress. Subsequent concern with the practical & theoretical application of the concept to the Third World arose more recently with the establishment of the newly independent nations of Africa, Asia & Latin America. Here, theories of development are discussed in their proper historical & substantive contexts, including: modernization theories, dependency approaches, Marxian approaches, computer-based systems models, & ethical approaches to development. AA

88T5800

Drabek, Anne Gordon (c/o World Development, 1717 Massachusetts Ave NW Suite 501 Washington DC 20036). Development Studies and Contemporary Change in Britain: A Symposium Editor's Introductory Note, In World Development, 1987, 15, 4, Apr, 501-502.

† An introduction to a symposium on "The Relevance of Development Studies and Contemporary Change in Britain" held in London, England, in May 1985, which forms part of this journal issue. Only selected papers of interest to the broader international community are presented (see abstracts in SA 36 3). Emphasis is given to the effort to comprehend the links between understanding of societies in GB & abroad. W. H. Stoddard

88T5801

Dronkers, J. (Vakgroep Sociologie Katholieke U Brabant, NL-5000 LE Tilburg Netherlands). De bijdrage van de groei in onderwijsdeelname aan de economische groei 1960-1980 (Educational Expansion and Economic Output in the Netherlands 1960-1980), In Mens en Maatschappij, 1988, 63, 1, Feb, 44-63. (DUT)

Comment, 64-66.

† An aggregate production function framework was used to examine pos-

STUDIES OF MEANING LANGUAGE & CHANGE

Language interpreted as a collection of interacting idiolects, less than perfect as a means of interpreting experience. An interpretive epistemology which also emphasises difficulties of communication and differences between individuals. An object-relations theory of human action. Plus the application of these ideas to cultural problems.

Edited by David Wells, and published three times each year by Rain Publications, 6 Carmarthen Road, Westbury on Trym, Bristol, England BS9 4DU.

Some recent articles and issues

Scientists, priority and the schizoid personality (SMLC 13)
Theories as first approximations, only (SMLC 16)
Out of this world: Wellek and Popper (SMLC 16)
Mathematicians and dissidence (SMLC 17)
General concepts, and teaching (SMLC 18)

No. 19, July 1987

Idiolectal interactionism
Rational, corational, irrational
Science, beauty and corationality

No. 20, November 1987

Epistemology of abstract games and mathematics

ORDER FORM: STUDIES OF MEANING, LANGUAGE & CHANGE

Rain Publications, 6 Carmarthen Road, Westbury on Trym, Bristol, England BS9 4DU

Please send me the current issue, SMLC 20 (£1 to individuals or institutions, prepaid.)

Please enter my subscription for 1 year, starting with issue _____.

(Subscription rates: for any three consecutive issues, £3 for individuals, prepaid, £5 to institutions, which will be invoiced.)

I enclose my cheque for _____ / Please invoice.

Date _____

Name

Address

.....

88T5810

Hill, Richard Child & Negrey, Cynthia (Michigan State U, East Lansing 48824), Deindustrialization in the Great Lakes, Urban Affairs Quarterly, 1987, 22, 4, June, 580-597

† The debate over deindustrialization—its nature, extent, & implications in the US—is reviewed, & criteria for gauging deindustrialization in locality, region, or nation are discussed. Statistics from the US Dept of Labor for 1979-1985 indicate that the Great Lakes region is experiencing deindustrialization: the region is undergoing a structural decline in manufacturing, it claims a shrinking share of the nation's industrial employment, & employment growth in other sectors of the regional economy has not compensated for job loss in manufacturing. Although the debate about appropriate government responses to deindustrialization has subsided at the federal level, industrial policy is still a vital issue on many state & local agendas in the Great Lakes. 6 Tables, 31 References. Modified HA

88T5811

Kabagarama, Daisy & Mulford, Charles L. (c/o Mulford Iowa State U, Ames 50010), The Impact of Economic Dependence and Overurbanization on Third World Development, International Journal of Contemporary Sociology, 1987, 24, 1-2, Jan-Apr, 70-80

* A structural model is proposed for the relationship of dependency to overurbanization, income distribution, & development in Third World countries. Gross national product per capita & infant mortality are taken as measures of development. Statistical data from World Development Report, 1984 (World Bank, New York: Oxford U Press, 1984) are used to estimate this model for 99 developing countries. Results support the conclusion that dependence on foreign capital favors development, although some long-term effects are apparent that may counter this trend. 5 Tables, 1 Figure. W. H. Stoddard

88T5812

Knaap, Gerrit (U Wisconsin, Green Bay 54301), Social Organization, Profit Cycles, and Statewide Land Use Controls: Welcome to Oregon—Enjoy Your Visit, The Journal of Applied Behavioral Science, 1987, 23, 3, Aug, 371-385

* Land use control in the US has in many places been elevated to higher, more extensive levels of government, causing considerable controversy as to whose interests such reform serves. A political-economic analysis of statewide land use controls is offered here, focusing on the land use program of Ore. Using official data based on the state's population characteristics, industries, & elections featuring referenda to repeal the land use statutes, it is suggested that statewide land use controls in Ore are supported by identifiable private interests: amenity-based industries, high-income professionals & technicians, & citizens in Ur areas. It is suggested how changes in the structure of Ore society—reflecting the development of the state's economy led to the development of statewide land use controls. 4 Tables, 30 References. HA

88T5813

Law, John (Dept Sociology/Social Anthropology/Social Work U Keele, Staffordshire ST5 5BG England), On the Social Explanation of Technical Change: The Case of the Portuguese Maritime Expansion, U Technology and Culture, 1987, 28, 2, Apr, 227-252

† A nonreductionist sociological perspective is offered on the origins & development of technological artifacts, using an approach that parallels the system-building method of the history of technology. A case study of the Portuguese transoceanic experience between the thirteenth & fifteenth centuries is provided in order to reinterpret the concepts of "system," "adaptation," & "technological testability." It reveals how entrepreneurial activity juxtaposes heterogeneous elements in a stable system, & how the shape taken by a system is typically a function of conflict. Adaptation describes how an artifact or practice maintains stability in the midst of this struggle between potentially dissociating forces; an example is provided of the development of the caravel—a sailing ship particularly suited to offshore exploration. The social engineering processes that shaped the development of the metrication system for navigation are explored, & the importance of technological testing is demonstrated. Problems of building successful systems within a heterogeneous network are described, & it is shown how complex social, scientific, economic, & political factors interact to effect technological change. K. Hyatt

88T5814

Lipton, Michael (Inst Development Studies U Sussex, Falmer Brighton BN1 9RH England), Development Studies: Findings, Fron- tiers and Fights, U World Development, 1987, 15, 4, Apr, 517-525.

† Low incomes & relatively low mobility in less developed countries limit the scope for "lessons" for developed countries. Three areas remain, however: analogues, interactions, & conceptual transfers. Development studies have moved away from adding up individual responses to change, toward examining interactions that produce systemic outcomes. Examples are analyzed from the evolving debates about (1) peasant response, as related to tenure & risk, (2) farm systems vs village systems analysis, (3) the impact of the green revolution on the poor; & (4) unemployment. Development studies show analysts of developed countries—especially in the case of unemployment—that adding-up approaches, ignoring interactions & total systems, produce very misleading results. 34 References. HA

88T5815

Marcotte, Paul & Coughenour, C. Milton (Dept Sociology U Kentucky, Lexington 40506), The Dominican Republic: A Case of Colonial Underdevelopment and the Present Socio-Political Crisis, International Journal of Contemporary Sociology, 1987, 24, 3-4, July-Oct, 69-84

† Two major paradigms concerned with the analysis of international development are discussed: logical positivism & critical theory. While the former has been the most predominant paradigm traditionally, in recent years the critical paradigm has become more popular, particularly with those theorists interested in applied situations. As the paradigms have different orienting assumptions & applications, it has been suggested that the micro-informational approach should be incorporated into the political-economy approach, so that scientific information can be utilized for a more enlightened plan of action. Here, the critical approach is utilized to analyze the current SE constraints to development in the Dominican Republic. The historical phases of Dominican Republic development are traced, & current SE constraints identified: eg, land tenure, population dynamics, agricultural production & trade, & foreign debt that have resulted from its historical development. It is argued that unless these structural constraints & the inherent contradictions within current development policies are recognized, the promise of development will not be fulfilled. 1 Figure. AA

88T5816

Mayadas, Nazneen S. (Graduate School Social Work U Texas, Arlington 76019), Refugees: A Consequence of Rapid Developmental and Socio-Political Change in the Developing World, International Journal of Contemporary Sociology, 1987, 24, 3-4, July-Oct, 43-55

† A discussion of vulnerable refugee groups in the developing world, with particular focus on women & children. Programs designed to alleviate the distress of these groups are described, using illustrations from the UN High Commission for Refugees projects in Africa & Asia. The foci of these programs have been (1) to provide immediate help during the asylum stage, & (2) to prepare women for IF entry in their countries of resettlement. AA

88T5817

Meinert, Roland & Kohn, Ezra (School Social Work U Missouri, Columbia 65211), Social Development: A Conceptual Update, International Journal of Contemporary Sociology, 1987, 24, 1-2, Jan-Apr, 93-102

† Conceptually, educationally, & in application, the social development approach in recent decades has undergone refinements. Here, the scope of social development theory & related concepts are examined, & a revised conceptualization of social development is presented. The potential of the social development approach to contribute to social justice & peace is also discussed. 2 Figures. Modified AA

88T5818

Mela, Alfredo & Pellegrini, Max (Dipartimento Scienze e Tecniche i processi insediamento Politecnico Torino, I-10129 Italy), Diffusione urbana e ritorno alla città: due aspetti dei processi di trasformazione dei sistemi territoriali (Urban Diffusion and Return to the City. Two Aspects of the Processes of Transformation of Spatial Systems), Quaderni di Sociologia, 1987, 33, 8, 165-175. (ITA)

† Two processes that have affected the Ur systems of highly developed countries in recent years are examined: (1) the counterurbanization process, which overturns the previously observable trend toward the concentration of the population in metropolitan areas; & (2) the increasing attractiveness of Ur cores for some social groups, particularly the Mcs &

sible effects of the educational level of the LF on economic output-labor & capital (the two basic factors of production). Despite the application of several alternatives for educational levels, no evidence of effects of educational level was found. Several explanations of this result are discussed. In Commentaar op J. Dronkers, "De bijdrage van de groei in onderwijsdeelneming aan de economische groei 1960-1980" (Comment on J. Dronkers's "Educational Expansion and Economic Output in the Netherlands 1960-1980"), J. M. M. Ritzen (Erasmus U, Rotterdam, the Netherlands) reiterates Dronkers's main hypotheses & basically agrees with his research, but contends that Dronkers was unnecessarily restrictive. 3 Tables, 20 References. M. Barker

88T5802

Elke, John F. (School Social Work U Iowa, Iowa City 52242). Economic and Social Development at the Community Level: Problems and Potential in Zimbabwe. International Journal of Contemporary Sociology 1987, 24, 3-4, July-Oct, 127-139.

¶ Universal education, following Zimbabwean independence in 1980, has increased the employment expectations of its citizens. The formal sector, however, is providing jobs for less than 10% of the youth who finish their schooling. Small scale enterprises (SSEs) are increasingly seen as one strategy for employment creation. If properly approached, SSEs have great potential for strengthening Ru economies. The strategy has suffered, however, from several problems: lack of conceptual clarity, confusion of purposes, failure to integrate the strategy into a larger social development philosophy, inadequate community economic analysis, & poor planning & management. These problems & potentials are analyzed & discussed. AA

88T5803

Expinal, Rosario (Kellogg Inst International Studies U Notre Dame, IN 46556). Labor, Politics and Industrialization in the Dominican Republic. Economic and Industrial Democracy 1987, 8, 2, May, 183-212.

¶ The development of the Dominican labor movement is examined in the context of economic & political changes that have taken place in the Dominican Republic since the Rafael Trujillo dictatorship. It is shown how the subordinate role of the Wc in Dominican society has changed little despite the industrialization process initiated in the 1940s, & the establishment of a democratic government in 1978. Both under authoritarian & democratic rule, the Dominican labor movement has been a weak political force, largely excluded from the economic & political benefits associated with industrialization & the modernization of the economy & the political system. Comparative illustrations are provided, & themes for future discussion suggested. 8 Tables, 40 References. Modified HA

88T5804

Estes, Richard J. (U Pennsylvania, Philadelphia 19104-6299). Beyond Famine Relief: The Continuing Crisis in Development. International Journal of Contemporary Sociology 1987, 24, 3-4, July-Oct, 27-41.

¶ Comparatively little progress has been made in alleviating starvation brought on by famines & droughts in sub-Saharan Africa. The reason for these international failures to reduce world hunger is that most relief efforts have been focused on immediate, time-limited, & emergency assistance to starving peoples. Only minimal attention is being given to the resolution of the underlying social, political, & economic factors that are at the root of growing world hunger: increasing population pressures, degradation of the fragile ecosystem that exists within these countries, badly implemented land reforms, the failure of food deficit nations to establish viable food protectionism, global inflationary pressures, high levels of political instability within many food deficit nations, & ineffective North-South development strategies. All these facets of the recurrent global food crisis are explored, & a comprehensive approach to reducing the underlying causes of famine over the long term is suggested. AA

88T5805

Form, William & Bae Kyu Han (Dept Sociology Ohio State U, Columbus 43210). Convergence Theory and the Korean Connection. U Social Forces 1988, 66, 3, Mar, 618-644.

¶ Convergence theory has been charged with having a Western, Mc, capitalistic bias. As a theory of industrial growth, it holds that industrial workers everywhere adjust rapidly to factory discipline, evolve similar patterns of social participation inside & outside the workplace, increase their involvement in Ur-industrial society as they increase their contact naire & interview data from manual workers (N = 299) employed by the Hyundai Automobile Co, Ulsan, Korea, collected in 1983, were compared to data on automobile workers in 4 Western-oriented countries (Form, William, Blue-Collar Stratification: Auto Workers in Four Countries, Princeton U Press, 1976) to test the applicability of this theory to a non-Western context. Results indicate that, like workers elsewhere, Koreans adapted quickly to industrial & related social systems, that their Ru background & Confucian heritage did not interfere with their adaptation, & that those who were most exposed to modern technology participated most in social systems inside & outside of the factory. Despite their socialization to support hierarchy, Koreans quickly developed a Wc mentality. It is concluded that some tenets of convergence theory are robust. 5 Tables, 42 References. Modified HA

88T5806

Gandhi, Raj S. (U Calgary, Alberta T2N 1N4). Modernization and Development in the Third World: A Critical Assessment. International Journal of Contemporary Sociology 1987, 24, 1-2, Jan-Apr, 20-30.

¶ A critical appraisal of theoretical & empirical literature on modernization, development, & the Third World. Five major approaches are contrasted: ideal-typical, diffusionist, psychological, historical-radical, & Marxist. Statistical evidence suggests that modernization & development programs tend to worsen the situation of the poorest people in a Third World country. Efforts to recreate the West's economic position are supported more by elites than by the poor. Improvements should not aim at the Western model, but at more basic goals comparable to those partially achieved by China. The attainment of critical consciousness is essential for such goals to be reached. W. H. Stoddard

88T5807

Gonzales-Peralta, Carlos Ricardo (Cornell U, Ithaca NY 14853). Guatemalan Social Transformation and Its Role in the Etiology of Onchocerciasis. Dissertation Abstracts International: 4 The Humanities and Social Sciences 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1330-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8715612.

88T5808

Hayden, F. Gregory (Dept Economics U Nebraska, Lincoln 68588). Evolution of Time Constructs and Their Impact on Socioeconomic Planning. U Journal of Economic Issues 1987, 21, 3, Sept, 1281-1312.

¶ SE: planning requires the concept of timeliness. This is in contrast with the neoclassical concept of linear time & present worth maximization. Time is not a natural phenomenon, it is a societal construct that has evolved from event synchronization in the early past, through industrial linear time, to the real time analysis of the present. Future development will be social time necessary for coordinating & sequencing social events & deliveries in a timely manner. Technological systems require a different time analysis than one that tries to fill the passing time of the clock with production events. 7 Figures. AA

88T5809

Henry, Miriam (Education Studies Dept Brisbane Coll Advanced Education, Kelvin Grove Queensland 4059 Australia). Life on the Confluent: The Aftermath of Amalgamation. British Journal of Sociology of Education 1987, 8, 4, 357-378.

¶ The ongoing rationalization of tertiary education in Australia is symptomatic, it is argued here, of the deeper tensions inherent in corporate capitalism. One aspect of the rationalization process—amalgamation—is examined on the basis of case studies carried out at two amalgamated Colls, with the aim of demystifying the rhetoric of efficiency & effectiveness underpinning current managerialist approaches to education. The impact of amalgamation on Coll life—increased bureaucratization & centralization of power harnessed to a form of entrepreneurial zeal, resulting in administrative inefficiencies & increasing staff alienation—may be partly explained, it is suggested, by the contradictions & limitations of the ideological/economic parameters within which the amalgamation policy was conceived, namely the "Razor Gang" proposals of the former Liberal government. This in turn, it is suggested, reflects something of the interrelationship between education policy, the fiscal crisis of capitalism, & the legitimization crisis of the state. 1 Appendix, 40 References.

88T5827

Prattis, J. Iain (Dept Sociology & Anthropology Carleton U, Ottawa Ontario K1S 5B6). Organizational Change and Adaptation: Community Cooperatives and Capital Control in the Western Isles of Scotland. American Anthropologist, 1987, 89, 3, Sept, 567-580

† In 1984, the community cooperative on Barra (Western Isles of Scotland) expanded to incorporate a limited company Iain Bharrachd whose major purpose was the substitution of collective marketing of shellfish by island fishermen for the previous system of individualistic marketing. This & other changes represent adaptations to falling prices & other impacts of the wider economic system. These changes are interpreted in the context of the history of the shellfish industry & the community cooperative. The limited company is analyzed as a transitional organization to permit the community to adapt to economic changes. Considerations of risk, technological change, resource conservation, & community dynamics suggest that cooperative organizations in peripheral areas perform complex functions, including alleviating social unrest. Thus cooperatives have both transformative & resistive roles. The Barra community cooperative appears to be following a strategy of transformation & not simply of resistance. 20 References. Modified HA

88T5828

Rammert, Werner (Fakultät Soziologie U Bielefeld, D-4800 Federal Republic Germany). Mechanisierung und Modernisierung des privaten Haushalts: Grenzen ökonomischer Rationalisierung und Tendenzen sozialer Innovation (Mechanization and Modernization in the Private Household: Limits of Economic Rationalization and Tendencies of Social Innovation). Österreichische Zeitschrift für Soziologie, 1987, 12, 4, 6-20 (GER)

* An examination of the gains & losses of industrial modernization & the limits of the consumerist paradigm. The investment in new household technologies will not always lead to an economic boom such as in the postwar period. Some limits to persistent mechanization & rationalization of home activities are identified, & it is argued that not modernization itself, but the one-dimensional path of industrialist-consumerist modernization will lead to unwanted side effects & to a monopoly of this mode of provision. If labor market conditions become worse & if cultural orientations toward life & work change, then this closure functions as a trap of modernization. An open path to modernization is urged, & social innovations of the new cultural movements are described that represent elements of a postconsumerist mode of provision that is open to plural lifestyles. 1 Figure, 48 References. AA

88T5829

Roelefs, Joan. Foundations and Social Change Organizations: The Mask of Pluralism. ♦ The Insurgent Sociologist, 1987, 14, 3, fall, 31-72

† Assumptions of pluralism in the US have been widely critiqued, & it has been recognized that US political culture is dominated by elite organizations. This understanding is applied to the current apparent populism of the US. A critical analysis of the "third sector" of private nonprofit organizations shows that such organizations act largely to support capitalism & to keep social services out of government control. They also have acted to coopt reform movements by offering them funds & training, a process that accounts for much of the vanishing of radicalism from the US political scene. Case studies of civil rights, poor people's, & community organizations illustrate this thesis. 107 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T5830

Sachs, Carolyn E. (Dept Agricultural Economics & Ru Sociology Pennsylvania State U, University Park 16802). Women, Minorities, and Children as Special Targets of Development in Third World Nations. International Journal of Contemporary Sociology, 1987, 24, 3-4, July-Oct, 113-126

† Women, children, & ethnic minorities often represent major portions of the poor populations in developing countries. The role of these three groups in the development process is examined, with emphasis on the need for structural changes in the regional, sexual, & racial distribution of power. 1 Table. W. H. Stoddard

88T5831

Shariati, Mehdi S. (Dept Sociology Kansas State U, Manhattan 66506). Modernization Theory and Post World War Two Global Political Economy: A Critique of the Sociology of Development. Transformations, 1987, 2, 2-3, 18-32

† Classical theories of social change have characteristically opposed two types of societies, conceived as traditional & modern. Three major models have been proposed in current development theory for the change from one to the other: the ideal-typical index approach (with pattern variable & historical state variants), the diffusionist approach, & the psychological stages approach. A critique is presented of these theories & of the accelerated urbanization & industrialization they support in Third World countries, which represent a dependent & uneven form of capitalist development. 56 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T5832

Sharma, Satish & Mohan, Raj P. (Dept Social Work U Nevada, Las Vegas 89154). Third World Development: Some Analytical and Empirical Considerations. International Journal of Contemporary Sociology, 1987, 24, 3-4, July-Oct, 1-14

† A discussion of disciplinary, analytical, & empirical considerations relevant to the study of Third World development. The disciplinary & analytical concerns voiced by Alvin Gouldner, Leslie White, & Georges Gurwitsch, & echoed by many others, are examined, & attention is directed toward the concepts of social change & depth-level analysis. The relevance of social symbols, collective values, & social indicators is pointed out. Some historical, economic, political, sociocultural, & ideological factors relevant to the study of Third World development are also discussed. AA

88T5833

Stover, Ronald G. & Baer, Linda L. (Dept Ru Sociology South Dakota State U, Brookings 57007). Invisible to Development: The Status of Women and Children. International Journal of Contemporary Sociology, 1987, 24, 3-4, July-Oct, 57-68

† An investigation of the effects of development on two vulnerable segments of society: women & children. International survey data were used to construct indices of development & quality of life (QoL) for two points in time: 1960 & 1980. The relationship between the current level of development & the current QoL of both women & children was determined, along with the relationship between the change in the level of development from 1960 to 1980 & the current QoL of both women & children. Findings suggest that improvements in the QoL of women & children are not strictly a function of economic development. While the two factors were somewhat related for the countries of South America (a continent long since freed from colonialism & characterized by a moderate degree of development), the two were virtually independent for the countries of Africa, which have only recently been freed from colonialism & are still in the early stages of development. Clearly, the stage of the development process & the timing of that process must be considered as critical variables in the relationship between development & QoL. 2 Tables. Modified AA

88T5834

Toye, John (Dept Development Policy & Planning University Coll Swansea, Singleton Park SA2 8PP Wales). Development Studies and Change in Contemporary Britain. World Development, 1987, 15, 4, Apr, 503-515

† Development studies have illuminated the context of change in GB: ie, the link between Third World industrialization & British deindustrialization, the sources of ethnic diversification in GB, & the likely results of enlargement of the European Economic Community. Development studies also help to understand problems related to nonmaximizing behavior, policies of dualism, the promotion of an informal sector of the economy, & reliance on microentrepreneurship. The many complexities of the idea of managed change have also been investigated, revealing the naive not only of grandiose planning & government interventions to guarantee equity, but also the alternative shibboleths of economic growth, Japanese-style management, & minimal government. It is argued that this research is worthy of continuing & increased financial support from funding agencies. 76 References. Modified AA

88T5835

Wade-Brown, Anthony. Lettere dal veld (Letters from the Veld). ♦ La Critica Sociologica, 1987, 81, Apr-June, 45-55 (ITA)

† The initial stage of a project to construct wells & sanitation services in Zimbabwe is described. First impressions of conditions in South Africa & Zimbabwe are presented from a visitor's viewpoint. Aspects discussed include life in a wealthy, white suburb of Johannesburg; the road journey to Bulawayo; schools & other public facilities in Bulawayo; & Zimbabwe's Ru system of communal lands. C. Waters

Uses. Various studies, especially by Italian Ur sociologists, are reviewed, analyzing their different viewpoints on these phenomena. The sociological approach makes it possible to focus on the correspondence between spatial & sociocultural transformations, especially with respect to the present phase of transition from industrial to postindustrial society. It is shown that the phenomena discussed are not contradictory processes, but two different & sometimes complementary features of the present reorganization of Ur & territorial systems. 45 References. Modified HA

8815819

Midgley, James (School Social Work Louisiana State U, Baton Rouge 70803). The Third World Nations: Insights into the Colonial Past and Present Contexts of Development, International Journal of Contemporary Sociology, 1987, 24, 1-2, Jan-Apr, 11-19.

¶ A historical & analytical framework is provided for the topics covered in this special journal issue on the theme of "The Contexts and Contours of Development in the Third World Nations" (see abstracts of other articles in SA 36-3). The Third World emerges both as a phenomenon & construct as a consequence of nationalist struggles for independence against European imperialism & colonial subjugation. It is argued that since these struggles occurred, the Third World's common features & sense of solidarity have weakened & the resultant diversity of recent trends will eventually render the construct obsolete. Although the Third World societies will again occupy a position akin to that which existed before the advent of European imperial expansion, diversity may be subsumed under a greater & more integrated world system, provided that new imperialist forces can be combatted. Modified AA

8815820

Mohan, Brij & Sharma, Prem (Louisiana State U, Baton Rouge 70803). Beyond the Third World: A Critical Holography of the Human Condition, International Journal of Contemporary Sociology, 1987, 24, 1-2, Jan-Apr, 126-133.

¶ Nuclearism & its allied forces have changed the international calculus of global relationships, which calls for redefinition of societal & regional boundaries & refutation of anachronistic concepts such as the "Third World." Here, bioglobalism is discussed as an emerging paradigm of human survival that comprises three conceptual-analytical elements: (1) intersocietal linkages, (2) historico-political processes & external developments in the so-called Third World, & (3) dialectics of freedom. Complexities that characterize the Third World experience are identified: conflict-cooperation, diversity-unity, colonial oppression-freedom, soft state-order, arms bread & butter, & ideology. Bioglobalism is emphasized as a paradigm of international security & coexistence, i.e., human liberation is a global challenge to characterize it as a Third World issue is to lose sight of the universal reality. A bioglobal culture fosters freedom & justice whereas neoglobalism merely perpetuates evil. Modified AA

8815821

Mohan, Raj P. & Sharma, Satish (Dept Sociology Auburn U, AL 36849). Progress, Social Change, and Development: An Ideological Assessment, International Journal of Contemporary Sociology, 1987, 24, 1-2, Jan-Apr, 1-10.

¶ A critical examination of the concepts of progress, change, & development in both their historical & contemporary usages. The concept of progress is viewed from the perspective of the materialists, the Fabians, cultural evolutionists, & inevitable & automatic progress. The concept of development is examined from the perspectives of modernization, structuralism, dependency, & Marxism. The ethical & moral perspective is also used. AA

88T5822

Nagy, Endre. Novekedesi polus, legitimitas, notabilizacio (Growth Pole, Legitimacy, Notabilization), Szociologia, 1984-85, 3-4, 239-259. (HU N)

¶ Economic growth is analyzed as a process taking place in space, & the concept of the "growth pole" proposed by François Perroux & Jacques R. Boudeville (no citation information provided) is adapted to explain the Hungarian situation. It is argued that the primary causal factor of growth is the capacity of a given unit of production to acquire development resources from the superior organs of economic management. A survey of economic works produced over the last fifteen years illustrates that the economic order is embedded in the political one, the system of investments & economic institutions, as well as the growth opportunities of any given unit of production, are determined by socialist power relations. The strategy & goals of economic production require contradictory types of economic planning, a contradiction also inherent in the demand for the legitimacy of political power. The interdependence of the growth pole & the local society is demonstrated, with focus on the significant role of local authorities & notables. 81 References. Modified HA

88T5823

Offe, Claus (U Bielefeld, D-4800 Federal Republic Germany). The Utopia of the Zero-Option: Modernity and Modernization as Normative Political Criteria, Praxis International, 1987, 7, 1, Apr, 1-24.

Translated by John Torrey.

¶ During the last twenty-five years, two perspectives on modernity have emerged in the social sciences: modernization theory, which views the modernized West as a model for other nations, & the critique of modernity. An attempt is made to find a middle ground between these judgments on modern society. The concept of modernity is considered to have four dimensions: material production, cultural reproduction, politics, & public law. Developments in all these spheres have led to two basic problems: loss of freedom of choice, & inefficacy of the order & steering mechanisms. Both the neoconservative Right & the postindustrial Left criticize these problems, though the Right emphasizes the values of modernity while accepting the means of modernization, & the Left takes the opposite view. A further range of postmodern regressive potentialities that would reject both is possible as an alternative to conventional social democracy. The problem, however, is to avoid this regressive potential through such means as the enhancement, the recombination, & the unburdening of social steering mechanisms, of these options, the last appears most attainable. 18 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T5824

Palley, Howard A. (School Social Work & Community Planning U Maryland, Baltimore 21201). The Debt Crisis: An Examination of Pressures and Strains in the Americas, International Journal of Contemporary Sociology, 1987, 24, 3-4, July-Oct, 15-26.

¶ The Latin American debt crisis poses a threat to the political & economic stability of the Western hemisphere. Overcoming the debt crisis is necessary so that debtor nations in Latin America can proceed with capital development, critically needed social development, & the amelioration of wide disparities in wealth. To do so will require radical restructuring of international economic, monetary, & commercial relations. The US as a key "creditor actor" has an essential role to play in such restructuring. Its failure to play a constructive role can contribute to increased economic hardship & political instability in Latin America. 1 Table. AA

88T5825

Paradeise, Catherine (Dept Sociologie U Lyon-II, F-69676 Bron Cedex France). Acteurs et institutions. La Dynamique des marchés du travail (Actors and Institutions: Labor Market Dynamics), Sociologie du Travail, 1988, 30, 1, 79-105. (FRE)

¶ The changing theoretical perspectives of French sociology & the renewed interest in individual behaviors are discussed. New possibilities for studying the labor market via a dialogue between sociologists & economists are investigated. Several of the most pertinent approaches are examined: the evolution of the sociology of Pierre Bourdieu, the theory of investment of forms formulated by T. Thévenot, & the societal analysis of M. Maurice, F. Sellier, & J.-J. Silvestre. An interactionist approach to labor markets is advocated; they are considered as the product of the dynamic interrelation of actors & institutions. Modified HA

88T5826

Penn, Roger & Scattergood, Hilda (Dept Sociology Lancaster U, Bailrigg LA1 4YW England). Continuities and Change in Skilled Work: A Comparison of Five Paper Manufacturing Plants in the UK, Australia and the USA, The British Journal of Sociology, 1988, 39, 1, Mar, 69-85.

¶ An examination of skilled manual work in the modern paper industry, focusing on changes in the pattern & organization of skilled work in three different sociopolitical environments—the US, the UK, & Australia. After discussing four current models of skilled work—the "skilling," Marxist "deskilling," social determination, & compensatory theories—observational & semistructured interview data collected at 5 paper mills during 1984/85 are presented. Results suggest that the distinction between skilled & nonskilled work is a fundamental feature of occupational differentiation in all 5 plants. In addition, the effects of technological change on a variety of skilled work are similar. However, intra-skilled conflicts over relative pay & demarcation lines are shown to be affected by the wider sociopolitical environment. 2 Appendixes, 24 References. Modified HA Countries, New York: Basil Blackwell, 1957) early formulation of the international demonstration effect explicitly eschewed the possibility that international emulation of the rich has anything to do with status seeking, or, to use Thorstein Veblen's phrase, with conspicuous consumption. An argument is put forth here in favor of a reassessment of Nurkse's formulation in the light of (1) recent analyses of advanced countries (eg Hirsch, F., The Social Limits to Growth, Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard U Press, 1976; Frank, R., "The Demand for Unobservable and Other Nonpositional Goods," American Economic Review, 1985, Mar., & Scitovsky, T., The Joyless Economy, New York: Oxford U Press, 1976) that show the powerful welfare implications of consumption based on status seeking; (2) the large sociological literature that has investigated the modernization process in developing countries. The analysis casts doubt on Nurkse's eschewal of status-seeking behavior at the international level & suggests an alternative view with a profoundly different set of welfare implications for the Third World. 2 Tables, 4 Figures, 35 References. HA

70 capitalism/socialism—world systems

88T5845

Bakan, Abigail B. (Dept Political Studies Queen's U, Kingston Ontario K7L 3N6), Plantation Slavery and the Capitalist Mode of Production: An Analysis of the Development of the Jamaican Labour Force, Studies in Political Economy, 1987, 22, spring, 73-99.

† A discussion of the role of slavery in the history of capitalist & precapitalist societies from a Marxist perspective, with focus on the transition from slavery to emancipation, spanning close to 100 years, in the development of the Jamaican LF. Though the Emancipation Act was passed by the British Parliament in 1883, the newly emancipated were reluctant to return to the plantations to labor for wages. Only when land availability relative to population began to decline (around the turn of the century) did more classical features become dominant among the direct producers. It is argued that, despite the variations in immediate relations of exploitation involved in slave labor, peasant agriculture, & wage labor, the capitalist mode of production predominated throughout this transition. Marxist interpretations are critically assessed, & the historical experiences of Jamaican workers in the postemancipation period are evaluated as a means of illustrating the validity of the approach. Modified AA

88T5846

Gulalp, Haldun (State U New York, Binghamton 13901), Capital Accumulation, Classes and the Relative Autonomy of the State, U Science and Society, 1987, 51, 3, fall, 287-313.

† An examination of changes in the concept of the "relative autonomy of the state" since its initial formulation by Nico Poulantzas (Political Power and Social Classes, London: NLB, 1973), who offered a liberal conception of the capitalist state in which the economic & political spheres were separated. This led to a notion of the state as an independent entity with a power distinct from the relations of class domination (in contrast to earlier Marxist conceptualizations), which was ultimately criticized as class-reductionist & expanded into the notion of "potential autonomy" by Theda Skocpol (eg, see States and Social Revolutions, New York: Cambridge U Press, 1979) & a model of class-state power "partnership" by F. Block & R. Miliband (see, respectively, "Beyond Relative Autonomy: State Managers as Historical Subjects," The Socialist Register, 1980, & "State Power and Class Interests," New Left Review, 1983, 138). Each of these conceptualizations is examined in detail, & it is argued that all suffer from their presumption of a separation between the economic & political. An alternative model is suggested in which the public & private modes of capital accumulation are separated instead, & the imperatives of state action defined by the requirements of a specific pattern of accumulation. In addition, the modalities in which the state carries out its role in maintaining & reproducing the relations of class domination are subject to concrete historical determinations. 28 References. K. Hyatt

88T5847

Križan, Mojmir (U Gottingen, D-3400 Federal Republic Germany), "Civil Society" and the Modernization of Soviet Type Societies, Praxis International, 1987, 7, 1, Apr., 90-110.

† In the context of general disillusionment concerning all existing varieties of (real-) socialist systems, the concept of "civil society" regains relevance. Some ambiguities of this concept are examined, & the incompatibility of the Marxist & Leninist revolutionary project of establishing a harmonious communist society with the existence of a civil society is demonstrated. It is argued that the resistance to one-party-rule & the totalitarian state in Eastern Europe can be understood as a process of learning about the emancipatory potential of civil society. The semantic problems of the concept of a "socialist civil society" are considered. It is concluded that the concepts of "socialist" & "civil society" are similar, & that, in the foreseeable future, economic liberalization in Middle-

European countries is likely. Modified AA

88T5848

Kukreja, Sunil & Miley, James D. (c/o Miley, Dept Anthropology & Social Work Kansas State U, Manhattan 66506), The Relationship between World System Position and the Division of Labor: A Cross-National Analysis, Sociological Spectrum, 1988, 8, 1, 49-66.

† Two perspectives on the DoFL are compared, human ecology & world-system theory. It is argued that in addition to traditional ecological variables, the internal DoFL of nations is influenced by their position in the world-system DoFL. An ordinary least-squares regression using cross-sectional data provides support for the hypothesis. 3 Tables, 1 Appendix, 40 References. HA

88T5849

Lemkow, Louis (Dept Sociologia U Autònoma Barcelona, Bellaterra Spain), The Employed Unemployed: The Subterranean Economy in Spain, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 2, 111-113.

† An examination of the relationship between the underground economy & unemployment in Spain. Subterranean economic activity provides jobs at low incomes, but also dangerous working conditions & job insecurity. Governments & trade unions tend to ignore the wider implications of the underground economy. Underground work takes three main forms: work farmed out to women & family units at home, clandestine factories & workshops, & subcontracting work to "self-employed" workers. 4 References. Modified HA

88T5850

McCormick, B. J. & Marshall, G. P. (U Sheffield, S10 2TN England), Profit-Sharing, Job Rotation and Permanent Employment: The Large Japanese Firm as a Producers' Co-op, Economic and Industrial Democracy, 1987, 8, 2, May, 171-182.

† It is argued that Japanese firms can be considered as a form of workers' cooperative that avoids the disadvantages of Western models. Contracts between various groups involved in large firms are investigated, with attention to the problem of exploitation & the role of small firms in economic activity. The importance of cultural differences is emphasized. 1 Table, 26 References. Modified HA

88T5851

McKay, Ian (Dept History Dalhousie U, Halifax Nova Scotia B3H 3J5), The Crisis of Dependent Development: Class Conflict in the Nova Scotia Coalfields, 1872-1876, Canadian Journal of Sociology/Cahiers canadiens de sociologie, 1988, 13, 1-2, winter-spring, 9-48.

† The roots of the social & economic crisis of the 1870s in the Nova Scotia coalfields can be found in the mercantile export-oriented character of the industry & the limited enclave character of the capitalism associated with it. The social relations of production in coal mining in the years preceding the upheaval of the 1870s are closely examined, with particular reference to the emergence of a capitalist labor market, changes in the labor process, processes of social control, & the transition from SC conflicts reflecting the dispossession of the peasantry to those reflecting a maturing labor/capital antagonism. The events of 1875 & 1876 in Cape Breton are described & the restructuring of labor, capital, & the state that followed & was profoundly influenced by this deep crisis are analyzed. 94 References. Modified HA

88T5852

Nemeth, Roger John (U North Carolina, Chapel Hill 27514), Fertility Decline in the Modern World-Economy, Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1894-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8722329.

88T5836

Werker, Scott Allen (U Wisconsin, Madison 53706), Export Manufacturing, Economic Growth, and Social Development among Less Developed Countries: A Cross National Quantitative Study, Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1332-A.
Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8713182.

88T5837

Wu, Sen-Yuan & Kurman, Hyman (Dept Sociology State U New York, Stony Brook 11794-4356), Socioeconomic Impacts of Disinvestment on Communities in New York State, The American Journal of Economics and Sociology, 1987, 46, 3, July, 261-271.

¶ In order to determine the effect of industrial decline on local tax revenues & to discern the stresses caused by higher demand for social services in a period of government fiscal crisis the industrial migration activities & local government budgets of NY from 1962 to 1976 are analyzed, using official state migration data & other published statistics. These regression analyses show that: (1) manufacturing decline handicaps the growth of local property tax revenues, (2) when possible, local governments compensate for their lost property tax revenues by raising nonproperty taxes, (3) displaced workers are likely to seek public assistance, & (4) local welfare expenditures do not correspond to the soaring social service demands. Provided that plant openings seldom re-employ displaced workers, it is suggested that local governments should adopt policies for retaining their current manufacturing plants & to attract new industrial investments. 6 Tables, 20 References. HA

88T5838

Yesilada, Birol Ali (U Missouri, Columbia 65211), World Market Recession and Economic Development: A Look at Alternative Rescue Policies for the Third World, International Journal of Contemporary Sociology, 1987, 24, 1-2, Jan-Apr, 57-69.

¶ An examination of how the two most recent world recessions—the oil price increase recession of 1974/75 & the debt crisis recession of 1980-1983 have affected Third World countries. A major result has been increased dependence of these nations on the International Monetary Fund, reducing their own governments' control of their economies. Stabilization programs have been imposed on many such countries. Some options that might restore control over their own economic development to Third World countries are explored. 3 Tables. W. H. Stoddard.

49 market structures & consumer behavior

88T5839

Boone, Margaret S., Farley, John U. & Samuel, Steven Joshua (Dept Sociology Georgetown U, Washington DC 20057), A Cross-Country Study of Commercial Contraceptive Sales Programs: Factors That Lead to Success, Studies in Family Planning, 1985, 16, 1, Jan-Feb, 30-39.

¶ Results are presented of a comparison of official monthly sales rates of subsidized commercial contraceptive marketing programs in 11 developing countries, & recommendations are made for program planning. The findings, based on a combined quantitative approach of analysis of variance, factor analysis, & regression analysis, suggest that the successful sale of oral contraceptives is related to level of SE development, the absence of prescription requirements, & the level of commitment to family planning activities. On the other hand, the successful sale of condoms is related to marketing factors, including price & advertising. Possible cultural & historical variables that could account for the remaining unexplained variations in sales performances are discussed. 8 Tables, 1 Figure. Modified HA.

88T5840

Dunnhauser, Norbert (Dept Anthropology Texas A&M U, College Station 77843), Marketing Systems and Rural Development: A Review of Consumer Goods Distribution, U Human Organization, 1987, 46, 2, summer, 177-185.

¶ Ru development schemes have begun to shift their emphasis from bi-modal, capital-intensive approaches that favor export-oriented, giant agribusiness to unimodal approaches focused on the small-scale peasant sector. However, a fixation on resources & production has obscured the contribution of market systems to Ru development. Reasons for this neglect are identified, & the importance of analyzing the distribution of industrial consumer goods in developing Third World countries is discussed. The growth of mass consumerism & affiliated retail organizations in parts of the Ru Third World are chronicled, & it is argued that industrial consumer goods serve a role as incentives for small farmers to increase their output. Implications for economic anthropology & marketing are examined. 81 References. K. Hyatt.

88T5841

Geiger, Theodor, "Kritik der Reklame"—Wesen, Wirkungsprinzip, Publikum ("Critique of Advertising"—Essence, Principle of Effectiveness, Public), Soziale Welt, 1987, 38, 4, 471-492 (GER).

¶ Excerpts from a book published in Danish (Kritik af Reklamen [Critique of Advertising], Copenhagen, 1943). Advertising is defined according to purpose & method of influence, & three main types are differentiated: (1) high-frequency, based on repetition, (2) reason-why, flattering the intellect, & (3) human-interest, connecting the product with pleasant sensations. Because of its freedom from traditional bonds, the Mc is said to be most receptive to advertising, particularly that which appeals to prestige, since the Mc seeks to advance & detach itself from the a more effective way to combat the negative effects of advertising than either moral appeals to advertisers or government regulation (see Rainer Geissler's & Horst Pottker's discussion of books in this section). Modified HA.

88T5842

Geissler, Rainer & Pottker, Horst (FB 1 Soziologie U Siegen, D-5900 Federal Republic Germany), Anmerkungen zu Theodor Geigers "Kritik der Reklame" (Remarks on Theodor Geiger's "Critique of Advertising"), Soziale Welt, 1987, 38, 4, 493-497 (GER).

¶ A discussion of Theodor Geiger's Kritik der Reklamen. ([Critique of Advertising] Copenhagen, 1941), not yet translated from Danish into German (see abstract of excerpts in this section). The book is described as being a critical social-scientific treatment of a problem in its manifold complexity, rather than a theoretically oriented sociological analysis in the narrow sense. Historical, psychological, & economic factors are included. Geiger critically analyzes not only the intent, content, & forms of advertising, but also the methods & results of literature about it. The abundance of material from different periods & countries, & Geiger's concern with the problem of how society can protect itself from the ideological manipulation of advertising, are important aspects. Geiger's program for "critical enlightenment," unpopular with conservatives, is also distinguished from Marxist criticisms of capitalism. J. Anderson.

88T5843

Jacobs, David (Dept Political Science U Oregon, Eugene 97403), Business Resources and Taxation: A Cross-Sectional Examination of the Relationship between Economic Organization and Public Policy, U The Sociological Quarterly, 1987, 28, 4, Dec, 437-454.

¶ Using a cross-sectional analysis of business taxes paid by manufacturing industries in the US in 1960, the political impact of four economic resources that are plausibly related to heightened business political influence are examined. Findings indicate that states with larger enterprises are most likely to have lower taxes on manufacturing, but concentrated sales do not have any effect on these taxes. The degree to which the organizational efforts of firms are handicapped because industry products are diverse also has an independent relationship with state & local taxes paid by manufacturers, but this relationship does not hold when the least industrial states are excluded from the equations. In addition, in areas where competition between political parties is most intense, tax policies are less likely to favor business interests. This evidence is consistent with the hypothesis that firms can translate their formidable economic resources into political influence at the state & local level. 2 Tables, 65 References. Modified HA.

88T5844

James, Jeffrey (Boston U, MA 02215), Positional Goods, Conspicuous Consumption and the International Demonstration Effect Reconsidered, U World Development, 1987, 15, 4, Apr, 449-462.

¶ Replaces Nushkin's Problems of Capital Formation in Underdeveloped

0800 mass phenomena

26 social movements

88T5859

Barnes, Donna A. (Dept Sociology Southern Methodist U, Dallas TX 75275). Organization and Radical Protest: An Antithesis? U The Sociological Quarterly, 1987, 28, 4, Dec, 575-594

† It is argued that Robert Michels's Iron Law of Oligarchy (Political Parties: A Sociological Study of the Oligarchical Tendencies of Modern Democracy, New York: Free Press, 1915) is overdeterministic. It is argued that a conservative & nonrepresentative oligarchy is not inevitable, & an attempt is made to determine what factors affect whether there are changes in the policy & strategy stances of protest leaders over time, & whether such changes are in the direction of increased conservatism. Borrowing from the theoretical premises of the resource mobilization perspective on protest movements, three key factors are isolated: (1) the outcome of past protest strategies for various subgroups within the protest organization, (2) shifts in the attitudes of existing organizational members, & (3) attempts to mobilize a significantly more heterogeneous constituency. It is argued that in response to these factors, protest leaders may move in the direction of increased radicalism as well as increased conservatism. Further, increased conservatism in & of itself does not signal any change in the degree to which leaders represent their constituents. This theoretical argument is explored via a case study of the agrarian protest movement of the late nineteenth-century US. 58 References. HA

88T5860

Brewer, John D. (Dept Social Studies Queen's U, Belfast BT7 1NN Northern Ireland). Official Ideology and Lay Members' Beliefs in Inkatha, Plural Societies, 1987, 17, 1, May, 45-53

* Inkatha, a South African political organization led by Chief Buthelezi, has a large & strongly committed membership. As yet, little is known of this organization. Its characteristics include Buthelezi's advocacy of non-violence & some ambiguity as to whether the organization is an ethnically Zulu or an ethnicity-neutral body. Interview data from 105 Inkatha members contacted during a survey in KwaMushu in 1980 reveal a strong commitment to ethnic neutrality & a relative lack of concern with universal voting rights for blacks. Rs generally reject dominance by any one race, even their own, favoring instead power sharing with all races. These views are generally consistent with Buthelezi's, giving Inkatha an advantage over other groups in terms of internal unity. 2 Tables. W. H. Stoddard

88T5861

Burke, Edmund, III & Lubeck, Paul (U California, Santa Cruz 95064). Explaining Social Movements in Two Oil-Exporting States: Divergent Outcomes in Nigeria and Iran, U Comparative Studies in Society and History, 1987, 29, 4, Oct, 643-665

* The character of Islamic social movements in oil-exporting states is explored through a comparative analysis of historical case studies of Shiite Iran & Muslim northern Nigeria. Focus is on why the movement in Iran succeeded while the one in Nigeria led to an insurrection that was suppressed by the army. Neither the effects of global capitalist processes nor the content of Islamic values, alone or together, can fully explain these outcomes; it is also necessary to consider the role of the state in mediating petroleum revenues & in channeling their social impact. 1 Table. W. H. Stoddard

88T5862

Censer, Jack R. (Dept History George Mason U, Fairfax VA 22030). The Coming of a New Interpretation of the French Revolution, U Journal of Social History, 1987, 21, 2, winter, 295-309

† An explanation of the decline of the Marxist interpretation & its succeeding competitors. Perhaps most significant of these is the viewpoint advanced by François Furet (eg. see Penser la révolution française (Interpreting the French Revolution), Paris, 1977), which was recently tested by a major conference held at the U of Chicago, Ill, in Sept 1986. The results of this meeting are summarized & it is concluded that the positions reached by the conferees are not very remote from those of Furet. Modified AA

88T5863

Cherria, Suzanne J. (U Delaware, Newark 19711). Exploring the Gender Gap on Nuclear Disarmament, U Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1543-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8719520.

88T5864

Dressler-Holohan, Wanda & Dalmás-Alfonsi, Paul, Le Mouvement social corse. Evolution des paradigmes (The Corsican Social Movement: Changing Paradigms), U Peuples Méditerranéens/Mediterranean Peoples, 1987, 38-39, Jan-June, 301-335 (IRE)

† A description of how the paradigms of the Corsican social movement have changed since 1950 shows how collective identity & the relationship with the state have been transformed in the context of current, transnational, economic restructuring. The emergence of a new economic logic has weakened the feeling of belonging to the French nation among social groups who were left out of the modernization of the 1960s, but strengthened it among others who are directly interested in reproducing the traditional mechanisms of dependency on the state. Attention is drawn to the role of intellectuals in reshaping the collective identity, & to the ways in which younger generations adopt or reject their reformulations of the island's reality. Modified HA

88T5865

Ellison, Christopher G. (Duke U, Durham NC 27706). Elites, Competition, and Ethnic Mobilization: Tamil Politics in Sri Lanka, 1947-1977, U Journal of Political and Military Sociology, 1987, 15, 2, fall, 213-228

† An examination of the importance of intraethnic stratification patterns in shaping ethnic politics, based on a case study of the Sri Lankan Tamils. Focus is on two sequential episodes of Tamil activity in postcolonial Sri Lanka: (1) the emergence & decline of federalism during the 1950s & 1960s, & (2) the rise of electoral separatism after 1970. This analysis concludes that the more militant ethnic political orientation was a response of certain Mc & high-caste Tamils from northern Sri Lanka to pressures from subordinate groups within the Tamil community & from dominant Sinhalese elements. Further research is needed on Sri Lanka & in comparative perspective regarding the implications of the colonial experience, state policies, & intragroup stratification systems for ethnic mobilization. 3 Tables, 53 References. Modified HA

88T5866

Habermas, Jürgen, Az amerikai és a német újkonzervatívok a kultúra ellen: értelmiségi mozgalom két politikai hagyomány vonzásában (American and German Neoconservatives against (culture), Szociologia, 1984-85, 1-2, 115-132. (HUN)

† Abstract not currently available

88T5867

Lindgren, H. Elaine (Dept Sociology-Anthropology North Dakota State U, Fargo 58105). The Informal-Intermittent Organization: A Vehicle for Successful Citizen Protest, The Journal of Applied Behavioral Science, 1987, 23, 3, Aug, 397-412

† The case history of a local, informal protest group & reasons for its effectiveness & longevity are presented based on interviews with group leaders (N = 13), participant observation at group & public meetings, & review of such documents as city plans & commission minutes, newspaper articles, legal briefs, & correspondence. The Delta Avenue Citizens Organization (DACO), formed in a Midwestern city to prevent the construction of a bridge, has remained devoted to a single issue & unaffiliated with other groups, a course of action that may harm a social movement organization but that apparently has allowed DACO to survive for 25+ years. DACO's success is attributed thus far to 3 factors: emergent solidarity, the group's internal nature, & an external support system. The group has become an informal-intermittent organization with an inclusive membership, & it is considered an efficient, resilient force within its community. 1 Table, 1 Figure, 38 References. HA

88T5853

Preglau, Max (Inst. Soziologie U. Innsbruck, A-6020 Austria). "System" und "Lebenswelt" als theoretische Konzepte der Wirtschaftssoziologie ("System" and "Lifeworld" as Theoretical Concepts of the Sociology of Economy). Osterreichische Zeitschrift für Soziologie, 1987, 12, 4, 60-73. (G.E.R.)

¶ The value of the sociological concepts "system" & "lifeworld" for microeconomic, macroeconomic, & ecological analysis is discussed. The paradigms "system," as developed by Niklas Luhmann, & "lifeworld," as developed by Jürgen Habermas, are shown to be connected by complementary strengths & weaknesses, the possibility of understanding ecosystems as material lifeworld is emphasized. The resulting two-tiered model of society is used to examine the conflicts between system & lifeworld, described by Habermas as the colonialization of the lifeworld, but, unlike Habermas, allowing for inclusion of the reproduction of the lifeworld's symbolic structures within the economic sphere. Prospects for resolving these conflicts center on reconstruction of not only political but also economic organizations, & integrating ecological concerns into organizational rationality. 32 References. J. Anderson

88T5854

Taylor, Peter J. (U. Newcastle upon Tyne, NE1 7RL, England). The Poverty of International Comparisons: Some Methodological Lessons from World-Systems Analysis. ♦ Studies in Comparative International Development, 1987, 22, 1, spring, 12-39. Comments, 40-72, Reply, 72-81

¶ The world-system perspective implies reliance on a holistic & realist methodology that provides the basis for a critique of overreliance on conventional statistical measures of association. This perspective is applied to analysis of a specific problem: the relationship between two political phenomena, war & democracy. Statistical analysis of relationships between properties of single countries & the occurrence of war is flawed because war is, at a minimum, the product of a relationship between two countries. Published studies in this area are reviewed with emphasis on differences between core, periphery, & semiperiphery. The need for world-systems theory to be incorporated into sociology at the level not only of ideas but of methods is emphasized. In Comments on "The Poverty of International Comparisons: Some Methodological Lessons from World-Systems Analysis," comments are offered by John Agnew (Syracuse U., NY), David Harvey (Oxford U., England), Robert M. Jackson (California State U., Chico), Victor Prescott & Ruth Fincher (U. of Melbourne, Australia), & Immanuel Wallerstein (State U. of New York, Binghamton), with a reply by Taylor, entitled Squire, Replying Slowly, which examines six major points: the incompleteness of the argument, the existence of two schools of world-systems analysis, the overstatement of the argument, the question of why the US & GB did not go to war after WWII, the political legacy of past labor movements, & realism & world-systems analysis. 39 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T5855

Thomas, V. Alexander (American U., Washington DC 20016). The Conflict over the Movement toward a New World Information and Communication Order. ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, 4. The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1551-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8721006.

88T5856

Tromp, Bart (Vakgroep Politieke Wetenschappen Rijks U. Leiden, NL-2313 AV Netherlands). De theorie van het wereldsysteem, een overzicht (The Concept of World System: A Review) ♦ Sociologische Gids, 1988, 35, 1, Jan-Feb, 4-23. (DUT)

¶ A review of US sociologist Immanuel Wallerstein's theory of the world system as a sociological research program. The theory is shown to be well-developed on the level of research, & very successful in terms of its institutional bases & number of adherents; much of its popularity, however, is a result of its more or less implicit political message. In addition the theoretical underpinnings of this research program are very weak, & its metatheoretical foundations are virtually nonexistent. It is concluded that a more complete theory of the world system is required to understand secular social & political processes in modern history. 79 References. Modified HA

88T5857

Wong, Bernard (Dept. Anthropology San Francisco State U., CA 94132). The Role of Ethnicity in Enclave Enterprises: A Study of the Chinese Garment Factories in New York City. ♦ Human Organization, 1987, 46, 2, summer, 120-130

¶ It was found that enclave enterprises function differently than those in the center economy. The often assumed incompatibility of traditional values, personalism, familism, & informal social relations that prevail in the enclave economy are important assets for the entrepreneurial pursuits of Chinese in the ethnic enclave in New York City. The skillful use of noneconomic resources is vital in the establishment of the efficient but small garment factories that are best suited for: (1) the exploitation of the opportunity structure of New York's garment industry, (2) the maximization of capital & labor resources, & (3) the neutralization of management/labor conflicts. Contrary to the claims of many social scientists that ethnic enterprises are riven by conflicts & burdened by low productivity, it is found that ethnic enterprises are successful. A major factor for their success is that ethnic enterprises are supported by a repertory of ethnic resources. Proper management of ethnic/cultural resources is a key to the entrepreneurial pursuits of ethnic businessmen. 43 References. HA

88T5858

----, Incorporation into the World-Economy: How the World-System Expands. Review, 1987, 10, 5-6, summer-fall, 757-902

¶ A report on research conducted at the Fernand Braudel Center, State U. of New York, Binghamton, on cyclical rhythms & secular trends of the capitalist world economy. In Capitalism and the Incorporation of New Zones into the World-Economy, Terence K. Hopkins & Immanuel Wallerstein explore the overall mode of operation of the capitalist world economy as a historical social system, & describe how it has expanded by incorporating new geographic zones. The actual process & rules of incorporation are examined in depth, & it is shown to be a continual, but not continuous, phenomenon. Three detailed case studies are presented: Incorporation of the Caribbean, 1650-1700, by Peter D. Phillips, Incorporation of the Ottoman Empire, 1750-1820, by Reşat Kasaba, & Incorporation of Southern Africa, 1870-1920, by William G. Martin. In A Concluding Note, Hopkins & Wallerstein stress that these three zones differed widely in both cultural geography & the time periods during which they experienced incorporation. In each case, the development of commodity production that became part of the capitalist world economy was accompanied by new or modified political institutions; though these changes in political structure occurred in opposite directions in each zone, the end results were more or less the same. 5 Maps, 145 References. K. Hyatt ties, to traditional Christianity, & to the family supports this conclusion. Attitudes toward civil liberties have also grown more favorable. W. H. Stoddard

88T5878

Gollin, Albert E., Polling and the News Media. ♦ The Public Opinion Quarterly, 1987, 51, 4(2), winter, S86-S94

† During the lifespan of Public Opinion Quarterly, 1937-1987, the political & social landscape of the US has changed dramatically. The PO field has changed as well, with quantitative data becoming overwhelmingly dominant. News media began by relying on commercial pollsters, but now often conduct their own polls. Questions have been raised, however, about the objectivity of such polls, & about whether they influence the PO they purport to measure. Proposals for legal regulation have been made to prevent these problems, but so far self-regulation has been the preferred method. 22 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T5879

Kopias, Grazyna & Wisniewski, Wieslaw (Group Sociological Research Problems Education U. Warsaw, PL-00-325 Poland), Public Attitudes toward Scientific Knowledge in Poland, Science and Public Policy (SPP), 1987, 14, 3, June, 118-132

Translated by Janina Smolska.

* Questionnaire data (N = 6,000) collected in 1986 in Poland are analyzed to ascertain attitudes toward scientific & extrascientific knowledge & perceptions regarding potential realization of personal aims & aspirations, & of the mechanisms contributing to personal achievements. It is proposed that the individual's social context strongly influences his or her perceptions, beliefs, & notions. It was found that Rs were more interested in the results of scientific research & concrete solutions to their problems than in the details of how those results were obtained. Men & women were shown to have similar educational aspirations, country people were less likely to continue education than town-dwellers, & people's financial situation had little influence on intention to study. The knowledge gap between scientists & layman has led many people to accept new mysticisms clothed in seemingly scientific jargon. Belief in alternative medicine, telepathy, & astrology were seen as indicators of the wave of irrationalism, eg. the least inclined toward belief in acupuncture were farmers & old-age pensioners, & the most inclined were specialists with technical education. 9 Tables. Modified HA

88T5880

Kuhn, Rolf (Section philosophie pratique U. Fribourg, CH-1700 Switzerland), Pouvoir, connaissance, conscience. Aspects sociologiques de la pensée de Simone Weil (Power, knowledge, Conscience. Sociological Aspects of the Thought of Simone Weil), Cahiers Internationaux de Sociologie, 1987, 34, 83, July-Dec, 257-280 (FRE)

* Some ideas in the work of Simone Weil are discussed. In line with the French philosophical tradition, Weil considers the basic social problem to be that of PO. PO constitutes a social instrument, inasmuch as it is a form of expression of different forces. Her interpretations of authors such as Niccolò Machiavelli & Karl Marx in this context are examined. It is clear that a greater freedom of conscience can only be achieved through an awareness of this social context, & also that the individual is regaining autonomy vis-a-vis the collective. Modified HA

88T5881

Lebart, Ludovic (Centre national recherche scientifique, F-75007 Paris France), Conditions de vie et aspirations des Français: évolutions et structure des opinions de 1978 à 1986 (Living Conditions and Aspirations in France. Evolution and Structure of Opinions from 1978 to 1986), ♦ Futuribles, 1987, 113, Sept, 25-56 (FRE)

† A summary of the findings of annual PO surveys conducted since 1978 by the French research center CREDOC. Rs (N not given) are grouped according to residence (Paris or the provinces), age, & educational level. Over the 9 years of the study, opinions about the standard of living were most negative in 1984, when 48% of the Rs said things had worsened for them personally, & 65% thought they had worsened for the country in general; corresponding %s for 1986 are 36% & 58%. Rs are similarly pessimistic about the future: in 1986, 30% expect the standard of living to decline, & only 27% expect it to improve. Opinions on many topics, eg. the importance of the family, women's employment, the justice system, & scientific progress, are also discussed. 10 Tables, 12 Figures. C. Waters

88T5882

McKeown, Bruce & Carlson, James M. (c/o Carlson Dept Political Science Providence Coll, RI 02918), An Experimental Study of the Influence of Religious Elites on Public Opinion, in Political Communication and Persuasion, 1987, 4, 2, 93-102

† A presentation of experimental findings concerning the influence of source attributions on Rs' reactions to a set of domestic & foreign policy initiatives. An attempt was made to determine whether or not the positions of the American Catholic Bishops' pastoral letter, when attributed to the Bishops themselves or to the Reverend Billy Graham, would influence PO in 2 US populations of Catholic & Evangelical Protestant Coll students (N = 180). Analysis of questionnaire data indicates that, in both conditions, even when controlling for a number of mediating variables, the hypothesized influence of religious leadership on opinions was nonexistent when the experimental conditions were compared with the control (no source) condition. The results are compared with similar experimental studies examining the impact of other political institutions & symbols. 3 Tables, 13 References. HA

88T5883

Modigliani, Andre & Modigliani, Franco (Dept Sociology U. Michigan, Ann Arbor 48109-1382), The Growth of the Federal Deficit and the Role of Public Attitudes, ♦ The Public Opinion Quarterly, 1987, 51, 4, winter, 459-480.

† An attempt to reconcile the recent explosion in the fiscal deficit of the US with the well known support of the US public for fiscal conservatism. Gallup polls dating back over a period of four decades show that solid majorities have consistently opposed tax reductions that might produce an unbalanced budget. Recently, the public has also shown opposition to increases in taxes to close the fiscal gap, which might appear to imply a new acquiescence to the deficit. However, polls also show that this opposition has persisted for a long time & is not logically inconsistent with rejecting tax cuts resulting in deficits. It is also demonstrated that, although the budget process in a democratic society is said to be biased toward deficit because the cost of higher taxes is immediate while the cost of deficit is delayed, the fiscal history of the US over the last 100 years reveals no systematic bias toward deficits, at least until recent years. The major explanation that emerges is that the Reagan administration succeeded in misleading the public (& perhaps even itself) into believing that the tax cut would not result in deficits, thanks to "supply" & "Laffer curve" effects. Once in place, the deficit was hard to undo because of the inconsistent priorities of the main actors: the President, Congress, & the public. 1 Figure, 1 Appendix, 23 References. Modified AA

88T5884

Petty, Richard E., Rennie, Greg A. & Cacioppo, John T. (Dept Psychology Ohio State U. Columbus 43210), Assertion versus Interrogation Format in Opinion Surveys: Questions Enhance Thoughtful Responding, ♦ The Public Opinion Quarterly, 1987, 51, 4, winter, 481-494

† Two questionnaire surveys on ostensibly new consumer products were administered to 91 undergraduate Coll students in order to assess the impact of presenting opinion questions in either an interrogation or an assertion format. Rs responded on 1-7 point agree-disagree scales to either assertions (eg. "Edge has the safety you want") or interrogations (eg. "Doesn't Edge have the safety you want?"). In addition to manipulating the format of the opinion item in the survey, the background information about the product was varied so that it presented either a strong or a weak product attribute. In both surveys, opinions in response to the interrogation items were more polarized than those in response to the assertion items. These results suggest that the interrogation opinion format elicits more thinking about the question than does the assertion format. 1 Table, 1 Figure, 2 Appendixes, 20 References. AA

88T5885

Rattinger, Hans (Center International Studies Trinity Coll U. Toronto, Ontario M5S 1H8), Change versus Continuity in West German Public Attitudes on National Security and Nuclear Weapons in the Early 1980s, ♦ The Public Opinion Quarterly, 1987, 51, 4, winter, 495-521

† Trends in previously published studies of PO on national security in West Germany since 1970 are described, & the development & structure of PO on NATO's double-track decision & its implementation in the early 1980s is examined. The problems of measuring such attitudes & interpreting PO data are addressed, in the light of levels of public awareness & of the personal importance of these matters for Rs. In that context, the

88T5868

Ling, Richard. The Production of Synthetic Charisma. ♦ Journal of Political and Military Sociology, 1987, 15, 2, fall, 157-170

¶ An examination of the rational construction of synthetic charisma in the 1983 Denver (Colo) mayoral election campaign, based on ethnographic interviews with candidates, campaign managers & workers, newspaper reporters & editors, TV reporters & producers, & voters (s not provided). Elements of charisma as described by Max Weber are juxtaposed against qualitative data gathered during that election campaign. Findings indicate that the image of illusory charisma was constructed by the unwitting interaction of two groups, the campaign organizations & the media, each intent on pursuing their own institutionally defined needs: the campaign sought votes (& other resources) while the media pursued profits. 1 Table, 34 References. Modified HA

88T5869

Lowe, Gary R. & Reid, P. Nelson (Indiana U, Bloomington 47405). South Africa: The Failure of Ethnic Utopianism. International Journal of Contemporary Sociology, 1987, 24, 3-4, July-Oct, 85-98

¶ In an academic social analysis of the political situation of South Africa, the society is described as shaped by pursuit of the utopian vision of separate development within an economy that offers no space for such development. The historical emergence of this utopianism is traced & its impact on government is described. What South Africa needs to resolve its current problems is a decentralized governmental structure, economic freedom, & the absence of any overarching social vision. W. H. Stoddard

88T5870

Luhmann, Niklas. A rendszerelmélet kilátásai Nemetsországban (Prospects of Systems Theory in Germany). Szociologia, 1984-85, 1-2, 133-144 (HUN)

¶ Abstract not currently available

88T5871

McIver, Shirley (U York, Heslington YO1 5DD England). UFO (Flying Saucer) Groups: A Look at British Membership. Zetetic Scholar, 1987, 11-12, Aug, 39-57

¶ An exploration of how unidentified flying object (UFO) research groups relate to religious UFO cults. Members of the British UFO Research Assoc were sent a multiple choice questionnaire with the Sept 1981 issue of their magazine Hufora Journal; of 550 members, 218 returned completed questionnaires. Analysis focuses on social details, UFO & associated experiences & opinions, & religious beliefs. The results imply that members of UFO research groups are very different from those in religious UFO cults, although it suggests that in some cases, an interest in mysteries could be a link to religious mysticism. 2 Tables. Modified AA

88T5872

Moore, Barrington, Jr. (Russian Research Center Harvard U, Cambridge MA 02138). Austerity and Unintended Riches. ♦ Comparative Studies in Society and History, 1987, 29, 4, Oct, 787-810.

¶ An examination of the commitment to austerity, equality, & community as a way of life & as a form of protest against inequalities in the society, based on historical evidence & secondary data on monastic movements in Europe & Asia, the Quakers, & the Israeli kibbutzim. Many such groups have become quite wealthy, due to donations received & plain hard work. Increasing wealth erodes the commitment to austerity, equality, & community by reducing the apparent necessity for such virtues. The growing DoFL & specialization of economic & social tasks may undermine them further. But such erosion is not inevitable, as demonstrated the case of the Carthusians, who have been successful in keeping alive their original commitments, but at the price of declining numbers. Modified AA

88T5873

Smith, Douglas A. & Uchida, Craig D. (Instit Criminal Justice & Criminology U Maryland, College Park 20742). The Social Organization of Self-Help: A Study of Defensive Weapon Ownership. U American Sociological Review, 1988, 53, 1, Feb, 94-102

¶ Using Donald Black's theory of self-help (The Manners and Customs of the Police, New York: Academic Press, 1980), & drawing on the collective security model & the "fear & loathing" hypothesis, factors influencing defensive weapon ownership are examined. Interview data from 9,021 randomly selected households in 59 residential neighborhoods (in Rochester, NY, Tampa-St. Petersburg, Fla., & St. Louis, Mo) are used to assess the association between household & neighborhood characteristics & decisions to purchase weapons for self-protection. Findings indicate that defensive weapon ownership varies inversely with other forms of social control, eg, the perceived effectiveness of police. Additionally, purchases of defensive weapons are associated with household demographics, past victimization, & perceived risk of crime. Collectively, these results indicate that self-help (defensive weapon ownership) is a structured form of social action. 3 Tables, 21 References. HA

88T5874

Tygart, C. E. (Dept Sociology California State U, Fullerton 92634). Participants in the Nuclear Weapons Freeze Movement. The Social Science Journal, 1987, 24, 4, Oct, 393-402

¶ Explanations of why people participate in social movements are usually ad hoc combinations of ideology, social support, & ecological factors. A 1984 telephone survey of 1,200 registered Democrats in Calif revealed that, contrary to the structural isolation envisaged by the collective behavior tradition, those Rs who were active in the nuclear freeze movement displayed structural linkages to institutionalized political processes (eg, Democratic Party organizations) & other social movements, as well as strong links with the previous anti-Vietnam war movement. Thus, at least some social movements may have evolved beyond their earlier collective behavior origins to the point that paradigms from areas such as the political sociology of institutions are required to explain them. 1 Table, 9 References. Modified HA

27 public opinion

88T5875

Beniger, James R. (Annenberg School Communications U Southern California, Los Angeles 90089). Toward an Old New Paradigm: The Half-Century Flirtation with Mass Society. ♦ The Public Opinion Quarterly, 1987, 51, 4(2), winter, S46-S66

¶ At the founding of Public Opinion Quarterly, three phenomena were of primary interest to its editors: mass opinion, mass communication, & PO measurement & reporting. A mass society model of PO was dominant from the 1940s into the 1960s, but began to lose its hold thereafter. Now, however, a new mass paradigm is emerging that defines PO in terms of cognitive processing, media framing, & active audience structuring of images. This process model suggests an agenda for future research. 118 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T5876

Comverse, Philip E. (Instit Social Research U Michigan, Ann Arbor 48109). Changing Conceptions of Public Opinion in the Political Process. ♦ The Public Opinion Quarterly, 1987, 51, 4(2), winter, S12-S24

¶ PO polls have been an important element in democratic politics for many years. How PO is to be defined has been a matter of controversy at times, but the use of PO data has gained increasing acceptance. Unfortunately, users often fail to recognize the complexity & changeability of expressed opinions. Moreover, PO revealed by surveys often differs from that expressed in public forums & political movements, due partly to differential mobilization of different opinion groups. It is difficult to assess the impact of PO surveys on policy, but at least they help encourage policy that takes account of the opinion of all the people. 11 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T5877

Glenn, Norval D. (U Texas, Austin 78712). Social Trends in the United States: Evidence from Sample Surveys. ♦ The Public Opinion Quarterly, 1987, 51, 4(2), winter, S109-S126.

¶ An examination of social & cultural change as a whole in the US over the years 1952-1986, based on national sample survey data. It is proposed that modern individualism has grown at the expense of Biblical religion & classical republicanism. Evidence on allegiance to political par-

† The relationship of adolescent mothers' knowledge of infant development & perceptions of infant behavior to stress experienced during pregnancy was examined & compared to that for adult mothers of similar marital status ($N = 23$ mothers aged 15-17, & 22 aged 20-28, a convenience sample drawn from a small midwestern city). Relationships with maternal age across groups also were examined. Adolescents underestimated developmental rates & perceived some infant behaviors less optimally, but did not differ in levels of stress. Stress was related to several parenting subscores. Some support for a linear relationship with maternal age was found. Results suggest the need for further research to determine how level of maturity affects translation of knowledge into maternal action. 4 Tables, 48 References. Modified HA

88T5894

Cooper, Robert (Dept Behaviour in Organizations U Lancaster, Gilwell House Bailrigg LA1 4YX England), Information, Communication and Organisation: A Post-Structural Revision, The Journal of Mind and Behavior, 1987, 8, 3, summer, 395-415.

† The concepts of information & communication are analyzed in terms of "difference." The essence of difference is self-interference, a process in which terms contain their opposites & thus defy any singular grasp of their meanings. To illustrate this way of looking at difference, concepts from psychoanalysis, the logic of infinite sets, language, etc. are discussed. Social organization is fundamentally motivated by the need to suppress the self-interference intrinsic to difference, which it does through the creation of social objects/objectives. The specific function of the object/objective is to banish self-interference by separating its self-referential duality. This characterizes a basic principle of human action: the principle of least effort. The function of modern organization is the objectification of least effort in a codified order or information/knowledge that is designed to exclude self-interference from organized social systems. However, since "organization" & "object" are also information-based structures, they too are subject to self-interference. This means that the object/objective is compelled to repeat that which it suppresses & so creates a process in which intentional actions produce unintended as well as intended consequences. 37 References. HA

88T5895

Fessenden-Raden, June, Fitchen, Janet M. & Heath, Jenifer S. (Cornell U, Ithaca NY 14853), Providing Risk Information in Communities: Factors Influencing What Is Heard and Accepted, U Science, Technology, and Human Values, 1987, 12, 3-4(60-61), 94-101.

† The communication of information about risk involves a two-way interaction between senders & receivers. This perspective is used to interpret case studies of 12+ nonmetropolitan communities where groundwater had been found to be contaminated with toxic chemicals. Considerable differences were evident between communities' responses. Factors that accounted for these included: other community concerns, attitudes toward local, state, & federal government; local identity, & attitudes toward presumed polluters. Different publics also gave different receptions to information, based on individual experience & knowledge. Problems can arise from multiple messengers providing risk information, different perspectives on risk held by various messengers, & confusion introduced by untrained messengers. Official, unofficial, & unintended risk messages may interact in complex ways. Communication about risk is thus a complex process whose outcome may be difficult to predict. W. H. Stoddard

88T5896

Fritz, Noah J. & Altheide, David L. (School Justice Studies Arizona State U, Tempe 85287), The Mass Media and the Social Construction of the Missing Children Problem, U The Sociological Quarterly, 1987, 28, 4, Dec, 473-492.

† The origins of claims & counterclaims about the nature & extent of missing children are discussed, & an empirical analysis is conducted of the impact of various sources of media information about the missing children issue in order to demonstrate the process by which a social problem is constructed. A self-report questionnaire was administered to adults aged 17-64 at a church forum & in 2 Coll classrooms in a large southwestern metropolis ($\Sigma N = 96$) before & after they viewed a 2-part documentary on the complexities of the missing children issue. The data suggest that mass-mediated imagery & formats forge an interactive informational context for social problems by sustaining what is viewed in one's living room with imagery in bulk mail, milk cartons, & posters. It is further suggested that mass media depictions of this problem carry over into consonant images of child abuse. This conceptualization is capable of encompassing other accounts of social problems within claims-making activity. 1 Table, 54 References. Modified HA

88T5897

Gaziano, Cecile & McGrath, Kristin, Newspaper Credibility and Relationships of Newspaper Journalists to Communities, U Journalism Quarterly, 1987, 64, 2-3, summer-autumn, 317-328, 345.

† An exploration of how newspaper journalists' demographic & attitudinal characteristics serve to maintain a distance between them & their readers, a distance that may, in turn, directly affect the public's perceptions of newspaper credibility. A sample of top editors & journalists ($N = 867$) from 51 medium- & large-sized US daily newspapers completed questionnaires concerning demographics, community involvement & attachment, social contacts, communication with news sources & readers, professional links, media attitudes, & newspaper characteristics. A distinction was revealed between "younger transient" & "older native" journalists. It is concluded that younger transients may contribute disproportionately to problems of newspaper credibility because of their greater attitudinal & demographic differences from the general US public, & their sense of distance from the community. This is not necessarily dysfunctional, however, since too many similarities between journalists & their public could adversely affect reportorial objectivity. The press must address the issue of what constitutes optimal distance, suggestions for further research on media credibility influences are provided. 6 Tables. K. Hyatt

88T5898

Gurland, Michael Seth Zachary & Taulbee, James Larry (Emory U, Atlanta GA 30322), Japanese-American Trade: The Roots of Misunderstanding, U Political Communication and Persuasion, 1987, 4, 1, 11-16.

† The perception of economic reality flowing from the respective world-views of the Japanese & US business communities creates the political reality to which trade policies must respond. A comparative content analysis is conducted of articles systematically drawn from the 1985 editions of the Wall Street Journal & the Japan Economic Journal to examine the degree of correspondence between the two business communities regarding basic assumptions about appropriate economic policies & means of resolving trade disputes. It is concluded that the countries' dissimilar historical experiences, cultures, & political climates contribute to a lack of bilateral correspondence that exacerbates fundamental inconsistencies in their perceptions of the locus of current trade problems. Each side uses a different framework, embodying entirely different sets of parameters, to define acceptable policy responses. The incongruence leads to a mutual underevaluation of the political costs & risks associated with the preferred responses of the other party. 3 Tables, 9 References. Modified HA

88T5899

Hawkins, Robert P., Pingree, Suzanne & Adler, Ilya (U Wisconsin, Madison 53706), Searching for Cognitive Processes in the Cultivation Effect: Adult and Adolescent Samples in the United States and Australia, U Human Communication Research, 1987, 13, 4, summer, 553-577.

† Two cognitive processes that may allow viewers to construct TV-biased beliefs are tested. (1) perceptions of the TV world serve as an intermediate step between fragmented incidental learning from TV & beliefs about the real world, & (2) beliefs closely linked to TV content are an intermediate step in implying more general values & beliefs. Data from telephone interviews with a sample of 100 adults in Madison, Wisc, & questionnaires completed by 3 samples of adolescents ($\Sigma N = 1,325$) in Madison, Wisc, & Perth, Australia, are used to test these hypotheses. Across a range of cultivation questions, the basic cultivation result generally confirmed that heavy viewers had beliefs about the world that were influenced by TV, however, neither process hypothesis was supported. Findings indicate that "close" beliefs & their implied counterparts were unrelated, & cultivation relationships for these implied variables occurred only for those with real-world biased "close" beliefs. Also, results demonstrate that cultivation of both kinds of beliefs occurred more often for adolescents with high academic skills, suggesting that if cultivation occurs, it is a more active & intellectually demanding process than previously proposed. 5 Tables, 1 Appendix, 17 References. Modified HA

88T5900

Katz, Elihu (Hebrew U Jerusalem, Mount Scopus 91905 Israel), Communications Research since Lazarsfeld, U The Public Opinion

results of some methodological experiments conducted in 1985 in West Germany to ascertain the impact of question formats & wordings on response distributions for defense policy survey items are also presented. Generational replacement & partisan polarization hypotheses to account for the dynamics of these attitudes are compared. The main finding here is that growing dissent among the major parties over missile deployment has played a much greater role in realigning PO than has the coming of age of a predominantly antinuclear & antidefense successor generation. 7 Tables, 5 Figures, 12 References. AA

88T5886

Reeves, Maria Mann (U. Maryland, College Park 20742). Public Opinion and Federalism, 1986. In Publius, 1987, 17, 3, summer, 55-65.

¶ An examination of public attitudes relating to federalism & intergovernmental relations in the U.S. based on PO poll data collected in the 1980s. Although different polling organizations asked different questions at different times, evidence indicates that Americans recognize the intergovernmental nature of their system, & believe that all of their governments should share in the provision & financing of public programs & policies. They were selective in their choice of which government should bear the principal responsibility for specific functions, & their attitudes evidenced support for the federal government, a preference for shared authority, & a climate conducive to cooperation. 3 Tables. Modified HA

88T5887

Schenk, Jura] (Faculty Philosophy Comenius U Bratislava, CS-885 45 (Czechoslovakia)). Synergetický model formovania názorov v spoločnosti. Ku kritike semikvantitatívnej sociológie (Synergetic Model of Opinion Formation in Society). Sociologický časopis 1987, 21, 6, 616-635. (CZ)

¶ Within the development of synergetics—a general scientific approach to examining self-organizational processes as it applies to society, three major trends are evident: theorizing, cyberneticizing, & formalizing. An approach based on the formalizing trend is applied here to the formation of PO, using the semiquantitative sociological methods of W. Wendlich & G. Haag (Concepts and Methods of a Quantitative Sociology: The Dynamics of Interacting Populations, Berlin: Springer, 1983). In the process, the model is critically analyzed & shown to suffer from important oversimplifications & to fail to solve significant problems. 8 Figures, 23 References. Modified HA

88T5888

Nudman, Seymour & Bradburn, Norman M. (Dept. Business Administration & Sociology U. Illinois, Urbana 61801). The Organizational Growth of Public Opinion Research in the United States. In The Public Opinion Quarterly, 1987, 51, 4(2), winter, S67-S78.

¶ A history of the development of polling organizations in the US during 1937-1987, the first fifty years of existence of Public Opinion Quarterly. The development of a specific organization is traced through the early years (1937-1946), the postwar expansion, & the current state of the polls. Continuing problems of polling organizations are noted, but polling is still judged to be a mature discipline. 6 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T5889

Worcester, Robert M., The Internationalization of Public Opinion Research. In The Public Opinion Quarterly, 1987, 51, 4(2), winter, S79-S85.

¶ In modern society, the long tradition of interest in PO has been institutionalized in the form of polls. George Gallup played a major role in this process, especially in the internationalization of polling. The current state of polling in other countries is considered, with emphasis on Eastern Europe. 7 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T5890

———, The Future Study of Public Opinion: A Symposium. In The Public Opinion Quarterly, 1987, 51, 4(2), winter, S173-S191.

¶ A symposium on the future of PO surveys. Leo Bogart introduces the participants. James R. Beniger (U. Southern California, Los Angeles) emphasizes the relevance of cognitive science to survey research. Richard A. Brody (Stanford U., Calif.) recommends adoption of new assumptions that recognize the diversity of the public. Irving Crespi (Baruch Coll., New York, NY) notes progress in sample designs, in attention to special publics, in attention to trends in PO, & in development of better questions. James A. Davis (Harvard U., Cambridge, Mass.) identifies major problems of survey research. W. Phillips Davison (Columbia U., New York, NY) suggests that the more difficult problems that PO surveys will address in the future will require attention to the foundations of the discipline. Ernest Dichter suggests some new approaches that will be advantageous in the future. Gladys Engel Lang & Kurt Lang (U. of Washington, Seattle) suggest a need to combine the abstract empiricism that now dominates the field, with attention to PO as a social force. Harold Mendelsohn (U. of Denver, Colo.) suggests that a role change in PO is now occurring, as its results attain legitimacy as evidence about what the public thinks. Everett M. Rogers & James W. Dearing (U. of Southern California, Los Angeles) note the emergence of more sophisticated designs that allow exploration of agenda-setting as a process. Sandra J. Ball-Rokeach & Milton Rokeach (U. of Southern California, Los Angeles) see the value-framing concept as offering insights into how some issues are included, & others excluded, from public agendas. Burns W. Roper sees a reemergence of face-to-face & house-to-house interviewing as likely. Paul B. Sheatsley notes that many people are still more impressed by numbers of Rs than by random sampling, but sees an increasing sophistication at least among a minority. Vladimir Shlapentokh (U. of Michigan, Ann Arbor) examines opinion polling in the USSR. Robert M. Worcester considers the role of governments & businesses in developing PO research & emphasizes the impact of computer technology. Daniel Yankelovich suggests eight goals for future PO research. Jean Stoetzel offers a fantasy about the future of US society & its impact on PO research. W. H. Stoddard

88T5891

———, L'Opinion des Japonais (The Opinion of the Japanese). In Futuribles, 1987, 112, July-Aug., 32-35. (FR)

¶ A brief discussion of the national PO surveys conducted annually since 1958 by the Japanese Prime Minister's Bureau. Focus here is on the 1986 survey (N = 7,857). Responses show that 88% of the population now consider themselves Mc, & only 9% Wc. In general, there is growing satisfaction with the standard of living, especially as regards consumer durables. Satisfaction is greater among Fs (71%) than Ms (64%). 4 Figures. HA Tr & Modified by C. Waters

28 communication

88T5892

Adams, William C., Smith, Dennis J., Salzman, Allison, Crossen, Ralph, Hieber, Scott, Naccarato, Tom, Vantine, William & Weisbroth, Nine (Dept. Public Administration George Washington U., Washington DC 20052). Before and After The Day After: The Unexpected Results of a Televised Drama. In Political Communication and Persuasion, 1986, 3, 3, 191-213.

¶ Over 80 million Americans watched The Day After, the American Broadcasting Corp's (ABC) controversial TV drama about the horror & devastation of nuclear war. Many people expected a compelling indictment of the folly of the arms race that could create a significant shift in public attitudes. On the evening of the broadcast, researchers conducted random nationwide telephone surveys both before & after (N = 510 & 418, respectively) the drama's broadcast. In addition to examining attitudinal changes, behavioral changes were appraised by investigating communications to the White House, Congress, the ABC network, counseling services, & antinuclear groups. Results show that the program did not transform views of defense armaments or nuclear war, nor did it mobilize a new antinuclear weapons crusade. The one surprising change was a "rally-round-the-flag" effect that helped President Reagan, an illustration that unanticipated public interpretations can create quite unexpected consequences. The findings suggest that communication theorists & methodologies need to be aware of such oblique effects. 7 Tables. HA

88T5893

Becker, Patricia T. (School Nursing U. Wisconsin, Madison 53792). Sensitivity to Infant Development and Behavior: A Comparison of Adolescent and Adult Single Mothers. Research in Nursing and Health, 1987, 10, 3, June, 119-127.

moral Right's critique of liberal-permissiveness (as the alleged source of the generally violent emphasis in British cultural life during the late 1980s) is discussed, & an account of the relative silence of socialist opinion within this debate is offered. An argument is made for the retrieval of the methodology of socialist humanism, in particular, its emphasis on moral & even spiritual critique, as a way out of the Left's existing uneasy embrace of liberal-utilitarianism. The popularity amongst M British adolescents of the "video nasty" is explained as derived from an extended contemplation of death & annihilation, underpinned by the routine misogyny of an unchallenged patriarchal form. From this perspective, the argument is put for socialist support of censorship of such videos. Modified AA

29 collective behavior

88T5909

Bundy, Colin (U Cape Town, Rosebank 7700 South Africa), Street Sociology and Pavement Politics: Aspects of Youth and Student Resistance in Cape Town, 1985, Journal of Southern African Studies, 1987, 13, 3, Apr, 303-330

* Some theoretical models of youth/student radicalism are compared, & their explanatory value for youth-based resistance in South Africa is evaluated. Some elements of the economic/demographic/social base on which youth resistance politics is constructed are illuminated, with particular emphasis on how the crisis in the schools is related to more widespread rebellion. A case study is provided of the educational boycott & other political activities of high school & U students in Cape Town in 1985, predicated on dissatisfaction with the poor quality of black education, pervasive school-leaver unemployment, & coercive school structures & practices. Parent/teacher/student associations (PTSA's) were formed, & there were similar efforts to form alliances between students, community organizations, & exploited workers. Similarities between youth-based political resistance & trade union organization are discussed, & the necessity of linking youth-worker struggles is supported (though several factors make its realization more difficult on the Western Cape). 2 Tables. K. Hyatt

88T5910

Hudson, James R. (Pennsylvania State U, Middletown 17057), Organized Groups, Land Use Decisions, and Ecological Theory, UM Sociological Perspectives, 1988, 31, 1, Jan, 122-141

* Human ecological theory has often been faulted for failing to consider the effects of the conscious actions of individuals & groups in the shaping of land use development. Given the current theoretical formulation of human ecological theory developed by Amos H. Hawley ("Ecology and Human Ecology," Social Forces, 1944, 22, 398-405), this criticism is not justified. A unique example of invasion-succession in an Ur area (Soho, Manhattan, New York City) offers an opportunity to illustrate how organized groups can influence this process, & to demonstrate how such actions fit into human ecological theory & by extension, general ecological theory. 57 References. HA

88T5911

Oliver, Pamela E. & Marwell, Gerald (Dept Sociology U Wisconsin, Madison 53706), The Paradox of Group Size in Collective Action: A Theory of the Critical Mass. II, UM American Sociological Review, 1988, 53, 1, Feb, 1-8

† (For Part I, see SA 34 2/86Q5244.) Many sociologists incorrectly believe that larger groups are less likely to support collective action than are smaller ones. Hypothetical simulations are presented to support the argument that the effect of group size, in fact, depends on costs. If the costs of collective goods rise with the number who share in them, larger groups act less frequently than smaller ones. If the costs vary little with group size, larger groups should exhibit more collective action than smaller ones because larger groups have more resources & are more likely to have a critical mass of highly interested & resourceful actors. The positive effects of group size increase with group heterogeneity & nonrandom social ties. Paradoxically, when groups are heterogeneous, fewer contributors may be needed to provide a good to larger groups, making collective action less complex & less expensive. 1 Table, 27 References. Modified HA

42 sociology of leisure/tourism

88T5912

Chen, Martin K., Calderone, Gerald E. & Pellmar, Mary L. (National Center Health Services Research & Health Care Technology Assessment, Park Building Rm 3-32 5600 Fishers Ln Rockville MD 20857), The Validity of an Index of Leisure-Time Physical Activity, Social Indicators Research, 1987, 19, 3, Aug, 357-365

* An index of leisure-time physical activity is presented for use in health promotion research. Based on the values of metabolic equivalents (METs), this index is found to have a high degree of concurrent, construct, & predictive validity when it is related to a measure of perceived health status. It is useful in investigations of the impact of exercise & other types of leisure-time physical activity on health. 2 Figures, 17 References. HA

88T5913

Comoe-Krou, Barthélemy, The African Conception of Play and Its Potentialities for Education, UM Prospects, 1986, 16, 4, 495-503

* An exploration of the African conception of play & its applicability to education, based largely on fifteen years of personal instruction & conversations with Assoumou Koffi, a "thinker" in Lindimano, Ivory

Coast. Major points of his philosophy of play are summarized, & a sequence of play "ludistics" is formulated, its methods & applications are described. If these concepts are to be reintroduced into education, they must be translated not so much linguistically but culturally. In addition, two fundamental problems must be solved: (1) arriving at a systematic definition of games that is universally acceptable, & (2) establishing criteria for using games in the school environment from preschool to higher education. It is argued that the encouragement of game playing from an early age within the framework of a multidisciplinary curriculum would go a long way toward solving the problem of cultural identity. K. Hyatt

88T5914

Redican, Bede & Hadley, Debbie Sue (Dept Physical Education Newman & Westhill Colls, Barley Green Birmingham B32 3NT England), A Field Studies Project in a City Health and Leisure Club, Sociology of Sport Journal, 1988, 5, 1, Mar, 50-62

* Examined here is the extent to which women involved in regular attendance at aerobic exercise sessions at a city health & leisure club perceived their participation in terms of these issues of body image & health, based on participant observation & interviews conducted with 72 Rs. 1 Table, 18 References. Modified HA

Quarterly, 1987, 51, 4(2), winter, S25-S45

¶ The work of Paul Felix Lazarsfeld & the Bureau of Applied Social Research (Columbia U., New York City, NY) on the impact of mass communications has followed & indeed established the dominant paradigm in this field: the model of limited effects. At the same time, this model has come under criticism. Three major alternative paradigms can be extracted from the literature: each with a critique, an alternative theory, & a research program to offer. They are the institutional, critical, & technological approaches. Unfortunately, all three misread the Lazarsfeld paradigm &, in particular, fail to recognize the changes occurring within it. 113 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T5901

Mooney, Linda & Brabant, Sarah (Dept. Sociology & Anthropology, East Carolina U., Greenville 27858-4353). Two Martinis and a Rested Woman: "Liberation" in the Sunday Comics, Sex Roles, 1987, 17, 7-8, Oct., 409-420

¶ A content analysis of Sunday newspaper comic-strips was conducted to investigate the medium's response to the increasing numbers of women working outside the home in the U.S. Six family-oriented cartoons (3 with traditional wife/mother characters & 3 modern ones in which the central characters worked outside the home (2 M = 156)) were analyzed over a 6 month period in 1984. Results indicate that the media image of the career woman, in both types of cartoon, is as derogatory & stereotypical as that of the traditional F; her home life & husband are also portrayed negatively. Despite the appearance of modern cartoon families, the media's message remains: (1) Fs are primarily responsible for household tasks & childbearing, whether they work outside the home or not, & husbands cannot be expected to help; (2) the more traditional the home, the happier the home life; & (3) home life is disrupted & combative interactions increase when a woman has a full-time career. 6 Tables, 19 References. K. Hyatt

88T5902

Nicolini, Pia (Dept. Humanities & Communications, Drexel U., Philadelphia, PA 19104). Puerto Rican Leaders' Views of English-Language Media, U. Journalism Quarterly, 1987, 64, 2-3, summer-autumn, 597-601

¶ An investigation of how Puerto Rican & Mexican-American community leaders perceive the English-language mass media, comparing interview data from 59 Puerto Rican leaders in Philadelphia, Pa., with that obtained from Mexican-American leaders by Felipe Korzenny et al. ("How Community Leaders, Newspaper Executives, and Reporters Perceive Mexican-Americans and the Mass Media" in Greenberg, Bradley S., Burgoon, Michael, Burgoon, Judee K., & Korzenny (Eds.), Mexican-Americans and the Mass Media, Norwood, NJ: Ablex Publishing Co., 1983). Analysis indicates that both groups of leaders share similar views of the media: both are dissatisfied with the quality of news concerning their ethnic groups, feeling that it reinforces negative stereotypes & neglects reportage of positive news. The greatest complaint is with newspapers, followed by TV & radio. However, Mexican-American leaders attribute media insensitivity & unfairness to racism, while Puerto Ricans blame the general tendency of news media to favor sensationalistic & negativistic stories. In addition, Puerto Ricans are less likely to believe that hiring more Hispanics as media reporters will solve the problem & improve news coverage fairness. 3 Tables. K. Hyatt

88T5903

Picard, Robert G. & Adams, Paul D. (Louisiana State U., Baton Rouge 70803). Characterizations of Acts and Perpetrators of Political Violence in Three Elite U.S. Daily Newspapers, U. Political Communication and Persuasion, 1987, 4, 1, 1-9

¶ An analysis of ways that acts of political violence (terrorism) & their perpetrators are characterized in 3 US newspapers—the Los Angeles Times, the New York Times, & the Washington Post. Using a quota sampling procedure, 258 articles reporting 127 such incidents between 1980 & 1985 were selected from entries in the newspapers' indices, resulting in 931 characterizations of politically violent events/acts & 589 characterizations of perpetrators. Characterizations were classified as either nominal or descriptive, as well as by source. Chi square analysis reveals significant differences in the characterizations made by the media, government, or witnesses: those of media personnel & witnesses were more nominal & employed more neutral terms, while those of government officials were more descriptive & used words that were inflammatory, judgmental, or sensationalistic. It is concluded that the US print media are not significantly culpable of sensationalism in their coverage of terrorism. 10 Tables, 1 Appendix. K. Hyatt

88T5904

Potter, W. James & Ware, William (Coll. Communication, Florida State U., Tallahassee 32306). Traits of Perpetrators and Receivers of Antisocial and Prosocial Acts on TV, U. Journalism Quarterly, 1987, 64, 2-3, summer-autumn, 382-391

¶ A sample of 88 hours of prime-time network TV programs aired in 1985 was subjected to content analysis to determine the demographic properties (gender, race, & age) of the characters responsible for antisocial & prosocial activity. As in previous studies, it was found that most of the perpetrators & the receivers of both antisocial & prosocial activity were Ms., white, & aged 20-50. However, loglinear analysis of multiway contingency tables illuminated some interesting interactions. 5 Tables. Modified AA

88T5905

Rommetveit, Ragnar (Dept. Psychology, U. Oslo, PO Box 1094 Blindern N-0315 3 Norway). Meaning, Context, and Control: Convergent Trends and Controversial Issues in Current Social-Scientific Research on Human Cognition and Communication, Inquiry, 1987, 30, 1-2, Mar., 77-99

¶ A survey of a wide range of social-scientific disciplines reveals a definite convergence of theoretical interest in human cognition & communication as situated in social commitment. Recent contributions within situation semantics & cognitive science explicitly reject some of the constraints inherent in their shared philosophical heritage & prepare novel ground for dialogues between fields as far apart as formal semantics & "dialogical" text theory. Issues such as purely cognitive vs. motivational aspects of human situatedness & the relationship between models of individual information processing, on the one hand, & hermeneutic-dialectic assumptions about social & collective features of meaning & mind, on the other, are thus made topics of cross-disciplinary discussions. Problems such as these are in need of further clarification to transcend the gulf between analytic-rationalist & hermeneutic-dialectic contributions to the understanding of human cognition & communication. 1 Figure, 45 References. Modified HA

88T5906

Ruffolo, Girolgio. Komplexitas es demokracia: az informacio szerepe. Niklas Luhmann tarsadalmi rendszertelelete (Complexity and Democracy: The Role of Information), Szociologia, 1984-85, 1-2, 145-157 (HUN)

¶ Abstract not currently available

88T5907

Shoemaker, Pamela J., Reese, Stephen D., Danielson, Wayne & Hsu, Kenneth (Dept. Journalism, U. Texas, Austin 78712). Ethnic Concentration as Predictor of Media Use, U. Journalism Quarterly, 1987, 64, 2-3, summer-autumn, 593-597

¶ An examination of how a high concentration of ethnics in a community may limit the salience of the host culture & incentives for ethnics to acculturate to it, while increasing the salience of the ethnic culture. Exposure to Spanish-language mass media & use of Spanish with family & friends were used as indicators of acculturation or cross-acculturation among 245 Hispanics & 641 Anglos in Tex., interviewed during a 1984 statewide telephone survey. The findings support the hypotheses that ethnic concentration of the community would be positively related to: (1) speaking Spanish with family & friends (supported for Hispanics, not for Anglos), (2) use of Spanish-language mass media (supported for Hispanics for print media & radio only, not supported for Anglos), & (3) the importance of having a Spanish-language daily newspaper to read (supported for Hispanics & Anglos). These results support the idea that some aspects of acculturation (of both the ethnic & host culture) may be affected by the concentration of ethnics in a community. 2 Tables. Modified AA

88T5908

Taylor, Ian (Dept. Sociology & Anthropology, Carleton U., Ottawa, Ontario K1S 5B6). Violence and Video: For a Social Democratic Perspective, Contemporary Crises, 1987, 11, 2, 107-127

¶ A commentary on the considerably heightened level of public debate & anxiety in GB, during 1982-1985, as to the violent content of many videotapes available for rental. This debate has given rise to an important new set of regulatory & censorship measures, most notably the Video Recordings Act of 1984. The increasing influence during this period of the they play, (2) development costs are borne by players, & (3) development costs vary by the acquisition of defensive rather than offensive skills. Each is concluded to be false, & the economic hypothesis is rejected in favor of more sociological explanations. 7 References. K. Hyatt

88T5925

Riordan, Jim (Modern Languages Centre U Bradford West Yorkshire BD7 1DP England), Sports Medicine in the Soviet Union and German Democratic Republic, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 1, 19-26.

Comments, 26-27, Rejoinder, 27-28

† After providing a brief history & definition of sports medicine in Eastern Europe, focus is on its structure & significance in the USSR & the German Democratic Republic (GDR). It is argued that sports medicine is an integral part of communist sports success, especially at the Olympics. In comparison with GB, the USSR & GDR have found it easier to employ sports medicine to successful ends owing to the central control of their sports systems & the clear-cut aims that the authorities have set for sport. Western nations cannot realize their sports potential without such an integrated, advanced structure of sports medical care. In Comments, P. Jako argues that the role of sports medicine in the successes of Eastern European athletes is overestimated, & the technical excellence of Western MDs interested in sports medicine underestimated. International communication in the field is urged. Don Anthony (Inst of Education, U of London, England) explores reasons for the lack of treatment, education, & research in sports medicine in GB, & calls for a quantum change in thinking regarding sport & its integral value to society. In Rejoinder, Riordan reemphasizes the need for official encouragement & support of sport in the West & the value of international knowledge sharing. 1 Table, 1 Figure, 18 References. K. Hyatt

88T5926

Rubenstein, James M. (Dept Geography Miami U, Oxford OH 45066), Outdoor Recreation in Two European Countries, International Journal of Aging and Human Development, 1987, 25, 2, 129-146.

* A questionnaire randomly distributed by mail to 138 elderly individuals (age 60+) in Luxembourg & 100 in Thionville, France, revealed the high extent of participation in outdoor recreation, a subject shown by others to be an important predictor of successful aging. Similarities & differences in SE characteristics, attitudes, & environmental factors associated with outdoor recreation participation are compared for participants & nonparticipants. Results are consistent with other European studies, but contradict US findings that SE factors are not related to outdoor recreation participation. Further cross-cultural research is urged. 4 Tables, 47 References. Modified HA

88T5927

Wise, Jay Morris (Texas A&M U, College Station 77843), Interscholastic Athletic Participation and Aspirations: An Evaluation of School Context and Self Concept, * Dissertation Abstracts International, 4, The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1544-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8720958.

AMERICAN INDIAN CULTURE AND RESEARCH JOURNAL

The American Indian Culture and Research Journal provides a quarterly interdisciplinary research forum for scholars and innovators in the areas of historical and contemporary American Indian life and culture. Original scholarly papers are invited on a broad range of issues. While encouraging innovation, the editor will favor those articles which demonstrate rigorous and thorough research in an interdisciplinary context.

Mailing Address for manuscripts and subscriptions:

UCLA
American Indian Studies Center
Editor
3220 Campbell Hall
Los Angeles, CA 90024

Subscription Rates:

Regular: $20.00
Institutional $30.00

50 mass culture

88T5915

Engleman, Steve (Dept Community Medicine U Edinburgh, EH8 9Y1 Scotland). The Impact of Mass Media Anti-Smoking Publicity. Health Promotion 1987, 2, 1, 63-74

¶ The rapidly rising cost of health care has brought increasing attention to the potential of preventive measures as distinct from curative ones. Cigarette smoking is the leading preventable cause of morbidity & mortality in the UK. It is of considerable importance therefore that the effectiveness of different policies to reduce smoking be evaluated. Focusing on how effective mass-media antismoking publicity is, the econometric literature of the past fifteen years bearing on this question is reviewed, with 13 articles critically assessed. It is concluded that mass-media publicity has proved effective in reducing smoking, both initially & in the longer term, not only in the UK but in the US & Switzerland. 20 References. Modified HA

88T5916

Gaspár-Ruppert, Walburga (SoWi-Fakultät U Wien, A-1010 Austria). GFBK (Joint Film Evaluation Commission). Osterreichische Zeitschrift für Soziologie, 1987, 12, 3, 77-84 (GFR)

¶ An examination of the Joint Film Evaluation Commission (GFBK) of Austria, a national panel that judges the quality of films & assigns labels accordingly. The panel's history since 1930 & its evolution through several forms are outlined, noting shifting emphases on artistic, pedagogical, & political content. The status of the cinema market & its age distribution are detailed. The procedure by which the GFBK promotes worthy films through tax breaks for theater owners is described. The cost of appeals, the economic impact of a negative judgment, & other factors are claimed to discourage small filmmakers & distributors & to decrease the likelihood of complex themes being treated in films. The relation of the GFBK to the market & particularly to large distributors is shown to undermine the intent of promoting artistically worthy films. 17 References. J. Anderson

69 sociology of sports

88T5917

Duncan, Margaret Carlisle & Hasbrook, Cynthia A. (Dept Human Kinetics U Wisconsin, Madison 53701). Denial of Power in Televised Women's Sports. Sociology of Sport Journal, 1988, 5, 1, Mar, 1-21

¶ Televised depictions of women & men participating in basketball, surfing, & marathon running are compared using the hermeneutical method. Analysis reveals a profound ambivalence in the reporting of the women's sports, consisting of conflicting messages about athletes, positive portrayals of sportswomen are combined with subtly negative suggestions that trivialize or undercut the women's efforts. Such trivialization is a way of denying power to women. It is asserted that sport & leisure educators have an ethical obligation to redress the imbalance of power in the sporting world. 30 References. Modified HA

88T5918

Dunning, Eric G. (Dept Sociology U Leicester, LE1 7RH England). La Violence populaire en Grande-Bretagne (Working Class Violence in Great Britain). La Recherche, 1987, 18, 189, June, 798-803 (FRF)

¶ A discussion of manifestations of violence in modern European society, especially in GB, draws on newspaper reports & various studies. Vandalism, hooliganism, racial conflict, & in particular the violence that has come to be associated with the sport of soccer are examined. It is found that the overwhelming majority involved in these incidents are young, unskilled, manual workers. It is suggested that the phenomenon reveals a social crisis in GB: the SC structure has remained rigid, so that social integration is blocked for the marginalized, Or I es, in the same way as it is for black immigrants. The frustration of this situation leads to outbreaks of violence. 1 Table, 1 Figure, 4 Photos. C. Waters

88T5919

Haase, Gregory P. (Colorado State U, Fort Collins 80521). Marathon Running: A Social-Psychological Study of the Long Distance Runner. * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1326-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8717143.

88T5920

Henricks, Thomas S. (Dept Social Sciences Elon Coll, NC 27244). Huizinga's Legacy for Sports Studies. Sociology of Sport Journal, 1988, 5, 1, Mar, 37-49.

¶ Johan Huizinga's Homo Ludens: A Study of the Play-Element in Civilization (Boston: Beacon Press, 1955) has been recognized as a classic study of play. However, its implications for the study of sport have not been developed to their fullest extent. Huizinga's model is reconsidered here as an ideal type. It is argued that such a model unifies some work currently being done on sport & otherwise provides the basis for a far-reaching research agenda. In this spirit, a number of empirical questions

Modified HA

88T5921

Melnick, Merrill J., Vanfossen, Beth E. & Sabo, Donald F. (Dept Physical Education & Sport State U New York, Brockport 14420). Developmental Effects of Athletic Participation among High School Girls. Sociology of Sport Journal 1988, 5, 1, Mar, 22-36

¶ The impact of athletic participation on the academic, social, & social-psychological development of high-school girls is examined. A panel design & multistage sampling were used to assess the effect of athletic participation on perceived popularity, sex-role attitudes, psychological well-being, sociability, delinquency, academic achievement, educational aspiration, & extracurricular involvement. Data were obtained from transcript records & survey questionnaires administered during the 8th sophomore (1980) & senior (1982) years (N = 5,669). Multiple regression analysis reveals that athletic participation was strongly related to extracurricular involvement, modestly related to perceived popularity, but only slightly related to delinquency & educational aspiration. Athletic participation was not related to psychological well-being or sex-role attitudes. 4 Tables, 1 Appendix, 46 References. HA

88T5922

Nemes, Ferenc. Szociológiai szemlelet a vállalati ergonomiai kutatásokban (Sociological Outlook in the Ergonomic Research of Enterprises). Szociologia, 1984-85, 3-4, 367-371 (HU/N)

¶ Abstract not currently available

88T5923

Parr, Robert Glenn (Ohio State U, Columbus 43210). The Sport and Religious Identities: Comparisons of Self-Involvement Using the SHI. * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1331-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8717698.

88T5924

Phillips, John C. (Dept Sociology U Pacific, Stockton CA 95211). A Further Comment on the "Economic Hypothesis" of Positional Segregation in Baseball. Sociology of Sport Journal, 1988, 5, 1, Mar, 63-65.

¶ An elaboration of the debate between Norman Yetman & Marshal Medoff (see SA 361/88T1528) concerning the viability of Medoff's "economic hypothesis" regarding racial variations in playing position in professional baseball. Yetman challenges the argument that blacks' lack of representation at central positions is due to the high skill & development costs of training for these positions, or that this trend is reversing due to long-term improvements in black income & greater access to coaching & sports facilities as a result of school integration. The career histories of professional baseball players (N not provided) are examined

0900 political interactions

11 interaction between societies, nations, & states

88T5928

Clements, Kevin P. (U Canterbury, Christchurch 1 New Zealand), New Zealand Paying for Nuclear Ban. ♦ UM Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists, 1987, 43, 6, July-Aug, 41-44

† An analysis of the New Zealand government's decision to ban nuclear armed & powered ships & aircraft from New Zealand waters & territorial air space & the US reactions to this decision. The antinuclear policy disrupted defense arrangements between New Zealand, the US, & Australia. The US elevated its nuclear theology above alliance friendship & imposed a variety of sanctions on New Zealand to demonstrate that other allies wishing to move in an antinuclear direction would have to choose between their democratic preferences & a continuing alliance relationship with the US. The impasse has now resulted in two bilateral relations: one between New Zealand & Australia & another between Australia & the US. Canberra now occupies a pivotal position between both countries on defense issues. Recent events in the region, most notably the Fijian Coup, suggest that antinuclear policies continue to precipitate anxiety within the US government. 1 Illustration, 4 References. Modified AA

88T5929

Geernaerts, G. (Stettie Leer Internationale Betrekkingen Rijks U Utrecht, NL-3508 TC Netherlands), Stand van het wetenschappelijk onderzoek naar sociale verdediging (A State-of-the-Art Report on Civilian-Based Defense). ♦ Tijdschrift voor Sociale Wetenschappen, 1988, 33, 1, Jan-Mar, 66-87. (DUT)

* Though there has been a steadily growing interest in alternative concepts of defense, particularly civilian-based defense, this has not been matched by any significant progress in proper scientific research to increase knowledge of the subject. It is argued that this stagnation is attributable to too much attention being paid to normative analysis & polemics at the expense of any serious effort at theoretical articulation, explicitly stated models, testable hypotheses, & elaborated research strategies. In addition, there are the realities of a very restricted research capacity; upgrading this, however, will not be sufficient without attention to these other tenets of basic research. 3 Figures, 52 References. Modified HA

88T5930

Gumucio, Jorge A. (U Pittsburgh, PA 15260), Toward a Sociology of International Relations: The Case of Bolivian Quest for an Outlet to the Sea. ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1552-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8719250.

88T5931

Ishida, Takeshi (Instit Social Science Tokyo U, Bunkyo-ku Japan), Die Einfuhrung westlicher politischer Begriffe in Japan. Zur Reaktion nicht-westlicher Gesellschaften auf den Einfluss des Westens (The Introduction of Western Political Concepts into Japan: Non Western Societies' Reports on the Impact of the West). ♦ Peripherie, 1987, 7, 27, winter, 7-21. (GER)

† The transfer & modification of two Western concepts: freedom & (people's) rights - in Chinese & Japanese political culture are investigated, with attention to general issues of political development & the modernization crisis. A relationist approach is proposed that identifies corresponding elements in Western & non-Western culture. Several ideological contradictions are also examined. Modified HA

88T5932

Kissné, Novák Éva, Az együttélés alternatívái az NSZK-ban (Alternatives of Coexistence in the Federal Republic of Germany). Szociológia, 1984-85, 3-4, 372-382. (HUN)

† Abstract not currently available

88T5933

London, Bruce & Williams, Bruce A. (Dept Sociology & Social Psychology Florida Atlantic U, Boca Raton 33431-0991), Multinational Corporate Penetration, Protest, and Basic Needs Provision in Non-

Core Nations: A Cross-National Analysis. ♦ UM Social Forces, 1988, 66, 3, Mar, 747-771

† An investigation of the determinants of domestic well-being in less-developed countries, based on previously published data on 83 countries, 1960-1985. In particular, the impact of both penetration of foreign investment & levels of domestic political protest on economic growth & the provision of basic needs are examined in an attempt to explore the effects of both international economic processes & intranational political processes on development. 5 Tables, 2 Appendixes, 42 References. HA

88T5934

McIntyre, Thomas Richard (U Pittsburgh, PA 15260), One Body at a Time: The Political Economy of Vietnam Combat Death. ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1553-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8719259.

88T5935

Porter, Marilyn (Memorial U Newfoundland, Saint John's A1C 5S7), Peripheral Women: Towards a Feminist Analysis of the Atlantic Region. Studies in Political Economy, 1987, 23, summer, 41-72

† The case is made for an alliance of two scholarly & political traditions applied to the Atlantic region of Canada: Marxist political economy & feminism. The existing work in these traditions is reviewed. Important concepts shared between them take on two distinct forms. Marxist accounts typically are nongendered &, as a result, overlook important issues. Conceptual starting points for a synthesis include: patriarchy, production & reproduction, & the sexual Doff. W. H. Stoddard

88T5936

Sanda, Andrei, Romania and Some Problems Related to the Cultural-Scientific Cooperation between the South-East European Countries during the Past Two Decades. Revue des Etudes Sud-Est Europeennes, 1987, 25, 3, July-Sept, 263-269.

† An analysis of the central role played by the cultural, scientific, & technological fields in enhancing Romania's relations with other Balkan countries & nations of the world. It is shown how cooperation among various cultural-scientific institutions, organizations, & individuals both governmental & nongovernmental has been crucial to shaping the country's foreign policy. Romania has set an example of how regional cooperation can facilitate the transformation of the Balkans into an area of peaceful coexistence, good neighborliness, & mutual support & assistance. K. Hyatt

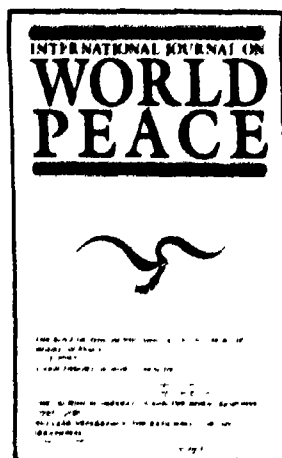

88T5937

Schiltz, Marc (Dept Anthropology London School Economics, Aldwych WC2A 2AE England), War, Peace, and the Exercise of Power: Perspectives on Society, Gender and the State in the New Guinea Highlands. ♦ Social Analysis, 1987, 21, Aug, 3-19.

† It is argued that by creating a sphere of equalizing relationships that discriminates against women as autonomous transactors, men in New Guinea Highland societies generate competition & conflicts among themselves & their kin-based groupings that tend to crosscut & override in importance underlying class based conflicts. Inasmuch as institutionalized reciprocity has continued to flourish under state conditions, so also has political power continued to be articulated within the framework of equalizing relationships. Consequently, conflicts that are enacted in the public domain where men exchange wealth or physical blows in their bid for power are inherently ambiguous. In one sense they are conflicts within the authority of the state, but in another sense they are conflicts that pit local societies against the objectives & the authority of the state. 60 References. AA

88T5938

Ungson, Gerardo & van Dijk, Nic (c/o van Dijk-Middelheimlaan 30, NL-3481 AS Harmelen Netherlands), Concurreren in de postindustriële maatschappij: de Verenigde Staten, Japan en Europa (Competing in the Postindustrial Society: The Case of the US, Japan

"...indispensable..."

--Dr. Richard L. Rubenstein, Director
The Washington Institute for Values In Public Policy

"...sorely needed..."

--Dr. Stephen A. Garrett
Monterey Institute of International Studies

"...extremely impressive..."

--Dr. Harald Niemeyer
Educator, Author, Editor, West Germany

The International Journal on World Peace offers you the insights of some of the world's most respected thinkers and in-depth analyses of the world's crucial problems

The International Journal on World Peace is not your usual news magazine. It's a forum where scholars can contribute new and innovative ideas to the public debate on the world's pressing social problems.

Herbert London on academic freedom

As is well known, the social sciences have become so politicized, so ideologized that it seems impossible for many scholars in these disciplines to deal with today's issues dispassionately. Herbert London, of New York University and editor of Academic Questions has written recently:

"The consensus which once supported academic freedom for all has been gradually supplanted by an orthodoxy which discourages, or even intimidates those with views differing from current ideological fashion."

The International Journal on World Peace is devoted to challenging the ideological cant of the left or right that is obstructing the pursuit of truth in today's social sciences.

Serious analysis in a dangerous world

In the International Journal on World Peace you won't find glib and superficial commentary by cynical social critics. What you will find is serious scholarship dealing with serious issues. Recent articles include:

- The Political Significance of Latin American Liberation Theology
by Richard L. Rubenstein
- The Role of Philosophy and Values in the Right Model of Peace
by Henryk Skolimowski

- The Contribution of Religion to the Conflict in Northern Ireland by Paul Badham

- South Africa: Constitutional Change or Violent Revolution?
by Lewis C. A. Rayapen

In the best tradition of academic freedom, articles are accompanied by vigorous debate, comment, and rejoinders, thus creating an environment of intellectual enthusiasm and excitement.

Read what scholars have to say about the journal

"The International Journal on World Peace is an indispensable source of informed discussion on the moral, social, and political problems besetting contemporary society...lively, intelligent, and challenging, and always interesting."

Dr. Richard L. Rubenstein
Robert Lawton Distinguished Professor of Religion
Florida State University

"The International Journal on World Peace provides welcome insight on a host of urgent international problems. Its contents are well researched, timely, and ably written. The journal shows every sign of becoming a leading outlet for analysis that is on the cutting edge of our days' most important issues."

Dr. John K. Roth
Russell K. Pitzer Professor of Philosophy
Claremont McKenna College
Claremont, California

"The International Journal on World Peace is the most professionally balanced academic magazine published in the field of peace studies."

Dr. Alexander Stroomer
Professor of Politics and Contemporary History
University of Salford England

Intellectual rejuvenation

The International Journal on World Peace offers to take you behind the scenes, to the realities that are all too often neglected by the regular media.

If you have the enthusiasm to undertake this intellectual pursuit, you will be rewarded with insight, understanding, and compassion.

Free Trial Offer

Why not discover for yourself the incomparable pleasure of examining today's most critical issues with today's most articulate and influential scholars? Especially now, when you can do so without risk

To obtain a FREE copy of the International Journal on World Peace, mail in the coupon below.

Send no money. We will send your free issue along with an invoice for a one year subscription at $15.00. (4 issues) Even if you decide not to order the subscription, the sample copy is yours to keep.

Order toll free

To get your free issue right away, call this toll free number:

1 (800) 634-7661

The International Journal on World Peace
G.P.O. Box 1311 Dept. 120
New York, N.Y., 10116

YES please send me the current issue of the International Journal on World Peace and enter my name as a trial subscriber
Name _____
Address _____
City/State/Zip _____
SA-2/88

policy-oriented voters' perceptions of candidates' positions. In this framework the introduction of campaign contributions may affect candidates' electoral policies, & if they do, then they benefit exactly one of the two interest groups. 2 Figures, 1 Appendix, 21 References. HA

88T5947

Beilharz, Peter (Dept History U Melbourne, Parkville Victoria 3052 Australia). Reading Politics: Social Theory and Social Policy. ♦ The Australian and New Zealand Journal of Sociology 1987, 23, 3, Nov, 388-406

† Arguments within social theory have only recently been brought to bear on social policy or policy analysis. Some of the principles of structuralism & hermeneutics are sketched, & it is shown how these traditions can help elucidate the reading of social policy statements. This is illustrated by an analysis of the language of several policy documents recently published in Australia by various different bodies: political parties, a trade union, the Victoria state government, & a "Socialist Alternative Collective." It is argued that language is more important than is often recognized, & that greater collaboration between social policy & social theory might do much to advance debate. 45 References. Modified HA

88T5948

Berting, Jan (Vakgroep Algemene Sociologie Erasmus U, NL-3000 DR Rotterdam Netherlands). Maatschappelijke ontwikkeling, individuele mensenrechten en rechten van collectiviteiten (Societal Development in Relation to Human Rights and Rights of People). ♦ Sociologische Gids 1988, 35, 1, Jan-Feb, 24-42. (DUT)

* Human rights as universal rights, based on the recognition of the inherent dignity of all individuals, are not a central interest in sociology. This is curious in light of the fact that both the rise of the idea of human rights & their subsequent development are related to processes of societal transformation. Sociology, by studying the context-boundedness of human rights, can contribute to debates on the nature of the universality of human rights & the necessary conditions for their implementation. Modified HA

88T5949

Bok, Georges Tan Eng (Institut atlantique affaires internationales, 9 ave Hoche F-75008 Paris France). L'Institution militaire et le pouvoir soviétiques apres Brezhnev (Soviet Power and the Military Institution after Brezhnev). ♦ Archives Europeennes de Sociologie 1987, 28, 2, 241-265. (FRE)

* An investigation of power struggles within the USSR after the departure of Leonid Brezhnev as head of state. The three major actors or interest groups are identified as the Communist Party, the armed forces, & the KGB. The fluctuating power relations, including coalitions, among these three groups during the period of succession of leadership are discussed. It appears that the influence of the army has declined in favor of that of the KGB. There have also been a number of changes within the military high command. C Waters

88T5950

Briemberg, Mordecai, Reshaping the Political Discourse on the Middle East. ♦ The Insurgent Sociologist 1987, 14, 3, Fall, 131-137

† A review essay on books by Noam Chomsky, Pirates and Emperors: International Terrorism in the Real World (New York: Claremont Research & Publications, 1986); Maxime Rodinson, Cult, Ghetto, and State: The Persistence of the Jewish Question (London: Al Saqi Books, 1983); & Edward W. Said, After the Last Sky: Palestinian Lives (New York: Pantheon Books, 1986 [see listings in IRPS No. 43]). Israel has long been viewed as the direct heir of WWII European Jewry & as uniquely morally justified. These three books attempt to cast that image into doubt, & thus to establish a more balanced perception of the situation in the Near East. Their efforts are commendable & excellently carried out. W. H. Stoddard

88T5951

Bruneau, Thomas C. (Dept Political Science McGill U, Montreal Quebec H3A 2T5). O papel da igreja na transição brasileira (The Role and Response of the Catholic Church in the Redemocratization of Brazil). Dados 1987, 30, 1, 29-43. (POR)

Translated by Paulo Kramer.

† During the final decade of Brazil's military regime, the Catholic Church frequently came into conflict with the government as a result of its support for social change & for the Lcs. There is some question as to whether the Church will continue to perform this role under the new civilian regime, while it probably will, its role in politics can be expected to diminish as the transition continues. Interviews with Church & government officials & current documentation support these conclusions. Modified HA

88T5952

Brustein, William (Dept Sociology U Utah, Salt Lake City 84112). The Political Geography of Belgian Fascism: The Case of Rexism. ♦ American Sociological Review 1988, 53, 1, Feb, 69-80

† Though Italy & Germany furnish the best known cases of fascism's political geography between the two World Wars, one of the more intriguing & less known examples of regional variation in fascist strength occurred in Belgium. In the 1936 Belgian legislative elections, the fascist Rexist movement captured over 30% of the popular vote in the province of Luxembourg, compared to only 9% in Hainaut. Here a general theory of regionalism is applied to the case of Belgian fascism. Agricultural census & statistical data from 41 cantons (counties) of Wallonia support the hypothesis that divergent regional patterns of Belgian voting in 1936 can be largely ascribed to the existence of particular modes of production that were responsible for distinctive regional constellations of interests. 4 Tables, 1 Figure, 50 References. HA

88T5953

Contes, Rodney Delamio (U Chicago, IL 60637). A House Divided: The Daley Machine (1955-1983). ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, 4. The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1330-A

Unavailable from UMI; contact the degree-granting university.

88T5954

Coleman, Stephen, The Human Brain, Social Conformity, and Presidential Elections. The Journal of Mathematical Sociology, 1985, 11, 2, Feb, 95-130

† Aggregate voting behavior in US presidential elections from 1904 to 1980 is investigated, using the state as the unit of analysis. The traditional assumption that voting is a rational process is abandoned, & a model constructed to test the power of social conformity over voting decisions. The model, which uses the entropy measure of statistical information theory, allows numerical tests of its validity & reveals unexpected dynamic patterns in voting behavior. Four distinct processes related to social conformity that affect voter turnout & the distribution of votes among presidential candidates are found. A mathematical model for each process is identified & parameters are estimated from election data. 2 Tables, 4 Figures, 2 Appendixes, 26 References. HA

88T5955

Dalmas-Alfonsi, Paul, Propos sur l'ethnie corse (Comments on the Corsican Ethnic Group). ♦ Peuples Méditerranéens/Mediterranean Peoples, 1987, 38-39, Jan-June, 281-300. (FRI)

† A review of the Manifesto published in 1964 by C I DIC (the Committee for the Study & Defense of Corsica's Interests), which presented themes that would later be developed by the island's protest movement. The Manifesto endeavors to define the Corsican community & to assert its rights against the French administration. A distinction is made between Corsicans of the diaspora & those living on the island. The Manifesto identifies Corsican PO & shows Corsicans' determination to continue in a conception of the national idea that has not yet been fulfilled but is very recognizable. Modified HA

88T5956

DeSipio, Louis, Social Science Literature and the Naturalization Process. ♦ International Migration Review, 1987, 21, 2, summer 390-405

† A review of social science research on the SI & cultural factors associated with immigrants who naturalize. Though few studies use statistical methodologies & many of the findings are highly impressionistic, several common factors are identified to explain the decision to naturalize: length of residence in the US, varied potentials for acculturation among different national origin groups, motivation for immigration, & formal education & language skills. No single study is found that examines all of the variables influencing the naturalization process. 1 Table, 46 References. HA and Europe), M&O, 1987, 41, 5, Sept-Oct, 378-389 (DUT)

§ Competition in high technology has become crucial because of the pervasiveness of high technology products in postindustrial society & the declining competitiveness of the traditional leaders the U.S., Japan, & Europe in oilline, smokestack industries. It is suggested that the performance of high-technology firms in these nations is inextricably linked to the industrial policies of their governments. The strengths & weaknesses of these policies are evaluated against impending trends in the industry. While market forces & the changing nature of industry structure will undoubtedly affect future competition, it is suggested that government policy & the ability of individual nations to strengthen their existing institutions will determine whether the future will be characterized as increasingly competitive or collaborative. Modified HA

88T5939

Weinbaum, Marvin G. (Program South & West Asian Studies U Illinois, Urbana 61801). The Internationalization of Domestic Conflict in the Middle East, Middle East Review, 1987, 20, 1, fall, 31-42.

¶ The internationalization of the Middle East's more endemic national conflicts is explored, particularly those having a strong ethnic & sectarian basis. Some of the region's more salient struggles are identified & varying levels of conflict & degrees of internationalization are broadly classified. The forms or modes that outside involvement is likely to assume, ranging from moral support to direct participation & control over the course of a conflict, are described. The conditions or circumstances that appear to predispose domestic conflicts to outside intervention are also considered. These observations suggest a number of propositions about the factors associated with internationalization in the Middle East, each of which is briefly analyzed. Some of the durable consequences of external involvement on the region's more notable ethnic & sectarian conflicts are examined. On balance, foreign influences & intervention perpetuate & aggravate ethnic & sectarian problems in the Middle East, as elsewhere. Paradoxically, however, once having internationalized a domestic conflict, foreign powers may be indispensable to finding a means to control, if not end, the fighting. 2 Tables. AA

25 political sociology

88T5940

Alexander, Jeffrey C. (U California, Los Angeles 90024). Personal Politics, The New Republic, 1987, 3, 6 Apr, 12-13.

¶ An examination of the Iranamok affair in the U.S. as an example of personal rule dominating over democracy's principles of public representation & responsiveness. Though the U.S. public was shocked once the details of Iranamok were revealed, it is argued that modern democracies not only allow, but provoke such behavior on the part of their leaders: personal leadership must be allowed to avoid bureaucratic administration, yet at the same time, leaders are bound by the constraints of a representative role. Iranamok was unique only in that the mechanisms of personal rule became transparent before President Reagan had an opportunity to properly justify his deception & rationalize his acts to the public. K. Hyatt

88T5941

Alvarez, Robert R., A Profile of the Citizenship Process among Hispanics in the United States, International Migration Review, 1987, 21, 2, summer, 327-351.

¶ A report on an ethnographic investigation of the naturalization experiences of 38 recently naturalized Hispanics. In addition to examining the formal & informal steps taken by these applicants to learn about citizenship & the naturalization process, focus is on how the decision to naturalize fits into the larger life histories of these applicants. Naturalization is presented as the holistic outcome of isolated factors, eg, jobs or length of time in the US. It is found that the most important factor influencing the naturalization decision is the unraveling of mysteries surrounding the citizenship process. 1 Appendix, 7 References. HA

88T5942

Ansara, Michael & Miller, S. M. (c/o Miller Boston U, MA 02215), Opening Up Progressive Thought, Social Policy, 1986, 17, 1, summer, 3-10.

¶ The progressive movement is discussed, reexamining its thought & programs. Intended to provoke debate among progressives, current activities are reviewed, & future objectives assessed, with an emphasis on serious openness. F. Rasmussen

88T5943

Arnason, Johann P. (Dept Sociology La Trobe U, Bundoora Victoria 3083 Australia), Review Essay: The State and Its Contexts, The Australian and New Zealand Journal of Sociology, 1987, 23, 3, Nov, 433-442.

¶ A review essay on a book by Anthony Giddens, The Nation-State and Violence (Cambridge: Polity Press, 1985 [see listing in IRPS No. 43]). Giddens analyzes the nation-state on three levels: the historical reality underlying the notion of society, the theory of modernity, & the concept of power. Focus here is on his theory of modernity. He considers that the modern world is the product of three factors: capitalism, industrialism, & the nation-state system - & is characterized by four "institutional clusterings": surveillance, capitalistic enterprise, industrial production, & "centralized control of the means of violence." Giddens presents an articulate version of the new approach to the nation-state in social theory; but his concept of modernity is one-sided, focusing on power to the exclusion of culture. 12 References. C. Waters

88T5944

Aronowitz, Stanley (Graduate School & U Center City U New York, NY 10036), On the 1984 Presidential Election: A Debate, Social Policy, 1985, 16, 2, fall, 2-4.

Reply, 3,5

¶ In "The 1984 Election and the New Deal: An Alternative Explanation" (no citation given), Vicente Navarro argues that the 1984 presidential election did not represent a rejection of the New Deal by voters. However, he does not adequately discuss the power of neoconservatism to define the terms of political debate. In addition, he disregards the decline of the union movement, the erosion of the Democrats' old business base, the issue of whether popular support for New Deal reforms translates into votes, the ideological hegemony of the Reagan administration, & the US's payment of the arms costs for the entire Western alliance. A critical look at the Democratic Party is urgently needed. Vicente Navarro (School of Hygiene/Public Health, Johns Hopkins U, Baltimore, Md) notes that Aronowitz's perceptions are similar in content to those of the Right, though valued differently: he sees the New Deal coalition as an aberration in US history that is now dead, & suggests that the Reagan positions have attained ideological hegemony. Aronowitz does not provide empirical evidence for most of his criticisms. The New Deal is not dead, its programs have wide popular support, which is manifested in popular voting when the opportunity exists. The problem is the lack of instruments for mobilization of this support, which results from the absence of class politics in the US. W. H. Stoddard

88T5945

Arrughi, Jean-Marie, Le Clan: Renouveau et permanence (The Clan: Its Renewal and Permanence), Peuples Méditerranéens/Mediterranean Peoples, 1987, 38-39, Jan-June, 49-55 (FRE)

¶ The political structure in Corsica has traditionally been shaped by the struggle between two similar but opposing partiti (clans), which unite families at all political levels & serve as intermediaries between the French state & Corsican society. Social & cultural changes affecting this system are discussed, as is the new form of legal autonomy accorded the clans by a 1982 statute. Ways in which the clans may be able to adjust to the new situation are examined, & three possible long-term scenarios are presented. Modified HA

88T5946

Austen-Smith, David (Dept Political Science U Rochester, NY 14627), Interest Groups, Campaign Contributions, and Probabilistic Voting, Public Choice, 1987, 54, 2, 123-139.

¶ A simple model is developed to analyze the impact of campaign contributions on electoral policy decisions of candidates for office. Interest groups are defined as firms that select contributions under the assumption that candidates' policies & opposing groups' donations remain unaltered. Candidates, however, recognize that their policy choices affect contributions. Campaign contributions are used by candidates to affect

88T5966

Henshel, Richard L. & Johnston, William A. (c/o Johnston Dept Sociology U Western Ontario, London N6A 5C2). The Emergence of Bandwagon Effects: A Theory. In The Sociological Quarterly 1987, 28, 4, Dec, 493-511

1 Previous explanations of bandwagons from election polls have exclusively emphasized conformity causes. It is proposed that "indirect" causes—in which election predictions first affect key actors, influencing their decisions concerning financial support, volunteer work, or endorsements—also have an effect. These decisions then produce major campaign alterations that influence the voters & alter the election outcome. The notion of indirect causes clarifies anomalous bandwagon research findings & directs attention to the possibility of bandwagon feedback on subsequent elections. If the same forecasters create frequent bandwagon effects, their credibility should increase as a result of enhanced accuracy, increased credibility should, in turn, increase the self-fulfilling tendency of their subsequent forecasts. Such deviation-amplifying feedback would permit polls to produce a highly significant, & expanding, influence on elections. 4 Figures, 66 References. HA

88T5967

Holden, Constance. Is the Time Ripe for Welfare Reform?, In Science, 1987, 238, 4827, 30 Oct, 607-609

* It is argued that liberals & conservatives in the US are growing more united in their realization of the necessity of welfare reform, largely due to recent social science research on the Aid for Families with Dependent Children program that has provided the first reliable data by which to evaluate its efficacy. New findings on the welfare population & whether welfare fosters dependency among recipients, affects childbearing decisions of poor women, & is an intergenerational phenomenon are discussed. Some new Congressional bills are reviewed, though their proposals are modest, they do reflect the effects of this new research, as well as in acknowledgement of the changing work habits of US mothers. Though areas of bipartisan agreement are still narrow, there is a common emphasis on measures that require some sort of work obligations & responsibilities on the part of welfare recipients. Incremental change is generally seen as the only realistic path to reform, though any real change will probably be delayed until the end of the Reagan administration. 2 Photographs. K. Hyatt

88T5968

Hueglin, Thomas O. (Dept Political Science Wilfrid Laurier U, Waterloo Ontario N2L 3C5). The Politics of Fragmentation in an Age of Scarcity: A Synthetic View and Critical Analysis of Welfare State Crisis, Canadian Journal of Political Science/Revue canadienne de science politique, 1987, 20, 2, June, 235-264

* A general perception of crisis in the Western industrialized world at the end of the post-WWII period of growth has spawned two types of theoretical response: while a conservative theory of overload focuses on ungovernability caused by postmaterialist value change, radical analysis points to the structural contradictions of the welfare & intervention state under capitalism. A synthetic approach is suggested that attributes the crisis to both postmaterialist persistence & structural contradictions under the conditions of economic constraint. Polarization & the potential mobilization of fragmented postindustrial societies in the context of neo-conservative politics are examined, with examples provided of economic restructuring efforts in the US, GB, & Federal Republic of Germany. It is suggested that a regime of economic dualism &/or corporatism is the most likely outcome. Modified HA

88T5969

Karger, Howard Jacob (U Missouri, Columbia 65211). Ideology and the Crisis of the Welfare State, In Quarterly Journal of Ideology, 1987, 11, 1, Jan, 3-11

* The welfare system in the US is in crisis. Conservatives have attacked it, while many of its former defenders are no longer politically active. It is argued that the Left has helped to make the conservative attack possible. The historical emergence of the present welfare state is described & its ideological contradictions with capitalism are identified, with emphasis on equality vs efficiency. The assumption that welfare can coexist with capitalism has blocked any critique of capitalism & therefore made an effective defense of social welfare impossible. 14 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T5970

Kennamer, J. David (School Mass Communications Virginia Commonwealth U, Richmond 23284). How Media Use during Campaign Affects the Intent to Vote, In Journalism Quarterly, 1987, 64, 2-3, summer-autumn, 291-300

1 The influence of communication variables on citizens' intent to vote is examined through an investigation of how campaign media attention affected voting intent during the 1985 Va gubernatorial race. Telephone interviews were conducted with a random sample of 388 Rs in the Richmond metropolitan area to obtain data on campaign cognitions & interest, strength of candidate choices, voting intent, amount of attention paid to newspaper/TV campaign coverage & demographic variables. Path analysis revealed that news media attention, through affecting cognition, did both directly & indirectly influence Rs' intention to vote, Rs' education & discussion of the election were also influential, while strength of candidate preference was not. The variable roles that TV & newspaper attention played in influencing cognitions are explored. 2 Tables, 3 Figures. K. Hyatt

88T5971

Kim, Myoung Soo (Brown U, Providence RI 02912). The Making of Korean Society: The Role of the State in the Republic of Korea (1948-79), In Diversion Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1904-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8715521.

88T5972

King, Desmond S. (U Edinburgh, EH8 9Y1 Scotland). Social Choice Theory, In Political Studies, 1987, 35, 2, June, 301-310.

1 A review of books by John Bonner, Politics, Economics and Welfare (Brighton: Wheatsheaf Books, 1986), Jon Elster & Aunund Hylland (Eds), Foundations of Social Choice Theory (Cambridge & New York: Cambridge U Press, 1986), & Michale Laver, Social Choice and Public Policy (Oxford & New York: Basil Blackwell, 1986 [see listings in IRPS No. 43]). Bonner's work introduces the main elements of social choice theory to undergraduates, & presents the concepts of social welfare, utility, rationality, interpersonal comparisons, & especially, the issue of deriving aggregate or collective welfare functions. Laver's work is also directed toward undergraduates, but its somewhat novel approach should give it a wider audience. The problem of collective action is at the core of the text. A framework for a general comparative discussion of policy outcomes in different systems is developed. The Elster & Hylland work is a collection of essays addressing substantive issues in social choice theory. i. Rasmussen

88T5973

Kloby, Jerry (Dept Sociology Rutgers U, New Brunswick NJ 08903). The Growing Divide: Class Polarization in the 1980s, In Monthly Review, 1987, 39, 4, Sept, 1-8

1 An analysis of various official statistics concerning income & wealth distribution in the US. Current trends show that a polarization of SCs is taking place & this may contribute to a weakening of the myth of the US as a Mc society. In particular, a controversial study of wealth distribution, released in July 1986 by the Joint Economic Committee (JEC) of Congress, is examined. The JEC's report shows a greater concentration of wealth than any other study ever undertaken in the US. Specific emphasis is placed on the changes that have taken place since a similar study was done in 1963. It is concluded that recent governmental policies have combined with the natural functioning of the private sector of the economy to increase the wealth & income of those who are relatively privileged while the lower strata of US society have increasingly struggled. 5 Tables. AA

88T5974

Lenclud, Gérard (Laboratoire anthropologie sociale Centre national recherche scientifique, F-75700 Paris France). Clanisme, Etat et société: a propos d'un ouvrage de José Gil (Clanisme, State and Society; Concerning a Book by José Gil), In Peuples Méditerranéens/Mediterranean Peoples, 1987, 38-39, Jan-June, 73-83 (FRE)

1 A commentary on José Gil's La Corse entre la liberté et la terreur ((Corsica, between Freedom and Terror), Paris: La Différence, 1984). Gil examines the system of clans in Corsica, investigating the origins of their power & their leaders. He discusses how they are legitimated by symbolic & social forms of coexistence specific to the island's society, & suggests how far they rely on state authority. Gil presents a general model of interpretation of clanism, but certain internal contradictions in his analysis are pointed out. Modified HA

88T5957

Durden, Garey C. & Gaynor, Patricia (Dept Economics Appalachian State U, Boone NC 28608). The Rational Behavior Theory of Voting Participation: Evidence from the 1970 and 1982 Elections. U Public Choice 1987, 53, 3, 231-242

¶ Previous empirical research on voter participation & rational behavior theory is updated using data from the 1970 & 1980 census & the 1970 & 1982 US Congressional elections. Parameter equivalency tests yield interesting results regarding independent variable constancy over time, especially with regard to black voter participation. Specification error tests provide evidence that the rational behavior model & congressional district data generate statistically valid estimates of the determinants of voting participation. 2 Tables, 25 References. Modified HA

88T5958

Fattori, Fernand. Peuple, nationalité, nation: pour une reévaluation de l'histoire de la Corse (People, Nationality, Nation. Toward a Reevaluation of the History of Corsica). ♦ Peuples Méditerranéens/Mediterranean Peoples, 1987, 38, 39, Jan-June, 5-30. (FR:)

Translated by Paul Dalmas-Affonci.

¶ A reevaluation of the history of Corsica raises questions about the concepts of people or ethnic group & of nationality & national consciousness. The Corsican revolution led by Pascal Paoli in the mid-eighteenth century is considered a turning point. It is argued that Corsica at that time constituted a real nation. Relationships with authorities during the subsequent 200 years of French rule are discussed, as is the subject of minority status within France. Modern problems that are perceived as a threat to Corsican identity are examined, including emigration & rapid development financed by outside interests. Modified HA

88T5959

Feldman, Ofer (Dept Social Psychology U Tokyo, Bunkyo-ku Japan). Meeting with the Mass Media: Tendencies of Japanese Politicians. U Political Communication and Persuasion, 1986, 3, 3, 225-243

¶ An examination of the relationship between members of the parliament (Diet) & reporters in Japan, focusing on the degree of contact between the political elite & type of media. Analysis of questionnaire data obtained from Diet members ($n = 263$) reveals that most have considerable contact with representatives of the print media. Further, a r exists between f of meetings with local newspaper reporters, as opposed to the national mass media (newspapers & TV) & the number of times a politician has been elected to the Diet. 5 Tables, 2 Figures. Modified HA

88T5960

Forbes, H. D. (Dept Political Science U Toronto, Ontario M5S 1A1). Hartz-Horowitz at Twenty: Nationalism, Toryism and Socialism in Canada and the United States. Canadian Journal of Political Science/Revue canadienne de science politique, 1987, 20, 2, June, 287-315

¶ Twenty years of debate have revealed many weaknesses in the Gad Horowitz-Louis Hartz theory of conservatism, liberalism, & socialism (eg, see, respectively, "Conservatism, Liberalism, and Socialism in Canada: An Interpretation," Canadian Journal of Economics & Political Science, 1966, 32, 143-171; The Liberal Tradition in America, New York: Harcourt, Brace & World, 1955). Though the theory has languished in the US, it continues to be widely taught in Canada, for it provides a simple & appealing explanation for some striking differences between Canadian & US politics. It is argued that the theory is best understood as a form of neo-Marxism, & that its basic weaknesses are most easily seen by examining its treatment of French Canada. It is suggested that the theory's explanation for the exceptional strength of socialism in English Canada & persistent Toryism can be strengthened by linking both socialism & Toryism to nationalism. Modified HA

88T5961

Frisch, Morton J. (Northern Illinois U, DeKalb 60115). Leo Strauss and the American Regime. U Publius 1987, 17, 2, spring, 1-5

¶ Leo Strauss's work (eg, see The City and Man, Chicago: Rand McNally, 1964) in political philosophy examined theoretical thought that provided the basis of liberal democracy, especially in its American form. Strauss's view was that the US regime could only be clarified on the basis of an adequate understanding of its own presuppositions, a dimension of thought that is the ground of constitutional or civil liberties. However, scientific political science requires a deeper understanding of the US regime because it does not consider the possibility that genuine thought informed that enterprise. Strauss would argue, contrary to that opinion, that the US regime would have to be understood in terms of thought & that it is ultimately unintelligible without that understanding. HA

88T5962

Garcia, John A. (U Arizona, Tucson 85721). The Political Integration of Mexican Immigrants: Examining Some Political Orientations. ♦ U International Migration Review, 1987, 21, 2, summer, 372-389

¶ The significant influx of immigrants, historically & contemporarily, has had a major impact on all aspects of US society. Here, focus is on the extent of political integration of immigrant populations, defined as a process whereby a sense of cohesiveness, membership & attachment occurs for residents of the political community (political values, beliefs, citizen roles, etc). Using the foreign-born segment ($n = 367$) of the National Chicano Survey, 3 critical political orientations—individual/system blame, perceived discrimination, & support for collective activities—are identified & related to sociocultural characteristics of the immigrants. Analysis indicates that political integration for Mexican immigrants is a slow & uneven process, which may explain the difficulty of mobilizing this segment of the Hispanic community to augment an already politically active group. 5 Tables, 1 Appendix, 20 References. Modified HA

88T5963

Grossman, Philip J. (Dept Economics & Statistics National U Singapore, 0511 Singapore). The Optimal Size of Government. U Public Choice, 1987, 53, 2, 131-147

¶ A model of government that incorporates both the public choice & Pigovian view of government is developed & empirically tested. The model assumes that all expenditures by government are inputs into private sector production, & that there is some optimal size of government that maximizes private sector output. US data & a Cobb-Douglas production function are used to test the model. 3 Tables, 5 Figures, 12 References. Modified HA

88T5964

Guadagnini, Marila (Dpt studi politici U Torino, I-10124 Italy). Politica e partecipazione femminile in Europa (Women's Political Participation in Europe). Quaderni di Sociologia 1987, 33, 9, 117-124. (ITA)

¶ A review of recent literature concerning women's political participation in Europe, especially (1) E. Haavio-Mannila et al., Unfinished Democracy: Women in Nordic Politics (New York: Pergamon Press, 1985); & (2) J. Lovenduski, Women and European Politics: Contemporary Feminism and Public Policy (Brighton, GB: Wheatsheaf Books Ltd, 1986 [see listings in IRPS No. 43]). These books examine the presence & role of Fs in decision-making bodies at the local & national levels, using a comparative perspective & a broad base of empirical data. Throughout Europe, it is evident that Fs are discriminated against & disadvantaged, not only in terms of rising through the power hierarchies, but also in the limitation of the types of activity undertaken by Fs. However, there are significant differences between Scandinavian politics, where the % of Fs is one of the highest in the world, & the rest of Europe. Hypotheses that try to explain the differences among levels of Fs' political participation in the various countries are discussed, as are corrective measures for overcoming the present discrimination. Modified HA

88T5965

Hallowell, Ann (Dept Political Sciences U Vermont, Burlington 05405). Women on the Threshold: An Analysis of Rural Women in Local Politics (1921-1941). U Rural Sociology, 1987, 52, 4, winter, 510-521

¶ Women's participation in local government in Vt is examined, using data obtained from official records on 18,400+ elections held in 50 small towns in Vt during 1921-1941. Three hypotheses are tested: (1) women's entrance into politics is governed by aspects of the sociopolitical culture, (2) women are elected only to certain kinds of offices that reflect their traditional roles, & (3) women's increased participation in government is related to variations in community size. Findings confirm that Vt's most recognized divider of sociopolitical culture, the "Mountain Rule"—ie, the theory that the Green Mountain chain divides Vt politically into a liberal western region & a traditional eastern one—was not associated with variations in feminine office holding. Traditional attitudes about women's political participation did give way to a "service model"—ie, women would serve when needed—although women also continued to fill those positions deemed acceptable for them. Finally, as town size increased, the % of offices held by women decreased. 2 Tables, 49 References. Modified HA of a voter has a strong positive effect on likelihood of voting. Conditional on voting, informed voters are significantly more predictable (at least by a spatial model) in their voting behavior than uninformed voters. 7 Tables, 2 Figures, 8 References. AA

88T5983

Patterson, Orlando (Harvard U, Cambridge MA 02138), The Unholy Trinity: Freedom, Slavery, and the American Constitution, ♦ US Social Research, 1987, 54, 3, autumn, 543-577.

* A discussion of ironies & paradoxes inherent in the history of freedom in the US. A few glaring illustrations of some of the most perverse paradoxes & unseemly contradictions are offered, & it is suggested that it is not the peculiar features of US history that must be examined to understand the perversities of the history of freedom in the US, but the history of freedom itself. A sociohistorical summary of the character of freedom in Western cultures is presented as a basis for an explanation of the way in which freedom was treated by the US Constitution & Supreme Court. F. Rasmussen

88T5984

Pavalko, Eliza Keith (Florida State U, Tallahassee 32306), Labor Process and Welfare State Formation in the United States, 1900-1930, * Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1903-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8723138.

88T5985

Pokol, Bela, A modern tókes állami beavatkozás természetének megértéséhez (Understanding the Nature of Modern Capitalist State Intervention), Szociológia, 1984-85, 1-2, 99-114. (HUN)

* European societies in the twentieth century have been characterized by growing state intervention. This is interpreted as the result of growing separation of such spheres as religion, economy, law, & science from society generally. Some writers have argued that state intervention represents a reduction in the functional separation of the state. This view is criticized & it is argued that the state in fact is not interfering with functional separation but rather is facilitating exchange of activities among the spheres. Such functional separation is a precondition of development past a certain point, & the failure of socialism to provide for it has been one of its major weaknesses, which Eastern European societies are now struggling to overcome. Modified HA

88T5986

Pomponi, Francis, L'Impiegho comme relation des elites corse a l'Etat (Government Jobs as a Form of Relationship of Corsican Elites with the State), ♦ Peuples Méditerranéens/Mediterranean Peoples, 1987, 38-39, Jan-June, 57-72. (FRF)

* A review of several epochs in the history of Corsica shows that the quest for a position in the state administration (impiegho) seems to be a permanent characteristic of the behavior of Corsican elites, at least since the time of Genoese domination in the sixteenth century. In particular, its effect on relations between Corsica & mainland France at the time of the French Revolution is investigated. The thirst for power, associated with nationalist ideology, explains many historical phenomena, including rivalries between political parties & the "spoils system" developed within the political & administrative system. It is a manifestation of the problem of center & periphery, which can also be seen in Sardinia. Modified HA

88T5987

Portes, Alejandro & Curtis, John W. (Johns Hopkins U, Baltimore MD 21218), Changing Flags: Naturalization and Its Determinants among Mexican Immigrants, ♦ International Migration Review, 1987, 21, 2, summer, 352-371.

* A secondary analysis of citizenship acquisition among legal Mexican immigrants who arrived in the US during the early 1970s, using interview data collected from 822 M Mexican immigrants aged 18-60 entering at Laredo & El Paso, Tex. A large array of individual characteristics found to be significant in previous studies (eg, age, occupation, income, & length of residence in the US) are found not to correlate with interest in naturalization. Rather, positive correlations are found with three general themes combining several characteristics: roots in the US, such as homeownership & number of children, residential patterns, both in Mexico & the ethnicity of the neighborhood in the US, & the barriers & attitudes faced during periods of legal residence, such as type of immigrant visa & discrimination faced in the US. 8 Tables, 12 References. HA

88T5988

Ringen, Stein, Fordelingvirkninger av marginale endringer i velferdssstaten (Distributional Effects of Marginal Changes in Welfare Policies), Tidsskrift for samfunnsforskning, 1987, 28, 5, 427-443. (NOR)

* A comparison of data on income distribution & redistribution in GB, Canada, the US, Israel, Federal Republic of Germany, Norway, & Sweden, based on a rearrangement of 1980 national income surveys. Results indicate significant international differences in the distribution of income, in the level of transfers & taxes relative to gross income, & in the redistribution of income as recorded in the difference between the distributions of factor or gross income, in the level of transfers & taxes relative to gross income, & in the redistribution of income as recorded in the difference between the distributions of factor or gross income & disposable income. A correlation is established between tax/transfer levels & redistribution, ie, more redistribution is achieved in systems with higher tax/transfer levels. Taking the difference in distributional effect between nations as an indicator of distributional consequences of changes in tax/transfer levels within nations, it is argued that marginal changes in tax/transfer levels are not indifferent from a distributional point of view. This is contrary to the hypothesis that tax/transfer systems become marginally ineffective as transfers & taxes reach a relatively high level. 2 Tables, 13 References. Modified HA

88T5989

Sandler, Shmuel (Dept Political Studies Bar-Ilan U, Ramat-Gan 52100 Israel), Is There a Jewish Foreign Policy?, The Jewish Journal of Sociology, 1987, 29, 2, Dec, 115-121.

* Jews as a people interact with ethnic groups, nations, states, & international organizations at all levels. Here, the possibility of a theoretical analysis of a Jewish foreign policy is discussed. Although the difficulties of building a theory in a nascent field & the analysis of a pluralistic & complex phenomenon are great, a systematic study of international Jewish activity is needed. Modified AA

88T5990

Schwarzmantel, J. J. (U Leeds, LS2 9JT England), Class and Nation: Problems of Socialist Nationalism, ♦ Political Studies, 1987, 35, 2, June, 239-255.

* The relationship between nationalism & socialism is reexamined from a historical & political perspective. Socialism, in theory & practice, has had to respond to the appeal & force of nationalism. One response has been the development of left-wing nationalism, which is illustrated by examples of pre-1914 French socialist thought. The significance of such a position for contemporary socialism is discussed. It has its strengths, both theoretical & practical, but it also involves problems, notably the difficulty of maintaining the separation of a nationalism of the Left from one of the Right, with its antisocialist & antidemocratic appeals. F. Rasmussen

88T5991

Searles, Patricia & Berger, Ronald J. (U Wisconsin, Whitewater 53190), The Current Status of Rape Reform Legislation: An Examination of State Statutes, ♦ Women's Rights Law Reporter, 1987, 10, 1, spring, 25-43.

* Since the mid-1970s most US states have modified or reformed their rape laws. These reforms, which have been attributed largely to the influence of the feminist movement, have occurred in four general areas of the law: definition of the offense, evidentiary rules, statutory age offenses, & penalties. Here, data are presented on the rape/sexual assault laws of the fifty states & Washington, DC. Sixteen dimensions of rape reform legislation are identified & divided on a continuum that ranges roughly from traditional to progressive with respect to feminist goals for rape law reform. It is concluded that rape reform legislation around the country has been extremely varied & that traditional & reform elements continue to coexist in most statutes. 15 Tables, 1 Illustration. Modified AA

88T5992

Stoker, Gerry (Instit Local Government Studies U Birmingham, B15 2TT England), Decentralization & Local Government, ♦ Social Policy and Administration, 1987, 21, 2, summer, 157-170.

* Criticism of the welfare state has brought about increased emphasis on local government's role in providing welfare services in GB. This has presented a challenge to Labour Party authorities & can be seen as an area of conflict with the Conservative Party central government. Questions about local democracy, answerability, user-control, & the role of voluntary agencies go beyond mere party conflict to raise new questions about the role of local government. Modified HA

88T5975

London, Bruce & Giles, Michael W. (Dept Sociology & Social Psychology Florida Atlantic U. Boca Raton 33431). Black Participation: Compensation or Ethnic Identification?, W Journal of Black Studies 1987, 18, 1, Sept, 20-44.

* Differences in the social & political participation of blacks & whites in the US have been explained in terms of 'compensatory' & 'ethnic community' theories. Following a review of the literature that summarizes the debate between these two explanations, the relative efficacy of the theories is empirically tested using data from a 1966 study by R. L. Crain on the long term effects of school integration (see SA 20 6/7218547). Social & political participation among a sample of 1,651 blacks aged 21-45 in the US Northeast were measured by a series of items asking Rs about their membership & involvement in a variety of organizations. In addition, compensatory behavior was assessed via a self-esteem scale, & ethnic identification was measured as a function of participation in civil rights demonstrations; controls were introduced for age & SES factors. Results reveal that self-esteem had a significant positive effect on participation, contradicting the expectations of compensatory theory. Consistent support was also found for the influence of ethnic group consciousness on participation. It is concluded that past studies attesting to the validity of compensatory over ethnic community theories were flawed in their conceptualization & measurement of compensatory behavior; tracing the theory to its roots resolves these problems. 1 Table, 1 Appendix, 41 References. K. Hyatt

88T5976

Lunde, Torodd Karsten (Stanford U., CA 94305). The State in a Cross-National Perspective: Growth, Inertia, and Internal Competition, Dissertation Abstracts International: A The Humanities and Social Sciences 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1904 A 1905 A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA872045.

88T5977

Merler, Alberto. Evolution de la classe politique dependante en situation de complexite sociale accrue (The Evolution of a Dependent Political Class Given the Increasing Complexity of the Social Situation), Peuples Meditteraneens/Mediterranean Peoples 1987, 38, 39, Jan-June, 269-280 (FRE).

* It is argued that the concrete forms of Mediterranean culture manifest relations of dependence in many spheres: politics, public administration, social policies, economic exploitation, "folklorization" of local culture, declining quality of life, & pressure to emigrate. Despite apparent stagnation, these forms are constantly evolving, but within the context of dependency. As regards the organization of political activities, the "clans" in Corsica are interpreted as the form that the French state has managed to give itself, just as the notary class is the form the Italian state has given itself in Sardinia. Modified HA.

88T5978

Mulhall, Stephen. The Theoretical Foundations of Liberalism, W Archives Europeennes de Sociologie 1987, 28, 2, 269-295.

* The origins of the liberalism movement in the US are traced to the publication of John Rawls's A Theory of Justice (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1972). Challenges to liberalism's moral & political theoretical foundations have emerged in various communitarian works over the past decade. Four of these examined in detail: Michael Sandel's Liberalism and the Limits of Justice (Cambridge: Cambridge U Press, 1982); Alisdair MacIntyre's After Virtue (London: Duckworth, 1981); Charles Taylor's Philosophy and the Human Sciences: Philosophical Papers, Vol. II (Cambridge: Cambridge U Press, 1985); & Michael Walzer's Spheres of Justice (Oxford: Martin Robertson, 1983). Focus is on their critiques of the conception of the self & the achievement of personhood that is held to be the metaphysical underpinning of liberal political thought, through locating this conception within a specific philosophical tradition, irredeemable flaws & incoherencies in this base are revealed. The notion that a political tradition's theoretical foundations can be rendered intelligible is questioned; rather, it is suggested that political theory is "flat". Certain areas of shared values between liberals & communitarians concerning humanity & moral experience are revealed. K. Hyatt

88T5979

Murphy, John (Phillip Instit Technology, Bundoora Victoria 3083 Australia). Populism and Democracy: A Reading of Australian Radical Nationalism, Thesis Eleven 1987, 16, 85-99.

* One of the most potent of Left historiographical traditions in Australia has been that of radical nationalism. During the 1940s & 1950s, Left historians such as Brian Fitzpatrick, Russell Ward, Vance Palmer, Robin Gollan, & Ian Turner developed a reading of Australian history that was populist & nationalist & that revolved around conceptions of national character. These historians merit reexamination because of the fruitful tension in their work between a populist view of democracy (found in the solidaristic practices of the labor movement) & a more normative view of democratic values (which, it is argued, derived from colonial liberalism). It is suggested that populism operates in laborist ideology to take the place of a theory of citizenship that is never developed, instead of citizens, it focuses on the everyday life of the people. It is argued, then, that this influential Left historiography was an inadequate attempt to articulate the legacy of colonial liberalism, because it remained fixed in the values of everyday practice, rather than asserting counterfactual democratic values. AA.

88T5980

Nedelmann, Birgitta (European U Instit, I-50016 San Domenico di Fiesole Florence Italy). Individuals and Parties—Changes in Processes of Political Mobilization, European Sociological Review 1987, 3, 3, Dec, 181-202.

* A reconsideration of the concept of mobilization in the light of a reading of the sociological classics, as it applies to contemporary political problems. Mobilization is conceptualized as the development of a social relationship between individuals & parties through three processes: interest formation (cognitive), community building (affective), & employing means of action (instrumental). Four models of mobilization are distinguished: three vertical forms: historical mobilization & the vanguard party, grass-roots or populist mobilization, & the ideal-democratic model of mobilization; & one horizontal form, which incorporates the possibility of internal processes of mobilization taking place within the two types of actors. These models are used to analyze the present political situation as characterized by the coexistence of vertical & horizontal mobilization, with the latter becoming increasingly preponderant. Directions for future mobilization research based on this model are outlined. 38 References. Modified HA.

88T5981

Niemi, R. G. & Wright, J. R. (Dept Political Science U Rochester, NY 14627). Voting Cycles and the Structure of Individual Preferences, Social Choice and Welfare 1987, 4, 3, Sept, 173-183.

* Using 'thermometer' ratings obtained in interviews with nationally representative US samples (N = ranging from 62 to 1,614), preferences for presidential candidates are examined in order to determine why cyclical preferences are infrequent. Single-peaked preferences as usually construed (meaning that all of a set of preferences satisfy single-peakedness criteria) are, of course, rare. Yet, a high degree of unidimensionality is found in the sense that for any given set of preferences, a relatively high proportion of the preference orders are consistent with single-peakedness. It is also found that the highest amounts of unidimensionality often do not occur along partisan or Left/Right lines. Strong feelings for or against candidates, often not derived from an issue base, form the basis for the dimensionality discovered. 5 Tables, 26 References. Modified HA.

88T5982

Palfrey, Thomas R. & Poole, Keith T. (California Instit Technology, Pasadena 91125). The Relationship between Information, Ideology, and Voting Behavior, W American Journal of Political Science 1987, 31, 3, Aug, 511-530.

* Findings are presented from a series of Monte Carlo experiments & a conditional logit analysis of 1980 presidential election survey data. It is found that the John J. Aldrich-Richard D. McKelvey scaling procedure ("A Method of Scaling with Applications to the 1968 and 1972 Presidential Elections," American Political Science Review, 1977, 71, 111-130) produces a significant bias in the estimation of individual voters' spatial locations when perceptual error is heteroscedastic across voters. The nature of this bias causes the scaled distribution to be very centrally tended (unimodal), even in strongly bimodal populations. The bias is especially severe for poorly informed voters. An information index is constructed from perceptual data that appears to be a meaningful measure of an individual's knowledge & sophistication regarding the political world. Measured in this way, voter information is positively correlated with ideological extremism & negatively correlated with indifference between candidates; well-informed voters consist of a significantly more polarized subset of the electorate than uninformed voters. Also, the information level

1000 social differentiation

19 social stratification/mobility

8876001

Boer, Douglas Edward (U Waterloo, Ontario N2L 3G1), Social Class, Legitimacy and the Canadian State, * Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1329-A-1330-A.
Unavailable from UMI; contact the degree-granting university.

8876002

Blakely, John H. & Harvey, Edward B. (Cornell U, Ithaca NY 14853), Market and Non-Market Effects on Male and Female Occupational Status Attainment, in La Revue Canadienne de Sociologie et d'Anthropologie/The Canadian Review of Sociology and Anthropology, 1988, 25, 1, Feb, 23-40.

† The status attainment process is examined in relation to four labor market perspectives: (1) structural unemployment, (2) the business cycle, (3) queuing theory, & (4) segmentation theory. Their implications are evaluated by developing a status attainment model that varies along three dimensions: time, SE background, & sex & by testing the model on a heterogeneous sample of individuals who entered their first full-time job between 1961 & 1972. The results support the structural unemployment & segmentation-theoretic hypotheses, partially support the business cycle hypothesis, & are ambiguous with respect to the queuing hypothesis. The discussion relates various labor market trends over the 1961-1972 period to the status attainment process. In addition, it is emphasized that the characteristics of individuals (particularly of women) entering into their first full-time job are time-dependent, & that this has implications for the understanding of status attainment & social stratification processes in complex societies. 3 Tables, 1 Figure, 37 References. HA

8876003

Camargo, Aspasia (U Estado Rio de Janeiro, 20550 Brazil), As gerações políticas e a transição brasileira (Political Generations and the Brazilian Transition), Dados, 1987, 30, 1, 5-28. (POR)

† An analysis of the strategic segments of the Brazilian elite primarily responsible for the transition process from 1930 to the present. Biographical data were collected by the oral & written life history method to analyze the political generations involved. The major strategic actors included Ru agrarian elites, the military, populists, businessmen, & functional segments of the state. Identification of their various trajectories & projects at different historical points makes possible recovery of the logic of the Brazilian political model. Modified HA

8876004

Carchedi, G., Class Politics, Class Consciousness, and the New Middle Class, ♦ The Insurgent Sociologist 1987, 14, 3, fall, 111-130.

† A review essay on books by S. Clegg, P. Borcham, & J. Dow, Class, Politics, and the Economy (London: Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1986); R. Carter, Capitalism, Class Conflict and the New Middle Class (London: Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1985), & Eric Olin Wright, Classes (London: New Left Books, 1985 [see listings in IRPS No. 43]). Attention is focused on an area of common interest in these three diverse ventures in Marxist class analysis: the new MC & the relation of its class structure to its class consciousness. Strengths & weaknesses of their approaches are compared. 8 References. W. H. Stoddard

8876005

Cardano, Mario, Stratificazione sociale e concezioni di giustizia distributiva. Un controllo di ipotesi tratte da teorie sociologiche (Social Stratification and Models of Distributive Justice: A Test of Hypotheses from Sociological Theory), Quaderni di Sociologia, 1987, 33, 2, 73-103. (ITA)

† An experiment tested 3 sociological theories concerning the relationship between an actor's social position & the norms of distributive justice to which he adhered: (1) Talcott Parsons's theory, (2) exchange theory, & (3) the "two nations" theory. A quota sample of Italians representing 4 SCs ($\Sigma N = 120$) was asked to express a preference regarding 6 ideal types of society. Since the 3 theories are in opposition, it was possible to test them using experimental logic. The results contradict Parsons's theory & corroborate the other two to some extent. Exchange theory has the most stable empirical support. 7 Tables, 1 Figure. Modified HA

8876006

Conley, James R. (Dept Sociology U Western Ontario, London N6A 5C2), "More Theory, Less Fact"? Social Reproduction and Class Conflict in a Sociological Approach to Working-Class History, ♦ Canadian Journal of Sociology/Cahiers canadiens de sociologie, 1988, 13, 1-2, winter-spring, 73-102.

† As an alternative to existing approaches in sociology & social history, the concept of We social reproduction cycles is introduced to provide a theoretical framework for comparative analysis of SC conflict & collective action in capitalism. We social reproduction cycles are the social relations & social practices in the labor market, the workplace, the consumption market, & consumption, through which individuals recreate themselves as members of the We. They structure We collective action in capitalism in three ways: (1) antagonistic SC interests may be created at each of these phases of social reproduction by contradictions between capitalists' strategies of capital accumulation & workers' strategies of social reproduction, (2) tendencies of SC formation occur in each, & (3) resources for workers' collective action are located at each phase. This argument is specified historically for the 1890-1920 period in Canadian We history, & illustrated by case studies of workers in Vancouver. 117 References. Modified HA

8876007

Darroch, Gordon (Dept Sociology York U, Downsview Ontario M3J 1P3), Class in Nineteenth-Century, Central Ontario: A Reassessment of the Crisis and Demise of Small Producers during Early Industrialization, 1861-1871, ♦ Canadian Journal of Sociology/Cahiers canadiens de sociologie 1988, 13, 1-2, winter-spring, 49-71.

† Sociologists & historians have tended to accept a simple historical thesis that small property owners, especially farmers & artisans, were a fading SC after the mid-nineteenth century in central Canada. This assured demise of the petite bourgeoisie has led to the analytical focus of both conventional Marxist & non-Marxist accounts on the development of capital & labor & on the emergence of the familiar Ur & industrial institutions of the twentieth century. Here, a detailed examination of manuscript census evidence on 11 shifts & property-holding in central Ontario between 1861 & 1871 questions these assumptions. Farm small-holding was not in decline; rather, the acquisition of small property & home-ownership were surprisingly common even among laborers, especially artisans. The ownership of small property & of homes was perpetuated, possibly fostered, amid the conditions that engendered proletarianization. 5 Tables, 1 Map, 56 References. Modified HA

8876008

Davis, Nancy J. & Robinson, Robert V. (Dept Sociology & Anthropology De Pauw U, Greencastle IN 46135), Class Identification of Men and Women in the 1970s and 1980s, in American Sociological Review 1988, 53, 1, Feb, 103-112.

† Employing data from the National Opinion Research Center's General Social Surveys for 1974-1978 & 1980-1985 ($\Sigma N = 5,473$), 3 models of SC identification for married men & women are evaluated: (1) an "independence" model, in which one's own characteristics outweigh those of one's spouse, (2) a "sharing" model, in which equal weight is attached to one's own & one's spouse's characteristics, & (3) a "borrowing" model, in which one's spouse's characteristics are more important than one's own. In both decades, married men exhibit an independence model, in which only their own characteristics are salient, regardless of whether their wife works outside the home or not. From the 1970s to the 1980s, women shifted from a borrowing model to a sharing model. In the 1970s, employed or not, women attached more weight to their husband's than to their own characteristics. In the 1980s, employed women moved toward a sharing model, in which they took into account both their own & their husband's characteristics. An analysis of single men & women reveal movement away from a sharing model, in which both their own & their parent's characteristics are important, toward an independence

88T5993

Tacussel, Patrick (Institut sciences sociales U Toulouse II, 31058 Cedex France), Boris Souvarine, sociologue de la terreur (Boris Souvarine, Sociologist of Terror), Cahiers Internationaux de Sociologie, 1987, 34, 83, July-Dec, 355-363 (FRE)

† A review of the work of Boris Souvarine (1895-1983), who was born in Russia but lived in France, & was the first to describe events that affected not only the USSR but all of Europe: the tragedy of WWII, the precarious foundations of democracies, & Stalinism, the paradigm of contemporary totalitarianism. As a sociologist of political terror, Souvarine bore witness to the social & political history of the 1920s: the disappointed expectations of the communist revolution, & the emergence of fanatical powers whose influence is still felt. Besides his many articles & books, Souvarine edited the journal La Critique sociale in the 1930s. Modified HA

88T5994

Thigpen, Robert B. & Downing, Lyle A. (U New Orleans, LA 70148), Liberalism and the Communitarian Critique, ♦ U American Journal of Political Science, 1987, 31, 3, Aug, 637-655

† The dominant form of liberal theory, deontological liberalism, is now encountering a serious challenge from communitarians who reject the liberal commitment to individual rights. An analysis of the works of Benjamin R. Barber (Strong Democracy: Participatory Politics for a New Age, Berkeley: U of California Press, 1984), Alasdair MacIntyre (After Virtue, Notre Dame: U of Notre Dame Press, 1984), Michael Sandel (Liberalism and the Limits of Justice, New York: Cambridge U Press, 1982), & Michael Walzer (Spheres of Justice, New York: Basic Books, 1983) shows that liberalism withstands the communitarian critique. Communitarians properly reject a mistaken form of individualism, sociological liberalism, however, another form: normal individualism is necessary if persons are to be understood as autonomous. Communitarians wishing to protect persons from authoritarianism tacitly incorporate conceptions of moral individualism & human rights into their views of society. 28 References. Modified HA

88T5995

Tilman, Rick (Dept Economics U Nevada, Las Vegas 89154), The Neoinstitutional Theory of Democracy, ♦ U Journal of Economic Issues, 1987, 21, 3, Sept, 1379-1401

† Neoinstitutionalists have traditionally viewed democracy as both means & ends, i.e. as institutional procedures & as substantive policy outputs. It is no longer sufficient, if it ever was, to simply view democracy on a lesser-evil basis as a protective system that limits arbitrary power & prevents oppression, important as these are. It must now be seen as a system that is primarily justifiable on the grounds that (1) it most effectively implements the method-of-intelligence, i.e. adjusts means-to-ends through a system of self-collecting valuation, & (2) it most efficiently enhances desirable kinds of human growth & development. The more social institutions are democratized, the more efficiently they will implement the method-of-intelligence & maximize human growth & development. Modified AA

88T5996

Vecoli, Rudolph J. (U Minnesota, Minneapolis 55455), Immigration, Naturalization and the Constitution, ♦ Studi Emigrazione/Études Migrations, 1987, 24, 85, Mar, 75-101

† (Originally published in the American Political Science Assoc's journal News for Teachers of Political Science (1986, 50, summer)) Major decisions made by the US government affecting aliens & the constitutional bases for them are examined, including the admission, exclusion, & deportation of aliens; aliens' rights within the US, & naturalization & denaturalization. The resources of the extraconstitutional doctrine of sovereignty by the US Supreme Court was the source of the plenary power of the Congress over immigration, thus denying the authority of the judiciary to extend the guarantees of due process of law & the equal protection of the laws to aliens. In the last twenty years, the courts have assumed a more activist posture with respect to the rights of aliens, extending a greater degree of constitutional protection to the security of acquired citizenship & to the rights of due process & equal protection of foreigners, even undocumented aliens. Modified HA

88T5997

Veneu, Marcos Guedes (Pontifícia U Católica Rio de Janeiro, 22453 Brazil), Enferrujando o sonho: partidos e eleições no Rio de Janeiro, 1889-1895 (The Tarnished Dream: Political Associations and Electoral Practices in the Federal District, 1889-1895), Dados, 1987, 30, 1, 45-71 (POR)

† An examination of the attempted formation of political parties in the Federal District of Brazil during the early years of the Republic, 1889-1895. A zone of political dispute was created, shaped by competition among clientele leaders, but conditions of fragmentation prevented the emergence of a stable dominant oligarchy party. The use of violence & of electoral fraud to maintain an exclusive structure of political competition resulted in a high rate of electoral abstention. In addition, political party disputes were viewed negatively as reflecting absorption of public interest by private interests. The failure of Federal District parties to consolidate disqualified them from membership in the network of dominant state parties. Modified HA

88T5998

Waldron, Jeremy (Jurisprudence & Social Policy Program School Law U California, Berkeley 94720), Can Communal Goods Be Human Rights?, ♦ U Archives Européennes de Sociologie, 1987, 28, 2, 296-322

† A discussion of the debate in the fields of human rights & international law concerning whether economic development, peace, & environmental quality are "third-generation" rights, akin to the "first generation" of civil & political liberties & the "second generation" of economic & social well-being. These third-generation rights differ from their predecessors in that they are communal rather than individualistic. Questions are raised concerning whether the language of human rights is essentially individualistic, & if so, what ramifications this has for describing the rights of whole peoples. The three generations of rights are compared, & a distinction is made between public goods & communal goods. It is concluded that though communal goods may be important, they should not be regarded as rights. Some legitimate rights of groups are outlined, & implications for political theory & philosophy are illuminated. K. Hyatt

88T5999

White, Robert W. (Indiana U, Bloomington 47405), From Peaceful Protest to Guerrilla War: Provisional Irish Republicans, ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1322-A
Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8717822.

88T6000

Zaborszky, Dorothy (Dept English Laurentian U, Sudbury Ontario P3E 2C6), Feminist Politics: The Feminist Party of Canada, ♦ Women's Studies International Forum, 1987, 10, 6, 613-621

† The history of the Feminist Party of Canada (FPC), the first organization of its kind in the country when founded in 1979, is chronicled based on personal experiences as a founding member. The party arose out of a shared perception by women that party politics & the three main political parties—New Democratic, Liberal, & Progressive Conservative—did not adequately reflect women's concerns. Founded & run by women, the FPC aimed to introduce feminist politics into the political arena. Though it is at present inoperative, the FPC must become a part of feminist collective history & its lessons examined if a future feminist political party is to be a realizable goal. 17 References. Modified HA somewhat more interest in the expressive rather than instrumental functions of education, however, "good" & "general" educations were almost equally as important as vocational training & a steady job for most families. Both education & career needs appeared as priorities that cut across SC boundaries. 7 References. AA

88T6020

Lebowitz, Michael A. (Dept Economics Simon Fraser U, Burnaby British Columbia V5A 1S6), The Political Economy of Wage Labor, ♦ Science and Society, 1987, 51, 3, fall, 262-286

† A reconstruction of the implicit political economy of workers that underlies Karl Marx's discussion in Capital (1867). An attempt is made to identify the basis of Marx's view that competition & the "blind rule of the supply & demand laws" form the political economy of capital but are inherently contrary to the interests of workers. It is found that, at the core of an alternate political economy of workers, is the general proposition that separation & division in social relations among producers allow those who mediate among producers to capture the fruits of cooperation in production. By tracing the struggle against capital as a mediator between & over workers through each moment of the circuit of capital, an organic theoretical link is established between purely economic struggles & those that require political movement as a class. It is concluded that Marx's conception of the political economy of the WC is entirely compatible with the recent focus on new social movements. 24 References. Modified AA

88T6021

Lee, Tanya & Trebilcock, Michael J., Economic Mobility and Constitutional Reform, U of Toronto Law Journal, 1987, 37, 3, summer, 268-317

† Economists & political scientists have alternatively argued for exit & voice as responses to declines in firms, institutions, & the state, & debated the role of loyalty in the choice of response. These concepts are examined in the case of the Canadian political system. Various statistics indicate that both the federal & provincial governments have constructed barriers to the free flow of goods, capital, & labor within the country, this in turn, affects international trade performance. These constraints on internal mobility were mediated somewhat by certain provisions of the 1867 Constitution Act & its Charter of Rights & Freedoms, but examination of new provisions in the 1982 Act reveals that efforts to protect economic mobility have largely been abandoned. An alternative strategy, proposed by the Macdonald Royal Commission on the Economic Union & Development Prospects for Canada, that stresses developing a code of economic conduct for federal & provincial governments is discussed, & suggestions are offered for creating trade negotiations between the federal government & provinces to protect & enhance free internal trade. 5 Tables. K. Hyatt

88T6022

Mohan, Brij (School Social Work Louisiana State U, Baton Rouge 70803), Social Justice, Peace and Development: The Spectre of Freedom, International Journal of Contemporary Sociology, 1987, 24, 1-2, Jan-Apr, 103-111

† Social justice, peace, & development constitute the trinity of global welfare, which is thwarted by the malignant forces of injustice & war. To insure human survival it is imperative that mankind (1) understand the nature of contemporary oppression, (2) underscore the need for social reconstruction, & (3) emphasize bioglobalism. A bioglobal strategy of social development involves four basic elements: (A) utopianization of development, (B) de-utopianization of science, (C) critical evaluation of social conditions, & (D) constructive actualization of social change. A redefinition of liberty is proposed that signifies global freedom as the ultimate agenda of social development. Modified AA

88T6023

Muller, Edward N. (Dept Political Science U Arizona, Tucson 85721), Democracy, Economic Development, and Income Inequality, U American Sociological Review, 1988, 53, 1, Feb, 50-68

† Most cross-national tests of inverse association between democracy & inequality have operationalized the concept of democracy by measuring its level at a single point in time. More compelling theoretical arguments can be made for causal relationships that operate over time between (1) a country's years of democratic experience & income inequality, & (2) income inequality & the stability of democracy. Using statistics from various international sources, continuous & qualitative measures of years of democratic experience are estimated to have a significant negative impact on income inequality independent of economic development & other control variables for a sample of 55 countries. A very strong inverse r is also observed between income inequality & regime stability for a sample of 33 democracies. This association holds independent of economic development, which is found to have no direct effect on democratic stability after controlling for income inequality. 7 Tables, 1 Figure, 67 References. HA

88T6024

Nathan, Richard P. (Woodrow Wilson School Princeton U, NJ 08544), Will the Underclass Always Be with Us?, ♦ Society, 1987, 24, 3(167), Mar-Apr, 57-62

† A discussion of the meaning & use of the term "underclass," the nature of this condition, & possible policy responses. The concept of an underclass is multifaceted, & underclass conditions are economic, behavioral, & geographically focused. Census data on the concentration of poverty in the largest US cities are used to indicate trends, & an approach to defining & measuring underclass groups is proposed. Attention is devoted to welfare changes, especially the development & spread of so-called "new-style warfare" programs in the 1980s as a possible, but long-term, response to the increase of underclass conditions in the US. Studies of the Manpower Demonstration Research Corp reveal the efficacy of this approach, which is rooted in institutional & value changes reflective of the nature of underclass conditions. 3 Tables. Modified AA

88T6025

Nowak, Leszek, Class and Individual in the Historical Process, ♦ U Philosophy of the Social Sciences, 1987, 17, 3, Sept, 357-376

† Four basic positions on the role of the individual in history are distinguished on the basis of two contrasts: between existential holism or individualism & between essential holism or individualism. The four possible approaches each have distinctive methodological implications. Presented here is a non-Marxian historical materialism comprising three class divisions: between owners & direct producers, between rulers & citizens, & between indoctrinators & indoctrinated. Class societies where the three ruling classes exist separately are distinguished from supraclass societies where they are combined. A curvilinear relationship is postulated between the level of alienation & the level of class struggle, with moderate alienation producing the most intense class struggle. A model for revolutionary processes in typical socialist societies is proposed. It is argued that this model is most consistent with a position of existential individualism & essential holism. 4 Figures. W. H. Stoddard

88T6026

Pedroja, Alberto Teltser (U Northern Colorado, Greeley 80639), An Exploration of Sociometric Status: The Classification System and the Extent of Its Unidimensionality, ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, 4, The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1906-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8721958.

88T6027

Peirano, Mariza G. S. (Harvard U, Cambridge MA 02138), A Índia das aldeias e a Índia das castas: reflexões sobre um debate (The India of Villages and the India of Castes: Reflections on a Debate), Dados, 1987, 30, 1, 109-121. (POR)

† An examination of the reception of Louis Dumont's work on the sociology & anthropology of India (Religion, Politics and History in India, Paris: Mouton, 1970) by Indian anthropologists & sociologists themselves. Attention is focused on the debate between Dumont, with his emphasis on castes & civilization, & M. N. Srinivas, with his emphasis on villages & on the nation. Dumont is seen as one participant in a dialogue among English, French, & Indian thinkers, the Indian voice is amplified here. Applications from Indian nation-building efforts to those of Brazil are also noted. Modified HA

88T6028

Raffalovich, Lawrence E. (Indiana U, Bloomington 47405), Macro-Economic Processes and the Distribution of Earned Income, ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, 4, The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1331-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8717811.

88T6029

Raffalovich, Lawrence E. (U Texas, Austin 78712), On Analyzing

model, in which only their own characteristics are salient. These changes are examined in light of economic & demographic shifts, political activism by women, & a possible trend toward greater individualism. 4 Tables, 36 References. HA

88T6009

Dempsey, Ken (Dept Sociology La Trobe U, Bundoora Victoria 3083 Australia), Economic Inequality between Men and Women in an Australian Rural Community, ♦ The Australian and New Zealand Journal of Sociology, 1987, 23, 3, Nov, 358-374.

¶ An investigation of income inequality between Ms & Fs in a prosperous agricultural district of Victoria, Australia. Data are drawn from 2,000+ interviews conducted since 1973 in an ongoing study, supplemented by questionnaires, direct observation, & information from the Australian Bureau of Statistics. The comparison includes all adult Ms & Fs, irrespective of their LF status. A gender difference in income is revealed that is almost double that shown by analyses restricted to members of the paid LF. In this community, Fs experience the double inequity of being denied the resources to practice the occupation of farming, while being expected to contribute unpaid labor to the success of Ms. 3 Tables, 18 References. Modified HA

88T6010

Duncan, Greg J., Hill, Martha S., & Hoffman, Saul D. (Instit Social Research U Michigan, Ann Arbor 48106), Welfare Dependence within and across Generations, U Science, 1988, 239, 4839, 29 Jan, 467-471.

¶ A central question in the debate about the effects of welfare programs is whether their intended positive results, providing needed resources to recipients & their children outweigh any unintended negative results, eg, the breaking up of families, reduction in work effort, or the fostering of a welfare "culture" that is passed on from parent to child. Recent research shows that although work effort is affected adversely by the generosity of welfare programs, effects on family structure appear quite weak, most welfare experiences are relatively short, & the majority of Fs who grew up in homes heavily dependent on welfare do not rely on those programs when they are young adults. 2 Tables. HA

88T6011

Entzinger, H. B. (Centre Studies Multi-Ethnic Societies U Utrecht, NL 3508 TC Netherlands), Race, Class and the Shaping of a Policy for Immigrants. The Case of the Netherlands, ♦ International Migration/Migrations Internationales/Migraciones Internacionales, 1987, 25, 1, Mar, 5-20.

¶ It is argued that both ethnic/cultural background & weak SES/SC position contribute to the marginality of immigrant groups, also, the interplay of these elements speeds up processes of ethnic stratification. Therefore, any integration policy should combine a culturalist with a structuralist approach. However, these two approaches may require contradictory measures, which is illustrated by recent developments in Dutch policy on ethnic minorities. In the Netherlands, there has been a clear shift from a culturalist/pluralist to a structuralist/assimilationist approach. In both cases, the results have been disappointing, mainly because policy-makers base their efforts on the highly questionable assumption, inspired by both Karl Marx & Max Weber, that in postindustrial society ethnicity gradually loses its importance. 1 Table, 72 References. Modified AA

88T6012

Fuentes, Luisa Muñoz-Ledo (Stanford U, CA 94305), The Middle Class and Democracy in Latin America: Argentina, Brazil, and Mexico, ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1552-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8720389.

88T6013

Green, S. J. D. (All Souls Coll U Oxford, OX1 4A1 England), Is Equality of Opportunity a False Ideal for Society?, U The British Journal of Sociology, 1988, 39, 1, Mar, 1-27.

¶ An argument is made in favor of the promotion of equality of opportunity. Taking the family as the primary unit of social organization, it is assumed that the resources at the disposal of each family for the socialization & education of its offspring are not equal, coupled with differences in innate genetic endowments, access to opportunities is rendered inherently unequal. The nature of opportunity is defined, & equality of opportunity is reformulated as open competition for scarce resources. It is argued that resources should be allocated to those most competent to manage them on the grounds of efficiency, objective tests of competence incumbent similarly & equally on all competitors are necessary. Even under a social system that does not impose equality of resources between citizens, it is still possible to sustain equality of opportunity between individuals if public educational resources are allocated according to test individual abilities & needs. Under present conditions, schools make little difference to individual life chances. It is argued that they might more to equalize opportunities if they were reorganized under principles of strict selection & separation, policy implications are discussed. Modified HA

88T6014

Heaton, Tim B. (Brigham Young U, Provo UT 84602), Objective Status and Class Consciousness, ♦ Social Science Quarterly, 1987, 68, 3, Sept, 611-620.

¶ The analysis of subjective SC is extended to include various dimensions of SC consciousness: SC identification, perceptions of SC boundaries, evaluations of fairness, & attitudes toward egalitarian policies are included in a model to estimate the effects of objective status on SC consciousness. Data from the 1984 National Opinion Research Center General Social Survey are used to show that most of the effects of objective status operate directly on attitudes toward social policy. Higher status individuals are more opposed to egalitarian policy. Results suggest support for policies arises out of self-interest rather than a solidified sense of consciousness. 2 Tables, 17 References. HA

88T6015

Howe, Carolyn (U Wisconsin, Madison 53706), Class Structure and Class Formation in Contemporary Capitalism: The Problem of Knowledge Controllers, ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1552-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8714722.

88T6016

Hsiao, Wey (Indiana U, Bloomington 47405), Changes in Class Structure and Reward Distribution in Postwar Taiwan, Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1331-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8717801.

88T6017

Jenkins, Robert Monroe (U Wisconsin, Madison 53706), Social Equality in the State Socialist Division of Labor: Earnings Determination in Contemporary Hungary, ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1552-A-1553-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8714724.

88T6018

Jonsson, Jan O. (Swedish Instit Social Research U Stockholm, S-91 Sweden), Class Origin, Cultural Origin, and Educational Attainment: The Case of Sweden, European Sociological Review, 1987, 3, Dec, 229-242.

¶ Data collected in 1968, 1974, & 1981 from samples of Swedish adults ($N = 19,982$) in the Level of Living Surveys are used to examine how social background affects educational attainment in persons born 18-1959. Emphasis is not only on attainment of higher education, but also on overall allocation of education & on social selection of people with education beyond compulsory school. Loglinear analysis shows that allocation of education according to social origin decreased over time. Assessment of the relative effect of SC & cultural origin—as reflected parents' educational levels—shows that the relative importance of cultural origin is not growing. Cultural capital appears to become decreasingly transferrable between generations, a finding with implications for theories of social reproduction. 6 Tables, 2 Figures, 2 Appendixes, 31 References. Modified HA

88T6019

Kinloch, Graham C. (Dept Sociology Florida State U, Tallahassee 32306), Social Class and Attitudes toward Education, Journal of Social Psychology, 1987, 127, 4, Aug, 399-401.

¶ An interview survey of 330 residents of an Ind town found a fairly high positive relationship between SC & parental emphasis on ideals, critical thinking, & the development of special abilities, rather than knowledge or obtaining a better job. Generally, professional & MC families reveal

88T6038

Black, Peter David (2141 P St NW, Washington DC 20037). The "Process" of Field Research in the Courtroom: A Descriptive Analysis, Law and Human Behavior, 1987, 11, 4, Dec, 337-358

‡ A contribution to understanding the process of "live" courtroom research, describing & reflecting on the choices made in a study of judicial behavior. In light of the need for such research, social scientists must begin to articulate in detail their philosophy, strategies, & methods of study in the actual courtroom setting. Methodological & ethical issues faced in the context of the research project on trial judges' verbal & nonverbal behavior in criminal jury trials are discussed. Examples of methodological decisions involved in this courtroom research include: (1) developing the theory & purpose of study, (2) organizing entry & logistics in the field, (3) assessing ethical costs & benefits, (4) gathering field data & developing methods that accommodate the field setting, & (5) understanding follow-up & ethical concerns after the research is over. 99 References. AA

88T6039

Bonney, Norman (Dept Sociology U Aberdeen, Old Aberdeen AB9 2TY Scotland). Dual Earning Couples: Trends of Change in Great Britain. ♦ Work, Employment and Society, 1988, 2, 1, Mar, 89-102

‡ An examination of the incidence of dual-earning couples in different social strata in the contemporary UK. Census data & other demographic sources indicate that career-like patterns of labor market participation by Fs are much more common among those of UMc & Mc social origins & destinations. Rising levels of education among younger women entering the LF suggest that such paths will become increasingly common among the more privileged social groups. SC inequality may be intensified by rising F employment participation, as dual career patterns become more common among Mc & UMc couples, while Wc Ms & Fs suffer relatively disadvantaged labor market positions. 6 Tables. 15 References. Modified HA

88T6040

Caudill, Susan, Caudill, Ed & Singletary, Michael W. (School Journalism U Tennessee, Knoxville 37996). "Journalist Wanted": Trade-Journal Ads as Indicators of Professional Values. ♦ Journalism Quarterly, 1987, 64, 2-3, summer-autumn, 576-580, 633

‡ Seeking to identify changes in U training, demand for specialization, increased emphasis on autonomy, & other indicators of increased professionalism in the field of newspaper journalism, job advertisements from 1920, 1940, 1960, & 1980 in Editor & Publisher were content-coded for a variety of material. It was found that recruiters in both 1920 & 1980 were most interested in the journalism experience of potential applicants. The next most important qualities were salary, editorial skills, & values such as "enterprising, tenacious, industrious." There was little change in the standards from 1920 to 1980. This unobtrusive measure of professionalism revealed no high regard for the qualities of classical professionalism measures. Experience continues to be a key to securing a print media position, & there is continuing emphasis on editorial job skills. 3 Tables. Modified AA

88T6041

Chissom, Brad (Coll Education U Alabama, University 35486). The Work Behavior of Elementary School Teachers. ♦ Journal of Educational Research, 1987, 80, 4, Mar-Apr, 248-253

‡ An investigation of the work behavior of elementary school teachers, based on structured observations of 5 sixth-grade elementary school teachers who were observed for 5 days each by a single observer in the classroom. Interviews were also conducted with teachers & principals. Results are compared with an earlier study involving high school teachers (see Cypher, T. W., & Willower, D. T., "The Work Behavior of Secondary School Teachers," Journal of Research & Development in Education, 1984, 18, 1, 17-23). The teachers observed were in school 40+ hours per week (8 hours & 25 minutes per day), & spent an additional 2 hours per day on work at home. In addition, Ss had less private time than high school teachers, but spent more time in direct instruction. The teachers engaged in a wide variety of activities during the school day with almost constant verbal interaction with students & others. The elementary school teachers taught an average of 7 different subjects daily with little free time for planning & preparation. A notable adaptive mechanism employed by the teachers was an ability to perform several tasks simultaneously, which was necessitated by the complex demands of their work environment. 3 Tables, 9 References. Modified HA

88T6042

Clark, Claudia (Box 186, Forest Falls CA 92339). Physicians, Reformers and Occupational Disease: The Discovery of Radium Poisoning, Women and Health, 1987, 12, 2, summer, 147-167

‡ Teenage girls & young women hired during WWI to apply luminous paint containing radium to watches were among the first industrial radiation poisoning victims in the US. The story of how their afflictions became "recognized" occupational diseases in spite of a tangled web of governmental-industrial-academic collusion is recounted through case studies of women poisoned while employed by the US Radium Corp's dial-painting studio in Orange, NJ. Historical sources provide evidence of moral lapses by medical researchers who were sustained by industrial funding, serious ethical issues relevant to this type of industrial-academic arrangement are raised. The pivotal role of women in the Consumer's League & of Alice Hamilton, a Harvard professor of industrial hygiene & toxicologist, in establishing the truth about the occupational roots of these poisonings is discussed. Modified HA

88T6043

Clarke, Clifford J. (Wayne State U, Detroit MI 48202). Measuring the Effect of System Size on the Administrative Occupations of Macro Systems: A Reappraisal. ♦ Sociological Focus, 1987, 20, 4, Oct, 265-279

‡ Organizational theory & empirical research suggests that the size of a system is an important determinant of its administrative sector. In this perspective, the key occupations that provide coordination & integration are as follows: (1) managers & administrators since they provide decision making, (2) professional & technical experts because they evaluate information flows critical for decision making, & (3) clerical workers since they contribute written messages resulting in communication. It is suggested that this approach may be successfully extended to more macro systems such as counties, cities, states, & nations. In applying this theory, it is argued that the size/administrative occupation relationships can be more completely understood by focusing on the detailed suboccupations found in each of the three broad occupation categories. Analysis of 1970 US Census data indicates that the relationship between size & suboccupations may be positive, negative, or statistically nonsignificant depending on which suboccupation is examined. It is concluded that administrative occupations are affected by size in a much more complex way than previously reported. 2 Tables, 43 References. HA

88T6044

Cobb, Anthony T. (Dept Management Virginia Inst Technology & State U, Blacksburg 24061). The Politics of Consultation. ♦ Consultation, 1987, 6, 2, summer, 71-89

‡ A discussion of intervention politics is presented, focusing on the development of a power base by the consultant to support his or her political needs & the use of that power. Sources of power relevant to the consultant are discussed, & methods for how they can be tapped & developed in the intervention are suggested. The ethical implications of intervention politics are explored. 60 References. Modified HA

88T6045

Crank, John Paul (U Colorado, Boulder 80309). Professionalism among Police Chiefs. ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1891-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8716241.

88T6046

Dan, Erwin (Katholieke U Leuven, B-3000 Belgium). Het Belgisch ministerieel carrièrepatroon. Proeve tot internationale vergelijking (The Belgian Ministerial Career Pattern. An International Comparison). Res Publica, 1987, 29, 2, 207-229 (DUT)

‡ A profile of the careers of Belgian ministers since WWII is presented, drawing on data from various studies. The ministers are predominantly French-speaking, M, U-educated, & of UMc or Mc origin. The most frequent professional occupations are lawyer, U professor, & business executive. The political career leading to a ministerial post is most likely to go through the legislative bodies (city council, county council, & parliament), a secondary route is via the political parties (district & then national party leader). After their ministerial careers ended, 39% of the ex-ministers continued to play a prominent part in parliament. These findings are compared with those for the Netherlands, West Germany, & France. The main difference is the importance of the bureaucratic component in the structure of the ministerial elite in those three countries; in Belgium this is not very important. 10 Tables. Modified HA

Earnings Inequality in Segmented Labor Markets. WM Sociological Methods and Research 1988, 16, 3 Feb 339-378

‡ A methodology for analyzing the earnings distribution in segmented labor markets is described. Earnings inequality is modeled as a function of labor market structure, & change in the distribution of earnings between & within labor markets is modeled as a function of aggregate economic performance. Statistical models are derived that can be estimated with existing data on earnings & employment. In conclusion, the relevance of this methodology for adjudicating theoretical issues in the political economy of inequality is discussed. 1 Appendix, 57 References. HA

88T6030

Sokolovsky, Joan Frances (Johns Hopkins U, Baltimore MD 21218). Three Models of Peasant-State Interaction in the Collectivization of Agriculture in Eastern Europe: Poland and Hungary Compared. * Dissertation Abstracts International: The Humanities and Social Sciences 1987, 48, 5 Nov, 1332 A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8716661.

88T6031

Tigges, Leann M. (Dept Sociology U Georgia, Athens 30602). Age, Earnings, and Change within the Dual Economy. WM Social Forces 1988, 66, 3, Mar, 676-698

‡ In the explanation of earnings differences, age has been seen as a proxy for human capital characteristics of experience & physical stamina. However, age has other meanings: age specific rewards reflect the power of workers, not only as individuals but as members of work organizations, especially in core industries. Here, it is argued that changes within the US economy since 1960 are weakening the power of core workers to attain high rates of return to their characteristics, including age. Analysis of 1960 & 1980 US census data shows a decrease in the earnings advantage of core sector employment for older workers. The change in the age earnings relation within & between economic sectors is taken as a sign of other changes in the social organization of workers & employers. 3 Tables, 2 Figures, 1 Appendix, 49 References. HA

88T6032

Vajda, Agnes & Zelenay, Anna. A fizikai foglalkozásunk életforma-csoportjai (The Way of Life of Blue Collar Workers). Szociologia, 1984 85, 34, 349-366 (HUN)

‡ Abstract not currently available.

88T6033

Večerník, Jiří (Instit Philosophy & Sociology Czechoslovak Academy Sciences, Jilská 1 CS-110 00 Prague). Rozdělovací procesy životní úroveň. Některé problémy obsahu a vazeb (Distribution processes and the Living Standard). Sociologický Časopis, 1987, 2 576-587 (CZE)

‡ The analysis of distribution processes has so far emphasized aggregate aspects failing to consider how individuals mediate the relation between the measure of work & the measure of consumption. Intensive development requires that distribution be treated as a uniform system forming important productive functions, whose core is wage differentiation based on merit. In forming the incomes of households it is desirable to make the price system promote the diversification of consumption. Separation between economic & social criteria would help overcome the existing producer/consumer dichotomy. Economic & social analyses formulating underlying principles for prognoses should phrase functional interrelations of individual segments of distribution more than extrapolative viewpoints that paralyze the entire state. 5 bles, 9 References. Modified HA

88T6034

Zagorski, Krzysztof (Dept Sociology Research School Social Sciences Australian National U, Canberra ACT 2601). Socio-Economic Achievement in Australian and Japanese Segmented Economies. European Sociological Review 1987, 3, 3, Dec, 243-257

‡ Data from the 1975 Japanese social mobility survey of 2,724 working men (Tomimaga, K., Naoi, A., Imada, T., Current Trends Studies of Social Stratification and Social Mobility in Japan To no date) & from the 1973 social mobility project of the Australian National U. (Canberra), in which 3,166 adult working men were contacted (Broom, L., Duncan-Jones, P., Jones, F. L., McDonnell, P., The Inequality of Inequality London: Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1980), are used to aggregate Australian & Japanese industries into two economic sectors. In both countries, social services are the core of the first sector. However, it also includes most modern manufacturing industries in Japan; agriculture in Australia. Examination of occupational prestige, earnings & over- or underreward relative to sociodemographic characteristics of the LF shows that the sectors differ not only in defining variables but in configurations of income & prestige determinants. 33 References. Modified HA

20 sociology of occupations & professions

88T6035

Agich, George J. (School Medicine Southern Illinois U, Springfield 62708). Incentives and Obligations under Prospective Payment. The Journal of Medicine and Philosophy, 1987, 12, 2, May, 123-144

‡ The alleged conflict between economic incentives to efficiently utilize health care resources & the obligation to provide patients with the best possible medical care is analyzed. The analysis is developed in four stages: (1) the nature of prospective payment systems & economic incentives as well as the issue of professional autonomy, (2) the notion of an incentive for action both as an economic incentive & as a concept of moral psychology, (3) several definitions of the MD's professional obligation & discussion of four conditions that morally qualify the obligation, & (4) why the views of economists & MDs differ so strikingly on the question of economic incentives. In the process of this analysis, it is argued that criticisms of prospective payment systems that are premised primarily on the conflict between economic incentives to contain cost & the professional obligation of beneficence are probably as much a matter of rhetoric as serious argumentation. 40 References. HA

88T6036

Barbezat, Debra A. (Dept Economics Amherst Coll, MA 01002). Salary Differentials or Sex Discrimination? Evidence from the Academic Labor Market. Population Research and Policy Review, 1987, 6, 1, 69-84

‡ The extent & sources of salary discrimination by sex in the US academic labor market are estimated using data from 2 national surveys of a cross-section of Colls & Us (N = approximately 458) conducted in 1968 & 1977 (The Carnegie Commission National Surveys of Higher Education, Princeton, NJ 1968, & Ladd, Everett, & Lipset, Seymour, 1977 Survey of the American Professoriate, no publication information provided). Following Ronald Oaxaca's method ("Male-Female Wage Differentials in Urban Labor Markets" International Economic Review 1973, 14, 693-709), discrimination is measured as a residual subtracting salary differences due to individual characteristics from total M/F salary differences. Several estimates are derived while controlling for various personal & professional variables, eg, publications, academic discipline, rank, & characteristics of the employing institution. A substantial reduction in measured discrimination is evident from 1968-1977, although a small salary difference remains after controlling for available qualifications in 1977. 5 Tables, 16 References. Modified HA

88T6037

Baumgardner, Steve (Dept Psychology U Wisconsin, Eau Claire 54701). Thinking about Work and Careers, Transformations, 1987 2-3, 38-51

‡ Students' thinking about work & careers is often characterized by career counselors & researchers as "unrealistic." Here, it is argued students are trapped in a kind of "Alice in Wonderland" informational environment that produces the kind of thinking that career counselors bemoan: students confront media images of work that bear little resemblance to actual jobs, vocational interest & aptitude tests also contribute to abstract thinking about careers. Direct parental influence on student career understanding has been undermined by the emphasis on credentials, the proliferation of career experts, & the apparent irrelevance of parents' work experience in the face of the high technology revolution. The limits of logical & certainty-oriented career planning & the increasing irrelevance of traditional work values suggest that career development is becoming a function of trial & error career experiences. Teachers & counselors must learn how to cope with a dynamic & uncertain choice task, ie, recognizing that there is no purely rational way preparing for a career. AA

88T6056

Grove, Kathleen Ann (U California San Diego, La Jolla 92093), The Paradox of Happiness: Job Satisfaction among Nurse Practitioners, * Dissertation Abstracts International, 4 The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1549-A.
Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI, Order No. DA87120167.

88T6057

Jackson, Kanata Ann (US International U, San Diego CA 92131), Impact of Control Policy Implementation Processes in an Industrial Engineering Environment: A Systems Perspective, * Dissertation Abstracts International, 4 The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1550-A.
Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI, Order No. DA8719616.

88T6058

Kenig, Sylvia, Gaining Turf but Losing Ground. A Critique of Southern Nursing, Frontiers, 1987, 9, 3, 64-70.

* It is argued that as a result of medical & health services in the US becoming increasingly concentrated within the corporate sector over the past twenty years, the gap between women's real health needs & the way they are perceived by corporate medicine has widened. The nursing profession is in a unique position to bridge this gap, but it has perpetuated medicalized views of women's health needs through failing to define a role for itself distinct from the corporate medical complex, concentrating instead on increasing its status & gaining its share of the health care market. The situation is especially crucial in the southern states where the links among poverty, race, gender, & increased health risks are particularly marked, & corporate control over medical care is increasing rapidly. These arguments are illustrated via a case study of South Carolina. Some ways that the nursing profession can help redefine both health needs & nursing practice are suggested, including (1) empowering networks of activist nurses, (2) engaging in more aggressive political activity, & (3) developing new types of patient education. K. Hyatt.

88T6059

Killen, Marcia (U Washington, Seattle 98195), Childbearing Choices of Professional Women, Health Care for Women International, 1987, 8, 2-3, 121-131.

* An examination of the relationship between career commitment & childbearing values, intentions, & behaviors of women (N = 115, aged 22-40) who were professionally employed or completing advanced degrees, & in a committed relationship with a M partner. Rs completed mailed questionnaires & scales regarding parenting plans & career commitments. 1 year later, their subsequent childbearing behavior was ascertained. Results indicate that 18% of the Rs intended to remain childfree, while among those intending parenthood, postponement of childbearing was evident. Values about society, parental age, & material well-being of the family discriminated the 2 groups. Those who were undecided about having children had significantly higher career commitment than did those who had made a decision one way or the other, though career commitment was not related to subsequent childbearing behavior. Practical implications for counselors working with dual-career couples making parenthood decisions are discussed. 5 Tables, 1 Figure, 17 References. Modified HA.

88T6060

Kortenhoeven, D., van Doorne-Huiskes, A., Groenewegen, P. P., & Maas, I., Vestiging van vrouwelijke huisartsen. Een theoretisch model ter verklaring van verschillen in zelfstandige vestiging tussen vrouwen en mannen (Professional Participation of Women General Practitioners. A Theoretical Model for Explaining Differences in Professional Participation between Female and Male General Practitioners), WM Mens en Maatschappij, 1988, 63, 1, Feb, 24-43. (DUT)

* Several theories of the lesser professional participation of F general practitioners are compared: role theory, rational choice theory, & the labor market theory of statistical discrimination. On the basis of this examination a theoretical model is proposed, which comprises two stages: an explanation of why F general practitioners usually choose to work in less-independent forms of practice than men do, & an explanation of why men & women have different levels of success in realizing the kinds of practice they seek. 3 Tables, 16 References. Modified HA.

88T6061

Lipson, Alberta Grossman (Boston U, MA 02215), Trial and Error: Managing the Dual Roles of Lawyer and Mother, * Dissertation Abstracts International, 4 The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1890-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI, Order No. DA8721322.

88T6062

Malinowska-Tabaka, Elzbieta (Dept Sociology Research School Social Services Australian National U, Canberra ACT 2601), Complex Measures of Job Satisfaction/Dissatisfaction among Professionals, Social Indicators Research, 1987, 19, 4, Nov, 451-473.

* An examination of work satisfaction/dissatisfaction, occupational commitment, & individual social background among 4 professional groups: doctors, engineers, lawyers, & teachers. A 2-stage principal components method was applied to 1983 survey data from (2 N = 3,000 Rs) a national longitudinal study of the professions in Australia to obtain global measures of job satisfaction/dissatisfaction. Although there are some differences between professional groups in terms of work satisfaction, dissatisfaction, stemming, in part from the different prestige ascribed to each profession, to a large extent, they face similar problems, & derive similar satisfaction from their professional work. 5 Tables, 1 Figure, 1 Appendix, 19 References. Modified HA.

88T6063

Marten, Eckhard (Institut Kommunikationswissenschaft U Munchen, D-8000 22 Federal Republic Germany), Zwischen Skepsis und Bewunderung. Zum Tatigkeitsprofil, Selbstverständnis und Deutschlandbild amerikanischer Auslandskorrespondenten in der Bundesrepublik Deutschland (Between Skepticism and Admiration. On the American Foreign Correspondents' Activity Profile, Their Self-Comprehension, and Their Image of Germany), Publizistik, 1987, 32, 1, Jan-Mar, 23-33. (GIR)

* Data from an interview survey of 35 US journalists in the Federal Republic of Germany (FRG) are presented to show how foreign correspondents go about portraying a country to the public. While US correspondents find the FRG an interesting assignment, they generally have less training & experience than correspondents from other countries, they have little contact with either the culture or the populace, they show little interest in matters that do not directly relate to the US, & TV reportage is particularly unbalanced, due to its preference for stories on the Nazi past & anti-US activities. Foreign editors are found to have perhaps greater responsibility for this qualitative & quantitative journalistic deficiency than the correspondents themselves. Suggestions are given for further comparisons of these results with actual reportage & portrayals by journalists of other countries. 14 Tables. 1 Anderson.

88T6064

Mickelson, Roslyn Arlin (U North Carolina, Charlotte 28223), The Case of the Missing Brackets: Teachers and Social Reproduction, Journal of Education, 1987, 169, 2, spring, 78-88.

* A revised version of SA 34 5/86S19053/ASA/1986/4094.

88T6065

Mittman, Brian S. (Stanford U, CA 94305), Mobility and Inequality in the Civil Service: Job Ladders and Vacancy Chains in Bureaucratic Labor Markets, * Dissertation Abstracts International, 4 The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1550-A.
Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI, Order No. DA8720419.

88T6066

Montgomery, Kathleen (New York U, NY 10003), Career Shifts in the Changing Medical Profession: A Study of Physicians in Medical Management, * Dissertation Abstracts International, 4 The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1890-A.
Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI, Order No. DA8722773.

88T6067

Mori, Maurizio (Istit Filosofia e Sociologia Diritto U Milano, Via Festa del Perdono 7 I-20122 Italy), The Philosophical Basis of Medical Ethics, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 6, 631-636.

* After discussing the status of medical ethics as a special branch of a more general ethical theory, its particular principles are delineated. Two opposite basic principles that individuate two conflicting perspectives are exposed: the principle of sanctity of (human) life, & the principle of disposability of mere biological (human) life. It is argued that the basic roots of controversies in medical ethics lie in the distinction between these principles & their philosophical bases. A new principle based on a

88T6047

DiPrete, Thomas A. (Dept Sociology U Chicago, IL 60637), The Upgrading and Downgrading of Occupations: Status Redefinition vs. Deskilling as Alternative Theories of Change, ♦ UM Social Forces 1988, 66, 1, Mar, 725-746

¶ Case studies of occupations alleged to support the deskilling hypothesis have typically been insensitive to the internal heterogeneity found within occupations, & to the fact that the boundary between adjacent occupations located on the same functional hierarchy can shift over time. These factors are explicitly taken into account in an examination of historical data regarding clerical work in the US civil service, & it is found that apparently compelling evidence for the thesis of clerical downgrading better supports an alternative explanation, that of status redefinition, an aspect of the process of professionalization. Status redefinition & deskilling are not mutually exclusive explanations for change, though they do conflict in important respects. It is suggested that case studies of occupations should focus on functional hierarchies, rather than specific occupations, in order to avoid the comparability problems that arise when occupational boundaries change. 68 References. Modified HA

88T6048

Easton, Todd (School Business Administration U Portland, OR 97203), Bargaining and the Determinants of Teacher Salaries, Industrial and Labor Relations Review 1988, 41, 2, Jan, 263-278

¶ Results of statistical analysis (covering the period 1969-1982) of a sample of 55 Ore school districts are used to examine the roles of two factors before & after the introduction of collective bargaining: salary comparisons between school districts, & school districts' ability & willingness to pay for education. No evidence is found that ability & willingness to pay influenced salary setting either before or after collective bargaining began, suggesting that bargaining does not serve to widen the gap in educational opportunity between wealthy & poor districts. On the other hand, interdistrict salary comparisons significantly influenced salary setting throughout the period, but bargaining had little effect on the influence of that factor. 5 Tables, 29 References. Modified HA

88T6049

Feldman, Kenneth A. (Dept Sociology State U New York, Stony Brook 11794-4356), Research Productivity and Scholarly Accomplishment of College Teachers as Related to Their Instructional Effectiveness: A Review and Exploration, ♦ UM Research in Higher Education 1987, 26, 3, 227-298

¶ A review of research on the connection between research productivity or scholarly accomplishment of Coll faculty members & their teaching effectiveness (as assessed by their students) revealed that, on average, the relationship is small. Pedagogical practices & dispositions of faculty members, as well as certain course or class characteristics (size of class, electivity of course), were examined as potential mediating factors. Potential common causes investigated were academic rank & age of faculty members, their general ability, their personality characteristics, & the amount of time or effort they spend on research activities. The association between research productivity & teaching effectiveness was explored further by considering whether its size & direction varies by career stage of faculty members, their academic discipline, & the type of Coll or U in which they teach. 5 Tables, 1 Figure, 1 Appendix, 110 References. Modified HA

88T6050

Fimian, Michael J. (Appalachian State U, Boone NC 28608), Teacher Stress: An Expert Appraisal, UM Psychology in the Schools 1987, 24, 1, Jan, 5-14

¶ Experts on teacher stress (TS) & burnout (N = 226) were surveyed (using a modified version of the Teacher Stress Inventory) to determine the relevance of 49 TS items to their overall concepts of TS. Ratings for all items fell within the relevant-to-quite-relevant range. The most relevant items dealt with feeling unable to cope & experiencing physical exhaustion, the least relevant were related to student motivation problems. Overall, the experts were congruent to a significant degree in the way they rated the items. Younger Rs, those who present stress management workshops, & those who conduct qualitative or quantitative stress research perceived some of the stress factors as being more relevant to TS than did the older Rs, those not publishing, & those conducting combinations of qualitative & quantitative stress research. 2 Tables, 40 References. HA

88T6051

Finley, Wayne H., Finley, Sara C. & Dyer, Richard L. (Laboratory Medical Genetics U Alabama, Birmingham 35294), Survey of Medical Genetics Personnel, The American Journal of Human Genetics 1987, 40, 4, Apr, 374-377

¶ Results of a mail questionnaire survey of 476 US medical genetics programs are reported. The data show how many personnel are employed each of 5 certification categories & their training backgrounds, current expected vacancies over the next 5 years, the availability of postdoctoral training in clinical genetics & research & graduate training in genetic counseling, certification trends, & regional variations. Some directives for future training are suggested. 2 Tables, 1 Figure, 11 References. Hyatt

88T6052

Folkerts, Jean & Lacy, Stephen (Mount Vernon Coll, Washington DC 20007), Weekly Editors in 1900: A Quantitative Study of Demographic Characteristics, UM Journalism Quarterly 1987, 64, 2-3, summer-autumn, 429-433

¶ Information was compiled on reform & mainstream journalists in states with active agrarian reform in 1900 to determine some characteristics of weekly editors & of newspapers at the beginning of the modern newspaper era & to make some comparisons with the general population. The findings show few differences between mainstream & reform journalists (N = 150 each): weekly editors in 1900 were Mc, white, late middle-aged, M, & neither wealthy nor poor, they had stable marriages & slightly smaller than average households, they were born in the US, lived in small cities, their newspapers usually faced competition, were smaller than 8 pages, & averaged 1,500 circulation in towns of 9,150. It is noted that caution should be used in interpreting small samples. 3 Tables. Modified AA

88T6053

Fridman, Samuel, Lee, Sharon Mengchee & Falcon, Luis F. (International Population Program Dept Sociology Cornell U, Ithaca NY 14853), Estimating Income-Dependent Occupational Scores in 1940, Social Science Research 1987, 16, 3, Sept, 260-283

¶ Analysis of social stratification processes requires a method of ranking occupations. During the 1940 US Census, no interval scale was available for classifying occupations; in addition, important income data were missing. After briefly reviewing the literature on occupational scaling, a method of estimating two measures of occupation-SES scores (based on O. D. Duncan's SEI, see "A Socioeconomic Index for All Occupations" in Reiss, A. J. (Ed) Occupations and Social Status, New York: Free Press, 1961, 109-138) & mean occupational earnings is demonstrated. Data are drawn from the 1% Public Use Microdata Samples of the 1940 Census, with analysis restricted to Ms aged 15+ in the civilian LF-T procedure can be applied to other cases of missing data in census files & should contribute to research using time-series data. 5 Tables, 2 Appendixes, 29 References. K. Hyatt

88T6054

Frisman, Linda Koistinen (F. Heller Graduate School Brandeis U, Waltham MA 02254), Private Practice and the Mental Health Professional: An Analysis of Factors Influencing Career Opportunities and Decisions of Clinical Social Workers, * Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences 1988, 48, 7, Jan 1901-A-1902-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8722494.

88T6055

Golembiewski, Robert T. (Dept Political Science U Georgia, Athens 30602), Contextual Specificity in Consultation: Similarities and Differences between Private and Public Sectors, ♦ Consultation 1987, 6, 2, summer, 90-101

¶ A discussion of differences between public & private organizations emphasizing their impact on the intervention practices of consultants. Eight generic features that are relevant in adapting consultation to the specifics of a particular organization are presented: (1) site, (2) presenting symptoms, (3) values, (4) hierarchy & function, (5) stage or phase specificity, (6) demography, (7) context or immediate environment, & (8) cultural characteristics that seem to be present more frequently in public organizations are highlighted. 14 References. Modified HA

88T6077

Siporin, Max (School Social Welfare State U New York, Albany 12222). Contribution of Religious Values to Social Work and the Law, Social Thought, 1986, 12, 4, fall, 35-50

† Religious values were greatly influential in the development of the social work & legal professions. Increasingly, the secularization of social work & the law has led to major discrepancies between their professional value systems & religious values. Differences between these value systems are identified & their essential moral nature is clarified. The common societal functions of these institutions help to foster social cooperation & to deal with deviant behavior & dependency. It is suggested that religious values can be applied to help renew the value systems of the social work & legal professions & to meet needs for their greater effectiveness. 79 References. AA

88T6078

Smart, John C. & Fittington, Corinna A. (Coll Education Virginia Polytechnic & State U, Blacksburg 24061). Occupational Sex Segregation and Job Satisfaction of Women. ♦ Research in Higher Education, 1987, 26, 2, 202-211

* Survey data obtained from F Coll freshmen in 1971 & from the same Rs in 1980 (N = 2165) indicate wide variation in the effect of occupational sex segregation on the job satisfaction of F Coll graduates employed in public & private organizations. Women employed in sex-balanced & M- & F-dominated occupations in the public sector have comparable levels of job satisfaction. In private firms, however, F Coll graduates employed in sex-balanced careers are more satisfied with the intrinsic & overall nature of their jobs than those employed in F-dominated occupations, & those in F-dominated jobs are more satisfied with the extrinsic nature of their careers than those in M-dominated jobs. The implications of these findings for those who conduct research on the career consequences of women employed in sex-dominated career fields & for Coll officials responsible for the educational & professional development of F Coll students are discussed. 2 Tables, 1 Figure, 21 References. Modified HA

88T6079

Sokoloff, Natalie J. (John Jay Coll Criminal Justice City U New York, NY 10019). Evaluating Gains and Losses by Black and White Women and Men in the Professions, 1960-1980. ♦ Social Problems, 1988, 35, 1, Feb, 36-53

* An examination of the progress of black & white Fs & black Ms in the white, M-dominated professions in the US between 1960 & 1980, using census data. While general statistics lead to the conclusion that white Ms lost & black Ms, white Fs, & black Fs gained in the professions over this 20-year period, analysis using disaggregated data & an index of representation challenges these conclusions. Although people in disadvantaged race/gender categories moved toward greater equality of representation with white Ms in the profession between 1960 & 1980, the degree of movement & final outcome is highly questionable in the M-dominated professions. Black Fs & Ms did show significant improvements in the expanding neutral professions. Although white Fs dramatically declined in their overrepresentation in F-dominated professions, they did not show a commensurate increase in M-dominated professions. Black Ms appear to have made the greatest gains of all people in the three disadvantaged race/gender categories in the professional LF between 1960 & 1980, but these findings overestimate the progress of black Ms because of their sharp decline in the LF as a whole. 6 Tables, 2 Appendixes, 51 References. HA

88T6080

Swanson-Kauffman, Kristen M. (U Washington, Seattle 98195). Overview of the Balancing Act: Having It All, Health Care for Women International, 1987, 8, 2-3, 101-108

† US women's management of multiple roles is described as a balancing act laden with personal & environmental motivations & implications, & new opportunities for choice are the source of both celebration & aggravation. Drawing on the Batelle Corp's synthesis of attitudinal & demographic longitudinal data sets (see S. D. McLaughlin et al., The Cosmopolitan Report on the Changing Life Course of American Women, Seattle, Wash: The Hearst Corp, 1986), demographic trends of contemporary women, their mothers of the baby boom era, & their grandmothers of the earlier part of the century are explored; changes in women's expectations & attitudes regarding family, childbearing, & career are also examined. Implications for F nursing professionals are addressed. 6 References. Modified HA

88T6081

Treiber, Hubert (Fachbereich Rechtswissenschaften U Hannover, D-3000 91 Federal Republic Germany). Lawyers' Lives in Germany, 'The Past Made to Order and off the Rack': Jurists' Images and Their Maintenance in Laudations and Obituaries, Contemporary Crises, 1987, 11, 2, 159-192

† An outline of the legal profession in West Germany, including some aspects of its historical development, based on statistical data, laudations, & obituaries written after 1945 by jurists in legal journals. Specific techniques of image-maintenance are described & analyzed. The typical themes of this legal self-representation reveal specific characteristics that are often used by theories of professionalization. Some important differences in legal training & education between West Germany & the US/England are stressed. The eulogies & obituaries reflect both the orientation of the German legal profession toward the model of the judge & the role of public service. 3 Tables. Modified AA

88T6082

Iwaddle, Andrew C. (Dept Sociology Family & Community Medicine U Missouri, Columbia 65211). Swedish Physicians' Perspectives on Work and the Medical Care System-II: The Cases of Child and Maternal Health Physicians, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 5, 515-524

† (For Part I, see SA 35 5/87R9924.) Interview (N = 3) & observational data are used to describe child health & maternal health MDs in the public ambulatory care sector of Goteborg, Sweden. Areas addressed include (1) the organization of Rs' work activities, (2) their perspectives on their work, & (3) their perspectives on the medical care system. Child health MDs described their work in terms of preventive care, patient care, integration of ambulatory & hospital services, & technological sophistication. They described the system in terms of quality of care, quality of diagnosis & treatment, adequacy of resources, & distribution of services. Maternal health MDs described their work in terms of a biophysical orientation, practice independence, relations with hospitals & other specialists, & dependence on nurses. They described the system in terms of technological sophistication, ambulatory & hospital care, & problems with other specialties. Comparisons with direct general practitioners are made, & interpretations are offered. 22 References. Modified HA revision of the disposability of life view is proposed that allows for a "rational" suicide. Suggestions for further refinements of the principle are provided, along with some guidelines for establishing rules of justice by which it can be applied. 8 References. Modified HA

88T6068

Otiite, Oluigi (U. Ibadan, Nigeria). The Impact and Integration of Behavioural Sciences in the Education of Health Care Professionals. Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 6, 599-604.

† It is argued that health, defined as physical, mental, & social well-being, should be adequately conceptualized in organic as well as nonorganic terms. Some training programs for health care professionals, however, fail to recognize the importance of integrating the sociobehavioral sciences, e.g. geography, social anthropology, sociology, psychology, political science, & economics into their medical/health care curricula. Such an integration is a dire necessity if health care professionals are to be adequately prepared to practice the art & science of medicine within the varying structural realities & sociocultural contexts of contemporary societies. 23 References. Modified HA

88T6069

Polachek, Solomon William (Dept. Economics State U. New York, Binghamton 13901). Occupational Segregation and the Gender Wage Gap. Population Research and Policy Review, 1987, 6, 1, 47-67.

† The role of occupational segregation in the determination of gender wage differentials in the US for the period 1960-1984 is assessed using data obtained from the US census, Bureau of Labor Statistics, & previous empirical studies. Analysis indicates that (1) occupational segregation plays less of a role in explaining wage differentials than do traditional human capital variables, (2) earnings profiles generated with data that include a %F measure of occupational segregation are not ideal for testing human capital predictions, yet nonetheless, yield parameters consistent with neoclassical theory, & (3) lifetime work considerations, e.g. the degree of one's LF intermittency, are important in determining both occupation & wage. It is concluded that government antidiscrimination policies based on outcome measures are generally inefficient; rather, incentives must be created for women to participate in the labor market on an equal basis with men. 7 Tables, 2 Figures, 29 References. Modified HA

88T6070

Polley, Richard Brian (Dept. Management & Policy U. Arizona, Tucson 85721). The Consultant as the Shaper of Legend. ♦ Consultation, 1987, 6, 2, summer, 102-118.

† An application of a formal method, a system for the multiple-level observation of groups (SYMLOG) as developed by R. F. Bales & S. P. Cohen (SYMLOG: A System for the Multiple Level Observation of Groups, New York: The Free Press, 1979), for the analysis of myth & legend is described. SYMLOG codes on multiple levels of communication & serves both as taxonomy & explanation theory. A proactive model of intervention is proposed in which the archetype for a consultant or shaper is the role of the scop (bard) from the Beowulf legend. Rather than interpreting existing myth, the shaper takes partially formed images, molds them into coherent legends & myths, & returns them to the culture. 7 Figures, 23 References. Modified HA

88T6071

Poole, Eric D. & Pogrebin, Mark R. (Graduate School Public Affairs U. Colorado, Denver 80202). Judicial Intervention and Work Alienation: A Study of Jail Guards. Howard Journal of Criminal Justice, 1987, 26, 3, Aug., 217-231.

† An examination of the effect of judicial intervention on experiences of work alienation, using questionnaire data obtained from 138 guards in 4 US jails. From the viewpoint of the officers, court decisions & mandates have seriously infringed on their authority, compromising their position vis-à-vis inmates & making it more difficult for them to perform their duties. Administrative, operational, & procedural changes are perceived as advancing the welfare of prisoners at the expense of the interests of the guards. Judicial intervention has thus led to heightened feelings of several forms of work alienation. 1 Table, 32 References. Modified HA

88T6072

Quinn, Margaret M. & Levenstein, Charles (Occupational Health Program U. Massachusetts Medical Center, Worcester 01605). Social Dimensions of the Health Hazard Evaluation: A Case Study.

Journal of Public Health Policy, 1987, 8, 2, summer, 192-201.

† A case study of the influence of labor/management conflict in a workplace hazard evaluation setting on the objectivity of a scientific investigator. The actions of the company under investigation significantly deluged the investigation & raised its costs. Education in the social & political conflicts of the workplace, labor history, & ethical principles of public health practice should be fundamental aspects of occupational health scientists' training, so that they can understand the context in which they conduct their work & be aware of how workplace conflicts can determine its outcome. 6 References. Modified HA

88T6073

Reep, Diana C. & Dambrot, Faye H. (Dept. English U. Akron, 44325). Television's Professional Women: Working with Men in 1980s. ♦ Journalism Quarterly, 1987, 64, 2-3, summer-autumn, 376-381.

† An exploration of 6 prime-time TV programs during the 1985/86 season focuses on the portrayal of single, professional Fs who share the house with M partners. Results of quantitative & qualitative content analysis indicate a shift away from earlier stereotypical portrayals of Fs as impatient & interested only in domestic matters. All these Fs were at least as respected decisionmakers, often more ethical, serious, competent, & clever than their M partners. In work status, 3 Ms were subordinate to the F partner, while only 1 F was subordinate. Two characters were single mothers, facing realistic conflicts between professional & personal duties. All the F characters were romantically attracted to their M partners, but they did not act on this attraction since it might adversely affect the working relationship. These findings reveal a more positive & complex portrayal of working Fs than previously reported. Modified A

88T6074

Reszke, Irena (Polish Academy Sciences, PO Box 24 PL-00 Warsaw). The Meaning of Occupational Prestige Scales. ♦ The Polish Sociological Bulletin, 1985, 1-4(69-72), 43-57.

† Though occupational prestige scales are widely used, the meaning of "prestige" is not agreed on by sociologists. In questionnaire-aided interviews with 566 adult residents of Warsaw, Poland, Rs' criteria for rating occupations were elicited. Six major categories were found: social power, qualifications & skills, investment, rewards, & personal & cultural criteria. Rs' ratings of a list of 16 occupations are analyzed. Results reveal a system of differences between criteria of occupational esteem & assessment of social standing of occupations, which appear to be results of ambivalent attitudes toward wealth & authority. 2 Tables. References. W. H. Stoddard.

88T6075

Schepers, Rita (Erasmus U., NL-3000 DR Rotterdam, Netherlands). Pharmacists and Medical Doctors in Nineteenth Century Belgium. Sociology of Health and Illness, 1988, 10, 1, 68-90.

† The main areas of conflict between the medical & pharmaceutical professions in Belgium in the nineteenth century are outlined. The medical profession was dominant in the DofL & the pharmacists were not allowed to threaten its position. However, pharmacists were also able to achieve their objective: geographic expansion of their officially recognized monopoly & the safeguarding of the pharmacist's key role in dispensing of drugs, including proprietary drugs. They also managed to push the less qualified druggists out of the officially recognized DofL medicine. 11 References. HA

88T6076

Sinclair, Carole, Poizner, Sonja, Gilmour-Barrett, Karen & Ran David (Dellcrest Children's Center, 1645 Sheppard Ave. Downs, Ontario M3M 2X4). The Development of a Code of Ethics for Canadian Psychologists. Canadian Psychology/Psychologie Canadienne, 1987, 28, 1, Jan., 1-8.

† Over the past five years, the Canadian Psychological Assoc. has been in the process of developing a new code of ethics for Canadian psychologists. Reasons for this effort are outlined, & the previously used American Psychological Assoc. code is examined from the point of view of main purposes of ethics codes: (1) to help establish a group as a profession; (2) to act as a support & guide to individual professionals; (3) to help meet the responsibilities of being a profession; & (4) to provide statement of moral principle that helps the individual professional resolve ethical dilemmas. The objectives, methodology, & an outline of the Canadian code are presented. The code organizes all ethical standards around four ethical principles: (A) respect for the dignity of persons; (B) responsible caring; (C) integrity in relationships; & (D) responsibility to society. 35 References. HA

1100 rural sociology and agriculture

16 rural sociology (village, agriculture)

88T6083

Baviskar, B. S. (Dept Sociology School Economics U Delhi, 110007 India). Cooperatives and Rural Development in India. Current Anthropology, 1987, 28, 4, Aug-Oct, 564-565.

* A workshop was held 26-31 Dec 1985 at the India International Center in New Delhi to initiate a collaborative project on cooperatives & Ru development conducted by the U of Delhi & McGill U (Montreal, Quebec). Three major hypotheses were proposed regarding cooperatives to be investigated through a series of case studies. In the process, attempts will be made to learn what contributes to a cooperative's success & what impact cooperatives have on the Ru poor. Case studies will examine cooperatives involved in production of varied agricultural enterprises, other forms of commodity production, & ventures other than commodity production. W. H. Stoddard.

88T6084

Bentley, Jeffery W., Water Harvesting on the Papago Reservation: Experimental Agricultural Technology in the Guise of Development. U Human Organization, 1987, 46, 2, summer, 141-146.

* A case study is presented of a small-scale water delivery project on the Papago Indian reservation in Ariz. Of six experimental water harvesters built in the 1960s & 1970s, five have been abandoned, despite having proved to be a successful form of agricultural technology in other parts of Ariz & on other reservations. Site visitations & interviews with the principal individuals involved in the project (& not provided) reveal some social factors responsible for its failure. It is concluded that misunderstandings within the U-government context between bureaucrats & academics, who conflicted in their definitions of the project as either development- or research-focused, are to blame. In addition, planners failed to consider the needs of the Papago community & actively encourage its participation. The project's failure has affected the entire academic & administrative community, as the Indians are now distrustful of any future schemes implemented in the name of development. 36 References. K. Hyatt.

88T6085

Bouquet, Mary & Haan, Henk de (c/o de Haan Agricultural University, NL-6700 HB Wageningen Netherlands). Kinship as an Analytical Category in Rural Sociology: An Introduction. Sociologia Ruralis, 1987, 27, 4, 243-262.

* While "family" has become a central category for the new Ru sociology, "kinship" has been neglected or even suppressed. Introduced here are four articles (see abstracts in SA 36.3) appearing in this special issue of Sociologia Ruralis, in which the category of kinship is a central theme. Three broad approaches to the family farm are compared: a structural approach to agriculture as situated within the economy as a whole; a microsociological analysis at the level of the farm; & an effort to synthesize these two perspectives. Family behavior & ideology are typically explained either as results of external economic imperatives or as expressions of the family as an isolated social entity. A concept of kinship that incorporates notions of property ownership & intergenerational devolution of property is proposed as a basis for moving beyond this impasse. Anthropological findings on kinship theory are also examined. 51 References. W. H. Stoddard.

88T6086

Brockett, Charles D. (U South, Seawance TN 37375). The Commercialization of Agriculture and Rural Economic Insecurity: The Case of Honduras. U Studies in Comparative International Development, 1987, 22, 1, spring, 82-102.

* Honduras is one of the poorest Latin American countries, with poverty afflicting especially the Ru population. The effects of export agriculture on Ru poverty are explored using historical data. Rapid growth of export crop production has slowed the growth of food production to a rate lower than that of population growth. Landownership is highly concentrated, & the commercialization of agriculture has increased Ru economic insecurity. This approach to agricultural development has been a source of serious problems for Honduran society. 8 Tables, 49 References. W. H. Stoddard.

88T6087

Brose, Hans-Georg, Schulze-Boing, Matthias & Wolrab-Sahr, Monika (Instt Soziologie U Marburg, D-3500 Federal Republic Germany). Diskontinuität und Berufsbiographie: das Beispiel der Zeitarbeit (Discontinuity and Work Careers: The Example of Temporary Work). Soziale Welt, 1987, 38, 4, 498-521. (GER)

* The relevance of career continuity & biographical factors for the constitution of a new peripheral LF is examined, focusing on temporary workers. West German government & industry statistics are combined with personal interviews of temporary workers to determine the effects of age, education, & occupational interruptions. Career discontinuities are related to problems of reintegration into the employment system, the transition from schooling to employment, & the maintenance of employment options. Tendencies in the employment structure that contribute to career interruptions are discussed. It is concluded that even as recruiting practices increasingly emphasize career continuity, this qualification is becoming impossible to realize for growing numbers of marginal groups of workers. 6 Tables, 2 Figures. Modified HA.

88T6088

Cowan, J. Tadlock, An Emerging Structure of Technological Domination: Biotechnology, the Organization of Agricultural Research, and the Third World. International Journal of Contemporary Sociology, 1987, 24, 1-2, Jan-Apr, 31-44.

* Agricultural biotechnology has become an increasingly important element in programs of agricultural development for the Third World. The result has been a new regime of technological domination. The newly emerged biotechnologies contrast to the old in their emphasis on conscious manipulation of basic biological processes. Crop choices are highly restricted & specialized, permitting a small number of private firms to monopolize the provision of seeds, despite the genetic wealth of Third World food plants. A unified Third World policy of agricultural research is needed to counter this domination by multinational corporations. W. H. Stoddard.

88T6089

Cruz-Villalon, Josefina (Dept Geografia U Sevilla, E-41004 Spain). Political and Economic Change in Spanish Agriculture, 1950-1985. Antipode, 1987, 19, 2, Sept, 119-133.

* During 1950-1985 the Spanish political & economic situation experienced a remarkable transformation. In 1950, under General Franco's dictatorship, its economic structure was based in the primary sector; in 1985, democracy had been established & the main economic sectors were tourism & industry. The adjustment of Spanish agriculture to these changes is discussed. Since establishment of democracy, the government has pursued joining the European Economic Community (EEC), & consequently, adaptation of EEC agrarian policy. Spanish agriculture has suffered a loss of population & aging of the agricultural LF. The integration of agriculture into the entire economic system has made farmers dependent on other sectors of the economy, & on multinational corporations. It is concluded that the transformation of agriculture in Spain has resulted in territorial imbalances of population & incomes. 2 Tables, 2 Figures, 24 References. Modified AA.

88T6090

D'Argemir, Dolores Comas (U Barcelona, 7 Tarragona Spain). Rural Crisis and the Reproduction of Family Systems: Celibacy as a Problem in the Aragonese Pyrenees. Sociologia Ruralis, 1987, 27, 4, 263-277.

* An analysis of the changing status of celibacy within the context of SE transformations in the Aragonese Pyrenees of Spain, based on fieldwork conducted 1973-1978 & some later data. Difficulties in adapting to a market economy & geographic isolation have resulted in increasing depopulation & a crisis within the system of reproduction of peasant families. Celibacy has become a widespread symptom of the problem. Though celibacy & migration have been present for many years, they have only come to constitute a consciously recognized problem since the economic crisis has prevented Ru residents from emigrating, forcing them to establish themselves within the region itself. 1 Table, 33 References. Modified HA.

You are cordially invited to subscribe to . . .

Technology in Society

The Prestigious International Journal

Editors: George Bugliarello and A. George Schillinger, Polytechnic Institute of New York

“ To say we live in a technological age is to say the obvious
To say we understand it is to delude ourselves. *TECHNOLOGY
IN SOCIETY*, through the words of distinguished practitioners, teachers and policymakers, helps us all to come closer to this critical understanding ”

Dr. Victor Rabinowitch
National Academy of Sciences

Now in its 9th year, TECHNOLOGY IN SOCIETY is devoted to a range of interdisciplinary fields most simply identified by the terms: technology assessment; science, technology and society; management of technology; technology and policy; the economics of technology; technology transfer; appropriate technology and economic development; ethical and value implications of science and technology; science and public policy; and technology forecasting.

These areas form the basis of a single forum for the discussion of the political, economic and cultural roles of the social forces that shape technological decisions and choices open to society.

TECHNOLOGY IN SOCIETY is written for executives, policymakers and leaders in business, industry, government and academia. Each issue contains a wealth of knowledge on topical issues in technology and society with a variety of timely and provocative articles. And special issues focus on today's challenging topics such as the impact of biotechnology on social institutions; macroengineering; taxation, technology and the U.S. economy; science advice to the President; university-industry research interactions and much more.

Take advantage of this opportunity. Subscribe to TECHNOLOGY IN SOCIETY now!

Subscription Information

Published 4 issues per annum
Volume 10, 1988

ISSN 0160-791X

One-year institutional (1988)

DM 485.00

Two-year institutional (1988/89)

DM 921.50

Professional rate (1988)

DM 157.00

FREE SAMPLE COPY AVAILABLE UPON REQUEST.

Send your order to your regular supplier or your nearest Pergamon office. For subscription rates in Africa, Asia, UK and Eire, and the Americas, apply to the nearest Pergamon office. Journal prices include postage and insurance. Prices are subject to change without notice.

PERGAMON PRESS

Fairview Park, Elmsford, New York 10523 USA
Headington Hill Hall, Oxford OX3, OBW England

yet they continue to affirm the system, favoring a conservative state of law & order. A general attitude of resignation is detected, sporadically interrupted by instances of resistance. The overall picture is one of a culture in decline. 1 Figure, 54 References. Modified HA

88T6103

Relf, Linda Lohao (Dept Agricultural Economics & Rural Sociology, Ohio State U, Columbus 43210), Farm Structure, Industry Structure, and Socioeconomic Conditions in the United States, UM Rural Sociology, 1987, 52, 4, winter, 462-482

† An analysis of the effects of differentiated farm & industry structures on SE conditions in 3,037 counties, based on 1970 & 1980 US Census data. The results indicate that employment in core industry & a pattern of family farming contribute to more favorable SE conditions. Both peripheral & state employment lower SE conditions relative to the core. There is partial support for a negative relationship between corporate/commercial farming & SE conditions. Finally, findings do not support the hypothesis that smaller family farms positively affect the SE conditions of counties. 4 Tables, 51 References. HA

88T6104

Thomas, John K. & Goodwin, H. L., Jr. (Texas A&M U, College Station 77843), Employment Compensation among Farm Workers in the Lower Rio Grande Valley, UM Social Science Quarterly, 1987, 68, 3, Sept., 621-630

* A revised version of SA 34 1/86S17444/SAASRS/1986/0251

88T6105

Wagener, Donald Joseph (Iowa State U, Ames 50010), Sociological Factors Influencing the Decisions of Iowa Farmers to Adopt Needed Soil Conservation Practices, * Dissertation Abstracts International A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan.

1890-A-1891-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8721940.

88T6106

Wimberley, Ronald C. (Dept Sociology & Anthropology North Carolina State U, Raleigh 27695-8107), Dimensions of U.S. Agrifstructure: 1969-1982, UM Rural Sociology, 1987, 52, 4, winter, 445-461

† Multiple indicators of agricultural structure in the US are examined, using data from the 1969, 1974, 1978, & 1982 US Census of Agriculture. Analysis reveals 3 dimensions: corporate-commercial agriculture, large-farm-area agriculture, & small-farm-area agriculture. Indexes of each dimension are constructed, compared at 4 time periods, & mapped descriptively across the US: large-farm-area agriculture, & small-farm-area agriculture. It is concluded that agrifstructure should not be analyzed on the basis of a single continuum of farm size, sales, or other indicators that oversimplify the substance of the concept. Indexes based on these 3 dimensions are useful for describing more comprehensive patterns of US agrifstructure cross-sectionally, conducting trend analyses, & measuring structure in causal models. 3 Tables, 3 Figures, 19 References. Modified HA

88T6107

Zarkovic, Milica (Dept Economics Saint Joseph's U, Philadelphia PA 19131), The Effects of Economic Growth and Technological Innovation on the Agricultural Labor Force in India, UM Studies in Comparative International Development, 1987, 22, 1, spring, 103-120.

† Indian census data of 1961, 1971, & 1981 are used to analyze long-term trends in the agricultural LF in 2 Indian high-growth states, Haryana & Punjab. The findings show that green revolution technology has contributed to the size of the LF. Over time, state differences in technology have manifested themselves in state differences in the LF. It is also shown that economic growth in the particular cultural context of these 2 states has resulted in a predominance of Ms in the high-growth agricultural sector. 4 Tables, 1 Appendix, 45 References. Modified AA

WINAK: BOLETIN INTERCULTURAL

(ISSN 0257 6449)

WINAK: BOLETIN INTERCULTURAL is published quarterly by the Mariano Galvez University of Guatemala. Winak is also the official journal of the School of Linguistics at the University, servicing the two degrees on Mayan Linguistics and Sociolinguistics, including one to B.A. level.

Winak is the first journal of its kind in Guatemala to deal with a wide range of topics (in Spanish) relating to the sociolinguistic, cultural and educational situation of the country and its 23 Mayan languages. Winak publishes articles on the following areas of research:

- DESCRIPTIVE LINGUISTICS OF MAYAN LANGUAGES: Phonology, Morphology, Syntax, Morpho-syntax, Semantics.
- SOCIOLINGUISTICS: Bilingualism and Multilingualism, Language Planning, Language Maintenance, Language Death.
- APPLIED LINGUISTICS: Second Language Acquisition, Dialectology.
- ANTHROPOLOGY: Cosmovision, Cognitive Studies, Oral Tradition, Bilingual native texts.
- EDUCATION: Literacy, Bilingual-Bicultural Education, Orthography

Subscription Rates: $US 15.00, institutional/library $US 6.00, individual (per annum, for 4 issues).
Subscription includes airmail postage.
Journal and advertisement exchanges are welcome.

All subscriptions, requests for exchange of journals and articles for inclusion in Winak should be sent to

Dr. Neville Stiles, Editor
WINAK: BOLETIN INTERCULTURAL
School of Linguistics
Universidad "Mariano Gálvez"
Apdo. Postal 1811
Guatemala, GUATEMALA
Central America

88T6091

Fisher, Claude S. (U California, Berkeley 94720). Technology's Retreat: The Decline of Rural Telephony in The United States, 1920-1940. Social Science History, 1987, 11, 3, fall, 295-327

¶ Between 1920 & 1940, about 33% of U.S. farm households, gave up telephone service. Employing documentary evidence, census data, & a statistical analysis of state-level patterns of farmers' telephone subscriptions, reasons behind this decline are explored. Among many possible contributing factors, the role of alternative technology is highlighted, especially the automobile, & the importance of neglect by the large companies, in the wider context of economic stringency, is underlined. Lessons for a general comprehension of technological change are explored. 3 Tables, 127 References. Modified AA

88T6092

Green, Gary P. (Dept Sociology U Georgia, Athens 30602). Class and Class Interests in Agriculture: Support for New Deal Farm Programs among Tobacco Producers. The Sociological Quarterly, 1987, 28, 4, Dec, 559-574

¶ The subjective & objective elements of the class structure in tobacco production are examined using mail questionnaire data collected from a random sample of flue cured tobacco growers & allotment holders (N = 163) in Pitt County, NC. Results indicate that measures of class are relatively poor predictors of support for government intervention & for the tobacco program. The implication of these findings for class analyses of agriculture & New Deal farm programs are suggested. 4 Tables, 1 Appendix, 45 References. Modified HA

88T6093

Hansen, Gary L. (Dept Sociology U Kentucky, Lexington 40546-0091). The Effect of Community Size on Exchange Orientations in Marriage. Rural Sociology, 1987, 52, 4, winter, 501-509.

¶ A revised version of SA 35 3/87S19909/RSS/1987/1902

88T6094

Hedley, M. J. (U Windsor, Ontario N9B 3P4). The Peasant Within: Agrarian Life in New Zealand and Canada. La Revue Canadienne de Sociologie et d'Anthropologie/The Canadian Review of Sociology and Anthropology, 1988, 25, 1, Feb, 67-83

¶ The concern of the members of farm households to impose their own designs on the productive process & on the creation & reproduction of their social existence is examined. The importance of rethinking conventional approaches to Ru culture, by recognizing the pervasive influence of a history of domination, is pointed out. The arguments draw on the results of fieldwork conducted in northern New Zealand & central Alberta. 25 References. HA

88T6095

Heywood, Linda M. (Howard U, Washington DC 20059). The Growth and Decline of African Agriculture in Central Angola, 1890-1950. Journal of Southern African Studies, 1987, 13, 3, Apr, 355-371

¶ An analysis of diversity among agricultural producers & problems of economic development in areas of colonial Africa that experienced the rise of large European settler communities, using historical data from Angola. It is shown how the traditional labor & agricultural practices of the principal inhabitants of the central highlands region between 1890 & 1905 the Ovimbundu were dramatically altered after the Portuguese conquest of the area. The nature of the colonial state & the particular evolution of white settlements were crucial factors responsible for the growing divergence among crop producers. The impact of various colonial policies on agricultural development through 1950 is traced. Though the state's reliance on peasant production & support of the settler sector parallels the agricultural history of other African regions, policies soon arose in Angola to limit the potential of the majority of producers by forcing them into the category of forced laborers, in other areas, the growth & power of these peasant groups was supported. The agricultural success & status that the Ovimbundu had previously enjoyed were severely undermined, though they continued to serve the colonial economy as both producers & consumers. K. Hyatt

88T6096

Kennard, Douglas Bedell (Ohio State U, Columbus 43210). Adequacy of Public Services in Rural Jurisdictions as Perceived by Local Officials. Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1329-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8717660.

88T6097

Kloppenburg, Jack, Jr. & Kleinman, Daniel Lee, Seed Wars: Common Heritage, Private Property, and Political Strategy. Socialist Review, 1987, 17, 5(95), Sept-Oct, 7-41

¶ One of the emerging conflicts between the advanced capitalist nations & the Third World focuses on plant genetic resources in agriculture. Private seed industries extract genetic material from plants in Third World nations without recompense, & then sell plant seeds & breeds to Third World nations at monopoly prices. In fact, all but a few major food crops originated in Third World nations, & the appropriation of genetic sources has been part of capitalist agriculture from the beginning. The present world is one of striking genetic interdependence. Capitalist agriculture firms argue that naturally existing genetic material cannot be treated as a commodity or priced, but that seeds & cuttings derived from it can be. Third World nations claim property rights in their plant genetic material. Recognition of this extension of national sovereignty offers the best way out of the current impasse. 4 Figures. W. H. Stoddard

88T6098

Lovato, Eugene D. (Heller Graduate School Brandeis U, Waltham MA 02254). Rural Homing-A Search for a Fair and Equitable Solution: Housing Rehabilitation. Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1902

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8722506.

88T6099

Marshall, Harvey & Schwartz, Michael (Purdue U, West Lafayette IN 47907). Investment Dependency and the Agrarian Crisis in the Periphery. International Journal of Contemporary Sociology, 1987, 1, 2, Jan-Apr, 81-92

¶ It is hypothesized that declining per capita food production in peripheral nations is caused by their incorporation into the capitalist world economy. A model of how this occurs is proposed. Statistical data from 85 nations with market economies where per capita gross national product in 1977 was below $1,900 are used to test the model using multiple regression methods. Results reveal an association between demand for foreign exchange, agricultural export production, & agricultural modernization but no relationship of agricultural modernization to domestic food production. This finding disconfirms the assumption that improved productivity in export-oriented agriculture will eventually lead to improved productivity for domestic consumption as well. 3 Tables, 1 Figure. W. Stoddard

88T6100

Meffert, Peter Rudolf (Stanford U, CA 94305). The Population Rural Economy of the Kazakh Soviet Socialist Republic. Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1546-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8720417.

88T6101

Mmuya, Maximilian (U Missouri, Columbia 65211). Agricultural Policy Changes and the Nature and Character of the Postcolonial State in Tanzania: 1961-1983. Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1331-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8716713.

88T6102

Pongratz, Hans (Fakultät Pädagogik U Bundeswehr München, 8014 Neubiberg Federal Republic Germany). Bauern-am Rande der Gesellschaft? Eine theoretische und empirische Analyse zum gesellschaftlichen Bewusstsein von Bauern (Farmers-On the Margin of Society? A Theoretical and Empirical Analysis of the Social Consciousness of Farmers). Soziale Welt, 1987, 38, 4, 522-544 (GER)

¶ The consciousness of West German farmers of the social structure of their position in it is studied by means of interviews with Bavarian farmers (N = 40). Sociological explanations of the marginal position of farmers point to economic, political, social, & cultural dependencies, which constitute a relationship of internal colonization. The interview responses indicate that the political consciousness of farmers is determined by the conviction that their minority interests are neglected in industrial soci-

1200 urban sociology

18 urban sociology

88T6108

Cheung, Yuet-wah & Ng, Pedro Pak-tao (Dept Sociology Chinese U Hong Kong, Shatin New Territories). Small Towns, Great Responsibilities: Notes on the Role of "Small Towns" in China's Current Economic Development. U Human Organization 1987, 46, 2, summer, 171-177

Historically, Chinese Ru market towns served as economic middlemen between villages & Ur cities. In the first half of the twentieth century, market towns declined as the Ru economy weakened, & continued to degenerate after the establishment of the communist regime in 1949, because of the emphasis on grain production & the suppression of commercial activities. However, since the contract-responsibility system was implemented in 1979, small towns have become reservoirs of Ru surplus labor & population growth. Based on data collected in a field visit in June 1984 to a number of small towns in southern Jiangsu Province, it is reported that small towns are becoming centers of Ru industrialization, commercial activities, & cultural & recreational participation. While progress is being made, major problems hinder the development of these towns: eg, competition for raw materials & markets among Ru industries, shortage of high-caliber manpower in technology & management, & lavishness in community expenditure. 22 References. Modified AA

88T6109

Clarke, I. F., Systems and Cities, Patterns and Populations, Futures, 1987, 19, 5, Oct, 608-619

A review essay on books by Stephen M. Stigler, The History of Statistics (Belknap Press, 1986), Martin Bulmer, The Chicago School of Sociology (Chicago & London: U of Chicago Press, 1987), & Hugh Ferriss, The Metropolis of Tomorrow (London: Architectural Press, 1987 [1929], see listings in IRPS No. 43). Focus is on how the first statisticians & sociologists learned how to devise methods for the analysis & interpretation of the growing numbers that lived in the expanding cities of the new industrial nations. Modified HA

88T6110

Gruber, Kenneth J. & Shelton, Gladys G. (North Carolina A&T State U, Greensboro 27411). Assessment of Neighborhood Satisfaction by Residents of Three Housing Types, Social Indicators Research, 1987, 19, 3, Aug, 303-315

A highly influential but often underemphasized determinant of residential satisfaction is how residents perceive & feel about their neighborhoods. After identifying factors representing different aspects of neighborhoods, their relationship to neighborhood & overall housing assessments were investigated using data from interviews with 305 residents of 3 housing types: conventional homes, mobile homes, & apartments in low-/middle-income areas of 11 NC counties. Rs rated neighborhood attributes & expressed their level of satisfaction with each factor using Likert-type response scales. Results indicate that evaluations of neighborhood aspects were generally unrelated to housing satisfaction (except for apartment dwellers), but were moderately related to positive sentiments & satisfaction with the neighborhood. The influence of various neighborhood factors differed with housing type. However, since type of housing itself does not define a neighborhood, these differences need to be considered in the larger context of other neighborhood components, eg, economic & community characteristics typically associated with a specific structure type. 5 Tables, 15 References. Modified HA

88T6111

Hastanoglou, Vithleem, Hadjimichalis, Costis, Kalogirou, Nicos & Papanichos, Nicos (Dept Ur & Regional Planning School Architecture U Thessaloniki, GR-54006 Greece). Urbanisation, Crisis and Urban Policy in Greece, Antipode, 1987, 19, 2, Sept, 154-177

A discussion of urbanization patterns in Greece since the 1950s, & the role of state intervention in Ur planning. Since the late 1970s, urbanization has been characterized by productive decentralization toward intermediate regions, population growth in many small cities, increasing unemployment in large Ur centers, declining rates of building activities, & Ur diseconomies of scale. These patterns are the outcome of self-regulated mechanisms & ad-hoc intervention rather than of coherent Ur policy measures. Both rightist & socialist planning reforms are critically evaluated, & new forms of decision making are proposed. 4 Tables, 28 References. Modified AA

88T6112

Kim, Sung-Soon Clara (U Virginia, Charlottesville 22903), Dimensions of Social Integration: Solidarity and Deviance in American Cities, * Dissertation Abstracts International, 4, The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1321-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8715127.

88T6113

Kopl, Regina, Werkssiedlungen zwischen Mythos und Realität (Factory Settlements between Myth and Reality), Osterreichische Zeitschrift für Soziologie, 1987, 12, 3, 69-76 (GER)

The results of a study of social life & culture in 5 old single-factory towns in the vicinity of Vienna, Austria, based on interviews with lifelong residents (N = 30), are discussed. Rs' perceptions of the advantages & disadvantages of living & working within the same institution, where the company owns the housing & utilities, are described. The strategies developed for dealing with a rigid power distribution penetrating all aspects of life are noted. A culture of dependence is found to evolve in such situations. Results also indicate that (1) unusually strong cultural unity & togetherness have decreased dramatically with the advent of TV; (2) near unanimity in political culture is expressed, & (3) everyday solidarity is surprisingly limited to family members. Aspects of the social model of integrated working & living places that must be revised due to changing economic circumstances are detailed. 8 References. J. Anderson

88T6114

Laitko, Hubert (Institut Theorie/Geschichte und Organisation Wissenschaft Akademie Wissenschaften German Democratic Republic, Prenzlauer Promenade 149-152 1100 Berlin), Berlin-Stadt und Wissenschaft (Berlin City and Science), Deutsche Zeitschrift für Philosophie, 1987, 35, 7, 577-586 (GER)

A discussion of the 750-year history of the city of Berlin, Germany, focusing on questions of a general nature that are raised by this type of historical study. Emphasis is on the relationship between science & industry & their development, especially since the mid-nineteenth century. The conditions for scientific progress in a specific Ur environment are examined. C. Waters

88T6115

Maher, Timothy & Hans, Ain (Indiana U-Purdue U, Indianapolis 46202), Suburbanizing the City, U Sociological Focus, 1987, 20, 4, Oct, 281-294

A revised version of SA 32 1/84S16039/NC SA/1984/1072.

88T6116

Meyer, David R. & Min, Kyonghee (Brown U, Providence RI), City Employment Change in the Republic of Korea, 1960-1970, U Urban Affairs Quarterly, 1987, 22, 4, June, 598-616

Changes in the employment characteristics of Korean cities during the 1960s, a period of polarized development & rapid industrialization, are examined, using data from the 1%-sample tapes of the 1960 & 1970 population censuses. The expectation of modernization & world-system/dependency theorists that the national metropolis, Seoul, would increase its dominance in many key sectors is supported. Other cities, however, also grew rapidly, specialized in different economic sectors, & changed their economic structures. Polarized development, therefore, need not imply atrophy of noncore cities. It is suggested that more complex conceptualizations of systems of cities in developing nations are needed. 3 Tables, 49 References. Modified HA

88T6117

Murray, Oswyn (Balliol Coll, Oxford OX1 3BJ England), Cities of Reason, U Archives Européennes de Sociologie, 1987, 28, 2, 325-346

canadian ethnic studies études ethniques au canada

An interdisciplinary journal devoted to the study of ethnicity, immigration, inter-group relations and the history and cultural life of ethnic groups in Canada.

Une revue interdisciplinaire consacrée à l'étude de l'ethnicité, de l'immigration des relations entre groupes, et de l'histoire et de la vie culturelle collective au Canada.

SPECIAL ISSUES AVAILABLE/NUMEROS SPECIAUX EN VENTE

1978, Vol. X, no. 2	Ethnic Radicals
1981, Vol. XIII, no. 1	Ethnicity and Femininity
1982, Vol. XIV, no. 1	Ethnic Literature
1983, Vol. XV, no. 3	Ethnicity and Aging
1984, Vol. XVI, no. 3	Ethnic Art and Architecture
1985, Vol. XVII, no. 2	The Métis Past and Present
1986, Vol. XVIII, no. 2	Ethnicity in Quebec*

RECENT REGULAR ISSUES INCLUDE/NUMEROS REGULIERS RECENTS COMPRENNENT

1986, Vol. XVIII, no. 1	Ethnic migrations and Atlantic Canada: Geographical Perspectives by Graeme Wynn
1986, Vol. XVIII, no. 1	'Italian Canadian Women Writers Recall History' by Joseph Privato
1986, Vol. XVIII, no. 2	The Commission des écoles catholiques de Montréal and the Neo Canadian Question 1947-63 by Michael D. Behiels
1986, Vol. XVIII, no. 3	Ethnogenational Variation in Educational Achievement" by Anthony H. Richmond

$10.00 for individual issues *$12.00 for Ethnicity in Quebec/$10.00 pour un seul numéro, *$12.00 pour Le Pluralisme au Québec

For all issues prior to 1987 enquire at the Calgary journal address below/pour les numéros avant 1987 disponibles adressez vos demandes au bureau du journal à Calgary à l'adresse ci-dessous

Issues also include book and film reviews, opinions, immigrant memoirs translations of primary sources, books received, an index and annual bibliography

Chaque numéro comprend des recensions de livres et de films, des opinions, des mémoires d'immigrants, des traductions de sources primaires, livres reçus, et des bibliographies

Subscription rates/fras d'abonnement:

	One year/un an
Individuals/particuliers	$30.00
Students/étudiants	$12.00
Institutions/institutions	$36.00

Above rates include a quarterly newsletter and membership in the Canadian Ethnic Studies Association/Les frais comprennent les bulletins trimestriels et la qualité de membre de la Société d'études ethniques au Canada.

Articles for publication, books for review and general correspondence should be addressed to CANADIAN ETHNIC STUDIES, c/o The University of Calgary, 2500 University Drive N.W., Calgary, Alberta T2N 1N4 Canada. Single orders and back issues can be obtained from this address

Subscriber, orders and inquiries should be addressed to CANADIAN ETHNIC STUDIES ASSOCIATION, Institut québécois de recherche sur la culture, 290, Place d'Youville, Montréal, Québec, H2Y 2B6 Canada

Tous les articles, les recensions, et la correspondance générale doivent être adressés aux ETUDES ETHNIQUES AU CANADA, Université de Calgary, 2500 University Drive N.W., Calgary, Alberta T2N 1N4 Canada. Tout numéro courant et ancien de la revue peut être commandé à l'adresse ci-dessus

Pour les abonnements et les informations prière de vous adresser à la SOCIÉTÉ D'ETUDES ETHNIQUES AU CANADA, Institut québécois de recherche sur la culture, 290, d'Youville, Montréal, Québec, H2Y 2B6 Canada.

"suburban ideal." Comparisons are made to the European experience. Binford describes the transformation of Cambridge & Somerville, Mass. into fringe communities of Boston, in an era (pre-1850) when suburbanization was assumed to be nonexistent. Suburbanites' active role in developing new transportation links & residential patterns is chronicled. Lees compares urbanization in GB, France, Germany, & the US during the period 1820-1940, drawing primarily on a wide array of published literary works that expressed both pro- & anti-Ur attitudes. Rosen describes rebuilding efforts in the aftermath of the great fires in Chicago (Ill), Boston (Mass), & Baltimore (Md) in the late nineteenth & early twentieth centuries. Foglesong offers a narrative account & theoretical interpretation based on structural analysis of US city planning from the colonial period through the 1920s. K. Hyatt

88T6127

Whitt, J. Allen (U Louisville, KY 40292), Mozart in the Metropolis: The Arts Coalition and the Urban Growth Machine, Urban Affairs Quarterly, 1987, 23, 1, Sept, 15-36

* The performing arts are becoming an important part of the Ur growth machine, a development not yet recognized by social scientists. The arts are now a politically acceptable & useful Ur growth strategy because of ongoing changes in the nature of cities, in the nature of the economy, & in the nature of the arts themselves, & because of the recent rise of an elite sponsored political coalition devoted to advancing the strategy. Examples of the use of an arts-centered growth strategy in numerous US cities are presented, & the larger theoretical & practical implications of the phenomenon are explored. 64 References. HA

88T6128

Windsor, Duane (Jesse H Jones Graduate School Administration Rice U, Houston TX 77251), Comment on Whitt and Yago, "Corporate Strategies and the Decline of Transit in U. S. Cities", Urban Affairs Quarterly, 1987, 22, 4, June, 617-624. Response, 625-627.

* J. A. Whitt & G. Yago (see SA 34 1/86Q3780) applied a Marxist conceptual framework to explain the dominance of the automobile in US Ur transportation, arguing that balanced transportation never developed because consumer options & spatial densities were illegitimately manipulated by an auto-oil-rubber complex. On this basis, they criticized the conventional technology-efficiency hypothesis. A methodological & analytical critique is offered of this argument on the grounds that it (1) presumes that balanced transportation is feasible & desirable in the US simply because that is the case in Europe, (2) relies on unproven theoretical assumptions of class struggle & rational planning, (3) exhibits internal contradictions in comparing the US & European cases, & (4) is based on a question of political & economic legitimacy that cannot be resolved. In Response to Duane Windsor's Comment on "Corporate Strategies and the Decline of Transit in US Cities", Glenn Yago (State U of New York, Stony Brook) argues that empirical research, not an "antiquarian" Marxist framework, guided his & Whitt's analysis. Windsor's critique is based on serious misreadings & a focus on an "ideological straw man" that obscures the clear evidence presented for the political & economic dimensions of transportation planning that, in turn, affect Ur economic productivity & competitiveness. 26 References. K. Hyatt

The Social Context of Emotion

A special issue of the British Journal of Social Psychology, guest edited by Hugh I. Wagner.

Introduction — Hugh I. Wagner

The social form of feeling—Alan Radley

Constructing emotion. Weaving meaning from memories — Susan Kippax, June Crawford, Pam Benton, Una Gault & Jenny Noesjiran

Emotion/cognition interaction in personality development. A discrete emotions, functionalist analysis — Carol Z. Malatesta & Arnold Wilson

Emotion and social context: An American-German comparison — Shula Sommers & Corrine Kosmitzki

Sex differences in interpretation of angry and weeping episodes — Muriel Egerton

Impression management and self-deception. Response bias components of appraised emotional experience—Gordon L. Flett, Kirk R. Blankstem, Patricia Pliner & Carl Bator

Moods and compliance—Sandra Milberg & Margaret S. Clark

The special issue will be available as Part I of the British Journal of Social Psychology, volume 27 (1988). Subscription to volume 27 (ISSN 0144-6665), edited by Dr A. S. R. Manstead, is £49.50 (US$89.00).

In order to make it available to the widest possible audience, the special issue is available as a single part, for a limited period only (until June 1989) at a special price of £6.95 (US$11.95) for the single journal part.

Orders and subscriptions to:

The British Psychological Society

The Distribution Centre, Blackhorse Road, Ietehworth, Herts SG6 1HN, UK.

¶ After considering the problem of the historical observer, the rationality of the ancient Greek polis the organization of community members within the city-state is explored, & briefly compared to that of the US, GB, France, & Germany. Two traditions that have contributed to the debate are investigated (1) the Weberian approach, which focuses on how the Greeks established the rational principles of state organization & political discourse that continue to guide Western civilizations today, & (2) the Durkheimian approach, which emphasizes the holistic nature of Greek political activity & social interaction & the importance of religion & myth. The continual reformation of social & political structures within the polis is examined, along with how this affected various types of political discourse & their rationality. It is concluded that a holistic approach is essentially correct, however, political activity, rather than religion, was the central organizing principle in Greece & expressed the collective consciousness of the polis. 1 Appendix, 53 References. K. Hyatt

88T6118

Mutel, Jacques (52 ave des Minimes, F-94100 Vincennes France). Edo et Tôkyô: les continuités du pouvoir (Edo and Tokyo: The Continuities of Power). Archives Européennes de Sociologie, 1987, 28, 2, 192-216. (FRF)

¶ An attempt to analyze the character of the city of Tokyo, formerly called Edo, Japan. Although Tokyo is now the nation's capital, this is a relatively recent change in Japan's history, the center of culture & prestige was, & remains, Kyoto, the old capital. Tokyo was developed as a fortress, a place of safety & defense & a seat of power of the Shogun from the seventeenth century onward. The spatial arrangement of Tokyo, which is described as a labyrinth, & the characteristics of its different neighborhoods are discussed in relation to aspects of power. 2 Figures, 10 References. C. Waters

88T6119

Obern, Catheryn Cree (Cornell U, Ithaca NY 14853). Fiscal Stress in New York State Counties. Dissertation Abstracts International, 4, The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1111-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8715595.

88T6120

Rubin, Irene S. & Rubin, Herbert J. (Northern Illinois U, DeKalb 60115). Economic Development Incentives: The Poor (Cities) Pay More. Urban Affairs Quarterly, 1987, 23, 1, Sept, 37-62.

¶ After establishing a way of classifying economic development incentives, four different explanations of why cities differ in their willingness to provide such incentives to encourage business growth are examined. In order of explanatory power, these include: citizen need, administrative capacity, fiscal stress, & the process of growth. Specific types of cities are more willing to use some incentives than others. Underlying rules are suggested to explain why city officials make certain decisions about economic development issues. It is concluded that the symbolic value of the actions rather than their concrete consequences motivates much of local economic development activity. 5 Tables, 59 References. HA

88T6121

Saaty, Thomas L. (Graduate School Business U Pittsburgh, PA 15260). Absolute and Relative Measurement with the AHP: The Most Livable Cities in the United States. Socio-Economic Planning Sciences, 1986, 20, 6, 327-331.

¶ A discussion of two types of measurement involved in the analytic hierarchy process: absolute & relative. Applications of this process for comparing intangible attributes for which there are no agreed upon measures are described. Absolute measurement is used on standardized problems, whereas relative measurement is used in new learning situations. As an example, absolute measurement is applied to the Rand MacNally study (Boyer, R. & Savageau, D. Places Rated Almanac, Chicago: Rand MacNally, 1985), which ranks cities in the US according to livability. 3 Tables, 3 References. Modified HA

88T6122

Sadalla, Edward K., Vershure, Beth & Burroughs, Jeffrey (Environmental Psychology Doctoral Program Arizona State U, Tempe 85287). Identity Symbolism in Housing. Environment and Behavior, 1987, 19, 5, Sept, 569-587.

¶ A report on a study of UMC homeowners (N = 12) & the extent to which undergraduate U students (N = 99) were able to infer the homeowner's self-concept from photographs taken of the interior & exterior of each homeowner's dwelling. Homeowners were asked to rate themselves in a questionnaire containing an extensive set of bipolar personality & identity dimensions. The students then rated the homeowners the same set of personality & identity dimensions using color slides of home. Students were able to infer the homeowner's self-concept to a significant degree, with the most accurate assessment based on the interior photographs. 3 Tables, 23 References. Modified HA

88T6123

Schieffloe, Per Morten (Instit sociologi og samfunnskunnska Trondheim, N-7000 Norway). Mot nye paradigmer i bysosiologi (Toward New Paradigms in Urban Sociology?). Tidsskrift samfunnsforskning, 1987, 28, 5, 445-460. (NOR)

¶ The contemporary state of Ur studies, one of the oldest specialties in sociology, is discussed with regard to problems of study, level of analysis & theoretical approaches. Focus is on the so-called new paradigms, presented by M. Castells, D. Harvey, et al. It is concluded that today's sociology is so widespread with regard to its range of problems & theories that it can no longer be considered a single discipline. 1 Figure, 28 References. Modified HA

88T6124

Squires, Gregory D. & Velez, William (Sociology Dept U Wisconsin Milwaukee 53201). Insurance Redlining and the Transformation of Urban Metropolis. Urban Affairs Quarterly, 1987, 23, 1, S, 63-83.

¶ Financial institutions play a critical role in determining the viability of urban communities. As is the case with the geographic distribution of mortgage & business loans, insurance redlining constitutes a major force fueling the uneven development of metropolitan areas. Here, the red effects of insurance underwriting activity in a large midwestern metropolitan area are examined. In analyzing the distribution of homeowner insurance policies, a strong bias in favor of suburban & white neighborhoods & against inner-city & minority communities was found. The patterns reflect both discriminatory nonrational economic behavior on the part of insurers & the logic of rational market processes. Policy recommendations are offered to address the problems inner-city neighborhoods confront in efforts to secure adequate insurance & other financial resources. 1 Table, 1 Figure, 50 References. HA

88T6125

Strikwerda, Carl (U Kansas, Lawrence 66045). The City in History Revisited: New Overviews of European Urbanization. Journal of Urban History, 1987, 13, 4, Aug, 426-450.

¶ A review essay on books by Josef W. Konvitz, The Urban Millennium: The City-Building Process from the Early Middle Ages to the Present (Carbondale, Ill: Southern Illinois U Press, 1985), Paul M. Hohenburg & Lynn Hollen Lees, The Making of Urban Europe 1000-1950 (Cambridge, Mass: Harvard U Press, 1985), & Jan DeVries, European Urbanization, 1500-1800 (Cambridge, Mass: Harvard U Press, 1984 [see listings in IRPS No. 43]). Konvitz's work attempts to take stock of the vast array of monographic literature on European development since the Middle Ages. The books by Hohenburg & Lees & DeVries view Ur development within the context of social history, changing economies & shifting populations. Only the work by DeVries offers new primary research to support his interpretations. F. Rasmussen

88T6126

Tenford, Jon C. (Purdue U, West Lafayette IN 47907). Suburban City Building, and Capitalism. Urban Affairs Quarterly, 1987, 23, 4, June, 628-635.

¶ A review essay on books by Kenneth T. Jackson, Crabgrass Frontier: The Suburbanization of the United States (New York: Oxford U Press, 1985), Henry C. Binford, The First Suburbs: Residential Communities on the Boston Periphery, 1815-1860 (Chicago: U of Chicago Press, 1985), Andrew Lees, Cities Perceived: Urban Society in European American Thought, 1820-1940 (New York: Columbia U Press, 1986), Christine Meisner Rosen, The Limits of Power: Great Fires and the Process of City Growth in America (Cambridge, England: Cambridge U Press, 1986); & Richard E. Foglesong, Planning the Capitalist City: Colonial Era to the 1920s (Princeton, NJ: Princeton U Press, 1986 [see listings in IRPS No. 43]). These works demonstrate the continuing vitality & wide-ranging research interests of the subdiscipline of Ur history. Jackson examines factors responsible for the growth of suburbanization in the US during the nineteenth & twentieth centuries, including transportation, technology, architecture, government policy, & the rise of 1300 sociology of language and the arts

30 sociology of language/sociolinguistics

88T6129

Dorian, Nancy C. (Bryn Mawr Coll, PA 19010). The Value of Language-Maintenance Efforts Which Are Unlikely to Succeed. ♦ International Journal of the Sociology of Language, 1987, 68, 57-67

† Focusing on the case of the dying Scottish Gaelic dialect of East Sutherland & certain Irish examples, some of the obstacles that tend to hamper efforts to promote the survival of threatened langs are examined. It is suggested that although lang maintenance is often difficult & in some instances virtually impossible, as it appears to be with Sutherland Gaelic, there remain good reasons for undertaking promotion efforts. In particular a reversal of official attitudes regarding a stigmatized dialect & the resultant lessening of general hostility toward the minority culture may serve as a sort of compensation for the pain & ridicule endured by speakers of the dialect in question. Moreover, much self-awareness & self-confidence can be regained from the interest in ethnic history that grows out of the need for appropriate instruction materials. The modest success of efforts to preserve & revive Gaelic in Ireland can be attributed in large part to the fact that there is ample scholarship on the Celtic history of Ireland that is readily accessible to everyone. 15 References. P. Farrell

88T6130

Glinert, Lewis (School Oriental & African Studies U London, WC1E 7HU England). Hebrew-Yiddish Diglossia: Type and Stereotype Implications of the Language of Gansfried's Kitzur. ♦ International Journal of the Sociology of Language, 1987, 67, 39-55

* It is generally claimed that Hebrew & Yiddish shared a diglossic relationship in nineteenth-century Eastern Europe. A lexical analysis of the manual of Jewish religious practice, S. Gansfried's Kitzur Shulhan Arukh (Ungvar, 1854), indicates that Hebrew was actually used as a semi-colloquial written register in everyday life. This type of diglossia is unlike the standard colloquial spoken lang/formal written lang dichotomy generally described. The vocabulary of realia in the Kitzur is examined based on 56 sample sections. Terms for food, household furnishings, anatomy & medical terms, household implements, & animals are discussed. It is suggested that both Hebraists & Yiddishists have perpetuated an incorrect stereotype linked to Zionist theories of the Diaspora. 36 References. B. Annesser Murray

88T6131

Gorter, Durk (Fryske Academy, Doelestr 8 NL-8911 DX Ljouwert/Lecwarden Netherlands). Surveys of the Frisian Language Situation. Some Considerations of Research Methods on Language Maintenance and Language Shift. ♦ International Journal of the Sociology of Language, 1987, 68, 41-56

* A discussion of how certain problems encountered in a large survey of lang behavior & lang attitudes in Friesland (Gorter, D., et al. Tal yn Fryslân [Language in Friesland], Ljouwert: Fryske Akademy, 1984) bear on issues raised in Stanley Lieberman's study of sociolinguistic surveys (see SA 31:1/83M8113). Lieberman distinguishes four goals of sociolinguistic surveys: (1) description of the lang situation, (2) measurement of sociolinguistic change, (3) assessment of policy influences, & (4) examination of the social impact of lang. Each of these goals is elaborated on in a presentation of the approach used by Gorter et al to describe lang maintenance & lang shift in the context of Dutch-Frisian bilingualism. Some special problems of surveys in multilingual areas that Lieberman does not mention are considered, eg, the choice of lang during interviews, reported vs observed behavior, & lack of consistency in the answers of Rs. It is concluded that there are serious drawbacks with the standard interview schedule & results obtained with it need to be interpreted with care. 2 Tables, 33 References. P. Farrell

88T6132

Harris, R. (Worcester Coll U Oxford, OX1 2HB England). Mentioning the Unmentionable. International Journal of Moral and Social Studies, 1987, 2, 3, autumn, 175-188

† Characteristic of Western culture is a prohibition not merely on the use of swearwords but on their mention. Neither the Greco-Roman nor the Judaico-Christian view of swearing appears fully to explain these attitudes. Three case studies of recent events in GB illuminate some aspects of the problem. Several traditional explanations are reviewed & found unsatisfactory. The anthropological view of swearing as a degenerate form of cursing is contrasted to an alternate view of swearing as primary & cursing as derivative. An examination of the use of sign lang by apes supports the primacy of swearing & its origin in a process of semiotic displacement. 9 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T6133

Klarberg, Manfred (Footscray Instit Technology, Victoria 3011 Australia). Aaron ben Samuel and His 'Lovely Prayerbook' Revisited. ♦ International Journal of the Sociology of Language, 1987, 67, 27-37

† During the late Middle Ages, German-Jewish communities developed Hebrew & Yiddish into a close-knit diglossic pair. The following centuries saw Yiddish encroach on the functions of Hebrew so that even tkhines (private supplicatory prayers) were widely published in Yiddish. In 1709 Aaron ben Samuel of Hergershausen published Tiblikhe ifile oder kreffte artsnay far guf un neshome (Lovely Prayerbook or Strong Healing for Body and Soul) in Yiddish, addressing the religious goals of education, children's understanding of prayers, & rabbis who are unconcerned with the issue. Some of the tkhines are original, others translations from Hebrew prayers or *Psalm*s. In 1846 L. Stein reported that the book had been "put under a rabbinical ban" & that as a result thousands of copies, found some 20 years previously, had been buried. Other literary histories & research works reported Stein's story. Max Weinreich called for evidence of the ban. Early eighteenth-century evidence is reviewed. Subsequently, during the friction between Orthodox & Reform, it was assumed that this pro-vernacular writer could not be tolerated even at the earlier age; this may have caused the story of the ban to come into being. 46 References. Modified AA

88T6134

Knappert, Jan (40 Fitzjohn Ave, Barnet Herts EN5 2HW England). The Bantu Languages: An Appraisal. U Archives Europeennes de Sociologie, 1987, 2, 177-191

† Two popular, though competing, classifications of the Bantu langs (see Guthrie, Malcolm, "Bantu Origins: A Tentative New Hypothesis," Journal of African Languages, 1962, 1, 11, & Greenberg, Joseph, "Studies in African Linguistic Classification," Southwestern Journal of Anthropology, 1949, V, special issue) are criticized on the basis that they violate one or both of two major rules of comparative linguistics: (1) sound laws suffer no exception, & (2) classification of comparable items must be based on simple criteria that every member of the category must possess. A more rigorous classification is presented that reveals the linguistic details of the structural mutations that occurred in the eastern subfamily of Bantu langs. This reanalysis poses radical implications for what is currently accepted as the history of expansion & migration in East Africa. 1 Map, 11 References. K. Hyatt

88T6135

Landau, Jacob M. (Hebrew U Jerusalem Mount Scopus 91905 Israel). Hebrew and Arabic in the State of Israel: Political Aspects of the Language Issue. ♦ International Journal of the Sociology of Language, 1987, 67, 117-133

† Lang relationships in the State of Israel, although not an immediate source of tension between Jews & Arabs, are a potential cause of interethnic friction. Both classical Hebrew & Literary Arabic were dead langs, revived by the respective nationalist movements; the conflict of two nationalisms over a small area was accompanied by lang rivalry, eg, Arabic was spoken in dialect, whereas Hebrew had to be resuscitated for daily use. In Israel, both langs are official & employed in the courts, parliament, & government publications, although Hebrew has a somewhat preferential status in the state's economy, due to the preponderance of the Jewish majority. In schools, the lang of instruction is Hebrew or Arabic for Jews & Arabs, respectively, although the former is a compulsory second lang in Arab schools, whereas the latter is optional in Jewish ones. U teaching is conducted exclusively in Hebrew. The situation has given

ANNOUNCING: Journal of Neurolinguistics

Articles in the FIRST ISSUE are.

- | | |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------|
| ● Editorial Statement | Fred C. C. Peng |
| ● What is Neurolinguistics? | Fred C. C. Peng |
| ● Frontal Lobes and the Microgenesis of Action | Jason W. Brown |
| ● Clinical Evidence for the Concept of Levels in Action and Perception | Jason W. Brown |
| ● Imagery and the Microstructure of Perception | Jason W. Brown |
| ● A Study on Handedness and Cerebral Speech Dominance in Right-handed Chinese | Ching-Chang Hung |
| | Yong Kwang Tu |
| | Sing Hong Chen |
| | Rong-Chin Chen |
| | Donna Piazza Gordon |
| ● The Influence of Sex and Handedness on the Development of Lateralization of Nonlinguistic Auditory Processing | |
| ● The Influence of Sex and Handedness on the Development of Lateralization of Speech Processing | Donna Piazza Gordon |
| ● Semantic Locked in Dysphasia: Relatively Preserved Reading and Writing in a Case of Global Dysphasia | C. Y. Huang |
| | W. K. Lau |
| ● Review Article | |
| Readings on Aphasia in Bilinguals and Polyglots. | Fred C. C. Peng |
| Edited by Michel Paradis | |

Language Sciences Publisher: Fred C. C. Peng, Ph.D.
Editor

SUBSCRIPTION ORDER FORM

Annual subscription rate for Journal of Neurolinguistics is US$ 18.00 / ¥4,000 / NT$700.00. Surface postage is included in all rates. Prepayment is required for all orders.

Please enter my subscription beginning with the first issue of Journal of Neurolinguistics.

Name: _____

Address: _____

Please send check made payable to Language Sciences Publisher, International Christian University, 10-2, 3-chome, Osawa, Mitaka, Tokyo 181, JAPAN.

88T6144

Wexler, Paul (Tel-Aviv U, Ramat-Aviv 69978 Israel). Interdialectal Translation as a Reflection of Lexical Obsolescence and Dialect Distance: The West Yiddish Bible Translation of 1679 in the Biblia pentapla (1711). ♦ International Journal of the Sociology of Language, 1987, 67, 7-26.

* Translation or adaptation of texts between two related dialects or langs provides a good source of information about lexical obsolescence. A late seventeenth-century West Yiddish Bible translation is examined in the context of the information it provides about lexical obsolescence in German, & the gap between German Yiddish & German. The treatment of Romance & Hebrew components, as well as of native Yiddish elements, is compared. It is suggested that many of the lexical differences between the lexicons of German Yiddish & German are derived from differences arising at the early stages of contact between the langs. In fact, there are more innovative terms in German Yiddish than in German in these texts, & more obsolete or archaic terms in the German text. 81 References. B. Annesser Murray.

31 sociology of art (creative & performing)

88T6145

Erd, Rainer (Institut Sozialforschung, Senckenberganlage 26 D-6000 Frankfurt am Main 1 Federal Republic Germany). Kunst als Arbeit. Organisationsprobleme eines Opernorchesters (Art as Work. Organizational Problems of an Opera Orchestra). Soziale Welt, 1987, 38, 4, 437-459. (GER)

* The daily activity & organizational structure of an opera orchestra in Frankfurt, West Germany, is studied to provide insight into the contradictions inherent in an activity bearing the characteristics of both dependent labor & art. Formalized organizational rules, particularly labor contracts, are analyzed for different instrumental groups, revealing different interactional & salary structures for strings, on the one hand, & woodwinds & brass, on the other. The social & musical status of individual instruments is discussed, as are sources of conflict among musicians & between musicians & director. Because most musicians' activity is repetitive & allows for little creativity, the orchestra is shown to have evolved a hierarchical structure similar to many industries, allowing only a minority of performers to fulfill their dreams of creative work. Modified HA.

88T6146

Gilmore, Samuel (School Social Sciences U California, Irvine 92717). Coordination and Convention: The Organization of the Concert World. Symbolic Interaction, 1987, 10, 2, fall, 209-227.

* Collaborative work organized through an alternative framework i.e. the "social world" is examined, using the example of the concert world, where the interdependent activities of composition & performance are routinely coordinated to produce concerts. Using data from interviews with composers, performers, & support personnel (N = 97) & demographic data from published & unpublished sources, coordination of these activities through musical conventions, which act as an alternative to administrative processes of formal organization, is described. The use of conventions vary in the concert world depending on the organizational characteristics of concert collaboration & the aesthetic interests of participants. A model is developed to assess coordination problems in social worlds & is then applied to collaboration in repertory, academic, & avant garde concert activities. 1 Table, 41 References. Modified HA.

88T6147

Lurie, Jeffrey Robert (Heller Graduate School Brandeis U, Waltham MA 02254). Image and Ideology: The Evolution of the U.S. Motion Picture Industry and Its Modern Depiction of Women. ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International. A. The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1905-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8722484.

88T6148

Maffesoli, Michel (U Paris V, F-75230 Cedex 05 France). Das ästhetische Paradigma. Soziologie als Kunst (The Aesthetic Paradigm. Sociology as Art). Soziale Welt, 1987, 38, 4, 460-470. (GER)

Translated by Reiner Keller.

* An aesthetic sociology is argued for, based on Georg Simmel's cognitive category of "form." The methodology for such a sociology would rest on reflective essays, allegorical procedures, intuition, & empathy. The advantages of an aesthetic sociology are seen in understanding affective interaction processes in everyday social life as individualism & the political dimension of social life decline. The splintering of society into small groups, or "microscopic sociality," makes necessary the development of an intersubjective aesthetic for perceiving the processes of communication, sympathy, identification, & association, which increasingly structure society. Modified HA.

88T6149

Yudken, Joel Samuel (Stanford U, CA 94305). The Viability of Craft in Advanced Industrial Society: Case Study of the Contemporary Crafts Movement in the United States (Volumes I & II). ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International. A. The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1900-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8723129.

88T6150

----, Tampering with Tradition. ♦ UM Society, 1987, 24, 4(168), May-June, 4-23.

¶ Seven commentaries are offered on issues surrounding the computerized colorization of older black & white film classics. In Inglorious Color, Bernard Beck (Dept of Sociology, Northwestern U, Chicago, Ill) summarizes the debate between colorization advocates & opponents & provides a brief history of other forms of film alteration that have been accepted so long as they did not destroy the original nor prevent its appreciation. Colorization claims to follow this tradition. It is argued, however, that the process, based on purely commercial considerations, threatens the survival of art, its value as a model of human work motivated by personal integrity, & its right to be defined in a way that includes its personal meaningfulness. In Film Technology's Latest Frankenstein, Arthur Asa Berger (San Francisco State U, Calif) addresses some ethical & political issues involved in the colorization debate, with focus on the concepts of authenticity & progress. It is argued that a film, once having been decreed to be in its final form by a director, should be left alone. Colorization, misinformed by the technological imperative to effect change if it is possible in the name of progress, represents a violation of the director's rights & is a regressive, not progressive, act. In Blue Money, George Lipsitz (U of Minnesota, Minneapolis) argues that the colorization debate deals not only with aesthetic or archival concerns, but with the nature of mass popular discourse & its relation to the uses & abuses of knowledge. The process symbolizes the crisis of intellectual work in the late twentieth century, demonstrating the shabbiness that technology can bring to objects of art. However, the colorization debate can inspire increased intellectual awareness of "the gap between technology's promises & its performance" & the conflict between criticism/reflection & marketing. In Show and Sell, Dorothy Nelkin (Dept of Sociology, Cornell U, Ithaca, NY) examines colorization as an example of the extent to which marketplace motives, enhanced by technological possibilities, have been used to further the breakdown between reality & its representation, threatening notions about the validity of experience. In Colorization and Authenticity, Michael Schudson (Dept of Communication, U of California San Diego, La Jolla) questions whether colorization actually threatens the authenticity of art, & compares the process to Shakespearean plays being performed in modern language & dress, baroque music being played on the piano instead of the harpsichord, & the restoration of paintings by old masters. The value of colorization in popularizing works that might otherwise be ignored is supported. In Legal Shadings, William S. Strong explores some legal issues surrounding colorization & their implications. Current copyright law is reviewed, & shown to offer little protection to film directors. In Green and Other Colors, Robert N. Wilson (Dept of Sociology, U of North Carolina, Chapel Hill) offers historical examples of other forms of artistic alteration, with focus on literary works. It is argued that black & white films satisfy nostalgic yearnings & verify memories important to viewers' sense of self. In addition, black & white images, though artificial in the sense that the "real" world appears in color, can effectively heighten emotional & aesthetic responsiveness. K. Hyatt.

rise to complaints by Arab radicals in Israel about asymmetrical bilingualism, chiefly in the cultural domain. Some Arabs tend to turn the issue into a political one, in the context of a society apparently reluctant to accept ethnolinguistic diversity wholeheartedly. 69 References. AA

88T6136

Loveday, Leo John (Dept English Doshisha U, Kyoto 602 Japan). Explorations in Japanese Sociolinguistics, Pragmatics and Beyond. 1986, 7, 1, 1-153

¶ An introductory survey of Japanese sociolinguistics, dealing mainly with research available in English, focusing on the various Japan-related speech communities, linguistic reflections of social organization (eg, honorifics & terms of address), aspects of social variation regarding standard/regional varieties, markers of gender, age, & group identity, language attitudes in Japanese society, lang planning, & Japanese contact with other languages, including the expansion of Anglo-Japanese, Japanese-based pidgins, Japanese overseas communities, & cross-cultural communication. Further research areas & methodological/theoretical issues attached to Japanese-produced sociolinguistics are suggested. 6 Tables, 4 Figures, 4 Diagrams, 1 Appendix, 284 References. AA

88T6137

Martinez, Marco Antonio (3800 North Lakeshore Dr, Chicago IL 60613). Dialogues among Children and between Children and Their Mothers, W Child Development 1987, 58, 4, Aug, 1035-1043

¶ Children's conversational styles in dialogues with mothers & with peers are compared, based on analysis of videotaped conversations of 20 Spanish-speaking children aged 2 or 4, with their mothers & with each other. In conversation with their mothers, children of both ages were asymmetrically regulated by the mother, mainly through maternal use of "turnabouts" (conversation devices that clearly extend dialogue by securing a response from the child). In conversation with peers, they regulated each other symmetrically by employing strategies previously used by their mothers. Results support L. S. Vygotsky's hypothesis that children's skills in following regulation by others & in regulating of others emerge within the social context of conversations ("The Genesis of Higher Mental Functions" in The Concept of Activity in Soviet Psychology, Wertsch, J. V. [Ed], New York: Cambridge U Press, 1981, 144-240). 3 Tables, 28 References. Modified HA

88T6138

Moskovich, Wolf (Hebrew U Jerusalem, Mount Scopus 91905 Israel). Demographic and Institutional Indicators of Yiddish Language Maintenance in the Soviet Union, 1959-1986, W International Journal of the Sociology of Language, 1987, 67, 135-144

¶ Official Soviet figures indicate that the number of Jews in the USSR, & the number of Yiddish speakers among that population, are decreasing. Besides emigration, population decrease is attributable to low birth-rates & a high proportion of mixed marriages where the children are not considered to be Jewish. A rapid decline in the number of Jews declaring Yiddish as their native lang is noted since the 1950s, with a somewhat corresponding increase in the number claiming Russian as a native lang. The highest % of Yiddish speakers is found among persons age 60+. Regional efforts to maintain & revive Yiddish lang use are described. It is projected that although Yiddish will be maintained in the USSR for at least several generations, it will remain largely a second lang, within an increasingly small circle. 7 Tables, 12 References. B. Annesser Murray

88T6139

Nash, Jeffrey E. (Macalester Coll, Saint Paul MN 55105). Policy and Practice in the American Sign Language Community, W International Journal of the Sociology of Language, 1987, 68, 7-22

¶ Drawing on a brief review of the literature, lang policy in deaf education is described & an explanation is offered for the resilience of American Sign Language (ASL). It is suggested that the social functions performed by signs are not affected by educational policies, which have strongly supported replacement. ASL remains an important cohesive factor in the sign community because it offers deaf people a symbolic ethnic identity. In spite of & perhaps because of oppression, ASL has been maintained. If it were to become an official lang of instruction, its power as a marker of distinctive social identity might diminish. 3 Tables, 30 References. P. Farrell

88T6140

Parsons, Arthur S. (Dept Sociology & Anthropology Smith C Northampton MA 01063). The Conventions of the Senses: The Linguistic and Phenomenological Contributions to a Theory of Culture, Human Studies, 1988, 11, 1, Jan, 3-41.

¶ Structural linguistics & phenomenology demonstrate that culture is an experiential as well as conventional basis, & that symbolic cognition is a perceptual activity. Yet, this knowledge is not only obscured but denied in all cultures that bifurcate consciousness & experience, as do modern, scientifically grounded ones. The crisis in Western science, as cussed by Edmund Husserl, owes much to the failure of science to appreciate the cultural constructedness & symbolic ground of this bifurcation. In addition, even the chronic "crisis of legitimation" that confronts highly modern states "abstract societies" derives from the formalization/rationalization in social organization that this bifurcation makes feasible if not necessary. 49 References. Modified AA

88T6141

Peltz, Rakhmiel (Columbia U, New York NY 10027). Who's Speaking Yiddish in South Philadelphia Today? Jewish Language in Ur America, W International Journal of the Sociology of Language, 1987, 67, 145-166

¶ Discussion of the history & present status of Yiddish use in a South Philadelphia (Pa) Jewish neighborhood, based on personal histories obtained from several residents, & interviews with 30 Ss aged 60+, all understood Yiddish, & most could speak it at least to some degree. Analysis indicates that most Ss feel that Yiddish constitutes an important element in their lives. Residents of this neighborhood have a positive attitude toward Yiddish, although the connection has not for the most part been maintained by their children or other second- & third-general immigrants. In general, Yiddish is a lang of intimate personal contact, being no longer widely used in social contexts such as the synagogue social club. 54 References. B. Annesser Murray

88T6142

Prince, Ellen F. (U Pennsylvania, Philadelphia 19104). Sarah Gou Yiddish Folksinger: A Case Study of Dialect Shift, W International Journal of the Sociology of Language, 1987, 67, 83-116

¶ A longitudinal case study of stylistic variations in a single individual is reported, focusing on distribution of & change over time in 5 variables in the singing of the professional Yiddish folksinger Sarah Gou by over a period of 40 years. Variables are found to have 2 variants, the singer's original regional dialect & the other Standard Yiddish. 140 renditions of about 100 songs are examined in order to test the hypothesis that social factors have led gradually to elimination of dialect features in favor of standard Yiddish features. In Gou's singing is shown that attrition of the stigmatized dialect features occurs despite the singer's avowed intention of maintaining those features, suggesting a deep level influence of the social factor. Further, target variants appear to be chosen based on the degree of stigmatization of the particular variant. 1 Table, 2 Appendixes, 35 References. B. Annesser Murray

88T6143

Schaechter, Mordkhe (Columbia U, New York NY 10027). Yiddish Botanical Terminology: A Mirror of Changing Geographic, Social, & Cultural Conditions, W International Journal of the Sociology of Language, 1987, 67, 57-82

¶ The growth & historical development of Yiddish botanical terminology is attested in Yiddish Bible & Talmud translations in thirteenth-century manuscripts, fifteenth- & sixteenth-century books on popular medicine, nineteenth-century dictionaries, & modern Yiddish literature. A wealth of botanical terminology is found from an unexpected source, the lang of Yiddish-speaking farmers, agronomists, orchard-keepers, & foresters: "the Old Country" (ie, Ukraine, Crimea, Bessarabia, Byelorussia, Galicia, Carpatho-Ukraine) & Birobidzhan, Argentina, the US, & Canada. Yiddish plant names are shown to be an integral part of Yiddish idiom, proverbs, & popular similes. The historical development of Yiddish botanical terminology is traced from its ninth- & tenth-century beginnings through the emigration waves & social changes down to twentieth-century colonization in Argentina & the USSR. The conscious expansion of Yiddish botanical terminology in the nineteenth & twentieth centuries has taken place mainly by (1) compilers of bilingual dictionaries, (2) prose writers & poets, (3) translators, (4) compilers/authors of Yiddish handbooks of gardening & agriculture, & (5) Yiddish day-school teachers & authors of textbooks in the natural sciences. 96 References. Modified AA

1400 sociology of education

32 sociology of education

88T6156

Adler, Peter & Adler, Patricia A. (c/o Adler, Patricia Dept Sociology U Colorado, Boulder 80309-0327). Role Conflict and Identity Salience: College Athletics and the Academic Role. The Social Science Journal, 1987, 24, 4, Oct, 443-455

† Identity theorists have proposed several variables as influencing the salience of an individual's roles. Based on four years of participant observation with a major Coll basketball team, the changing salience of athletic, athletic, social, & especially academic roles is examined. Their experiences with role conflict & socialization affirm previously proposed variables & suggest additional ones. AA

88T6157

Altbach, Philip G. (State U New York Buffalo, Amherst 14260). 'A Nation at Risk': The Educational Reform Debate in the United States. UM Prospects, 1986, 16, 3, 337-347

† Current debates about the reform of education in the US have been stimulated by problems that society has perceived in the educational system, particularly a decline in academic standards. Various key reports on educational reform that deal with standards of education, the reform of teacher education, the relationship of education to work in the US, & curricular change are summarized & analyzed. It is noted that the reports tend to be ahistorical & that the manifold functions of the US educational enterprise preclude a single focus on improved standards. It is noted that the current problems of US education must be seen in the context of the multiple demands on education & the legacy of the 1960s, when the stress was on equality & access rather than on academic standards. AA

88T6158

Anderson, Donald S. (Dept Sociology Research School Social Science Australian National U, Canberra ACT 2601). Youth Attitudes and the Planning of Secondary Schools. UM Prospects, 1987, 17, 1(61), 49-61.

† Education has become an instrument of youth policy as labor markets remain refractory to young people & governments seek to defer entry to the LF by raising retention rates in secondary schools. It is argued that, in designing structures for the schooling of these additional young people, planners need to take account of the differing needs of the inhabitants of four levels in the hierarchy of the education system: the top policy advisers, the system managers, the teachers, & the students. Examples are used to show how those at each level perceive a different reality: (1) students, who see things largely in terms of their needs for adult identity; (2) teachers, whose work conditions dictate that they view maintenance of order as a prior consideration to effective teaching, & whose judgments about pupils' capacities tend to vary with their discipline; (3) managers, who see the solution as shifting resources around within existing organizational structures, & (4) policy advisers, who are inclined to translate national priorities into practice by changing academic structures. 12 References. Modified AA

88T6159

Baker, David & Lenhardt, Gero (c/o Lenhardt Max-Planck-Institut Bildungsforschung, Lentzeallee 94 D-1000 Berlin 33 Federal Republic Germany). Ausländerintegration, Schule und Staat (Ethnic Integration, School and the State). Kolner Zeitschrift für Soziologie und Sozialpsychologie, 1988, 40, 1, Mar, 40-61. (JER)

† Analyses of statistical data concerning West German secondary school students examines status allocation for German-born & foreign born children. The following correlations are revealed: an increase in the % of immigrant children results in more upward mobility for German children, while a decrease in the % of German children results in more upward mobility for foreign children. A discussion of these data & of the political development in the education system concludes that ethnic barriers are hardly significant in West German schools. Educational career chances are common to both German & immigrant children. 3 Tables, 48 References. Modified HA

88T6160

Bayer, Alan E. (Dept Sociology Virginia Polytechnic Instit & State U, Blacksburg 24061). The "Biglan Model" and the Smart Messenger: A Case Study of Eponym Diffusion. UM Research in Higher Education, 1987, 26, 2, 212-223

† The "Biglan model," a classification system arraying academic fields & disciplines into eight cells (Biglan, A., "The Characteristics of Subject Matter in Different Academic Areas," Journal of Applied Psychology, 1973, 57, 3, 195-203), is frequently cited & has become a generally accepted new eponym in the field of higher education. Over time, the eponym may be taking on new, more theoretical, meaning. As this eponym becomes further diffused throughout the literature, there are signs that citations to John Smart (also sometimes credited with the eponym) may diminish, along with obliteration of the formal citation of Biglan. The disappearance of citations is not atypical, nor is it a violation of normal scholarly practices, but, in fact, it undermines the veracity of typical bibliometric studies of intellectual influence structures. 3 Tables, 35 References. Modified HA

88T6161

Berg, Charles (Hauds 13a, I-9644 Dahl Luxembourg). Die Interne Ökonomie des Unterrichts (The Inner Economy of the Classroom). Zeitschrift für Pädagogik, 1987, 33, 4, Aug, 523-538. (GER)

† An instructional paradigm is proposed for the classroom based on the theories of generalized interaction media of Talcott Parsons & Niklas Luhmann, & on the circular flow model of economic exchange. The bearings of this paradigm on educational research & teaching practice are discussed. 3 Figures, 52 References. Modified HA

88T6162

Boguszak, Marek (Instit Philosophy & Sociology Czechoslovak Academy Sciences, Jilska I CS-110 00 Prague). Vzdělanostní struktura ČSSR v letech 1960-1980 a varianty jejího dalšího vývoje (Czechoslovakia's Educational Structure in 1960-1980 and Variants of Its Future Development). Sociologický časopis, 1987, 23, 6, 588-615. (CZE)

† An analysis of the development of educational institutions in Czechoslovakia from 1960 as projected through 2010. For the future it appears likely that the number of persons receiving secondary & higher education will cease to grow, altering the generational profile of education. Basic education will lose its dominance to secondary vocational education, & the Czech & Slovak Republics will be homogenized educationally. All of these characteristics reflect a continuation of past social trends affecting education. The key problem is to choose a general strategy for development of education for the future. 7 Tables, 7 Figures, 17 References. Modified HA

88T6163

Borman, Kathryn M. & Kurdek, Lawrence A. (Coll Education U Cincinnati, OH 45221). Gender Differences Associated with Playing High School Varsity Soccer. Journal of Youth and Adolescence, 1987, 16, 4, Aug, 379-400

† To assess school, grade, & gender differences in high school soccer involvement, & to examine patterns of relations between soccer involvement/knowledge & school climate, participants' dimensions of empathy & occupational interests, & perceived parental childrearing practices, questionnaires were administered to 65 students from 2 high schools - 1 with a long history of soccer success, & 1 with a spotty soccer record. Results indicate that participation in the same highly competitive interscholastic varsity sport does not have the same meaning for girls & boys. The pattern of these meanings is discussed. 2 Tables, 27 References. F. Rasmussen

88T6164

Brown, Stephen I. (State U New York, Buffalo 14214). "Fostering" Excellence: Toward a Noncybernetic View of Mind and Education. UM Urban Education, 1987, 22, 1, Apr, 115-125.

75 sociology of literature

88T6151

Berri, Kenneth Robert (U California, Berkeley 94720). Diré la création: Métamorphoses of the Figure in Diderot's Salons. * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences. 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1332-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8717901.

88T6152

Bochner, Jay (Etudes anglaises U Montreal, Quebec H3C 3J7). City Life and the Literary Function of the Psychoanalyst. Literature and Psychology. 1987, 33, 2, 41-66

† An examination of the psychoanalyst as a structural feature in contemporary works of fiction. This personage does not play a major role, but rather, foreshadows or suggests that events will take place in a certain manner, & that the hero must follow a certain path. Aspects such as the analyst's secrecy & power, his relationship to life, his role as stand-in for the hero's family, & the very details of his office all contribute to the basic structure of the narratives. The analyst is an important guide through the cities & fantasies of urbanized heroes, & may play one or both of two major roles, termed Sphinx & Minotaur; these figures command the hero's participation in the city as a sane community, or as a fearful yet potentially liberating labyrinth. Modified AA

88T6153

Fuchs, Wolfgang W. (Towson State U, Baltimore MD 21204). Deconstruction as Literary Theory: Political Implications. ♦ Quarterly Journal of Ideology. 1987, 11, 1, Jan, 13-20

† An investigation of the conventional wisdom that deconstruction as literary theory is destructive of dominant literary & cultural values & that it has a necessarily subversive political dimension. Based on a review of the development of North American literary criticism to the present, including the recent influence of Jacques Derrida, deconstruction is shown to become intelligible as a postmodern, semiotic, poststructuralist enterprise. It is concluded that although deconstruction involves a politics of culture that breaks with conventional views, there is nothing politically subversive generated by such a stance. 7 References. AA

88T6154

Gornick, Lisa K. (Dept Psychology New York Hospital-Medical Center, 21 Bloomingdale Rd White Plains NY 10605). Freud and the Creative Writer. Psychoanalysis and Contemporary Thought. 1987, 10, 1, 103-127

† A contribution to the current debate concerning whether the epistemological bases of psychoanalysis lie in the humanities or the natural sciences, through an exploration of Sigmund Freud's own ambivalence toward the arts & sciences. This conflict is best revealed in his writings on the nature of writing, writers, & the creative imagination. Various psychobiographical sources are drawn on to document Freud's early literary interests & talents & explore some reasons why he came to sublimate in his pursuit of the rigors of science. It is shown that Freud demonstrated a strong proclivity toward identifying himself as a 'doppelgänger' (double) of some creative writers & their characters. It is posited that this served both defensive & narcissistic ends. Freudian application of psychoanalysis to literary works is chronicled, & revealing his assessment of creative artists as neurotic are explored. It is concluded that in the development of psychoanalysis, particularly his emphasis on the unconscious, Freud was able to unite the exploration of imagination & the intellect in a unique way. 35 References. K

88T6155

Herrmann, Ulrich (Institut Erziehungswissenschaft U Tübingen 7400 1 Federal Republic Germany). Biographische Konstruktion und das gelebte Leben. Prolegomena zu einer Biographie- und Lebenslauforschung in pädagogischer Absicht (Biographical Construction and the Experience of Life Cycle: Introductory Remarks on Pedagogically Oriented Research on Biography and Autobiography Reconstruction). Zeitschrift für Pädagogik. 1987, 33, 3, 303-323. (G-ER)

† On what type of constructional framework must autobiographical narratives be based to reveal experiences that allow for pedagogical analysis? Reconstruction of four biographical texts provides a basis for analyzing the form in which questions of cause & effect, of living conditions & chains of action, & of meaning in life & unpredictable coincidences are presented & interpreted as to their significance for the development of identity. Literary ideal types are examined to show that only a reflexive reconstructive autobiography can be informative regarding educational theory & pedagogical interpretation. 64 References. MH

Document Delivery Service

The costs of reproduction are: US $0.25 per reproduced page. Orders must be PREPAID (unprepaid orders cannot be acknowledged or returned) and sent to SOCIOLOGICAL ABSTRACTS, INC. (P.O. Box 22206, San Diego, CA 92122, USA) together with the SA accession number and the complete citation of the document to be reproduced. To calculate price per document, multiply the number of pages as indicated in the citation of the abstract by US $0.25 and add a US $1.50 search fee per document. POSTAGE is EXTRA. Below is a table for postage fees that vary by weight/size of paper.

No. of Pages	US & Canada Postage Fee	All Other Countries		Surface
		Postage Fee	Air Mail
1-5	$0.39	US $1.40		US $1.00
6-10	$0.73	$2.24		$1.90
11-15	$1.07	$2.78		$2.30
16-20	$1.41	$3.32		$2.75
21+	Additional multiples as above

CONFERENCE papers are available ONLY when the following notation precedes the text of the abstract: © "Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search and postage. Length: pp." For copies of paper without this notation, write directly to the author, whose address is listed in the citation.

88T6174

Jagellstam, Lars (U. Linköping, S-581 Sweden). Technology and Social Change in Linköping, Science and Public Policy (SPP), 1987, 14, 5, Oct., 297-298

* A description of the background & activities of a new type of department, organized around a theme at the U. of Linköping, Sweden. Each theme area consists of around 10 faculty members & 20-25 graduate students. Themes presently in existence are health & society, communications, technology & social change, & water in environment & society, with a fifth theme, children, to be added. Students with varied backgrounds are encouraged to apply to the theme program. Although the interdisciplinary approach creates some problems, results have been rewarding. 2 References. F. Rasmussen

88T6175

Klerman, Lorraine V., Weitzman, Michael, Alpert, Joel J., Lamb, George A., Kayne, Herbert, Geromini, Karen Roth, Rose, Lynda & Cohen, Linda (Dept. Epidemiology & Public Health, Yale School of Medicine, New Haven CT 06510). Why Adolescents Do Not Attend School: The Views of Students and Parents, Journal of Adolescent Health Care, 1987, 8, 5, Sept., 425-430

* Interview data are used to assess what a sample of excessively absent students & their parents (N = 544 each) believed were the reasons for the students' absences. In response to an open-ended question about their main reason for absence, almost 50% of the students reported a health-related reason. When asked whether any of 15 potential problems contributed to their absence, many reported common & acute physical illnesses, headaches or stomachaches, & other aches or pains, 50% mentioned factors relating to low motivation or a concern about the school environment. The parents' responses were remarkably similar except they were more likely to cite emotional problems of the student, school violence, & racial problems. When individual student's responses were compared with those of his or her parents, agreement on individual items were little better than would be expected by chance. 2 Tables, 12 References. HA

88T6176

Kornblum, William & Boggs, Vernon W., Sr. (Graduate School & U. Center City U. New York, NY 10036). 42nd Street: Crossroads of an Urban University, ♦ U. Social Policy, 1986, 17, 1, summer, 26-27

* A discussion of how faculty & students of the PhD program in sociology at the Graduate School & U. Center of the City U. of New York (CUNY) are carrying on the ethnographic tradition of doing research that was established by Robert E. Park & Ernest W. Burgess at the U. of Chicago during the 1920s. The CUNY scholars, in 1978, set out to examine the ebbs & flows of life in the infamous section of New York City called Times Square. Although the major focus of the research effort was to employ ethnographic methodologies, the researchers also utilized surveys to capture the feelings of pedestrians, patrons of pornographic establishments, & local entrepreneurs who also use the thrills & delights in this district. AA

88T6177

Kozakiewicz, Mikołaj (Polish Academy Sciences, PO Box 24 PI 00901 Warsaw). Economic Crisis and Educational Crisis in Poland, ♦ U. Prospects, 1986, 16, 3, 327-336

* Effects of the worldwide recession that began in the mid-1970s on economic growth in Poland are discussed, with particular reference to indirect & direct effects on education. A shrinking national income propelled the socialist government to make cuts in "less important" sectors of the economy, including education. Insufficient financing of the education system between 1974 & 1985 has led to: (1) schools being unprepared for demographic changes that have increased the number of pupils, (2) pauperization of the teaching profession, & (3) cessation of structural & programmatic reforms of the school system. In addition, the ideological bases of socialism have been shaken, & the promises made to youth by the education system have not been realized, this has resulted in either discouraged passivity or anarchist revolt. Ways that the education system can be changed to regain the faith of youth in the premises of their state's social system & improve their sociopolitical consciousness are discussed. 3 Tables, 9 References. K. Hyatt

88T6178

Kraul, Margret (Im Winkel 5, D-3053 Hohnhorst OT Ohndorf Federal Republic Germany). Geschlechtscharakter und Pädagogik. Mathilde Vaerting (1884-1977) (Gender and Pedagogics Mathilde Vaerting (1884-1977)), Zeitschrift für Pädagogik, 1987, 33, 4, Aug., 475-489 (GER)

* An examination of the life & career of Mathilde Vaerting (1884-1977), the first woman to hold a chair in educational science in Germany. Her major work Neubegründung der Psychologie von Mann und Weib ([New Foundations on the Psychology of Man and Woman], Karlsruhe, 1921, 1923) is analyzed from a methodological point of view & with respect to its implications for educational research. Vaerting's demands for equal rights for women & her rejection of any kind of domination are discussed within the framework of present feminist positions. The reactions of her contemporaries to her writings during the 1920s & the ways in which her life & work reflect women's status in science in the 1920s & since are evaluated. 32 References. Modified HA

88T6179

Lennon, Randy & Eisenberg, Nancy (Dept. Educational Psychology U. Northern Colorado, Greeley 80639). Emotional Displays Associated with Preschoolers' Prosocial Behavior, U. Child Development, 1987, 58, 4, Aug., 992-1000

* The relation between preschoolers' emotional status & their performance & receipt of prosocial behaviors was examined via analysis of triads of children (N = 24 fs & 36 Ms aged 30-57 months) who were filmed while playing with a toy. Instances of sharing behaviors as well as benefactors' & recipients' facial expressions were coded prior & subsequent to sharing, recipients' affect prior to defensive behaviors of potential benefactors was also noted. Recipients & benefactors exhibited more than average positive affect subsequent to spontaneous prosocial behaviors, & benefactors tended to exhibit more than average positive affect prior to emitting such behaviors. Benefactors exhibited more positive emotion subsequent to the performance of spontaneously emitted than requested prosocial behaviors. Recipients displayed more positive affect subsequent to the receipt of spontaneous than requested behaviors & more anger prior to the receipt of requested actions. Displays by recipients tended to be followed by the receipt of prosocial behaviors, whereas nonpositive displays tended to be followed by the receipt of defensive reactions. 2 Tables, 19 References. HA

88T6180

McCarthy, L. L. (Division Educational Leadership & Policy Studies Arizona State U., Tempe 85287). The Rough Rock Demonstration School: A Case History with Implications for Educational Evaluation, U. Human Organization, 1987, 46, 2, summer, 103-119

* Lacking access to wage & educational opportunities in the larger society, the Navajo community of Rough Rock in northeastern Ariz. was until recently characterized by isolation & poverty. Through events initiated outside Rough Rock, a new educational & economic enterprise, the Rough Rock Demonstration School, was established there in 1966. Its purpose was to enhance self-leadership & draw local residents into the school. This was achieved by the election of a Navajo school board & the incorporation of Navajo language & culture into the curriculum. Through these means the school served to alter both the sociocultural system & federal policy. The development of the Rough Rock community & school & the external & internal forces shaping it are detailed. The processes affecting educational outcomes & student achievement at the Rough Rock School are analyzed as they relate to the issue of evaluation. 1 Figure, 59 References. HA

88T6181

McLaren, Peter L. (Miami U., Oxford OH 45056). Schooling for Salvation: Christian Fundamentalism's Ideological Weapons of Death, ♦ U. Journal of Education, 1987, 169, 2, spring, 132-139

* A review essay on a book by Alan Peshkin, God's Choice: The Total World of a Fundamentalist Christian School (Chicago: U. of Chicago Press, 1986 [see listing in IRPS No. 43]). Fundamentalist Christian education is examined in the context of the political imperatives of the New Christian Right. Also examined is the methodology used for the study of Christian education. Peshkin's ethnographic approach is criticized from the perspective of critical ethnography, & his political stance of liberal pluralism is found too restrictive. An alternative approach to the concept of sin is advanced from a critical sociological perspective. 10 References. AA

88T6182

Metz-Gockel, Sigrid (Hochschuldidaktisches Zentrum U. Dortmund, D-4600 50 Federal Republic Germany). Licht und Schatten der Koedukation. Eine alte Debatte neu gewendet (The Pros and Cons of

¶ A review essay on a book by Arthur Bestor, Educational Wastelands: The Retreat from Learning in Our Public Schools, second edition (Urbana: U of Illinois Press, 1985 [see listing in IRPS No 43]). Though its recommendations for educational reform may now seem "old hat," this work, when first published in 1953, was highly influential in shaping later critiques of educational excellence in the US school system. Focus here is on a critical retrospective essay by Foster McMurray included in this republication. Though it has its difficulties, this essay raises some non-empirical issues: eg, the role of liberal education in a democracy, the concept/function of various disciplines & of the mind, problem-solving in the schools, & the role of educational philosophers/theorists that could profoundly impact the future of public education. 6 References. K Hyatt

88T6165

Butler, Amy Cogswell (U Michigan, Ann Arbor 48109). The Effect of AFIX Guarantees on Poor Children's Educational Attainment. * Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1551-A.
Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8720251.

88T6166

Clark, W. A. V. (Dept Geography U California, Los Angeles 90024). School Desegregation and White Flight: A Reexamination and Case Study. Social Science Research, 1987, 16, 3, Sept, 211-228.

¶ Reanalysis of the "white flight" phenomenon ie, that whites move from central US cities to suburbs & for white enrollment in public schools decreases as a result of mandatory desegregation programs has established its existence, but little is known about its temporal characteristics. A review of the relevant literature is presented, & methodological problems in earlier studies are identified. It is argued that means, deviations, & pooled models are not as accurate as a dummy variable model in specifying changes in school enrollments & population distributions. A 104-city data set used in 2 earlier studies (see SA 29 3/811 5607 & 34.1/86Q 3879) is reanalyzed using such a model & standard least squares regression estimates. In addition, a case study is presented drawn from litigation surrounding white/black migration from Norfolk to the suburbs of Virginia Beach & Chesapeake, Va. Results indicate that desegregation programs produce white flight not only during their initial implementation, but for 3-5 years thereafter, then, failure to replace the white population in the school district takes effect, & the minority population continues to rise. It is concluded that mandatory pupil reassignment schemes are ill fated unless they consider the preferences of black & white households & recognize the demographic context in which desegregation occurs. 6 Tables, 2 Figures, 31 References. K Hyatt

88T6167

Collis, Betty A. & Williams, Richard L. (Dept Psychological Foundations Education U Victoria, British Columbia V8W 2Y2). Cross-Cultural Comparison of Gender Differences in Adolescents' Attitudes toward Computers and Selected School Subjects. ♦ Journal of Educational Research, 1987, 81, 1, Sept-Oct, 17-27.

¶ The attitudes of two samples of adolescents ($N = 2,105$) from Victoria, British Columbia, & Shanghai, People's Republic of China, toward computer studies & selected school subjects were surveyed & compared. The Chinese students were significantly more positive toward computers, science, & writing than were the British Columbians. In addition, the students from Shanghai displayed fewer sex or age differences among themselves, except when asked to give opinions about the competence of Fs with regard to computer use & science. Both samples of Fs agreed that women have as much ability as men in these areas, whereas Ms in both countries were significantly more skeptical. The findings also support the validity & reliability of attitude research in a cross-cultural context. 6 Tables, 16 References. HA

88T6168

Fleming, William G. (Educational Services Unit Medical School Birmingham, B15 2TJ England). Student Learning Work: Grounds for an in situ Analysis. Instructional Science, 1987, 16, 2, 109-122.

¶ The ethnomethodological program of "studies of work" is drawn on to provide a general framework for the in situ analysis of the competencies that constitute student learning activities. The objective of such research is to describe the locally managed & temporally organized nature of student learning work. Emphasis is placed on the development of methods of investigation that permit description of the "whatness" of the work from within the setting of that work's accomplishment. The twin conceptions of the visibility & sequential order of student activities are discussed in detail. The implications of this approach for the notion of student learning are also examined. 29 References. HA

88T6169

Folds, Ralph. The Social Relationships of Tribal Aboriginal Schools in Australia. British Journal of Sociology of Education, 1987, 447-460.

¶ Directions in schooling for tribal aborigines in Australia have long influenced by psychological & anthropological perspectives. These inadequate & cannot account for the frequent failure of school to community expectations. New directions for the analysis of the social relations of aboriginal education are discussed with reference to recent original initiatives. 41 References. Modified HA

88T6170

Fuhrman, Susan H. (Rutgers U, New Brunswick NJ 08903). Election Policy: A New Context for Governance. U Publius, 1987, summer, 131-143.

¶ A discussion of the transition in US education policy since 1983 states have become leaders in educational policy making, & the federal role, historically small in terms of funding but important in providing programmatic leadership, has diminished. Legislators & governors eclipsed state boards & education experts in formulating policies re teaching & learning. Local districts, as a result, feel that their autonomy is severely threatened. Modified HA

88T6171

Giroux, Henry A. & McLaren, Peter. Teacher Education as a Counterpublic Sphere: Radical Pedagogy as a Form of Cultural Politics. Philosophy and Social Criticism, 1987, 12, 1, spring, 51-69.

¶ A major concern of critical theorists has been to show the extinction of the capacity for critical reason in Western societies, & through the destruction of public spheres. It is argued here that education institutions have actively contributed to this process by acting as counterpublic spheres. The need to rethink teacher education is urged, & the contributions of critical theorists to such a project weighed. A view of curriculum as a form of cultural politics is outlined. The need for a pedagogy that empowers students is given central place in such a politics. 26 References. W H Stoddard

88T6172

Godet, Michel. Regards sur la japonosclérose (A Look at "Japanosclerosis"). ♦ Futuribles, 1987, 112, July-Aug, 1 (FRE).

¶ The supposed dynamism of the Japanese economy is investigated based on a 2-week field study during which 30+ high-level representatives of different economic & social sectors were interviewed, various statistical data are also reviewed. Some problems currently facing Japan that may explain why the Japanese are often less optimistic about their future than foreign observers are discussed: (1) a crisis in the educational system, (2) new social values & aspirations that depart from traditional work ethic, (3) the aging of the population & the crisis of the family, (4) the challenge of internationalization & the resurgence of nationalism, & (5) the conflict between modernization processes & local & social rigidities. 4 Tables, 8 Figures. HA Tr & Modified by C ters

88T6173

Hondeghem, Annie. Vingt-Cinq Ans de recrutement d'universitaires par le secrétariat permanent de recrutement (The Recruitment of University Graduates by the Belgian Ministries during the Twenty-Five Years). Res Publica, 1987, 29, 2, 231-258 (FRE).

¶ In the past 25 years, the annual number of U graduates in Belgium more than doubled, many of these graduates have been employed in the public sector. The recruitment policies of the state are investigated drawing on statistical evidence. Findings reveal that the recruitment of U graduates has increased, while the number of internal promotions decreased. Higher educational qualifications are being demanded for recruitment is increasingly aimed at specific grades rather than general grades, which reflects the growing complexity of administrative practice. A change of philosophy is noted, in that learning capacity rather than knowledge is now emphasized. Since the 1980s, many U graduates have been employed in lower-level jobs; this type of underemployment is due to the effects of the economic crisis on the labor market, plus its own problems. Both the tasks performed by state employees & the education of recruits have changed so much since the 1930s that it may be time to rethink the career system. 10 Tables, 1 Figure. Modified HA equally good qualifications. Apprenticeships were more common among later leavers than expected, & later leavers compared favorably with early leavers in terms of other forms of in-work training. It is concluded that the "nonacademic sixth" could have a useful role alongside the Youth Training Scheme. 5 Tables, 9 Figures, 18 References. HA

88T6190

Petitot, Andre (Dept Sociology U Quebec, Montreal H3C 3P8). School and the Production of Society, British Journal of Sociology of Education, 1987, 8, 4, 379-390.

† Most sociological theories present school as a source & a channel of social reproduction of a dominant group, of essential values, of bureaucracy, etc. A historical study of the origins of Colls & the bourgeoisie in the sixteenth century supports an opposite conclusion: it shows school as an agent or an active medium in the emergence of structures & social groups. Other historical situations reveal the multiple contributions that school makes to the production of society. While interrelating history, pedagogy, & sociology, this constructivist point of view renders an active role to the teachers. 54 References. HA

88T6191

Piasek, Ryszard & Vaughan, Michalina (Instut Organization & Management Technical U Poznan, Poland). The Crisis of Polish Higher Education, Higher Education, 1987, 16, 1, 53-62.

† Higher education has a major contribution to make to the SF & cultural life of contemporary Poland. The importance of promoting a continuous development in the tertiary educational sector is widely acknowledged throughout the world. In many countries, the number of students is still increasing, to reach or even to exceed a third of the relevant cohort. Yet in Poland, the crisis of higher education, observed for some years, has led to a rapid decline in student numbers. Focus here is on the underlying causes, including demographic, economic & other factors. Attention will be paid to the whole sector of higher education, but also to specific schools & faculties, & to the participation of women in particular. The impact of state educational policy is considered, as are the changes in tertiary education, & some general conclusions are drawn in an attempt to assess their SF & cultural implications. 3 Tables, 2 Figures. Modified HA

88T6192

Pollard, Andrew (Dept Education Bristol Polytechnic, BS6 6UJ England). Pupils and Transfer: Research and Policy, British Journal of Sociology of Education, 1987, 8, 4, 475-479.

† A review essay on books by Lynda Measor & Peter Woods, Changing Schools: Pupil Perspectives on Transfer to a Comprehensive (Milton Keynes: Open U Press, 1984), Sara Delamont & Maurice Galton, Inside the Secondary Classroom (London: Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1986), & Inner London Education Authority, Research & Statistics Branch, Secondary Transfer Project (London: Inner London Education Authority, 1986 [see listings in IRPS No. 43]). These three studies of how pupils view transfers between schools offer examples of varied methodologies & perspectives: questionnaire surveys in Secondary Transfer Project, nonparticipant ethnography in Inside the Secondary Classroom, & classic ethnography in Changing Schools. Despite these differences of approach, the substantive findings are remarkably consistent, revealing anticipation with mixed anxiety & enthusiasm followed by a process of adaptation. 9 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T6193

Powell, Brian & Steelman, Lala Carr (Dept Sociology Indiana U, Bloomington 47405). On State SAT Research: A Response to Wainer, UM Journal of Educational Measurement, 1987, 24, 1, spring, 84-89.

† Areas of agreement & disagreement with H. Wainer's ("Five Pitfalls Encountered while Trying to Compare States on Their SAT Scores," Journal of Educational Measurement, 1986, 23, 69-81) critique of research on state differences in Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) scores are examined. Reexamining data on state heterogeneity in SAT scores, it is contended that Wainer's criticism of Brian Powell's & Lala Carr Steelman's previous work (see SA 33.2/8506849) is unwarranted. Specifically, it is demonstrated that the Powell/Steelman model (1) is based on a large body of theoretical & empirical literature, (2) does not employ a posttreatment concomitant variable; (3) contains sufficient rationale to adjust for racial composition; & (4) does test for linearity. In addition, Wainer's recommendations for how to correct for selection are evaluated; his four solutions not only do not resolve the problem of selection bias, but may actually create additional difficulties. 4 References. AA

88T6194

Pressman, Harvey & Gartner, Alan (Graduate School & U Center City U New York, NY 10036). The New Racism in Education, UM Social Policy, 1986, 17, 1, summer, 11-15.

† A discussion of the current infatuation of teachers with standardized testing as a response to the perceived failures of public schools, & the impact of this remedy on minority group members of the teaching force. Efforts are underway to block inappropriate use of such tests, but it is essential, nonetheless, to improve the performance of minority groups on certification tests. † Rasmussen

88T6195

Proshansky, Harold M. (Graduate School & U Center City U New York, NY 10036). On Being President of an Urban Graduate School, UM Social Policy, 1986, 17, 1, summer, 20-25.

† A commemorative essay on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Graduate School & U Center of the City U of New York by its president, reflecting on its past, the lessons learned, & the insights gained. Special features of the Graduate School that make it different from other major Ur Us are pointed out, among them, the fact that it is an autonomous unit, organized as a consortium of its teaching & research faculty, who are largely drawn from the senior & community Colls of the City U in thirty-one doctoral programs. The school's setting in a major Ur area offers a plethora of available resources for graduate training, a pool of talent for faculty, & activities & facilities that both determine & express the essence of Ur life. The large Ur community serves as a laboratory for students & faculty to solve complex human problems in real-life settings. The U's rise to educational prominence, after being born in an era of fiscal constraint & open enrollment, is traced. Modified AA

88T6196

Roberts, James & Bickel, Robert (Florida State U, Tallahassee 32306). The Progressive Era: Its Ideological Legacy for Education and Its Social Context, Quarterly Journal of Ideology, 1987, 11, 1, Jan, 21-37.

† A reassessment of the Progressive era in US history, seen here as a time of conflict between the interests of technologically based large industrial firms & those of the people in general. Progressives assumed that science, technology, & modernization led naturally to growing occupational diversification, while ignoring the cost of that diversification in opportunities for economic self-sufficiency & occupational independence. The resulting ideology has been a major basis for the rationalization of social inequities. Opportunity, democracy, participation, class interest, social stratification, & education have all been redefined in ways that reflect this ideology. 106 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T6197

Rothstein, Stanley William (Dept Educational Administration California State U, Fullerton 92634). The Ethics of Coercion: Social Control Practices in an Urban Junior High School, UM Urban Education, 1987, 22, 1, Apr, 53-72.

† An ethnographic study of a ghetto school, using the situation as a central analytical concept. Problems of initial legitimacy are discussed & illustrated, & analysis focuses on the ritualistic beginnings of encounters & the decisional rights of teachers in every situation. Classroom interaction shows students to be passive & ignorant of the knowledge & understandings they must master in order to progress through the grades. The ethics of teachers are contrasted with those of the higher professionals. Problems of trust & confidentiality are explored as teachers work with their captive clientele. Teachers are seen to have limited ethical responsibility. The supposition of staff that students are incompetents leads to directive forms of interaction & instruction & an accentuation of status differences. The ethical justification for this is that schools are socializing youth for their future roles in adult society, i.e., they are performing an important social service. 13 References. AA

88T6198

Sapon-Shevin, Mara (U North Dakota, Grand Forks 58201). Giftedness as a Social Construct, UM Teachers College Record, 1987, 89, 1, fall, 39-53.

† A critical examination of the assumptions on which programs of education for the gifted are based. Two key assumptions that giftedness is an empirically identifiable attribute, & that gifted students have special needs not shared by other students—lead to a variety of special recom-

(Coeducation An Old Debate Reexamined). Zeitschrift für Pädagogik, 1987, 33, 4, Aug, 455-474. (GfER)

¶ At school, boys require everyday social intercourse with girls to become socialized in behavioral patterns of domination & to achieve partial superiority in performance. This critical hypothesis concerning "natural" coeducation is supported by the prevalence of M students in mathematics & natural sciences at both high schools & Us. Studies conducted in North Rhine Westphalia, West Germany, show that the majority of women studying chemistry & informatics attended girls' schools. These results are examined in the light of educational & sociological research findings. 3 Tables, 69 References. Modified HA

88T6183

Meulemann, Heiner (Geschichts- und Gesellschaftswissenschaftliche Fakultät Katholische U Eichstätt, D-8078 Federal Republic Germany), Bildung im Lebensverlauf. Startchancen und Verlaufsumstände des Bildungsweges in einer Kohorte von Gymnasialisten zwischen 1970 und 1984 (Education in a Life Career Perspective: Starting Conditions and Concomitant Circumstances in the Educational Careers of a Cohort of German High School Students between 1970 and 1984), Zeitschrift für Sozialisationsforschung und Erziehungssoziologie, 1988, 8, 1, Jan, 4-24. (GfER)

¶ An examination of how far starting conditions & concomitant circumstances determine educational careers. Of an original sample of 3,240 West German high school students interviewed in 1969, 1,989 were reinterviewed in 1984 at age 30. SC achievement, & future life plans are taken as indicators of starting chances; these 3 groups of variables correlate with high school graduation but not with the decision to go to U or with success in a U career. Kind of U attended, subject studied, & study discontinuities caused by employment or vocational training are taken as indicators of concomitant circumstances. Influences on dropping out are generally mirror images of influences on success, staying in the U without graduation, even after 10 years, is mostly independent of the variables examined. 6 Tables, 11 References. Modified HA

88T6184

Mordkowitz, Elliott R. & Ginsburg, Herbert P. (Harvard U, Cambridge MA 02138), Early Academic Socialization of Successful Asian-American College Students, The Quarterly Newsletter of the Laboratory of Comparative Human Cognition, 1987, 9, 2, Apr, 85-91

¶ Structured interviews were conducted with 15 Harvard U (Boston, Mass) students who were children of Asian-born parents to assess socialization relevant to academic achievement. Findings do not indicate that specific cognitive interactions are crucial. Instead, a triple pattern of strong family support for education, attribution of failure to lack of effort, & supervision of after-school time was consistently revealed. Other adaptive attitudes identified include suppression of aggression & limiting outside employment. However, low verbal interaction at home may be disadvantageous for promoting verbal talent. A relation between socialized resistance to passivity or negative cognitions when faced with failure & subsequent math achievement is considered a likely basis for future explanations of Asian academic achievement. 21 References. AA

88T6185

Morokvasic, Mirjana (Centre national recherche scientifique Institut études recherches sociétés contemporaines, 59-61 Rue Pouchet F-75849 Paris France), Immigrants in the Parisian Garment Industry, ♦ Work, Employment and Society, 1987, 1, 4, Dec, 441-462

¶ In spite of profound industrial restructuring & access to technological innovations in various stages in the garment trades, in production, outdated industrial structures, homeworking, & nineteenth-century working conditions still exist in Paris, France. Focus is on these traditional structures & the role immigrants play in them. It is argued that the imperatives of garment production fostering flexibility & small unit size have made this sector attractive to immigrants capable of responding adequately to the industry's requirements. It is further argued that the immigrants tend to occupy positions similar to those of their predecessors: those of workers & intermediaries. The issues of ambiguity of boundaries & categorizations ranging from workers to employers are raised. 3 Tables, 1 Figure, 40 References. HA

88T6186

Pallas, Aaron M., Natriello, Gary & McDill, Edward L. (Dept Philosophy & Social Sciences Teachers Coll Columbia U, New York 10027), The High Costs of High Standards: School Reform and Drop- outs, Urban Education, 1987, 22, 1, Apr, 103-114.

¶ The recent national & state educational reform movement has recommended raising standards for performance in schools. After review the kinds of standards proposed as part of the current wave of school forms, the likely positive & negative consequences of raising standards & the conditions under which doing so are likely to improve the performance of at-risk students are discussed. It is concluded that there are costs to raising performance standards in US secondary schools, especially the additional resources targeted to provide compensatory services at-risk youngster, which have been ignored by the reform movement. Until federal & state officials commit the necessary resources, the reform movement is unlikely to achieve its goals. 29 References. AA

88T6187

Pascarella, Ernest T., Brier, Ellen M., Smart, John C. & Herz Leslie (Coll Education U Illinois, Chicago 60680), Becoming a Physician: The Influence of the Undergraduate Experience, ♦ Research in Higher Education, 1987, 26, 2, 180-201

¶ Survey data collected in 1971 (& again in 1980) from a national sample of Coll students (N = 10,326 attending 487 Colls & Us) who initially aspired to be, &/or later became, MDs are examined to determine influence of pre-Coll characteristics, Coll origins, & the academic & social experience of Coll on the likelihood of becoming a MD. Estima of a 14-variable causal model indicated that the major direct effects attainment were attributable to Coll characteristics & the academic experience of Coll. Net of other causes, the selectivity/prestige of the undergraduate institution attended, collegiate academic achievement, majoring in the physical or life sciences each had significant direct effects on becoming a MD. The direct positive influence of Coll quality however, was partially counterbalanced by its negative indirect effect. Moreover, the greatest advantage in attending an elite institution accrued to those students with relatively high levels of academic performance. As academic performance declined, so did the positive effect Coll quality. The effects of pre-Coll characteristics on becoming a MD were largely indirect, mediated by the student's Coll experience. Net of other factors, women were no less likely than men to become MDs, being F had a significant negative indirect effect. Conversely, secondary school achievement did not directly influence attainment but did have large positive indirect influence. 4 Tables, 52 References. Modified HA

88T6188

Paterson, Fiona M. S., Schooling the Family, ♦ Sociology, 1988, 1, Feb, 65-86

¶ An exploration of the preconditions of the images of normal family relations that inform contemporary discourse on truancy. Analysis of documentary evidence from various education committees in Scotland produced between 1839 & 1872 reveal how state intervention into nineteenth-century schooling structured the kind of school relations that were to become fundamental to state-authorized schooling. It also illustrates the way in which this intervention fostered the generation of one particular model of family relations as normal & rendered alternatives deviant & how this theory of correct family relations became embedded in a model of good schooling that was being structured by the state. Since a given social DoFL involves a particular scheduling of social identities DoFL involving the family as a unit of production meant that a state intervention into schooling undermined social relations of families in occupations characterized by this form of organization. Thus, both the form & the content of schooling are implicated in fostering a particular scheduling of social identities & in marginalizing alternative patterns of living. 2 Figures, 63 References. Modified HA

88T6189

Payne, Joan (Dept Social & Administrative Studies U Oxford, OX2ER England), Unemployment, Apprenticeships and Training: Does Pay to Stay On at School?, British Journal of Sociology Education, 1987, 8, 4, 425-445.

¶ Data from the 1981 National Child Development Study are used to compare the progress up to age 23 of young people in GB who reach age 16 in Mar 1974 & who left full-time education at 16, 17, or 18 (ΣN = 12,500). Later leavers had higher unemployment rates on first entering the labor market because of rising national unemployment, but the long term had a clear advantage. More significantly, those who left at 17 or 18 with qualifications no better than those of minimum age leavers suffered no long-term disadvantage in comparison with the latter, despite their loss of potential work experience, & some groups had lower unemployment rates in the long term than minimum age leavers who

88T6207

Walker, Elaine M. & Madhere, Serge (Dept Sociology Kean Coll, Union NJ 07083). Multiple Retentions: Some Consequences for the Cognitive and Affective Maturation of Minority Elementary Students. Urban Education, 1987, 22, 1, Apr, 85-102

* Following a review of the literature, the effects of retention on the cognitive & affective development of elementary schoolchildren is investigated using data on 1,292 first- through eighth-grade students in an Urban school district who had been retained more than once in their school careers. Ss, primarily from minority (black or Hispanic) backgrounds, participated in a special intervention program during the 1985/86 school year. 32% were placed among other students with multiple retentions, while 68% were placed in a regular classroom setting with more successful students. Changes in Ss' scores on the Comprehensive Tests of Basic Skills in reading & mathematics, & in their social & personal adjustment as measured by a needs assessment form, were analyzed by comparing pre- & postintervention data. Results indicate that after multiple retentions, students were largely unable to make the academic & affective adjustments necessary for cognitive success; this finding questions the supposition that retention fosters mastery of academic subjects. However, retention effects varied by grade level & subject matter. In addition, placement in special classrooms was harmful for students' affective & social maturation (consistent with labeling theory), although their academic needs were better served. Implications for teacher training & curriculum design are discussed. 5 Tables, 22 References. K. Hyatt

88T6208

Waller, Marguerite (Dept Communication U California San Diego, La Jolla 92093). Commemoration: Making Family History as a Family Event. The Quarterly Newsletter of the Laboratory of Comparative Human Cognition, 1987, 9, 1, Jan, 48-49

* An account is given of the production of a personal contribution to the Collective Memory Colloquium held in 1968 at the Laboratory of Comparative Human Cognition: a videotape based on filmed family history. The impact of this project on the maker's family is examined with emphasis on the concept of collective memory. W. H. Stoddard

88T6209

Wheaton, Dennis Ray (U Chicago, IL 60628). Organizational and Community Adaptation to a Period of Contraction: Suburban School Districts under Stress. Dissertation Abstracts International: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1891 A. Unavailable from UMI; contact the degree-granting university.

88T6210

Wrong, Dennis H. (New York U, NY 10003). The Paperbacking of the American Mind. The New York Times Book Review, 1988, 17 Apr, 1, 20, 22-24

* A review essay on Allan Bloom's Closing of the American Mind: How Higher Education Has Failed Democracy and Impoverished the Souls of Today's Students (New York: Simon & Schuster, 1986 [see listing in IRPS No. 43]). It is argued that the primary reason for the popularity of this critique of the US system of higher education is that it addresses an anxiety among the educated public concerning the growing ignorance of their young. It will undoubtedly become even more widely influential after its publication in paperback (Touchstone, 1988, May), despite the fact that its lamentations about the deteriorating conditions of US society & conservative prescriptions for educational reform have surfaced in other best-selling books in every decade since the 1940s. Comparisons are made to the criticisms in these earlier works, most notably to Charles Reich's The Greening of America, which saw a chance for enlightenment & positive social change in the activist youth of the 1960s. Bloom, on the other hand, argues that this liberal consciousness set the stage for the current crisis in education in which students blandly & unquestioningly accept all values & lifestyles & have lost the capacity to make moral or intellectual judgments. His remedy is a return to the teachings of the ancient Greek philosophers. Examination of Bloom's own early education influences reveals the highly personalized nature of his arguments & suggests a hidden political agenda. K. Hyatt Zetlin, Andrea G. (School Education U Southern California, Los Angeles 90089-0031). The Social Status of Mildly Learning Handicapped High School Students. Psychology in the Schools, 1987, 24, 2, Apr, 165-173

88T6211

* Naturalistic observations of special education classrooms in a high school, together with teacher ratings of social acceptance, revealed 4 SS positions within a learning handicapped population (130 learning disabled & mildly retarded students in resource & special day classrooms). SS was defined by reference to a group dominance hierarchy, & students within each SS position displayed similar social patterns & educational attitudes. Conformity to school expectations was inversely related to social standing, while behavioral dominance was directly related. Individual & school factors discussed that appear to contribute to the emergence & maintenance of the SS groups. 1 Table, 13 References. HA

8816212

---, Review: Sociology of the School Series. Discourse, 1987, 8, 1, Oct, 116-130

* A review essay on six monographs from the Sociology of the School Series (all published by Deakin U Press, 1986). Lawrence Angus, Schooling for Social Order: Democracy, Equality, and Social Mobility in Education, reviewed by Rob White (South Australian Coll of Advanced Education, Adelaide 5000); David Dawkins, Economics, Politics and Education, reviewed by John Hinkson (LaTrobe U, Bundoora, Victoria 3083 Australia); Paige Porter, Gender and Education, reviewed by Lesley Johnson (U of Melbourne, Parkville, Victoria 3082 Australia); Fazal Rizvi, Ethnicity, Class and Multicultural Education, reviewed by Judith I. Kaplerer (Flinders U, Bedford Park, South Australia 5042); Peter Watkins, High Tech, Low Tech and Education, reviewed by Carla Fasano (U of Wollongong, New South Wales 2500 Australia); & Jennifer Nias, Teacher Socialization: The Individual and the System, reviewed by Judyth Sachs (U of Queensland, Brisbane 4067 Australia [see listings in IRPS No. 43]). Angus's work provides an extended discussion of how & why education in Australia has served the purpose of social control. A set of readings by academics & teachers is included that are useful & provocative, although unrelated to the theme of the work or to each other. Dawkins attempts to show how the Transition Education Program of ten years ago can be usefully understood if it is related to institutional developments outside education. The argument emphasizes a specific economic crisis in 1975 that is seen as significantly connected to the emergence of transition education. Porter's work is seen as a useful textbook for teaching in higher education courses on gender & education. Rizvi's lucid & compelling text "cuts incisively through a decade of fatuous garbage" to suggest a more productive approach to central problems of education & Australian society. Watkins's work attempts to make teachers aware of the main issues & data in the debate on the impact of technology on employment & the relevant implications for education. Nias traverses the field of teacher socialization including the self as person in teaching, self as teacher, behaving as a teacher, teacher development as the development of self, & strategies for the defense of the substantial self. This work would probably appeal to students of education at all levels, as well as to a wider audience. F. Rasmussen

88T6213

---, The Sociology of the School. British Journal of Sociology of Education, 1987, 8, 4, 461-473

* A review symposium on six monographs that form part of Deakin U's (Australia) Open Campus Program, "Sociology of the School". Lawrence Angus, Schooling for Social Order (1986); David Dawkins, Economics, Politics and Education (1986); Jennifer Nias, Teacher Socialisation (1986); Paige Porter, Gender and Education (1986); Fazal Rizvi, Ethnicity, Class and Multicultural Education (1986); & Peter Watkins High Tech, Low Tech and Education (1986 [no further publication information provided, see listings in IRPS No. 43]). Joan Whitehead (Bath Coll of Higher Education, Newton Park BA2 9BN UK) notes the primacy given to research findings over applications, but finds the series a useful source not only for Australia but for other societies. Ernie Haswell (Sunderland Polytechnic, SR2 7FE UK) compares this material to that used in Open U courses in GB, & calls for an approach in which ideas such as those presented in these monographs interact with collective school deliberation over policy. Cecile Wright (Education Division, Sheffield S10 2TN UK) assesses the books separately & then together, finding them valuable as a series as material for an integrated program but difficult for use beyond such a program due to lack of suggestions on how to apply their ideas. 3 References. W. H. Stoddard recommendations for parents & teachers of such children. In implication these practices are elitist. There is nothing in the actual content of the recommendations that makes them inappropriate to children in general, rather than to a special population exclusively. The problems of applying conceptions of equity or equality to giftedness are explored, & an alternative approach based on social role valorization is outlined. W. H. Stoddard

88T6199

Schmida, Mirjam & Katz, Yancov J. (School Education Bar-Ilan U, Ramat-Gan 52100 Israel), The Differential Effect of Three Educational Structures on the Realization of Academic and Social Variables, Research in Education, 1987, 37, May, 1-11

¶ An investigation of the general effect of school organization on student variables such as academic placement, future occupational plans, social self-image, civic values, & motivation for study. Also examined is the contribution of the Israeli comprehensive high school to equal educational opportunity & social integration. Analysis of data from questionnaires completed by 339 eleventh-grade students in grammar, vocational, & comprehensive high schools indicates a significant differential effect of school structure on students' future occupational plans & social integration. The findings indicate that the Israeli comprehensive high school fosters better conditions for equal educational opportunity as well as social integration than grammar & vocational high schools. 6 Tables, 29 References. AA

88T6200

Shamai, Shmuel (Golan Research Instit U Haifa, Mount Carmel Israel), Critical Theory of Education and Ethnicity: The Case Study of the Toronto Jewish Community, Journal of Education, 1987, 169, 2, spring, 89-114

¶ Some of the main theories regarding education (consensus, conflict, & critical sociology in education) & ethnicity (consensus, conflict, & pluralism) are reviewed & evaluated with regard to a specific case study: the Toronto (Ontario) Jewish community. An alternative theoretical framework is outlined that is particularly appropriate to nondominant minority communities. The need is expressed to break down such general concepts as cultural resistance & reproduction into smaller "units," thus creating classification, concepts, terms, & typologies. The concepts of "relevant" culture & relevant resistance are used in a more pluralistic version of the critical sociology in education. 94 References. Modified HA

88T6201

Shilling, Chris (School Education Open U, Milton Keynes MK7 6AA England), Work-Experience as a Contradictory Practice, British Journal of Sociology of Education, 1987, 8, 4, 407-423

¶ Radical educationalists have analyzed work-experience as an activity that provides poor quality & unreflected experiences for school students & serves to mystify capitalist relations of production. Data gathered from a case study of the experiences of a group of 24 students who had recently returned from a week in a place of work suggest that such a view may be misleading. The experiences of these students suggest that work placements may constitute the site of an activity through which the validity of capitalist social relations of production & the labor process may be challenged. 47 References. HA

88T6202

Smith, Richard (U Queensland, Saint Lucia 4067 Australia), 'Process' and Educational Analysis, British Journal of Sociology of Education, 1987, 8, 4, 391-405

¶ Critical examination of a model proposed by M. W. Apple & I. Weiss ("Ideology and Schooling: The Relationship between Class and Culture," Education and Society, 1985, 45-63) for conceptualizing ideological reproduction in education suggests that the term "process" is in greater need of clarification than the terms to which it refers. The claim is that process has become a taken-for-granted but untheorized term in writing about ideology in particular & has become what E. Ardener ("Some Outstanding Problems in the Analysis of Events" in Schwimmer, G. (Ed), The Yearbook of Symbolic Anthropology, London: Hurst, 1978, 103-121) calls, a language shadow, i.e., a metaphoric circumlocution that ambiguously sketches ideas beyond the capacity of real language to express. To this extent, process masks rather than explicates the very mechanisms that are said to set in motion terms such as ideology. Consequently, the process model of Apple & Weiss requires additional elements for the theoretical explanation of ideological reproduction & for establishing a fit between the model & the world it depicts. Apple's & Weiss's analysis is extended by proposing a closer focus on the discursive practices of schools so that their complexity is accounted for in theoretical model. 51 References. Modified HA

88T6203

So, Alvin Y. (Dept Sociology U Hawaii Manoa, Honolulu 96813), High-Achieving Disadvantaged Students: A Study of Low-SES Hispanic Language Minority Youth, Urban Education, 1987, 22, 1, 1-19-35

¶ In an exploration of why a small portion of disadvantaged students have higher educational achievement than their fellow disadvantaged students, three reference group hypotheses are presented, which emphasize orientations toward the Mc., Anglo, & Hispanic groups as explanations of the high achievement. Examining the low-SES Hispanic language minority students in the national 1980 High School & Beyond data set ($N = 58,000$ Rs), a LISREL model analysis supports a new multiple reference group explanation: a high-achieving disadvantaged student is one who identifies with the Hispanic group while at the same time aspires to the Mc. 1 Table, 1 Figure, 1 Appendix, 24 References. Modified AA

88T6204

Surlin, Stuart H. (Dept Communication Studies U Windsor, Ontario N9B 3P4), Value System Changes by Students as Result of Media Ethics Course, Journalism Quarterly, 1987, 64, 2-3, summer/autumn, 564-568, 676

¶ A comparative examination of the values of mass communication students ($N = 20$ at the U of Windsor, Ontario) before & after undergoing formal training in mass media ethics. During the first & last class meetings, students responded to Milton Rokeach's list of 18 terminal & 18 instrumental personal values. At the conclusion of the course, students ranked moral & social-type values as more salient, & competence & personal-type values as less salient, than at the beginning of the course. They also became more self-contented, concerned with the welfare of others, independent, & open minded, & less driven by personal gain. Student postcourse scores indicated a realization that one does not have to be exceedingly "courageous" to express an ethical opinion, that to do so is quite natural & normal. 2 Tables. Modified AA

88T6205

Talbot, Richard Peter (U New Hampshire, Durham 03824), High Education and Life Chances: A Study of Occupational Attainment and Attitudes among Some Public University Graduates, Dissertation Abstracts International, 4, The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1899-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8722441.

88T6206

Tanner, Laurel N. (Temple U, Philadelphia PA 19122), Events That Happen—and "Unhappen", Teachers College Record, 1987, 88, 1, fall, 133-138

Responses, 139-145

¶ A review essay on books by Barry M. Franklin, Building the American Community: The School Curriculum and the Search for Social Control (London & Philadelphia: Falmer Press, 1986), & Herbert M. Kliebard, The Struggle for the American Curriculum 1893-1958 (Boston & London: Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1986) (see listings in IRPS N 43). Franklin's work exemplifies the weaknesses of radical revisionism in history by its disregard of what actually happened according to the best available evidence. Franklin's argument that the curriculum of U.S. schools reflects a desire for social control is supported by selective quotation & misinterpretation. In contrast, Kliebard's treatment of curriculum is carefully grounded & offers insight into the actual history of education, even if some of its interpretations are debatable. In The Question: Dewey's Impact on Curriculum Practice, Herbert M. Kliebard (U Wisconsin, Madison) reviews the reasons for asserting—contrary to Tanner's doubts—that John Dewey did not significantly influence practices in US schools, even though certain superficial practices, such as discipline & classroom decorum, responded to his ideas. In A Response to Laurel Tanner, Barry M. Franklin (Kennesaw Coll, Marietta, Ga) questions Tanner's decision to focus almost entirely on one chapter of Building the American Community that discusses Edward A. Ross, to the exclusion of the rest of the book; this section, moreover, does not substantiate Tanner's criticism of the use of source materials, nor does Ross's actual history completely support Tanner's judgments of him. W. H. Stoddard

1500 sociology of religion

35 sociology of religion

88T6214

Aloisi, Michael F., Vatican II, Ecumenism and a Parsonian Analysis of Change. ♦ U Sociological Analysis 1988, 49, 1, spring, 17-28

* The setting for, & the dynamics set in motion by, the Second Vatican Council, with its keynotes of ecumenism, lay participation, & personal autonomy, are analyzed within a Parsonian framework to understand the processes of & mechanisms for change. Vatican II is understood as an attempt to increase the adaptive capacity of the Roman Catholic Church. Central to the processes of change set in motion by the Council are ongoing processes of inclusion & value generalization that aim toward the establishment of a broad community, including Catholic, Protestant, Jew, & all "men of good will." Potential strains & conflicts, & fundamentalist responses to attempted transformations are discussed within this context. The capacity for varied elements of Parsonian theory to shed light on complex contemporary change is posited & illustrated. 40 References. HA

88T6215

Barnes, Andrew E. (Carnegie-Mellon U, Pittsburgh PA 15213), The Wars of Religion and the Origins of Reformed Confraternities of Penitents. A Theoretical Approach. ♦ Archives de sciences sociales des religions 1987, 32, 64-1, July-Sept, 117-136

* Confraternities of penitents were secret brotherhoods of Catholic laymen who practiced self-flagellation in honor of the passion & death of Christ. Such associations first diffused from Italy into France around the start of the sixteenth century, & later evolved from small elite associations to larger popular ones. The French wars of religion (1560-1596) both popularized & politicized the confraternities, resulting in the emergence in the 1590s of a new type of confraternity, consciously described as "reformed" by contemporaries. Here, theories drawn from US research on voluntary organizations, particularly those of Amitai Etzioni, are used to examine the sixteenth-century transformation of penitential confraternities & the emergence of reformed confraternities. It is argued that the appearance at chapel doors of multitudes of illiterate, poor, & We Catholics, less concerned with devotional activities than with fighting Protestants, was too much for the organizational structure of antebellum confraternities, based as it was on membership homogeneity, political consensus, & informal roles of governance. An organizational crisis ensued, characterized by confusion over goals, a decline in religious activities & often by the emergence of dictatorial control by specific members. The reformed confraternities that appeared in the 1590s sought to resolve this crisis by basing membership less on the idea of social homogeneity & more on the idea of spiritual homogeneity, developing organizational apparatus for resolving conflicts not based on consensus, & for formalizing the rules of governance. Lastly, reformed confraternities sought to turn an increased observation of devotional ritual into a political statement in this way resolving the conflict between political & religious goals. Modified AA

88T6216

Benewick, Robert (U Sussex, Falmer Brighton BN1 9RH England), The Study of Antisemitism, The Jewish Journal of Sociology 1987, 29, 2, Dec, 123-127

* A review on books by Michael Curtis (Ed.), Antisemitism in the Contemporary World (Boulder, Colo, & London: Westview Press, 1986), & Meyer Weinberg, Because They Were Jews: A History of Antisemitism (New York: Greenwood Press, 1986 [see listing in IRPS No. 43]). Curtis attempts to draw generalizations from a comparative study of twelve countries, while Weinberg attempts to provide the basis for a new analysis of a historic phenomenon. The need for a social scientific perspective is stressed. While value-free research is not suggested, the line between rigorous analysis & political advocacy must be recognized. Modified AA

88T6217

Campbell, Douglas F. (Erindale Coll U Toronto, Ontario M5S 1A1), A Group, a Network and the Winning of Church Union in Canada: A Case Study in Leadership. ♦ La Revue Canadienne de Sociologie et d'Anthropologie/The Canadian Review of Sociology and

Anthropology 1988, 25, 1, Feb, 41-66

* Archival data are employed to examine prochange leadership in a social movement, ie, the ecumenical movement within the Canadian Protestant churches 1900-1925, which succeeded in merging several denominations into the United Church of Canada. The structure of the leadership is traced from a founding group to a dispersed & enlarged network, & the leadership is displayed in action at various levels of the Church & society. The dissident activity of several of the original group members is also investigated. 2 Appendixes, 58 References. HA

88T6218

Carroll, Michael P. (Dept Sociology U Western Ontario, London N6A 5C 2), Heaven-Sent Wounds: A Kleinian View of the Stigmata in the Catholic Mystical Tradition. ♦ The Journal of Psychoanalytic Anthropology 1987, 10, 1, winter, 17-38

* Over the centuries, stigmatics—people who develop wounds corresponding to those of the crucified Christ—have generally been Catholics who experience generalized pain, media, & recurrent bleeding from one or more of their wounds. Borrowing from the work of Melanie Klein (eg, Love, Guilt and Reparation, and Other Works, 1921-1945, New York: Dell Publishing, 1975), a hypothesis is developed that sees stigmatization as resulting from the intensification of desires that develop in all individuals during the pre-Oedipal period & remain forever in the unconscious. Five well-documented case studies of stigmatization are considered, including Saint Veronica Giuliani, Ann Catherine Emmerich, Louise Lateau, Theresa Neumann, & Padre Pio. 1 Table, 29 References. Modified AA

88T6219

Cipriani, Roberto (U Rome, I-00100 Italy), Forme teatrali de la religion populaire: le Christ rouge (Theatrical Forms in Popular Religiosity: The Red Christ). ♦ Archives de sciences sociales des religions 1987, 32, 64-1, July-Sept, 65-74. (FRF)

* A discussion of a study, involving historical & field research, of the ritual of the "Red Christ" part of the Holy Week celebrations in Cerignola, Foggia, southern Italy (see also Cipriani, Roberto, Il Cristo Rosso, Riti e simboli, religione e politica nella cultura popolare [The Red Christ: Rites and Symbols, Religion and Politics in Popular Culture], IRPS No. 36/87C00752). Special attention is given to the theatrical & expressive aspects of the ceremony, whose protagonist is a man representing Christ, carrying a cross & dressed in red. He is the key figure, & it is his gestural, nonverbal nature that attracts the attention of the spectators. The "Red Christ" thus becomes an element of discrimination between an official religiosity & a more popular one. The color red also has explicitly political overtones. Despite innovations over time, the "Red Christ" remains a central axis of symbolic communication at the popular level. Modified HA

88T6220

Cipriani, Roberto (U Rome, I-00100 Italy), La Religion populaire: en guise de presentation (Popular Religion: An Introduction). ♦ Archives de sciences sociales des religions 1987, 32, 64-1, July-Sept, 5-6. (FRF)

* An editorial introduction to five articles on popular religion by Enzo Pace, Bennetta Jules-Rosette, Nikos Kokosalakis, Emile Poulat, & Roberto Cipriani (see abstracts in this section). These were selected from the contributions to the session on popular religion at the International Sociological Assoc conference held in New Delhi, India, in Aug 1986. They reveal the many hermeneutic possibilities of research on popular religion. Modified HA

88T6221

Crow, Kenneth E. (U Colorado, Boulder 80309), Pastors' Perceptions of Differential Sect and Church Characteristics among the Congregations within a Conversionist Sect. ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, 4. The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1330-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8716242.

JOURNAL OF COMPARATIVE SOCIOLOGY AND RELIGION (JCSR)
P.O. Box 7305, Ottawa, Canada K1L 8E4

OFFERS original articles in comparative religion, comparative sociology, social themes, and administration and public policy issues.

PROVIDES greater awareness through dialogue articles, and advancing excellence in comparative studies.

TO SUBSCRIBE send your name and address to Editor, JCSR., P.O. Box 7305, Ottawa, Canada K1L 8E4

Subscription Rate (in US currency)

Students	--	$20.00
Individuals	--	30.00
Institutions	--	50.00
group rate (for order of two or more)	--	35.00

Published by Canada Sociological Research Centre, Ottawa, Canada

PUBLISHING AN INTERDISCIPLINARY ANNUAL JOURNAL IN COMPARATIVE SOCIOLOGY AND COMPARATIVE RELIGION

. AN INDISPENSABLE REFERENCE FOR REFERENCE, SPECIALIZED AND GENERAL LIBRARIES

ISSN 0709-3519

8876230

Hornsby-Smith, Michael P., Turcan, Kathryn A. & Rajan, Lynda T. (U Surrey, Guildford GU2 5XH England). Patterns of Religious Commitment, Inter-marriage and Marital Breakdown among English Catholics. ♦ Archives de sciences sociales des religions, 1987, 32, 64-1, July-Sept., 137-155.

§ Analyses are presented of the relationships between the social & religious origins of English Catholics, their patterns of religious endogamy & exogamy, the coincidence of marital breakdown & abandonment of religious practice, & current religious commitment. Data were collected in a 1978 survey (N = 1,023) of a national sample of adult Roman Catholics in England & Wales (see Hornsby-Smith, Michael P. & Lee, R. M., Roman Catholic Opinion: A Study of Roman Catholics in England and Wales in the 1970s, Guildford, England: U of Surrey, 1979). It appears that the decline in religious participation (as defined by attendance at mass & type of marriage contracted) has a strong influence on marital breakdown. The type of marriage is also closely linked with the timing of abandonment of religious practice. It is concluded that, by the late 1970s, the defenses that protected the Roman Catholic community from the influence of general social norms had broken down. 9 Tables, 1 Figure, 1 Appendix, 12 References. HA Tr & Modified by C. Waters

8816231

Jules-Rosette, Bennetta (U California San Diego, La Jolla 92093). New Religious Consciousness and the State in Africa: Selected Case Studies. ♦ Archives de sciences sociales des religions, 1987, 32, 64-1, July-Sept., 15-35.

* A revised version of SA 34 3/86S18058/ISA/1986/4638

8816232

Kelly, James R. (Fordham U, Bronx NY 10458). Residual or Prophetic? The Cultural Fate of Roman Catholic Sexual Ethics of Abortion and Contraception. Social Thought, 1986, 12, 2, spring, 3-18.

* A review of findings on the contraception & abortion attitudes & practices of Catholics & others, with focus on Catholic sexual ethics. The data show widespread dissent among Catholics from official teaching, although Catholic practice & opinion remain distinguishable from mainstream US opinion & practice. There are several reasons for anticipating that these differences will persist: disagreement with Church doctrine has not resulted in widespread disaffiliation, natural family planning methods are officially promoted & have received some medical & feminist endorsement, & Catholic social thought now links issues of sexuality & social justice, making it less plausible to characterize Catholic sexual ethics as morally repressive & arbitrary. 42 References. AA

8816233

Kohn, Rachael L. E. (Dept Religious Studies U Sydney, New South Wales 2006 Australia). Ethnic Judaism and the Messianic Movement. The Jewish Journal of Sociology, 1987, 29, 2, Dec., 85-96.

* The decline of Jewish orthodoxy has resulted in new nonreligious sources of Jewish identity, which permit assertions of Jewish identity despite adoption of non-Jewish beliefs. Such a case is examined: the Messianic Jewish Movement of Jewish Christians. By asserting the importance of intermarriage, Jewish religious observances, & the erection of Messianic Jewish congregations, this movement has sought to avoid the failure of its predecessor, Hebrew Christianity (begun in the mid-nineteenth century), which was absorbed by the Church. While Messianic Judaism emphasizes Jewish traditions, it is nonetheless premised on an ethnic, though not necessarily Jewish, definition of the Jewish people, ie, the Jewish nation remains an entity even after its acceptance of the Christian Messiah. This & other ostensibly Jewish movements that hold tenets that are fundamentally opposed to Jewish beliefs present a challenge to contemporary Judaism & indicate a basic weakness in its ethnic definition. AA

8876234

Kokosalakis, Nikos (U Liverpool, L69 3BX England). The Political Significance of Popular Religion in Greece. ♦ Archives de sciences sociales des religions, 1987, 32, 64-1, July-Sept., 37-52.

* A revised version of SA 34 3/86S18121/ISA/1986/4701

8876235

Kokosalakis, Nikos (Dept Sociology Liverpool U, L69 3BX England). Religion and Modernization in 19th Century Greece. ♦ Social Compass, 1987, 34, 2-3, 223-241.

The specific society & culture of modern Greece can only be understood through an analysis of the relations between religion & politics in the nineteenth century. The process of modernization of the Greek Orthodox Church & of Greek society during the nineteenth century was strongly influenced by religious culture, which had remained unaffected by the ideas of the Reformation & of the Enlightenment. Other important factors influenced social change: the ideologies of Greek nationalism, & the impact of foreign political forces. A discussion of the process examines the cultural specificity & ethnic character of Greek Orthodoxy, & the historical link between Hellenism & the Orthodox Church as a basis of Greek ethnic identity before independence. The fusion of religious culture & national aspirations is examined in relation to the problems encountered in the process of modernization. 30 References. HA Tr & Modified by C. Waters

8816236

La Brack, Bruce (Dept Sociology U Pacific, Stockton CA 95211). Evolution of Sikh Family Form and Values in Rural California: Continuity and Change 1904-1980. ♦ U Journal of Comparative Family Studies, 1988, 19, 2, summer, 287-309.

§ A historical case study of the evolution of the Punjabi Sikh family form in Calif from 1904 to 1980, based on historical sources, interviews (N not given), & ethnographic field data. Sikhs began as all-M sojourners & went through a period of out-marriage, largely with Hispanic women. After WWII, changes in US immigration policy led to renewed immigration from India, & to the reappearance of the traditional arranged endogamous marriage as the culturally preferred pattern. As Sikh youth reach marriageable age, new intergenerational conflicts are emerging over definitions of "a proper marriage" & "a good Sikh". 8 Tables, 24 References. Modified HA

8816237

Ladd, Everett Carl (Instit Social Inquiry U Connecticut, Storrs 06268). Secular and Religious America. ♦ U Society, 1987, 24, 3(167), Mar-Apr., 63-68.

§ Survey research on religious beliefs & practices of Americans is evaluated, & the question of the degree to which secularism has been overpowered by a new religiosity is addressed. Problems inherent in the survey research data are discussed. By just about every measure that survey researchers have employed, the US appears to be markedly more religious than its peers in the family of nations, & the extent of this differentiation may have increased in recent years. Implications of these trends are analyzed. 1. Rasmussen

8816238

Levin, Jeffrey S. & Markides, Kyriakon S. (U Michigan, Ann Arbor 48109). Religious Attendance and Psychological Well-Being in Middle-Aged and Older Mexican Americans. ♦ U Sociological Analysis, 1988, 49, 1, spring, 66-72.

* The relationship between religious attendance & psychological well-being is explored, based on 1981/82 interview data from middle-aged & older members of 3-generation Mexican-American families in San Antonio, Tex. (N = 1,125). Religious attendance has significant zero-order effects on life satisfaction in older Ms & in middle-aged & older Fs. The associations remain significant in Fs, despite controlling for age, marital status, SC, & either of two indicators of health status. Previous work in gerontology & epidemiology suggests that religious attendance, especially among older adults, may represent a proxy for health, but these findings provide only mixed confirmation of this, & only in older Ms. In Fs, religious attendance does appear to have a substantive independent effect on well-being. 2 Tables, 30 References. HA

8876239

Martinson, Oscar B. & Wilkening, E. A. (Saint Cloud State U, MN 56301). Religious Participation and Involvement in Local Politics throughout the Life Cycle. U Sociological Focus, 1987, 20, 4, Oct., 309-318.

§ An examination of the relationship between religious participation & participation in local politics using survey data (N = 1,423 Rs) collected in northwestern Wis in 1974. Results suggest that church attendance is related to voting in primary & local elections but not to talking to local officials. These results remain when control for organizational involvement, SES, sex, & selected social-psychological measures are included in the analyses. Variation in the strength of the relationship between church attendance & voting depending on the age of the R is also reported. Implications of the findings for democratic politics at the local level of government are discussed. 3 Tables, 35 References. Modified HA

88T6222

De Bernard, Mauro & De Marco, Pietro (c/o De Marco-Istit studi sociali, Via Cavour 82 I-50129 Florence Italy). Question sociale, modernisation, éthique religieuse: Le Jeune Weber entre le christianisme et la machepolitik (The Social Question, Modernization, and Religious Ethics: The Young Weber between Christianity and Machepolitik). ♦ Social Compass, 1987, 34, 2-3, 243-264. (FRE)

¶ A biographical exploration of the vicissitudes in Max Weber's life in the 1890s. These are examined as a model of the conflict resulting from a dual intellectual & moral experience: the experience of modernity, represented for Weber by the fundamental characteristics of German national liberal culture, & the moral experience, represented by the reactions of the Christian churches to the social question. It is shown that, from the outset of his intellectual & moral development, Weber was profoundly conscious of the stakes involved in the vocation of a researcher who places himself at the service of the nation. He regarded justice, tolerance, & the search for truth as the highest goals of the Puritan bourgeois spirit. Modified HA

88T6223

Deconchy, Jean-Pierre (Laboratoire psychologie sociale Centre national recherche scientifique U Paris V, F-92001 Nanterre Cedex France). Le Biologique et ses alternatives dans la production des conduites humaines: leur représentation chez des "croyants" et des non-"croyants" (Biological and Alternative Factors in the Production of Human Behavior: Their Representation among "Believers" and "Nonbelievers"). ♦ Archives de sciences sociales des religions, 1987, 32, 64-1, July-Sept, 95-116. (FRE)

¶ An experiment that investigated the social representation of the origins of human behavior is described. Volunteer Ss were 212 French students, later classified according to their own statements as 107 "believers" & 105 "nonbelievers." They were asked to evaluate to what extent certain types of behavior were determined by (1) "the human body, with all its biological & physiological functions", & (2) "something else, which is neither biological nor physiological." Principal component analyses showed that for believers, the types of behavior evaluated as being produced solely by either biological or alternative factors are clearly differentiated from those produced by both variables together; this differentiation did not appear among the nonbelievers. 8 Figures, 20 References. Modified HA

88T6224

Degand, Andre (50 rue des Pâquerettes, B-1030 Brussels Belgium). La Défense de la propriété privée. Aux sources de la doctrine sociale de l'Eglise (The Defense of Private Property: The Sources of the Social Doctrine of the Church). ♦ Social Compass, 1987, 34, 2-3, 175-186. (FRE)

¶ The social doctrine produced within Belgian Catholicism at the end of the nineteenth century is analyzed. Numerous articles, monographs, acts of congress, & conferences dating from 1891 to 1896 reveal a reaction of fear & agitation to the "menace" of socialism. Reasons for this particular reaction on the part of the Catholic Church to the "social question," i.e., the challenge of the collective & social character of the impoverishment of the subordinate SCs, are discussed. Modified HA

88T6225

Drehsen, Volker (U Tübingen, D-7400 1 Federal Republic Germany). Ernst Troeltsch ou la piété comme norme en sociologie religieuse (Ernst Troeltsch and "Piety" as a Norm in Religious Sociology). ♦ Archives de sciences sociales des religions, 1987, 32, 64-1, July-Sept, 75-93. (FRE)

Translated by J.-L. Schlegel.

¶ (Originally published in German in Renz, H., & Graf, F. W. (Eds.), Troeltsch-Studien, Vol. 3 Protestantismus und Neuzeit [Troeltsch Studies, Vol. 3 Protestantism and Modernity], Gütersloh: Gütersloher Verlagshaus/Gerd Mohn, 1984.) Reasons why Ernst Troeltsch has recently been rediscovered as a classic in the sociology of religion are investigated. Troeltsch expressed in an original manner a general constellation of religious problems. The sociological theme concerned a scientific realization of the experience of Christian piety, which is manifested as a kind of religiosity beyond traditional Protestant churches. With this formulation, Troeltsch changed to a contemporary context & a temporarily neglected tradition of Protestant theology, & opened up the restrictive, dogmatic perspectives of theology. Troeltsch's work in the sociology of religion provides an instrument for the study of the living practice of Christian piety in modern culture via both a structural theory of social differentiation & a functional theory of social-persona. Modified HA

88T6226

Duvernois, Marie-Aimée, Les Blancs, minorité anti-concordat micro-différence religieuse et identité régionale dans le sud de la Bourgogne (The "Whites," Anti-Concordat Minority: Religious Differences and Regional Identity in the South of Burgundy). ♦ Archives de sciences sociales des religions, 1987, 32, 64-1, J, 157-176. (FRE)

¶ (An extract from a doctoral thesis of the same title [publ. EHESS, Paris, 1985].) The findings of field research on the "a religious minority in southern Burgundy, France, are presented. The group was formed as the result of a schism within the Catholicism (the Concordat of 1801). They can be differentiated from the Catholics by their religious opposition & their emphasis on regional customs. The Whites maintain their identity through their observance of traditional practices, in order to create an image of themselves as exemplary Catholics. Even though in some respects they are marginalized & stigmatized, the other local inhabitants also Whites' originality to assert their own regional identity ("our Whites thus enriching the heritage of all Catholics in the region. C. W.

88T6227

Finke, Roger & Stark, Rodney (Dept Sociology & Anthropology, Loyola U, Chicago IL 60626). Religious Economies and Sacred Places: Religious Mobilization in American Cities, 1906. ♦ American Sociological Review, 1988, 53, 1, Feb, 41-49.

¶ For generations, sociologists have believed that cities are less likely to religion than are rural areas & that where many faiths compete, the credibility of each is reduced. An attempt is made to explain why these received truths are, in fact, nostalgic myths, & to state that religious participation is & ought to be higher in cities. Competition among religious bodies increases levels of religious motivation. These arguments are supported in an analysis of data from the US Census of Religious Bodies, which supplied statistics on 186 religious denominations in the 150 largest cities, i.e., all of those having an estimated population of 25,000+. 5 Tables, 1 Figure, 1 Appendix, 40 References. Modified HA

88T6228

Fishman, Aryel (Bar-Ilan U, Ramat-Gan 52100 Israel). Religious Communal Life in an Evolutionary-Functional Perspective: The case of Kibbutzim. ♦ Comparative Studies in Society and History, 1987, 29, 4, Oct, 763-786.

¶ The functional role of religion for the viability of communal life is examined. Talcott Parsons's evolutionary perspective of human social evolution is coordinated with that of Robert N. Bellah on religion, & this perspective is applied to the formation & development of the Religious Kibbutz Movement (RKM) in Israel. By employing the ideal typological method of inquiry, the value-orientation patterns of East European & German pioneering groups that formed the RKM are abstracted from ideological literature. Their disparate abilities to accommodate struggle & to govern the kibbutz system are demonstrated in both the "Bund" & institutionalized "Commune" stages of kibbutz evolution. Table, 57 References. Modified AA

88T6229

Hellemaes, Staf (Dept Sociologie Katholieke U Leuven, Belgium). Verzuiling en ontzuiling van de katholieken in België: Een historisch-sociologische vergelijking (Pillarization and Depillarization of Roman Catholics in Belgium and the Netherlands: A Historicosociological Investigation). ♦ Sociologische Tijdschrift, 1988, 35, 1, Jan-Feb, 43-56. (DUT)

¶ Although the Belgian Catholics started from a majority position, the Dutch Catholics emerged slowly from marginalization, a vanguard Catholic movement with a centralized church & an intensive mobilization of the rank & file developed in both countries. Out of this revival movement, a network of mass organizations in different fields (church, party, unions, sick funds) emerged around the turn of the twentieth century—the so-called "Catholic pillars." Given the convergence of the former developments in both countries, the divergence since the 1960s is striking: the Catholic pillar disappeared in the Netherlands while it lasted in Belgium. This is hypothesized to be the result of continuing bipolar confrontation between the Catholic & socialist movements in Belgium & the more advanced organizational development & institution of the Belgian pillar organizations. 1 Figure, 40 References. Modified HA

88T6249

Shaffir, William & Rockaway, Robert (McMaster U, Hamilton Ontario L8S 4M4). Leaving the Ultra-Orthodox Fold: Haredi Jews Who Defected. The Jewish Journal of Sociology 1987, 29, 2, Dec, 97-114

† A discussion of the process of disengagement of ultra-Orthodox Jews from religious haredi society, focusing on three stages: motivations for leaving; the process of departure, & the difficulties of being transplanted into secular society. Data were gathered in Israel during Jan-June 1986 via informal interviews with 26 former haredim aged 24-43. Differences between the situation of cult followers who become disenchanted & leave & that of the haredim (ie, ultra-Orthodox Jews) who defect are emphasized. Despite the enormous efforts required by former haredim to adjust to the lifestyle of secular Jews, none of the Rs confessed to having seriously considered a return to the haredi fold. Modified AA

88T6250

Shepherd, John J. (Saint Martin's Coll, Lancaster LA1 1JD England). Religious Education in a Multireligious Society. ♦ Research Papers - Centre for the Study of Islam and Christian-Muslim Relations, 1987, 33, Mar, 9-22

* After presenting a typology of religious education, a specific type is recommended to meet the needs of a multireligious society. The typology distinguishes between confessional & nonconfessional approaches to religious education. It is argued that a particular example of the latter, the phenomenological approach, cultivates a critical outlook, is compatible with the pluralism advocated in current theories of multicultural education, &, while it conflicts with traditional Christian & Muslim theologies, complements more modern theologies of religious pluralism. It is suggested that it may be possible to soften Muslim theology sufficiently to accommodate phenomenological religious education in European schools. Modified AA

88T6251

Stark, Rodney & Finke, Roger (U Washington, Seattle 98195). American Religion in 1776: A Statistical Portrait. ♦ Sociological Analysis, 1988, 49, 1, spring, 39-51

† A detailed statistical portrait of American religion at the beginning of the Revolution is provided, based on: (1) the Carnegie Inst's project on colonial churches, conducted by M W Jernegan (in Atlas of the Historical Geography of the United States, Paullin, Charles O, & Wright, John K. [Eds], Washington & New York: Carnegie Instit & National Geographic Society, 1932), & (2) Weis's series of publications on colonial clergy (see, eg, The Colonial Clergy and the Colonial Churches of New England, Society for the Descendants of the Colonial Clergy, 1936). These data provide a more accurate account of religion by colony & denomination & also serve as a benchmark for religious growth. The shifting fortunes of American denominations between 1776 & 1850 are also examined. 5 Tables, 18 References. Modified HA

88T6252

Ulmer, Bernd (Sozialwissenschaftliche Fakultät Fachgruppe Soziologie U Konstanz, D-7750 Federal Republic Germany). Konversionserzählungen als rekonstruktive Gattung: Erzählerische Mittel und Strategien bei der Rekonstruktion eines Bekehrungserlebnisses (Accounts of Conversion as a Reconstructive Genre: Narrative Means and Strategies in the Reconstruction of an Experience of Conversion). Zeitschrift für Soziologie, 1988, 17, 1, Feb, 19-33 (GFR)

† Oral accounts of personal experiences of religious conversion are compared & analyzed with respect to genre characteristics. The narratives of 10 German-speaking converts to various religions: Catholicism, charismatic Christianity, "new religions" (eg, Sannyasins & Ananda Marga), & Islam were tape-recorded, many verbatim extracts are presented here. The situational & social preconditions for telling the story of a conversion are explored, especially the social relation between storyteller & listener, which is defined by membership in a religious group. The elementary components of the accounts are isolated & their functional significance for the whole story evaluated. The means & strategies by which the storyteller tries to solve the difficulty of making the personal religious experience understandable to the listener are described. 1 Appendix, 24 References. Modified HA

88T6253

Urbina, Fernando (Instit Superior San Damasa, E-28008 Madrid Spain). Le Catholicisme espagnol et le processus de modernisation au XIXe siècle (Spanish Catholicism and the Process of Modernization in the Nineteenth Century). ♦ Social Compass, 1987, 34, 2-3, 211-222 (ERI)

† Based on a variety of historical evidence, the modernization of Spain is traced from the beginning of the nineteenth century, & the roles of Catholicism & of the Catholic Church in the various political & social transformations that took place are analyzed. It is shown how the old ruling class remained as a dominant bloc until the 1930s, legitimated by traditional Catholicism's system of values & myths. The development of different streams of Catholicism: traditional, liberal, social, & popular in the twentieth century is discussed. Modified HA

88T6254

Wallace, Ruth A. (George Washington U, Washington DC 20057). Catholic Women and the Creation of a New Social Reality. ♦ Gender & Society, 1988, 2, 1, Mar, 24-38

† A sociological analysis of the changing role of Fs in the Catholic Church over the past twenty years, based on a theoretical framework drawn from The Social Construction of Reality by Peter Berger & Thomas Luckmann (see SA 15 3/67C 4755). Data are derived from the documents of Vatican II, the revised Code of Canon Law, research from 1965 to the present, & exploratory interviews with 10 Catholic women recently appointed as Church administrators. Future prospects regarding the new social reality for Catholic women are discussed. 32 References. Modified HA

88T6240

McAlhoun, John (Dept Sociology Research School Social Sciences Australian National U, Canberra ACT 2601). Secularisation in Australia between 1966 and 1985: A Research Note. ♦ U The Australian and New Zealand Journal of Sociology, 1987, 23, 3, Nov, 407-422

† Census data & surveys from 1966 to 1985 in Australia are reviewed to investigate the declining role of churches in social life. Declines are observed in church affiliation, church attendance, strength of belief in God, prayer, & number of Catholic priests & members of religious orders. Declines in religious involvement are strongest in the youngest age groups, in the middle age cohorts, declines are stronger for Fs than for Ms. The evidence supports an argument of changed childhood socialization to religion &, for Fs of competing socialization in adult life. 4 Tables, 3 Figures, 1 Appendix, 17 References. Modified HA

88T6241

McSweeney, Bill (Dept Peace Studies Irish School Ecumenics, Dublin Ireland). Catholic Piety in the Nineteenth Century. ♦ Social Compass, 1987, 34, 2-3, 203-210

† The Catholic Church in the nineteenth century was faced with the disappearance of the social order belonging to medieval Christianity. The modern world seemed full of enemies & ideas that threatened the Church, which reacted by emphasizing pontifical authority & strengthening the bureaucracy centered in the Vatican. On the level of the personal consciences of Catholics, a strategy of control was attempted through the diffusion of a Church-centered piety, which included a revival of the cults of the Virgin Mary & of the Sacred Heart. It is shown that this "popular" piety was supervised from Rome, rather than arising spontaneously. HA Tr & Modified by C. Waters

88T6242

Morlet, Joel (1 rue Jean Moulin Pivot, F-51150 Tours sur Marne France). L'Eglise Catholique et la modernisation de l'agriculture en France (The Catholic Church and the Modernization of Agriculture in France). ♦ Social Compass, 1987, 34, 2-3, 187-202. (FRE)

† The relations between the Catholic Church & Ru society in France are traced from the beginning of the twentieth century, drawing on various studies & the archives of Catholic organizations. The Social Catholicism & Catholic Action organizations represented efforts by the Church to regain its influence in Ru society, but this could only be done by taking into account the economic, political, & cultural transformations that had affected this society. The success of Social Catholicism gave a large number of peasants economic & cultural access to modern agriculture. However, this evolution also threatened the identity & unity of the religious institution, & the St interests in belonging to it became blurred for some farmers. Today, the legitimacy of Catholic Action is also challenged by new trends, eg, the "charismatic renewal," which emphasize contemporary individualism. Modified HA

88T6243

Nesti, Arnaldo (Via San Agostino 16, I-50125 Florence Italy). Eglises et modernité en Europe occidentale. Pour une analyse comparative (Churches and Modernity in Western Europe: A Comparative Analysis). ♦ Social Compass, 1987, 34, 2-3, 137-149. (FRE)

† After clarifying the terms "church" & "modernity," the essential features of Catholicism in Belgium, Spain, & Italy during the nineteenth century are reconstructed. While in Belgium there was a compromise between the Catholic Church & the liberal revolution, in Spain & Italy the situation produced conflict. The relations of the Church with the modern state are then discussed. It is concluded that the Church often refuses to acknowledge social change & the pluralism & social division that characterize modern society; instead, it remains marked by a nostalgic reliance on the golden age of Christianity & its absolute values. Modified HA

88T6244

North, Cornelius W. (Selby Oak Colls, Birmingham B29 6LQ England). How Many Ways Forward in Religious Education?. ♦ Research Papers - Centre for the Study of Islam and Christian-Muslim Relations, 1987, 33, Mar, 23-42.

† Based on fieldwork conducted in inner-city Birmingham, England, three ways are suggested to advance pluralistic religious education: two of which are confessional (Streams A & B) & the third religiously pluralistic (Stream C). Stream A is removed from the City of Birmingham's full-time education provision, is funded voluntarily, & is part-time, thus permitting attendance by children already included in either Stream C or Stream B has the deepest roots in the publicly maintained system & is administered by either the Church of England, the Roman Catholic Church, or the Jewish community. Here, focus is on the pluralist syllabus of Stream C, particularly with respect to its Islamic content. The syllabus, drawn up by a statutory conference early in the 1970s, offers assimilating Islamic content from primary stage to sixth form. It gives sanction to religious education in all the schools wholly controlled by the City of Birmingham. However, it is generally held to be of no account by Muslims, & children assemble each evening in the mosque to further their religious education according to Stream A; thus, the syllabus of Stream C is dependent on non-Muslim teachers employed by the Council. It is concluded that to be effective in communicating Islam through the pluralist stream, non-Muslim teachers need the opportunity to study for a U-related certificate in Islamic Education. With this qualification, the syllabus for Stream C has the flexibility & capacity to meet the needs of the inner city & establish a place for Islam in a pluralist system of religious education. Modified AA

88T6245

Pace, Enzo (Dept Sociology U Padua, I-35100 Italy). New Paradigms of Popular Religion. ♦ Archives de sciences sociales des religions, 1987, 32, 64-1, July-Sept, 7-14

† A discussion of whether the concept of popular religion is applicable to modern complex society, with particular attention to Niklas Luhmann's paradigms, & the way that religion becomes an autoreferential system. It is suggested that popular religion (1) belongs to the historic codes of established religions, & (2) is a symbolic means of communion outside the church-oriented religions by which the needs of excessive individualism & the utopian aspiration of the community are filled. It is concluded that the traditional approach to studying popular religion should be rejected in favor of defining the "popular" as successive strategies of "reduction of complexity" with respect to a social system that has lost its unity, & no longer needs religion to serve its function of social integration. Modified AA

88T6246

Peters, Jacob (U Waterloo, Ontario N2L 3G1). Organizational Change within a Religious Denomination: A Case Study of the Coexistence of Mennonites in Canada, 1903-1978. ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 4 Nov, 1321-A

Unavailable from UMI; contact the degree-granting university.

88T6247

Poulat, Emile. Aujourd'hui il y a vingt siècles (Today, Twenty Centuries Ago). ♦ Archives de sciences sociales des religions, 1987, 32, 1, July-Sept, 53-63. (FRE)

† Some reflections on popular Christianity & the figure of Jesus, based on Roberto Cipriani's Il Cristo rosso. Riti e simboli, religione e politica nella cultura popolare (The Red Christ: Rites and Symbols, Religion and Politics in Popular Culture), see IRPS No. 36/87C00752. The development of Christianity is traced from the Jesus of the Gospels & first Christian communities to the present day. This complex evolution is much more than the assimilation of Semitic ideas to Greek & Roman concepts, & it involves societies very different from those of Europe. Christ is an important symbol in many cultures, & has many faces. Modified HA

88T6248

Remy, Jean (CSUR/CRSR, Pl Montesquieu 1/13 B-1348 Louvain-la-Neuve Belgium). Le Défi de la modernité: la stratégie de la hiérarchie catholique aux XIXe et XXe siècles et l'idée chrétienne (The Challenge of Modernity: The Strategy of the Catholic Hierarchy in the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries and the Idea of Christianity). ♦ Social Compass, 1987, 34, 2-3, 151-173. (FRE)

† The reactions of the Catholic Church to the sociopolitical situation of the nineteenth & twentieth centuries are examined, focusing on the Church in Belgium & comparing it with other countries, specifically the Netherlands & French Canada. The analysis is based on a rereading of historical works & the elaboration of a comparative method based on Weberian historical sociology. It is argued that the idea of Christianity has been a powerful mobilizing referent, which provided the ecclesiastical hierarchy with a resource for carrying out successive strategies of adaptation. Modified HA

1600 social control

36 sociology of law

88T6255

Arendell, Terry J. (Dept Anthropology & Sociology Hobart & William Smith Colls, Geneva NY 14456-3397), Women and the Economics of Divorce in the Contemporary United States, WM Signs 1987, 13, 1, autumn, 121-135

¶ Women in the US are an increasingly impoverished population. Divorce is one of the major causes of this development, with particularly severe effects on women with children. Four factors produce most of divorce's negative effects: the continued family caretaking role of divorced women, wage discrimination against women, divorce laws that maintain & increase women's financial disadvantages, & public assistance programs that fail to facilitate divorced women's transition from dependence to autonomy. W. H. Stoddard

88T6256

Bridges, George S. & Crutchfield, Robert D. (Dept Sociology U Washington, Seattle 98195), Law, Social Standing and Racial Disparities in Imprisonment, WM Social Forces 1988, 66, 3, Mar., 699-724

¶ A central & recurring concern in the sociology of criminal law is racial disparity in imprisonment: blacks are much more likely than whites to be imprisoned for crimes. Sociological theories disagree over the sources of imprisonment disparity. Prior research has ignored the social, economic, & legal characteristics of states & regions of the country that may contribute to disparity. Here, using 1982 US Dept of Justice census data on the racial composition of state prison populations & other published data on state crime patterns, laws, & legal policies, differences in social standing of blacks relative to whites are found that explain racial disparity in imprisonment across states after racial differences in involvement in crime are controlled. Blacks are more likely than whites to be imprisoned in states where the black population is a small % of the total population & predominantly Ur. The implications of these findings for a structural theory of punishment are discussed. 4 Tables, 1 Figure, 56 References. Modified HA

88T6257

Bulk, Jac D. (U Wisconsin, La Crosse 54601), Bringing Social Science into the Courtroom through the Criminal Change of Venue Hearing: The Case of the Nervous Bride and Bridegroom, WM Sociologist 1988, 25, 1, winter, 5-24

¶ An examination of the effective application of social science methodology to criminal change of venue decisions in the US. Data from 10 independent change of venue investigations conducted between 1952 & 1987 in widely scattered jurisdictions are examined. The bearing of self-evaluated partiality, perceived community prejudice, quantity of pretrial publicity, public demonstrations, inadmissible evidence, & race prejudice on courtroom decisions to grant or deny change of venue are discussed & recommendations offered. 6 Tables, 1 Figure, 2 Appendixes, 35 References. Modified HA

88T6258

Clark, Kenneth B. (City U New York, NY 10021), The Social Sciences and the Courts, WM Social Policy 1986, 17, 1, summer, 33-38

¶ A discussion of the court's power to determine the extent to which findings of social scientists are significant. Landmark civil rights decisions are presented to illustrate the lack of influence & direct power of social scientists in such cases. Social scientists are sensitive to the prevailing attitudes, political power structure, & techniques of social control operative in the society, but those who attempt to use the methods of social science in dealing with problems that threaten the status quo must expect retaliatory attacks & be prepared to accept the risks involved. F. Rasmussen

88T6259

Clements, William Harold (U Delaware, Newark 19711), The Effectiveness of Client Specific Planning as an Alternative Sentence, Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1544-A-1545-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8719523.

88T6260

Conkley, John (National Instit Higher Education, Limerick Republic Ireland), Moral Consensus in a Secularising Society: The Irish Divorce Referendum of 1986, WM West European Politics 1987, 10, 2, Apr., 291-296

¶ An examination of some reasons for the continued refusal of the Irish electorate to pass any sort of legislation regarding divorce. Within the political elite, there has been a growing concern over the failure of the state to deal with the problem of broken marriages, & a referendum was introduced by the Fine Gael & Labour parties in June 1986 in an attempt to amend the 1937 constitutional prohibition against divorce legislation. Although PO was in favor of allowing divorce under certain circumstances & had been receptive to laws regarding contraceptives, & the Catholic Church was liberalizing its position, the referendum failed. Comparisons are made to the failure of the 1983 referendum on abortion: both are attributed to similar political & religious factors, as well as Ru-Ur differences in voters' views regarding the politicization of common religious beliefs. Some consequences of this continued electoral conservatism are discussed; a strong antidivorce movement virtually guarantees that no constitutional amendment concerning divorce will occur in the near future. 2 Tables, 3 References. K. Hyatt

88T6261

Cohen, Lloyd (California Western School Law, San Diego 92101), Marriage, Divorce, and Quasi Rents; or, "I Gave Him the Best Years of My Life", WM The Journal of Legal Studies 1987, 16, 2, June, 267-303

¶ An exploration of the economic consequences of the laws of marriage, divorce, & property settlement, & the problems with fashioning efficient laws to regulate the institution. Marriage is a form of contract in which each party promises to remain married & faithful to the other. This exchange, if enforceable, encourages optimal investment in valuable assets, which would lose a substantial portion of their value should the marriage end. The most significant asset having this characteristic is children. However, the legal system is unable to treat marriage as an enforceable contract; the courts cannot determine the specific duties of the parties, whether they have been performed, & the appropriate remedy. Thus, the marriage loses much of its value as a contract. Consequently, couples are less inclined to make investments in marriage. Since women's investment in marriage tends to be more front-end loaded, they generally have more to lose by a failed marriage; so it is not merely empty rhetoric when divorced women say "I gave him the best years of my life." 1 Table, 1 Figure. Modified AA

88T6262

Corbin, A. Robert & Walsh, Anthony (Boise State U, ID 83725), The U.S. Supreme Court and Value Legitimacy: An Experimental Approach with Older Americans, WM Sociological Inquiry 1988, 58, 1, winter, 75-86

¶ A study designed to test D. Adamany's legitimacy-conferring hypothesis (see SA 23 4/75H4974) as it relates to the US Supreme Court. Conventional wisdom has long asserted that the Court, in its role as interpreter of the Constitution, is a major force influencing the values & attitudes of Americans. Here, using a split-ballot experimental technique, support is found for this hypothesis among a sample of 150 relatively affluent older Americans from 22 states who had convened in Idaho for a national caravan travel club rally in 1986. Results of a survey questionnaire designed to elicit Rs' opinions on a variety of policy issues indicate that 5 of 9 proposals were more strongly endorsed when their attributed source was the Supreme Court rather than the US Congress or when the source was unattributed. Factor analysis reveals underlying value orientations described by the 9 items. 3 Tables, 1 Appendix, 22 References. Modified HA

CRIME AND SOCIAL DEVIANCE

Articles in Hebrew
Abstracts and Bibliographies in English

CONTENTS

Career Criminals, Recidivists, and Dangerous Offenders	Yael Hassin
The Service for Girls in Distress: Renovation or Stagnation?	David Tenne
Signal Detection Analysis of Drivers' Responses in Conditions of Frustrated Driving	Yuval Wolf Isaac Lewin
Self Prediction of Predispositions for Dangerous Driving	Yuval Wolf Isaac Lewin
Severity of Deviant Behaviors and Preferred Societal Reactions	Meir Teichman Giora Rahav
Mental Health Services for Delinquents	Peter Silfen
Prevalence and Incidence of Alcohol and Drug Use among Israeli Adolescents (1982-1983)	Meir Teichman Giora Rahav Zipora Barnea
Literature Critic	Yona Cohn
High Court Verdicts	Yaakob Bazak
English Abstracts
Letters to the Editor

Department of Criminology
Bar-Ilan University
Ramat Gan 52100, Israel

Publications of the International Institute for Labour Studies

Labour and Society

Quarterly journal of the International Institute for Labour Studies containing articles on social and labour problems, as accounts of current educational and research activities carried out by the Institute.

Annual subscription rate (1988): 55 Swiss francs, in postage by surface

Single issue: 18 Swiss francs + postage by surface or airmail

Contributions from outside the Institute will be considered for publication. They should be sent (two copies) to: The Chair, Labour and Society, International Institute for Labour Studies, P.O. Box 6, CH-1211 Geneva 22 (Switzerland).

A Spanish edition of Labour and Society (Trabajo y Sociedad) is available through the Centro Iberoamericano de Relaciones Industriales, c/Velasquez, 102-8º, E-28006 Madrid (Spain).

Research Series

Monographs reflecting the results and findings of research projects carried out by the Institute. They are published in a limited priced limited offset editions to maintain a regular flow of documents emanating from the Institute's areas of current research interest. The titles appear under the following headings:

- Strategic factors in industrial relations systems
- Quality of working life
- Women, work and society
- Workers' participation in management
- Multinational enterprises and labour
- Industrial relations and the political process

Bibliography Series

In support of its research programmes the Institute publishes regularly bibliographies on the following themes:

- Economic and social development, new international economic order, basic needs, international co-operation
- Employment, industrial relations, trade unions, international, quality of working life, women, young people
- Workers' participation in management
- Labour markets

Subscription order form

I wish to subscribe to Labour and Society (1988)

Full name: _____

Full address: _____

City: _____ Country: _____

Date: _____ Signature: _____

Mail this form to: ILO Publications
International Labour Office
CH-1211 Geneva 22 (Switzerland)

88T6272

Rosoff, Arnold J. (Wharton School U Pennsylvania, Philadelphia 19104). The AIDS Crisis: Constitutional Turning Point?, U Law Medicine and Health Care, 1987, 15, 1-2, summer, 80-85

* A review essay on a book by William J. Curran, Larry Gostin, & Mary Clark. Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome: Legal and Regulatory Policy (Washington, DC: US Public Health Service, 1986 [see listing in IRPS No. 43]). This report compiles & analyzes laws & regulations relating to acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS). The applicability of various constitutional doctrines to the legal issues that may result is also considered. The report is valuable in offering a fuller understanding of these issues. 1 Appendix. W. H. Stoddard

88T6273

Rothschild, Judy Helene (U California, Berkeley 94720). Mediation as Social Control: A Study of Neighborhood Justice. * Dissertation Abstracts International, 4. The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov., 1321-A-1322-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8718139.

88T6274

Sanders, Joseph & Hamilton, V. Lee (Law Center U Houston, TX 77004). Is There a "Common Law" of Responsibility? The Effect of Demographic Variables on Judgments of Wrongdoing, Law and Human Behavior, 1987, 11, 4, Dec., 277-297

* Contrary to common expectations & legal folk wisdom, the results of several surveys give no indication of group differences in the way people attribute responsibility & assign punishments. This "nonfinding" suggests considerable consensus about judgment of wrongdoing. To reach this conclusion, survey data collected in Yokohama & Kanazawa, Japan, & Detroit, Mich. (N = 2,333, 2,476, & 2,607 Rs, respectively) were used to examine the extent of group differences in the evaluation of inputs (a set of hypothetical vignettes), decision rules, & punishments. The conceptual, theoretical, & methodological issues raised by these & similar findings of small group differences are discussed. Collectively, these three issues define an agenda for future research on the nature & extent of a "common law" of responsibility. 5 Tables, 66 References. Modified AA

88T6275

Shoemaker, Donald J. (Dept Sociology Virginia Polytechnic Instit & State U, Blacksburg 24061). The Duality of Juvenile Justice in the United States: History, Trends, and Prospects, Sociological Spectrum, 1988, 8, 1, 1-17

A revised version of SA 33 5/85S17396/MISSA/1985/0559

88T6276

Stonecipher, Harry W. & Sneed, Don (c/o Sneed San Diego State U, CA 92182-0440). Libel and the Opinion Writer: The Fact-Opinion Distinction, U Journalism Quarterly, 1987, 64, 2-3, summer-autumn, 491-498

* An examination of the extent to which courts have extended constitutional & common law protection to published expressions of opinion. On the basis of several cases considered since 1984, it is concluded that editorials, letters to the editor, editorial cartoons, & news magazines are not normally breeding grounds for successful libel actions. Extensive examination is given to a 1984 US Court of Appeals case, Ollman v. Evans, which provides a set of guidelines for distinguishing between fact & opinion. Subsequent cases are studied to determine the various modes of analysis, including the Ollman guidelines that courts have used in making the fact-opinion distinction. The analysis seeks to clarify for the media opinion writer the scope of the privilege & protection afforded to comments about public issues, & to suggest how media opinion writers can remain free of libel suits. Modified AA

88T6277

Tremper, Charles Robert (Coll Law U Nebraska, Lincoln 68588).

Sanguinity and Disillusionment Where Law Meets Social Science, Law and Human Behavior, 1987, 11, 4, Dec., 267-276

* An introduction to a special issue of Law & Human Behavior on the state of the art of law & social science. Briefly reviewing the history of interdisciplinary research, progress toward integration of social science research findings into the legal process is noted. Special attention is given to factors that continue to limit the influence of social scientists on legal proceedings, in particular, the narrow range of legally relevant topics that researchers have chosen to investigate. Suggestions for improving the utility of law-related studies are offered. AA

88T6278

Vandervort, Lucinda (Coll Law U Saskatchewan, Saskatoon S7N 0W0). Social Justice in the Modern Regulatory State: Dureas, Necessity and the Consensual Model in Law, Law and Philosophy, 1987, 6, 2, Aug., 205-225

* It is argued that if substantive justice is to be the goal of law, the use of individual choice as a legal criterion for distributive & retributive purposes must be curtailed & made subject to substantive considerations. Substantive justice arguably requires that human rights to life, well-being, & the commodities essential to life & well-being, be given priority whenever a societal decision is made. If substantive justice is a collective societal responsibility, the individual cannot be justly rewarded or punished for his or her choices with respect to life, well-being, & essential commodities insofar as these choices are justified or excused by standards of substantive justice. Societal conditions & institutional arrangements should be recognized as grounds for justification & excuse because they may impose limits & constraints on the choices available to an individual that are as unavoidable & compelling as those imposed by chance or by another human being. HA

88T6279

Wiegand, Bruce (School Justice American U, Washington DC 20016). Political Considerations of Studying Tax Compliance, U The American Sociologist, 1987, 18, 4, winter, 375-384

* Given the recent interest of the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) in having academic social scientists do research on the problem of tax noncompliance, it is important to consider the political & administrative context in which such research would occur. While the IRS offers a tremendous opportunity in the form of data & expertise, its tax enforcement mission & political environment play an important role in shaping the research agenda. Specifically, the academic social scientists, wishing to avail themselves of the opportunity, must be able to demonstrate the practical application of their research, something that researchers of the so-called "underground economy" did not do. Moreover, the research must not perpetuate the notion that the ability or efficiency of the IRS to enforce the tax laws is being widely eroded. The criminal deterrence doctrine is an area of basic research having particular interest to the IRS. Directions for research are discussed. 31 References. HA

88T6280

Yamagishi, Toshio (Dept Sociology U Washington, Seattle 98195). Seriousness of Social Dilemmas and the Provision of a Sanctioning System, U Social Psychology Quarterly, 1988, 51, 1, Mar., 32-42.

* Two types of cooperation can be distinguished in social dilemmas: elementary cooperation occurs when members cooperate for the benefit of the collectivity, while instrumental cooperation occurs when members cooperate to introduce a change in the incentive structure (eg, the provision of a sanctioning system) so as to eliminate the dilemma from the original situation. The results of a social dilemma experiment, using 48 same-sex 4-person groups of Coll students, indicate that in the absence of a sanctioning system, greater temptation to defect makes Ss cooperate less fully. However, when opportunities to cooperate in a sanctioning system exist, greater temptation to defect in the original dilemma makes Ss cooperate more fully for the provision of maintenance of the sanctioning system when the gain for cooperation is large. The implication of these findings is that as the social dilemma becomes more serious, people become more willing to cooperate in providing a change in the system that addresses the dilemma problem. 2 Tables, 1 Figure, 32 References. HA

88T6263

Curran, William J., Clark, Mary E., & Gostin, Larry (AIDS Program Centers Disease Control, 1600 Clifton Rd NE Atlanta GA 30333). AIDS: Legal and Policy Implications of the Application of Traditional Disease Control Measures. In Law, Medicine and Health Care, 1987, 15, 1-2, summer, 27-35.

§ Acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) creates significant problems for public health officials. Issues raised by the application of compulsory disease-control measures disease & test-result reporting, contact tracing, & quarantine & isolation as they might apply to AIDS are considered. While there are compelling reasons for compulsory reporting of cases of AIDS, these do not justify other compulsory measures. W. H. Stoddard.

88T6264

Douglas, Roger (Dept Legal Studies La Trobe U, Bundoora Victoria 3083 Australia). Is Chivalry Dead? Gender and Sentence in the Victorian Magistrates' Courts. In The Australian and New Zealand Journal of Sociology, 1987, 23, 3, Nov., 343-357.

§ An analysis of sentencing in suburban & rural magistrates' courts in Victoria, Australia, questions the assumption that F defendants are treated more leniently than Ms. Three data sets totaling 2,992 cases in 1978/79 & 1981 were examined. While F defendants were fined less than Ms, in other respects they were treated similarly. It is suggested that the lower fines may represent a realistic assessment of the F defendants' relative lack of economic resources. 4 Tables, 29 References. Modified HA.

88T6265

Field, Martha A., & Sullivan, Kathleen M. (Law School Harvard U, Cambridge MA 02138). AIDS and the Criminal Law. In Law, Medicine and Health Care, 1987, 15, 1-2, summer, 46-60.

§ The sexual transmission of acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) & its fatal consequences have raised issues of criminal law. The applicability of several criminal charges: murder, manslaughter, negligent homicide, attempted murder, & assault to the transmission of AIDS is considered. Other possibilities would be revival of laws punishing the knowing exposure of other persons to sexually transmitted diseases, or creation of new offenses specific to AIDS. Possibilities for the structure of such a specific statute include classical culpability & affirmative duty. Criminalization has such costs as reduction of sexual privacy & selective prosecution & harassment, which make its benefits probably not worth their costs. W. H. Stoddard.

88T6266

Glass, Klaus, & Schmidt, Werner (Section Jurisprudence Karl-Marx-U, DDR-7010 Leipzig German Democratic Republic). Law and Health Promotion with Particular Reference to Lifestyles: A Comparative Research Study in Europe. Health Promotion, 1987, 2, 1, 85-90.

§ An investigation of the extent to which legislation can influence the development of health-promoting lifestyles, using data drawn from reports issued by the health ministries of 19 European countries, along with working papers & input from 26 participants at seminars held in 1982 & 1984 by the World Health Organization (WHO) Regional Office for Europe. The main focal points include: the essential features of a nation's concept of healthy lifestyles, the methodological & organizational basis of a country's health legislation, along with its underlying principles, legislative measures on health education, the enforcement of the law & public participation, & scientific research on health legislation. Results confirm that health legislation is of great importance to the development of healthy lifestyles, & should be used to supplement & reinforce education & training programs. Both legislative content & control, however, depend on prevailing social conditions: patterns of legislation are not universally applicable, though certain fundamental components can be adapted by all. The possibility of cooperation within the framework of WHO is discussed. The need to safeguard the relationship between the law & the freedom to choose one's lifestyle is emphasized, & areas for future research are identified. 4 References. Modified HA.

88T6267

Hensler, Deborah R. (Inst Civil Justice RAND Corp, 1700 Main St Santa Monica CA 90406). Surveying the Litigation Landscape: The Civil Litigation Research Project. In The Public Opinion Quarterly, 1987, 51, 4, winter, 571-579.

§ An examination of a pioneering survey of civil litigation in the US—the U of Wisconsin Civil Litigation Research Project. Initiated in the late 1970s, the project explored the number of suits brought annually, the nature of disputes that led to insurance claims & court cases, the attitudes of citizens toward legal institutions as a result of their experiences in court, & the role of lawyers in the civil justice system. Data were obtained at various stages from federal & state court records ($\Sigma N = 2,600$ disputes) & interviews with lawyers, individual disputants, & representatives of organizations involved in disputes ($\Sigma N = 3,853$) at 5 sites: Albuquerque, NM, Columbia, SC, Los Angeles, Calif, Milwaukee, Wisc, & Philadelphia, Pa. The survey's methodology is discussed in detail & some fundamental errors are illuminated. Implications for future research on litigation & survey research in general are discussed. 5 References. K. Hyatt.

88T6268

Kleck, Gary (School Criminology Florida State U, Tallahassee 32306). Crime Control through the Private Use of Armed Force. In Social Problems, 1988, 35, 1, Feb., 1-21.

§ Legal defensive violence by private citizens armed with firearms is a significant form of social control in the US. A review of the literature indicates that private gun use against violent criminals & burglars is common & about as frequent as legal actions, eg, arrests, is a more prompt negative consequence of crime than legal punishment, & is often far more severe. In 1980, 1,500-2,000 felons were legally killed by gun-wielding civilians, 8,700-16,000 were nonfatally wounded, & guns were used defensively about one million times. Victim resistance with guns is associated with lower rates of both victim injury & crime completion for robberies & assaults than any other victim action, including nonresistance. Survey & quasi-experimental evidence is consistent with the hypothesis that the private ownership & use of firearms deters criminal behavior. 6 Tables, 72 References. HA.

88T6269

Mama, Panya (Florida State U, Tallahassee 32306). Bail in Two Northern Provinces of Thailand: A Cross-Cultural Study. Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan., 1892-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8723137.

88T6270

Parmet, Wendy E. (School Law Northeastern U, Boston MA 02115). AIDS and the Limits of Discrimination Law. In Law, Medicine and Health Care, 1987, 15, 1-2, summer, 61-72.

§ An analysis of the applicability of the US Rehabilitation Act of 1973 particularly section 504, which protects the handicapped from discrimination—to cases of discrimination against individuals associated with acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS). It is argued that discrimination doctrine contains premises inapplicable to the case of AIDS: (1) the victims of discrimination are "similarly situated" to others not so victimized, & (2) the defendant has individual intent. These premises fail to work in the case of a communicable disease where individuals may be ill & pose real risks, & where they have distinct needs. The Supreme Court's decision in School Board of Nassau County v. Arline (107 S Ct 1123 [1987]) is reviewed, & it is argued that while the majority opinion went far to ensuring that individuals with communicable disease would be covered by the Rehabilitation Act, its analysis was also flawed by its reliance on discrimination doctrine. 1 Appendix. AA.

88T6271

Podolefsky, Aaron (Dept Sociology/Anthropology/Social Work Western Kentucky U, Bowling Green 42101). Population Density, Land Tenure, and Law in the New Guinea Highlands: Reflections on Legal Evolution. American Anthropologist, 1987, 89, 3, Sept., 581-595.

§ Sociological & anthropological theories have related law to: population growth, collective vs private ownership, & nucleated vs dispersed settlement. The societies of the New Guinea Highlands provide a natural laboratory for the testing of these theses. The literature on fifteen peoples provides accounts both of traditional dispute settlement & of these three explanatory variables. None of the three hypotheses is supported by the evidence. Rather, broad similarities of procedure, including reliance on mediation & reconciliation & lack of distinctions between civil & criminal law, suggest that standardized legislation is a realistic possibility for this region. 1 Table, 1 Figure, 72 References. Modified HA.

Services, 1987, 17, 2, 333-342

- * The plastic bullet was introduced into Northern Ireland as a riot control weapon in 1973 & fully replaced the rubber bullet by 1975. This missile which has been portrayed as a nonlethal minimum force weapon, has in fact caused 13 deaths, included those of 7 children, & many serious, permanent injuries & disabilities. Evidence regarding injuries inflicted shows that the plastic bullet is more dangerous than the rubber bullet. An examination of the deaths from rubber bullets ($N = 3$) & from plastic bullets ($N = 13$) shows that most victims were shot from a distance much less than that determined to be safe & in violation of the rules of engagement, evidencing abuse of the weapon by security forces. 4 Tables, 9 References. Modified HA

8876290

Peterson, Ruth D. & Bailey, William C. (Dept Sociology Ohio State U., Columbus 43210). Murder and Capital Punishment in the Evolving Context of the Post-Furman Era. ♦ U Social Forces, 1988, 66, 3, Mar., 774-807

- * In view of escalating national attention, & political & judicial activity centering on capital punishment during the past 15 years, & of concomitant changes in homicides, the impact of the death penalty on state homicide rates for the post-Furman period, 1973-1984, is investigated. Both a contiguous state matching strategy & multiple regression analysis are applied to data from the Federal Bureau of Investigation's Uniform Crime Reports & capital punishment sentencing statistics from the US Bureau of Justice Statistics. The two approaches yield quite similar results: there is no indication that national return to capital punishment since the Furman case has had a systematic downward impact on homicide. 8 Tables, 1 Appendix, 75 References. Modified HA

8876291

Selva, Lance H. & Bohm, Robert M. (Criminal Justice Administration Middle Tennessee State U, Murfreesboro 37132). A Critical Examination of the Informalism Experiment in the Administration of Jus- tice. ♦ U Crime and Social Justice, 1987, 29, 43-57

- * Liberal & radical arguments for the establishment of a more informal, decentralized, & participatory court system in the US are summarized. It is shown that the informalism experiment in the administration of justice, which has created over 120 dispute resolution centers that practice mediation, conciliation, & arbitration, is a result of a general political economic transition to late monopoly capitalism & its accompanying crises of legitimation. Various models of informal justice utilized in the US & other countries are briefly reviewed, & the major critiques of informal justice are examined in light of progressive promises regarding its potential. It is concluded that informal justice is based on certain worthy principles: lay participation, sense of community, self-determination, & equal access to the law that can serve a symbolic function in efforts to achieve truly democratic institutions. However, such a transformation will also require much broader SF & political change. 62 References. K Hyatt

8876292

Sikka, K. D. (Dept Criminology & Correctional Administration Tata Instit Social Sciences, Deonar Bombay 400088 India). Women in Indian Prisons: Major Issues. ♦ U The Indian Journal of Social Work, 1986, 47, 2, July, 201-206

- * Women are significantly underrepresented among Indian criminals & therefore among Indian prison inmates. This rarity is the cause of two significant problems for inmates: (1) their distinctive difficulties are ignored, (2) they are denied most of the programs & services available to men in prisons. Policy changes to correct this situation are recommended. 1 Table, 15 References. Modified HA

8876293

Wilkenson, Thomas Hudson (Seattle U, WA 98122). Police Organizations, Planning, and the Community: A Case Study of a Police Executive Planning Project. ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan., 1892-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8722574.

SOUTH ASIA BULLETIN

Founded in 1981 by the present editors to examine in-depth, through special issues like the one below, the social, political, and economic conditions and problems confronting contemporary South Asia.

Editors: Vasant Kaiwar, Sucheta Mazumdar

Special Double Issue, Volume 7 Nos. 1 and 2 (1987).
Crisis and Mobilization: Politics in South Asia

Major focus sections on

Communalism and Class Politics in South Asia

The National Question and the Left in Sri Lanka

Perspectives on Dalit Political and Cultural Movements

The Struggle Against Apartheid in South Africa

Price: U.S. $ 10.00.

Also available: Special issue on The National Question in Sri Lanka (vol. 6 no. 2, Fall 1986), U.S. $6.00

Address all payments, inquiries, correspondence to:
SOUTH ASIA BULLETIN, c/o Dept. of History, State University of New York at Albany, Albany, NY 12222.

53 police, penology, & correctional problems

88T6281

Brooks, Laure Weber (U Maryland, College Park 20742). Determinants of Police Orientations and Their Impact on Discretionary Police Behavior. * Dissertation Abstracts International: A The Humanities and Social Sciences. 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1322-A
Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8712248.

88T6282

Ethington, Philip J. (Dept History Stanford U, CA 94305). Vigilantes and the Police: The Creation of a Professional Police Bureaucracy in San Francisco, 1847-1900. ♦ U Journal of Social History. 1987, 21, 2, winter, 197-227

¶ The San Francisco, Calif. Police Dept became a professional bureaucracy long before police departments of other US cities. From 1847 to 1900, the Dept had a stable command structure of career chiefs & captains & very low rates of personnel turnover, along with an effective system of internal discipline. It was relatively free from partisan patronage control. It also had the highest pay & the highest arrest rates in the country. Statistical, newspaper, & manuscript evidence is used to explain how & why such a department developed so early, using a model based on political behavior, autonomous from St. factors. 7 Tables. Modified AA

88T6283

Fong, Robert S. (Sam Houston State U, Huntsville TX 77340). A Comparative Study of the Organizational Aspects of Two Texas Prison Gangs: Texas Syndicate and Mexican Mafia. * Dissertation Abstracts International: A The Humanities and Social Sciences. 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1545-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8720781.

88T6284

Gardner, Gil (Sociology Program State U New York, Old Westbury 11568). The Emergence of the New York State Prison System: A Critique of the Rusche-Kirchheimer Model. ♦ U Crime and Social Justice. 1987, 29, 88-109

¶ Recent Marxist analyses of the history of the US prison system have emphasized the influence of capitalist labor market conditions on the development of imprisonment & exploitation of convict labor. Their arguments are based largely on the model proposed by Georg Rusche & Otto Kirchheimer (Punishment and Social Structure, New York: Columbia U Press, 1939), which posited a scarcity of labor as a necessary condition for the emergence of the modern prison, & predicted the demise of this form of punishment in the face of a labor surplus & corresponding reduction in the economic value of prison manufacture. It is argued that this focus on labor market conditions leads to a reductionist interpretation of prison history. An alternative framework is proposed that empirically analyzes the relationship between imprisonment & the development of the capitalist mode of production independent of labor market conditions. After noting reasons for the restricted use of imprisonment in the colonial US, mercantile interests that fueled the development of the NY prison system & its emphasis on inmate labor are examined. Prison manufacture, particularly of textiles, made a significant economic contribution until the early twentieth century, even after the transition from laissez-faire to monopoly capitalism, such production continued to play an important role in political-economic development, representing one of the state's first efforts to stimulate consumption. Reasons why prison industry continues to thrive on the federal level, while it has virtually disappeared at the state level, are discussed. 39 References. K. Hyatt

88T6285

Holmes, Malcolm D., Daudistel, Howard C. & Farrell, Ronald A. (c/o Daudistel Dept Sociology & Anthropology U Texas, El Paso 79968). Determinants of Charge Reductions and Final Dispositions in Cases of Burglary and Robbery. ♦ U Journal of Research in Crime and Delinquency. 1987, 24, 3, Aug, 233-254

¶ An examination of legal, status, & resource determinants of both charge reductions & final dispositions in cases of burglary & robbery in 2 US jurisdictions—Delaware County, Pa. & Pima County, Ariz (N = 426 & 258 cases, respectively). While the analysis shows that SS influenced the acquisition of private counsel & pretrial release—resources that tended to favor defendants at final disposition—the expectation that charge reductions might be especially receptive to status influences was ported. Only one direct status effect on charge reductions was & no indirect influences appear to have been operating. Furt. ary to the dominant thesis, the direct effects of race/eth charge reductions & final dispositions point to less severe res minorities, which may have been the result of initial overcharg. ble, 2 Figures, 1 Appendix, 48 References. Modified HA

88T6286

Holstein, James A. (Dept Social & Cultural Sciences Inst Studies Marquette U, Milwaukee WI 53233). Mental Illness in Civil Commitment Proceedings. Journal of Cont. Ethnography. 1987, 16, 2, July, 147-175

¶ Under reformed commitment legislation, mental illness alone crient grounds for mental hospitalization. Nonetheless, judges o tary commitment hearings operate under the working assump persons sought to be committed are mentally ill, & this as shapes all other aspects of their evaluations. Here, the mental i sumption is treated as an experiential reality, & the ways tha ences judges' assessments of candidate patients' courtroom d testimony, & behavior are explored along with its effect on judg ations of the tenability of these persons' proposed community rangements. Data are drawn from observations & interviews c during habeas corpus hearings in metropolitan courts in Calif 1982 & 1984, as well as more limited fieldwork in four other US tions. It is suggested that contemporary commitment practice enforce a sort of "community custody" upon those persons w commitment. 34 References. Modified HA

88T6287

Johnston, Les (Faculty Arts & Social Sciences Rolfe Coll, Devon EX8 2AT England). Controlling Police Work: Problem organisational Reform in Large Public Bureaucracies. ♦ W. Employment and Society. 1988, 2, 1, Mar, 51-70

¶ The issue of control in public bodies has been topical in GB & en varying forms. Government has sought to increase central c a variety of managerial strategies, while critics of governm sought popular accountability through democratic reforms. Th has been at its most controversial with respect to policing. Des shortcomings, models of organization & control used in the p serve the useful purpose of illustrating strategies of control co police organizations & other public bodies. Consideration of t into question the notion of unambiguous control found in much tional analysis. Control is a problematic & uncertain relation, ent organizational contexts demonstrate variable alignments o. Thus it is necessary to analyze the dynamics of control in any tion before an effective strategy of reform can be implemented on the concepts of "strategy" & "alignment" of control, the pro progressive reform in police organizations are examined, & it is ed that a pluralistic framework of democratic intervention is app. Implications of the argument for control in other public bodies sidered by reference to public sector housing allocation & mana form in the National Health Service. 62 References. HA

88T6288

MacKay, Peter (Bedfordshire Police Force, England). "The tion of a Professional Police Force Was Historically Inevi Police Studies. 1987, 10, 2, summer, 85-89

¶ Claims that the formation of a professional police force in ni century GB was inevitable are discussed, examining the politic of the emergence of policing & the widespread Wc hostility to tl tion of the new police. It is argued that the major effect of pol an encroachment on popular culture of the Wc that led to gr tance. It is concluded that the process of social control, the ic battle of hegemony between classes, was inevitable, & that sinc lice are essentially political, they played a significant role in th of that battle. 15 References. Modified HA

88T6289

Metress, Eileen K. & Metress, Seamus P. (Dept Health P & Human Performance U Toledo, OH 43606). The natomy: Bullet Damage and Crowd Control. International Journal c

1700 sociology of science

34 sociology of science

88T6294

Agassi, Joseph & Agassi, Judith Buber (York U, North York Ontario M3J 1P3). Sexism in Science. ♦ Philosophy of the Social Sciences, 1987, 17, 4, Dec, 515-522

† A review of a book by Evelyn Fox Keller, Reflections on Gender and Science (New Haven, Conn. & London: Yale U Press, 1985 [see listing in IRPS No. 43]). Its claims in the areas of psychology, biology, the history of science & methodology are examined. The author's chief hypotheses are that objectivism is macho, whereas subjectivism is not, & that objectivism is hard & unnecessarily aggressive. She claims to be following Thomas Kuhn's methodology, but she often unnoticingly follows that of Albert Einstein & Karl Popper. Excessive claims for objectivity cause trouble, so do subjectivism & the dangerous demand that feminist methodology should prescribe different research methods for women than for men. Science strives after objectivity contrary to Keller some hard sciences are subjective (quantum mechanics) & some soft sciences are objective (healing by changing lifestyles). Keller is right in claiming that gender discrimination in science, particularly in its promotion of a macho positivist ideology, is detrimental, as is discrimination in general, yet her equation of subjectivism with the feminine & her concept of F science are as objectionable as the harsh objectivism she criticizes. Scientific theory should be neutral neither masculine nor feminine. Modified AA

88T6295

Borkenau, Peter & Kammer, Daniele (U Bielefeld, D-4800 Federal Republic Germany). Publizieren oder resignieren? Subjektive berufliche Perspektiven und Bewältigungsstrategien des Mittelbaus der Universität Bielefeld (Publish or Perish? Subjective Career Perspectives and Achievement Strategies of Young Scientists at the University of Bielefeld). Zeitschrift für Soziologie, 1988, 17, 1 Feb, 72-79 (GER)

* A questionnaire was mailed to all members of the academic "middle level" (ie, assistant professors, scientific assistants, etc.) at the U of Bielefeld, West Germany, of the Rs, 42 were tenured & 148 untenured. Items investigated included: Rs' scientific productivity, professional prospects, beliefs regarding the factors controlling success, & general mood. Untenured Rs reported more gloominess, insecurity, & uneasiness than tenured Rs, scientific productivity was the same for both groups. The quantity of publications was significantly correlated with outcome variables (eg, citations, invited lectures, invited professorships, reviewer & editor duties), but productivity was hardly predictable from psychological variables (eg, causal attributions of success, self-efficacy, & gloominess). A paradoxical pattern of causal attributions was found: the more Rs published, the more they attributed success to chance & personal relations rather than ability & effort. It is argued that the present discouraging professional prospects for young scientists in West Germany inhibit their scientific achievement. 2 Tables, 6 References. Modified HA

88T6296

Brown, James Robert (U Toronto, Ontario M5S 1A1). Unravelling Holism. ♦ Philosophy of the Social Sciences, 1987, 17, 3, Sept, 427-433

† A review of a book by Larry Laudan, Science and Values: The Aims of Science and Their Role in Scientific Debate (Berkeley: U of California Press, 1984 [see listing in IRPS No. 43]), in which Laudan argues against his earlier holistic views & the holistic approach in science. Laudan's central concern is with cognitive rather than ethical values, he also offers a critique of the standard hierarchy of factual methodology & aims & values as levels of disagreement, asserting the possibility of rational choice of values. In this argument, however, he is often ambiguous regarding methods & values. As a conclusion, he argues against realistic philosophies of science. W. H. Stoddard

88T6297

Carr-Hill, Roy A. (Centre Health Economics U York, Heslington YO1 5DD England). When Is a Data Set Complete? A Squirrel with a Vacuum Cleaner, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 6, 753-764.

† A theoretical discussion, enhanced by case studies, that attempts to develop criteria for deciding the appropriate size of a data set. Two fundamental considerations are voiced: (1) the extent & nature of the data required depend on the question being asked, & (2) there is a crucial difference between whether the data are being examined post hoc or whether the design of a future data set is being proposed. After reviewing the ideological & philosophical role of data & of methodology in the development of hypotheses & theories, the issue of whether data can help resolve the conflict between two opposing paradigms (advanced by Karl Popper & Thomas S. Kuhn) of science & the social world is investigated. The history of disciplinary fragmentation & research specialization is presented, & the resulting pressures placed on researchers are examined, with focus on the rise of the methodologist/statistician, the growth of systematic empiricism, & the absurdity of meta-meta analysis. Implications of these issues for research design & data collection are addressed, particularly in the realm of sociomedical research. 1 Table, 58 References. K. Hyatt

88T6298

Endler, Norman S. & Edwards, Jean M. (York U, Downsview Ontario M3J 1P3). The "Stars" Revisited: What Are the "Stars" of the 1970s Doing in the 1980s?, Canadian Psychology/Psychologie Canadienne, 1987, 28, 2, Apr, 148-160

† The Social Sciences Citation Index (SSCI) was used as a data source for citation counts reflecting scholarly impact & publication counts reflecting productivity to examine the activities (1979-1983) of the 25 most cited Canadian psychologists ("stars") of the early 1970s (1972-1976). Most of these psychologists are still highly productive & highly cited. It has been suggested that as scholars mature they shift their focus from empirical research to theoretical, conceptual, & integrative scholarly pursuits. Comparison of the publication records of these 25 psychologists across the two time periods offers support for this proposed maturity shift. It is suggested that the "maturity shift" necessitates the consideration of the scholarly contribution represented by books & book chapters in any evaluation of the contributions of mature scholars. 4 Tables, 12 References. HA

88T6299

Feiner, Arthur H. (185 East 85th St, New York NY 10028). Notes on the Dynamics of the Problems of Editing Psychoanalytic Journals, Contemporary Psychoanalysis, 1987, 23, 4, Oct, 676-688

† Using the editing of psychoanalytic journals as a model, the conflicts experienced in setting standards involved in selection, separation, & differentiatedness are examined. Erich Fromm's analysis of the Apollonian & Dionysian traditions is cited, claiming that setting standards derives from a classical, intellectual posture, while failing to do so stems from a romantic orientation, in which the primary focus is compassion. It is argued that rigid standards without compassion result in isolating elitism; however, compassion without standards erodes quality, with consequent cynicism. Qualities of acceptability involve enlightenment, originality, scholarship, & literateness. Pitfalls for editors (& administrators of training programs) lie in their seduction by their needs for affiliation, desire for positive affect, & agreement with a writer's intentionality. The editor's task lies in confronting the anxiety of choice, his ability to tolerate disappointment & loss, & his willingness to use his power responsibly & judiciously. (References inadvertently omitted) AA

88T6300

Forti, Augusto, La scienza nel terzo millennio (Science in the Third Millennium). ♦ La Critica Sociologica, 1987, 81, Apr-June, 14-24 (ITA)

Translated by Teresa Gregorace.

† Some reflections on the future of society, especially of science in Europe, after the year 2000 are presented. It is suggested that Europe is in a privileged position to open the way for the construction of a peaceful, self-sufficient, universal society. Thanks to its multicultural traditions, Europe can understand & respect the different values of other nations. The historical tradition of science in Europe is briefly reviewed, & the modern convergence of scientific research, industry, & the military is considered. Three possible scenarios for the future are discussed, which evaluate the probable relationships between Europe & other world powers, especially the US, USSR, & Japan. Modified HA

Administrative Science Quarterly

Dedicated to advancing the understanding of administration through empirical investigation and theoretical analysis.

The September 1987 issue of ASQ includes:

"Idiosyncratic Jobs in Formalized Organizations"

Anne S. Miner

"Directorship Interlocks and Corporate Profitability"

R. Jack Richardson

"Competition and Mutualism among Early Telephone Companies"

William P. Barnett and Glenn R. Carroll

The December 1987 issue of ASQ includes:

"The Adolescence of Institutional Theory"

W. Richard Scott

"Survivors' Reactions to Layoffs: We Get by with a Little Help for Our Friends"

Joel Brockner, Steven Grover, Thomas Reed, Rocki DeWitt, and Michael Malley

"The Suppression of Technology As a Strategy for Controlling the Organizational Environment"

Richard Dunford

Special issue on Organizational Culture (Sept. 1983) still available ($10.00 per copy)

ADMINISTRATIVE SCIENCE QUARTERLY

Johnson Graduate School of Management, Cornell University, Malott Hall, Ithaca, NY 14853-4201 (607) 255-5581

Published quarterly. March, June, September, and December

Back issues, 1981-present, available for $10.00 each

Begin a subscription with ☐ forthcoming issue ☐ the _____ issue

Individual ☐ $35.00 Student (with proof of I.D.) ☐ $25.00 Institution ☐ $62.00
U.S. dollars only

Additional postage outside the U.S., Canada, and Mexico $5.00 ☐ Airmail, $25.00 ☐

☐ Visa ☐ Mastercard No. _____ Expiration date _____

☐ Payment enclosed ☐ Bill me Signature _____

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

culture. This view has been criticized recently by historians of science & by counterculturally minded critics. Post-Popperian philosophy of science provides little basis for dissent from this criticism. Historical evidence increasingly undermines the concept of progress & portrays it as an illusion. These ideas lead to two important consequences: recognition of the interplay of social & cognitive factors that contributed to the growth of the linked sociocognitive constellation of capitalism & modern science, & awareness that any rationalist approach to an ethical basis for modern culture must appeal to transcendental or at least to supra-empirical values, recognizing that any objective basis for ethics is mostly an engineered illusion. Modified HA

88T6309

Martinez-Palomo, Adolfo (Center Research & Advanced Studies, A P 14-740 07000 Mexico DF Mexico), Science for the Third World: An Inside View, 10 Perspectives in Biology and Medicine 1987, 30, 4, summer, 546-557 Response 558-560

* The great disparity between science in the developed & underdeveloped worlds has existed for little over a century, yet the effects have been drastic. The 120 countries of the Third World produce only 2% of the world's scientific output, as measured by publication & citation analysis & government budget allocations. The primary reasons for this deficiency are lack of human & economic resources, i.e., competent researchers able to work in a propitious climate with adequate resources. In addition, there is a lack of concrete policy directed toward social development that incorporates science & technology as tools for achieving national growth. The cultural value of science & its importance for achieving improvements in the social, mental, & physical well-being of Third World populations cannot be underestimated. The social role of scientists in promoting their discipline, & thus, their country's progress, is discussed. In Science, the Third World, and Social Change: A Response to "Science for the Third World," Harry B. Burke questions whether the social benefits of high-quality scientific research are likely to be as spectacular as those that Martinez-Palomo envisions. Even though basic science can be the precursor of technological advances, its benefits, in terms of better standards of living & economic development, are seldom immediate, rather recent Third World experiences with rapid technological change suggest that it results in social disintegration rather than revival. In addition, science is expensive, & its development would divert already scarce human & economic resources away from the productive economy where they are urgently needed. However, science can offer an alternative to the political-military systems of many Third World countries, & as it gains strength as an independent source of power, can work to achieve social change other than violent means. 21 References. K. Hyatt

88T6310

McClenon, James & Hyman, Ray (c/o Hyman U Oregon, Eugene 97403), A Remote Viewing Experiment Conducted by a Skeptic and a Believer, Zetetic Scholar, 1987, 11-12, Aug, 21-33
* An attempt is made to elucidate the social-psychological aspects of extrasensory perception (ESP) experiments through a series of remote viewing experiments conducted jointly by a skeptic & a believer. Eight Ss attempted to perceive target sites occupied by a remote viewing agent, giving both verbal descriptions & rank orderings of sets of 8 photographs for similarity to the target site, judges then also rank ordered the photographs based on transcribed verbal material. Scores obtained do not demonstrate the existence of a remote viewing ability. Interviews with Ss showed that some changed their attitudes to ESP during the experiment. These results are discussed from the experimenters' perspectives. 2 Tables, 13 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T6311

Okrasa, W. (Instytut Ekonomiki Polskiej Akademii Nauk, ul. Nowy Świat 72 PL-00-330 Warsaw), Differences in Scientific Productivity of Research Units: Measurement and Analysis of Output Inequality, Scientometrics, 1987, 12, 3-4, Sept, 221-239
* An analysis of the causes of unequal productivity of scientific research at the level of scientists within research units, & of research units in a full sample, & in a cross-section, using an information-theoretic measure of inequality. Data collected in 1978 from a sample of 225 food production science research institutions located in Poland are analyzed. An inverse relationship is found between volume of productivity & inequality of productivity at both levels. Identifying the sources of variability of output inequalities may be helpful in drawing conclusions regarding the absolute volumes of scientific productivity of research units. 4 Tables, 1

Figure. Modified HA

88T6312

Redner, Harry (Faculty Politics & Economics Monash U, Clayton Victoria 3168 Australia), Pathologies of Science, Social Epistemology 1987, 1, 3, July-Sept, 215-247
Comments, 249-281

* An examination of pathological aspects of the current practice of science. Major areas of genuine pathology include: corruptions of scientific ethics, problems of big science & the breakdown of communication among fields, failings in the social sciences & humanities, & the cultural meaninglessness of science. Responses are offered by Sven Anderson (U of Göttenborg, Sweden), Elazar Barkan (Harvard U, Cambridge, Mass.), Kenneth Caneva (U of North Carolina, Greensboro), Randall Collins (U of California, Riverside), Stephen Downes (U of Colorado, Boulder), Henry Fitzkowitz (State U of New York, Purchase), Steve Fuller (U of Colorado, Boulder), David Gorman (Baruch Coll, New York, NY), Frederick Grinnell (U of Texas, Dallas), David Hollinger (U of Michigan, Ann Arbor), Anne Holmquest (U of Louisville, Ky), David Oldroyd (U of New South Wales, Kensington, Australia), & Charles Willard (U of Louisville, Ky). W. H. Stoddard

88T6313

Rowse, Tim (Dept Anthropology U Sydney, New South Wales Australia 2006), Sociology Pulls Its Punches, ♦ Radical Science, 1986, 20, Nov, 139-149

* A review essay on a book edited by Karin K. Knorr-Cetina & Michael Mulkay, Science Observed: Perspectives on the Social Study of Science (Sage, 1983 (see listing in IRPS No. 43)), which considers how the sociology of science can contribute to a politics of science. According to the liberal ideal of science, the behavior of scientists is governed by collegial norms specific to their community, but exemplary to all. Recent thought more ironical & realistic, emphasizes the artificial status of knowledge, the contingent status of truth, & the absence of any distinctively scientific moral norms in observed collegial relations. As several contributions to this work illustrate, some adherents of this realism continue to treat the internal relations of the scientific community in isolation from the political & economic interests through which science is institutionalized. Other authors depart from this internalism in a variety of ways, tracing extrascientific interests in the construction of research agendas & in the closure of scientific controversies. Bruno Latour, in his essay, undermines the distinction between the internalist & interest perspectives in arguing that scientific knowledge & the arcane practices of its production through inscription are both the same thing: i.e., a political force, sui generis, determining both the remaking of the world in the image of laboratory conditions & the representation of the social as the natural. 7 References. Modified AA

88T6314

Sigelman, Lee & Whicker, Marica Lynn (U Arizona, Tucson 85721), Some Implications of Bias in Peer Review: A Simulation-Based Analysis, ♦ Social Science Quarterly, 1987, 68, 3, Sept, 494-509

* A model of the peer review process in the evaluation of manuscripts submitted for publication in a scholarly journal is formulated, & its implications are examined. The simulation focuses on various biases, including conventionality on the part of reviewers, & tendencies for editors to extend preferential treatment to work that is similar to their own, & to prestigious authors. 3 Tables, 23 References. HA

88T6315

Sinclair, Craig (Advanced Study Instit Programme Scientific Affairs Division NATO, B 1110 Brussels Belgium), Reflections on Scientific Research in the Soviet Union, Science and Public Policy (SPP), 1987, 14, 3, June, 133-138

* A report on discussions held by the NATO Science Committee in a preliminary analysis of the current state of nonmilitary science in the USSR in Sept 1986. Although the Soviet scientists appear to be lagging behind Western science in many areas, including instrumentation, information, & computer infrastructures, changes being made by new Soviet political & scientific leaders could bring about major improvements. Soviet scientists demonstrate an excellence in mathematics that will be an advantage when state-of-the-art computers become available. This conceptual ability explains why the Soviets are often first with new scientific concepts, even though restricted freedom of communication tends to retard innovation & implementation. 1 Figure. Modified HA

88T6301

Conzelin, Gabriel (U Lille I, F-59655 Villeneuve D'Ascq France), La Science selon Edgar Morin et la désacralisation de la raison (Science according Edgar Morin and the Desacralification of Rationality), Cahiers Internationaux de Sociologie, 1987, 34, 83, July-Dec, 377-392 (FRF).

¶ An examination of the work of Edgar Morin, especially La Methode ((Method), publication details not given). Morin's critical appraisal of Cartesian science is analyzed, as is the "new science" he proposes as its replacement. Morin's concept of closed reason & his explanation of the complexity paradigm are discussed. It is argued that this closure gives a sacred character to rationality, which is of particular interest as regards the relationship between science & ethics. Modified HA

88T6302

Hargens, Lowell L. (Dept Sociology U Illinois, Urbana 61801), Scholarly Consensus and Journal Rejection Rates, Am Sociological Review, 1988, 53, 1, Feb, 139-151
Comment, 152-156, Reply, 157-160

¶ The substantial variation between disciplines in rejection rates for scholarly journals has been attributed to two possible sources: variation in consensus & space shortages. Longitudinal data are presented on papers submitted to & published in 30 prestigious US scholarly journals from 1967 to 1983. Regression analyses are used to estimate the extent to which changes in submission rates explain changes in rejection rates. Results indicate that rejection rates have been very stable over time & largely unaffected by changes in submissions, thus discrediting the space shortage hypothesis. A model of the manuscript evaluation process is developed that can account for the observed interdisciplinary variation in rejection rates, as well as illuminate additional influential characteristics of the evaluation process in different disciplines. Possible links between consensus & each of these elements are discussed. In Do Journal Rejection Rates Index Consensus?, Stephen Cole, Gary Simon, & Jonathan R. Cole (State U of New York, Stony Brook) question whether journal rejection rates are an accurate indicator of consensus, & analyze variables that can potentially affect rejection rates. Consensus is redefined as the extent to which scientists in a field agree on intellectual issues, & its measurement is described as the standard deviation associated with reviewer "noise." In Further Evidence on Field Differences in Consensus from the NSF Peer Review Studies, Lowell L. Hargens reevaluates these other variables that might affect rejection rates, & again concludes that consensus is the most important. Evidence from studies of peer review at the National Science Foundation (NSF) is reanalyzed to show that it does not justify rejecting Hargens's model of the relationship between consensus & the proportion of reviewers recommending acceptance. This sort of professional disagreement is attributed to a lack of definitive measures of important research concepts. 4 Tables, 2 Figures, 1 Appendix, 63 References. K. Hyatt

88T6303

Kot, S. M. (Dept Statistics Cracow Academy Economics, ul Rakowicka 27 PL-31-510 Poland), The Stochastic Model of Evolution of Scientific Disciplines, Scientometrics, 1987, 12, 3-4, Sept, 197-205

¶ A model is proposed of science as a self-adapting system comprising two subsystems: information-generating & knowledge. Each of these acts as a feedback loop for the other. A stochastic model is proposed for the subsystem of knowledge, which reflects changes of the structure of a scientific discipline. Data from Physics Abstracts on 27,266 publications are used to develop a model of the field of elementary particle physics for the years 1977-1983. A predicted structure is then proposed for the years 1984-1993. 2 Tables, 1 Figure. Modified HA

88T6304

Kretschmer, Hiltrun (Instit Theory/History/Organization of Science Academy Sciences German Democratic Republic, Prenzlauer Promenade 149-152 1100 Berlin), The Adaption of the Cooperation Structure to the Research Process and Scientific Performance in Research Groups, Scientometrics, 1987, 12, 5-6, Nov, 355-372

¶ A theoretical approach is proposed to raising the effectiveness of research groups as adaptable systems. If performance is the aim of the research group, adaptation to changing conditions in the research group, adaptation to the essential principles underlying its development. Several independent components of the cooperation structure that were simultaneously adapted to different changing conditions are shown—by analysis of data from 56 research groups comprising 450 molecular biology researchers—to exert a strong influence on performance. The hypothesis that the principle of adaptation of cooperation structure can be related to the adaptation of other group characteristics is proposed for investigation. 7 Tables, 6 Figures, 1 Appendix, 19 References. 1 HA

88T6305

Lewicka-Strzalecka, Anna (Instit Philosophy & Sociology Academy Sciences, Nowy Swiat 72 PL-00-330 Warsaw), The Structure of Systems Science, Scientometrics, 1987, 12, 3, 207-219

¶ Systems science constitutes an especially difficult object of analysis: it is wide & interdisciplinary & shows ambiguity of notions. These difficulties can be partially overcome with the aid of the graphic citation system. How this can be accomplished is illustrated by an analysis of papers ($N = 134$) presented at the Seventh European Conference on Cybernetics & Systems Research (Vienna, Austria, 1986). The structure of information flow in this area is described on the basis of citations to 1,660 published studies. 6 Tables, 6 Figures. Modified

88T6306

Lugg, Andrew (U Ottawa, Ontario K1N 6N5), Nicholas M. Intellectual Revolution, Philosophy of the Social Sciences, 1987, 17, 3, Sept, 435-437

¶ A review of a book by Nicholas Maxwell, From Knowledge to a Revolution in the Aims and Methods of Science (Oxford, Basil Blackwell, 1984 (see listing in IRPS No. 43)). Maxwell seeks to develop a thesis between the scientific emphasis on reason & the romantic emphasis on imagination & feelings as a basis for a new approach to science. He situates science as a human practice within the larger project of enriching human life. Unfortunately, his indications of what he takes to be of value in human life raise doubts about his proposed solution. radically, radical social change appears a better answer to current problems than any intellectual revolution. W. H. Stoddard

88T6307

MacRoberts, M. H. & MacRoberts, Barbara R. (740 Co Shreveport LA 71104), Testing the Ortega Hypothesis: Facts and Fictions, Scientometrics, 1987, 12, 5-6, Nov, 293-295
Comments, 297-353

¶ J. Cole & S. Cole ("The Ortega Hypothesis," Science, 1972, 1) have challenged the Ortega hypothesis: the view that ordinary scientists contribute substantially to the advancement of science. A variety of this hypothesis in the research literature are reviewed & found to be characteristic to rely on citation counts. It is argued that such counts offer a means of testing the Ortega hypothesis properly. Comments offered by: M. B. Line (The British Library of Science, Technol. Industry, Boston Spa, Wetherby, West Yorkshire LS23 7BQ UK) in The Shoulders of Giants, or the Backs of Mice; M. J. Moravcsik (Theoretische Physik, U of Graz, A-8010 Austria) in We Must Ask Questions before Giving Answers; V. Y. Nalimov (Moscow State U, USSR) in Scientists Are Not Acrobats; L. Leydesdorff (U of Amsterdam, Netherlands) in Towards a Theory of Citation?; W. E. (Dept of Sociology, Virginia Polytechnic Instit & State U, Blacksburg) in In Search of Influence: The Testing of the Ortega Hypothesis; Meadows (Dept of Library & Information Studies, U of Loughborough LE11 3TU England) in Ortega Hypothesis; M. Oromanor (County Community Coll, Jersey City, NJ) in Ortega, Obliteration Policy Consequences; S. M. Lawani (International Instit of Tropical Agriculture, Ibadan, Nigeria) in The Ortega Hypothesis, Individualities, and Cumulative Advances; A. J. Nederhof & A. F. J. van Leeuwen (Leiden, Netherlands) in Citation Theory and the Hypothesis; Harriet Zuckerman (Columbia U, New York) in Citation Analysis and the Complex Problem of Intellectual Influence; Small (Instit Scientific Information, University City Science Philadelphia, Pa) in The Significance of Bibliographic References; Narin (Computer Horizons, Inc, 10 White Horse Pike, Haddon NJ) in To Believe or Not to Believe; & S. Cole & J. R. Cole (Dept of Sociology, State U of New York, Stony Brook) in Testing the Ortega Hypothesis: Milestone or Millstone? 14 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T6308

Magala, Slawomir (Adam Mickiewicz U, PL-61-712 Poznan), Ciência: um capricho dispendioso (Science: An Expensive Whim), Dados, 1987, 30, 1, 95-108. (POR)

¶ Science is commonly viewed as an embodiment of modern rationality & a basis for introducing rational order into nonscientific areas of

1988, 93, 5, Mar, 1153-1178

¶ An attempt is made here to explain the diffusion of the telephone & automobile across the 48 contiguous states during the time of their initial popularization & fastest growth, with focus on macrostructural attributes of states that influenced their widespread adoption, the interaction of these technologies is also examined. Official statistics & census data suggest that commercialization in Ur centers spurred adoption of both the telephone & automobile. A more complex process occurred in the R U S states with many well-off, independent farmers were relatively quick adopters of both technologies, but states with many tenant farmers—primarily southern—were slow to adopt. The data also indicate that many of the accelerating factors critical prior to WWI were less so after the war, also, the interaction between the technologies changed around the time of the war. 5 Tables, 1 Figure, 1 Appendix, 77 References. Modified HA

88T6326

Horowitz, Irving Louis (Dept Sociology Rutgers U, New Brunswick NJ 08903), New Technology and the Changing System of Author-Publisher Relations, Editor's Notes, 1987, 6, 1, spring, 10-11

¶ An attempt to explain how, with the infusion of the new technology of desktop publishing, word processing has generated a more knowledgeable author & a shift in publisher functions from printing to promotion. It is emphasized that these changing relations impact scholarly communication far more widely than other varieties of print media. While the tendencies toward monopolization in publishing are clear, less clear but no less significant are the countertendencies of multiplication of publishing forms. Everything from speed of production to sharply reduced costs argue in favor of this countertrend. Its weakness is the inability to reach the intended specialized markets. This is where the role of mission-oriented, specialized publishers becomes very significant. There is considerable volatility in this new publishing environment—everything from high failure rates to continuing absorption by the major publishers threatens to disturb this new equilibrium. However, the new situations created by technological innovation are now a clear part of the scholarly publishing world. AA

88T6327

Kirschenbaum, Alan (Faculty Industrial Engineering & Management Technion Instit Technology, Haifa 32000 [Israel]), Subsidized Technology and Its Utilization: Aids for the Disabled, U Technological Forecasting and Social Change, 1987, 31, 4, July, 335-345

¶ Subsidized research on advanced technology is one means to attain social & ideological goals recognized as vital to a society. Increasing sensitivity to the social uses of technology has recently led to funding of research & development (R&D) in aids for the disabled. An analysis of 89 such projects, conducted throughout the world between 1979 & 1983, confirm the impact of subsidized public funding on such research, leading to a narrow focus on applied research in specific disability areas with the objective of creating a viable commercial prototype for a highly visible but extremely small number of severely disabled. Subsidized funding also reinforces specialization through selective support of projects by institutional setting. This specialization further focuses research into areas likely to be rewarded by further funding, through this mechanism, scientific output matches needs for those for whom R&D is subsidized. The impact of subsidized R&D for the disabled can therefore be said to be effective as an example of societal intervention in directing technological advances. 5 Tables, 21 References. HA

88T6328

Laki, Mihály, Kényszerített innováció (Műszaki fejlesztés az eladók piacán) (Enforced Innovation), Szociológia, 1984-85, 1-2, 45-52 (HUN)

It is widely stated in the Hungarian literature that investment in research & development (R&D) has produced few new products & technologies, & thus R&D efforts are not efficient. An alternative view is argued for here, that technical inventiveness in Hungary is oriented primarily not toward new products & technologies but toward solving problems caused by scarcity & the great power of the selling side. The uninterrupted activity of an enterprise faced with shortages can only be maintained by constant filling of gaps. This is achieved by a peculiar form of innovation, but one whose often brilliant accomplishments are not recognized as novelties. Modified HA

88T6329

Levine, Edward B. & McCay, Bonnie J. (Dept Human Ecology Cook

Coll Rutgers U, New Brunswick NJ 08903), Technology: Adoption among Cape May Fishermen, U Human Organization, 1987, 46, 3, fall, 243-253

¶ The innovation process in the technologically sophisticated & heavily capitalized commercial fishery of Cape May, NJ, is discussed. Data from interviews with 46 fishing captains suggest that decisions to adopt new techniques or other innovations are linked to expectations about future fishing opportunities & assessments of current returns from fishing, as well as to vessel replacement value, an index of SI position. These factors may cause fishermen to seek changes in their economic niches. The results also underscore the importance of a situational approach combined with an actor-based model of decision making in understanding the innovation process. 6 Tables, 13 References. HA

88T6330

Lodwick, Dora G. (Michigan State U, East Lansing 48824), Solar Technologies and the Soft Path: An Empirical Examination, Dissertation Abstracts International, 4, The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1904-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8722856.

88T6331

Michelsons, Angelo, Declino industriale, innovazione tecnologica e nuova geografia economica (Industrial Decline, Technological Innovations and New Economic Geography), Quaderni di Sociologia, 1987, 33, 8, 158-164 (ITA)

¶ The processes of deindustrialization, technological innovation, & regional-Ur restructuring that have occurred in the US during the past decade are examined in a discussion of three books by US scholars: Ann Roell Markusen, Profit Cycles, Oligopoly, and Regional Development (Cambridge, Mass: MIT Press, 1985), I. Sawyers & W. K. Tabb (Eds.), Sunbelt, Snowbelt: Urban Development and Regional Restructuring (New York: Oxford U Press, 1984), & M. Castells (Ed.), High Technology, Space, and Society (Beverly Hills, Calif: Sage Publications, 1985). Ways in which the concepts & ideas about these processes have been adapted & applied to the very different situation in Italy are then examined, referring to A. Pichierri (Ed.), Il declino industriale (The Industrial Decline), Turin: Rosenberg & Sellier, 1986). Modified HA

88T6332

Sasson, Albert, Les Biotechnologies et la bio-industrie (Biotechnologies and Bioindustry), La Recherche, 1987, 18, 188, May, 726-734 (FRI)

¶ The increase of commercial enterprises in the field of biotechnology is examined. The roles of the public & private sectors in this field are discussed. Bioindustrial operations are defined, & an overview of the changes they have brought about in the overall economic & industrial structure is presented. While public attention has tended to focus on medical research & products, bioindustry is involved in many different sectors. The specific problems of management in this type of business are also investigated. 8 References. C. Waters

88T6333

Subramanian, S. K. (Asian Productivity Organization, Aoyama Dai-ichi Mansions 4-14 Akasaka 8-chome Minato-ku Tokyo 107 Japan), Technology, Productivity, and Organization, U Technological Forecasting and Social Change, 1987, 31, 4, July, 359-371

¶ Changing technology & knowledge intensification & their interactions with human values are expected to bring fundamental shifts in SE environment. An overview of the dynamics of technological change, a hypothesis on productivity dynamics, & an analysis of likely shifts in organizational structure are presented. To cope with changes, organizational productivity has to be increasingly governed by human creativity & managerial effectiveness & flexibility. Major problems likely to be faced by developing countries in getting prepared for the future are analyzed. In addition to their current focus on technological aspects, Third World countries must be concerned with people & organizational issues. 4 Tables, 4 Figures, 27 References. Modified HA

88T6334

Thurow, Lester C. (Massachusetts Instit Technology, Cambridge 02139), A Weakness in Process Technology, U Science, 1987, 238, 4834, 18 Dec, 1659-1663

¶ Although the US seems to be behind neither in research & development on new products nor in the willingness of its consumers to buy new

88T6316

Thouillier, Pierre, Le Nazisme et la "science juive" (The Nazis and "Jewish Science"), La Recherche, 1987, 18, 186, Mar. 378-383 (FRE)

† An investigation of the origins of the Nazi concept that there existed a "Jewish science," which was inferior to "Aryan science." Focus is on the work of mathematician Felix Klein, who was a non-Jew but certainly not an anti-Semite: he worked with many Jews & created a U chair for one of them. However, his idea that each race had a certain, typical way of thinking, eg, in mathematics, was distorted by the Nazis. The obvious inconsistencies & self-contradictions of Nazi theory are pointed out. The devastating effect on German U of the proclamation of 1933 which prohibited Jews from holding faculty positions is discussed. 2 Photographs. C Waters

88T6317

Truzzi, Marcello (Eastern Michigan U, Ypsilanti 48197), Reflections on "Project Alpha": Scientific Experiment or Conjuror's Illusion?, Zetetic Scholar, 1987, 11-12, Aug. 73-98

† In 1983, James Randi stated at a press conference that two star performers in Washington U's McDonnell Laboratory for Psychical Research were conjurors who worked with Randi to demonstrate the possibility of fooling parapsychologists. A number of precedent cases exist in the history of science. Randi did not represent his actions as a simple prank, but as a serious psychological experiment. In fact, no major researcher ever endorsed the S's performance as psychokinetic. Randi has announced a second attempt, presumably of a similar type although Randi eventually disavowed such an intent. It is argued that Randi's own role has not been that of a scientist but that of a performer. The ethical issues raised by this series of events are explored. 99 References. W H Stoddard

88T6318

Truzzi, Marcello (Eastern Michigan U, Ypsilanti 48197), Zetetic Ruminations on Skepticism and Anomalies in Science, Zetetic Scholar, 1987, 11-12, Aug. 7-20

† Reflections are offered on the concept of the zetetic approach advanced by Zetetic Scholar. Zetetics are those who maintain an attitude of doubt & of suspended belief. Ironically, many publicly proclaimed skeptics actually take attitudes of dogmatic disbelief. A need is seen for a more genuinely agnostic approach to science. The implications of this agnosticism for the scientific investigation of anomalous phenomena are considered. 25 References. W H Stoddard

88T6319

van Rossum, W. (Vakgroep Welzijnsbeleidsvraagstukken en werkgroep Wetenschapsonderzoek Rijks U Groningen, NI-9700 AB Netherlands), De ontwikkeling van het wetenschapsonderzoek (The Development of Science Studies), W Mens en Maatschappij, 1987, 62, supplement, 9-22 (DUT)

† Some theoretical developments within the field of science studies are reviewed, & some new research themes indicated. The feasibility of science studies as a separate field of study is assessed. Modified

88T6320

Williams, Roger (Victoria U Manchester, M13 9PL Eng), Decline of the British Science Empire, IM Bulletin of Scientists, 1987, 43, 8, Oct. 45-48

† The state of British science & technology (S&T) has been lyzed in recent years. In particular, in 1986, a large number in this area were published, & in Jan 1987, the House of L Committee on S&T & Technology published the most com examination to date, Civil Research and Development. The de ponent of GB's public research development spending is a sub cial concern. The political significance of S&T is limited, but certain to be regularly debated in GB, at least until major ex public funding takes place. 1 Illustration, 3 References. AA

88T6321

Wrather, Joan, Scientists and Lawyers Look at Fraud in Science, 1987, 238, 4828, 6 Nov. 813-814.

† A summary of some issues discussed during a recent worksh cal misconduct among research scientists, sponsored by the Conference of Lawyers & Scientists (NCLS). Problems with what constitutes "fraudulent science" are addressed, along wit sociated with protecting the confidentiality of whistleblowers. scientific journals can inadvertently become involved in scien are illuminated. Guidelines for detecting, investigating, & p fraudulent reporting of research findings are provided for us funding agencies. K Hyatt

88T6322

----, Sociologia della scienza e politiche della ricerca (Ti gy of Science and Research Policies), Sociologia Sociale, 1987, 8, 24, Dec. 1-238 (ITA)

† A special volume containing essays on the sociology of sci search policies. In their editorial introduction, Gianni Statera do Cannavò examine the ideas of Robert K. Merton in the science, & the crisis of the Mertonian system. The more recen of Thomas S. Kuhn for a "new" sociology of science which pl er emphasis on the scientific communities are discussed. Thi tions in this volume are then introduced; almost all were origi ented at the international conference on "Scientific Profession in Rome, Italy, in Mar 1985. Here, the papers are grouped und ies: (1) Scientific Professionalism & the Sociology of Scienc ence & Scientists in Postindustrial Society, (3) Organization & Cognitive Contents of Science, (4) From the Sociology of Research Policy, (5) Studies on Research Evaluation, & (6) Research Policy in Italy. Contributions are offered by: Cannavò, John M. Ziman, Bernard-Pierre Lécuyer Hegedus, Terry Shinn, M. Cloître, Gerard Lemaire, Daniele Arie Rip, Stuart Blume, Ben Martin, John Irvine, A. A. M. Spaapen, Giorgio Sirilli, Lucia Ciampi, Romano Bettini, & A zanini. 15 Tables, 2 Figures, 350 References. C Waters

72 sociology of technology

88T6323

Bijker, W. E. (Rijks U Limburg, NI-6200 MD Maastricht Netherlands), De sociale constructie van artefacten, systemen en netwerken: Constructivisme in het techniekonderzoek (The Social Construction of Facts, Artifacts, and Networks. Constructivism in the Study of Technology), W Mens en Maatschappij, 1987, 62, supplement, 45-55. (DUT)

† Recent theoretical developments in the field of technology studies are discussed, with focus on three new approaches that have developed in the past decade: the systems, networks, & social constructivist. These approaches are complementary in that they stress the social characteristics of technologies & are relativistic in character. A new theoretical approach is called for in which the social, cultural, scientific, & economic aspects of technology are dealt with as a "seamless web." Modified HA

88T6324

Derian, Jean-Claude, La Haute technologie américaine: ressorts et stratégies (American High Technology. Resources and Strategies), Futuribles, 1987, 112, July-Aug. 47-81 (F) † Continuing a discussion of US high technology (for abstract see SA 36 2/88T4600), data are presented from government news articles, & various studies. US world domination in high is being threatened by foreign competition. Three types of adage aimed at resisting this competition are examined, ie, strat (1) emphasize technological advances & the need for the US the leader in this field; (2) stress industrial production & th ment of productivity as a response to the deindustrialization & (3) consider regulatory measures & international exchange solution to current problems. It is concluded that, although technology is now on the defensive, it still has adequate reso bright future. 5 Tables, 8 Figures. HA Tr & Modified by C.

88T6325

Fischer, Claude S. & Carroll, Glenn R. (Dept Sociology nia, Berkeley 94720), Telephone and Automobile Diffu United States, 1902-1937, W American Journal of S

1800 demography and human biology

37 demography (population studies)

88T6335

Archeampong, Konadu (Iowa State U, Ames 50010), Structural Change, Individual Modernity and Fertility Preference in Taiwan, * Dissertation Abstracts International, 4 The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1892-A
Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8721867.

88T6336

Arnold, Fred (East-West Population Instit, 1777 East-West Rd Honolulu HI 96848), Birds of Passage No More: Migration Decision Making among Filipino Immigrants in Hawaii, ♦ International Migration/Migrations Internationales/Migraciones Internacionales, 1987, 25, 1, Mar, 41-61

The determinants of future migration intentions are examined, using a value-expectancy framework that measures a set of desired goals (values) & the subjective probabilities (expectancies) that underlie migration decisions. The model is tested using data from the 1981 Honolulu Destination Survey on immigrants ($N = 1,484$ Rs) from the Ilocos region in the Philippines. The analysis demonstrates the importance of noneconomic factors in migration decision making & establishes the utility of distinguishing return migrants from onward migrants in mobility studies. 2 Tables, 2 Figures, 50 References. Modified AA

88T6337

Barnes, Richard Errol (South Dakota State U, Brookings 57006), Talcott Parsons' Economic Sub-Systems Model and County-to-County Net Migration Patterns in South Dakota, 1975-1980, * Dissertation Abstracts International, 4 The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1893-A
Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8722145.

88T6338

Behar, Cem L. (Dept Economics Bogazici U, Istanbul Turkey), Malthus and the Development of Demographic Analysis, ♦ Population Studies, 1987, 41, 2, July, 269-281

Many techniques of demographic analysis were invented & developed during the eighteenth century. F R Malthus seems to have been well acquainted with the work of the best contemporary English demographers Richard Price & Joshua Milne. An attempt is made to determine Malthus's place in the history of demographic analysis & concepts, evaluate his personal contribution to demographic analysis, & examine the extent to which he was a pure demographer. Fertility & mortality analysis, as well as the influence of past & contemporary demographers on Malthus's work, are examined. It appears that Malthus's best pieces of demographic analysis are owed directly to Milne's or to Price's influence, thus, his personal contribution to the development of demographic techniques cannot be considered of consequence. HA

88T6339

Berman, Yitzhak (Ministry Labor & Social Affairs, Jerusalem Israel), Patterns of Migration from Europe to Israel: Jewish Migration, 1919-1984, ♦ Studi Emigrazione/Etudes Migrations, 1987, 24, 85, Mar, 102-112.

The effects of immigration patterns on Israeli society are investigated, drawing on statistical evidence. Between 1919 & 1984, 54% of all immigrants to Israel came from European countries; of these, 74% came from the USSR, Poland, & Romania. Factors affecting the different waves of migration are analyzed. The gaining of independence by the state of Israel caused a great increase in immigration. As a result of the Six Day War in 1967, there was an increase in the number of immigrants from Western Europe. In the 1980s, because of several factors, including Israel's economic recession, immigration from Europe has reached a low ebb. 7 Tables, 13 References. Modified HA

88T6340

Bernard, Philippe J. (3 rue du général Langlois, F-75116 Paris France), Une dialectique des migrations: acculturation et transition démographique (A Dialectic of Migration: Acculturation and Demographic Transition), European Journal of Population/Revue européenne de démographie, 1987, 2, 3-4, May, 387-405. (1 Rf.)

† An analysis of two types of migration that tend to follow each other: colonizing & social-capillarity. Colonizing migration is related to a technical, military, & economic advantage of one group over the other, & is characterized by a demographic surge in the first group. Social-capillarity migration occurs when the first colonizing group has completed its demographic transition & the second group has barely started. Two outcomes of this process are suggested: one optimistic, resulting in economic advances for the second group, with a return to democratic equilibrium, & the other catastrophic, with consequences that are difficult to predict. 19 References. Modified HA

88T6341

Davis, Kingsley (Hoover Instit Stanford U, CA 94305), The World's Most Expensive Survey, Sociological Forum, 1987, 2, 4, fall, 829-834

† A review essay on a book edited by John Cleland & John Hoberaft, Reproductive Change in Developing Countries. Insights from the World Fertility Survey (London: Oxford U Press, 1985 [see listing in IRPS No 43]). This work evaluates whether the 1972-1984 World Fertility Survey (WFS) made contributions to science & policy commensurate with its cost of $40 million. Contributions from twelve persons with firsthand knowledge of the project describe the history & methodology of the WFS & its findings on marriage, social organization, contraception, & social determinants of fertility in the Third World. It is argued that the WFS was too concerned with the mechanical details of data collection at the expense of a sound theoretical framework. In addition, the WFS sweepingly concluded that contraceptive dissemination & family planning were responsible for reducing fertility, failing to acknowledge the influence of SF changes & psychological motivations of individual women in less developed countries on contraceptive use & fertility behavior. K. Hyatt

88T6342

Dean, K. G. (Coll Saint Mark & Saint John, Plymouth PL6 8BH England), The Disaggregation of Migration Flows: The Case of Brittany, 1975-1982, in Regional Studies, 1987, 21, 4, Aug, 313-325

† In contrast to most interregional studies of migration, which have sought to illuminate total migratory flows or net migration through multiple regression analysis, here inflows & outflows are disaggregated using official data to reveal the characteristics of migrants in terms of gender, age, economic activity, & occupation. This is done for Brittany in the most recent intercensus period (1975-1982) in order to elaborate & apply a descriptive model of counterurbanization based on six demographic facets. In terms of this model, Brittany is found to be a fairly well-developed example. Implications for the conceptualization & explanation of counterurbanization trends are discussed. 12 Tables, 10 Figures, 33 References. HA

88T6343

Desai, Sonalde (Stanford U, CA 94305), A Model of Sequential Fertility Decisions: With an Application to Sri Lanka, * Dissertation Abstracts International, 4 The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1546-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8720379.

88T6344

D'Ambra, Raffaella, Mobilità sociale nei francesi di origine italiana (Social Mobility among French Citizens of Italian Origin), ♦ Studi Emigrazione/Etudes Migrations, 1987, 24, 85, Mar, 63-74. (ITA)

† In a 1979/80 sample survey, questionnaire interviews were conducted with 50 Ms & 50 Fs of Italian origin who had become naturalized French citizens. Focus was on the role played by French citizenship in the Rs' integration & social mobility. Rs showed a double loyalty: affective & cultural ties with Italy, material & legal ties with France. This ambivalent situation caused a wavering between opposing attitudes. Even the notion of motherland was modified: many Rs considered themselves "European," thus overcoming the conflict between being Italian or French. 13 References. Modified HA products, the evidence clearly shows that it is behind when it comes to process technologies. Often Americans, even when a correction is made for wage differences, cannot produce goods at the price or quality levels achieved abroad. There is no one overriding reason for this lag in process technologies. An undereducated & trained L.F. too little saving investment, a failure to see production as a central task, & oil have all contributed to the problem. HA

SOCIAL ANALYSIS

Journal of Cultural and Social Practice

For anthropologists, sociologists, political scientists, social historians

SOCIAL ANALYSIS regularly publishes articles of a combined theoretical and substantive nature which address critical issues and problems in cultural and social studies.

SPECIAL ISSUE NUMBER 22, DECEMBER 1987

POWER, PROCESS AND TRANSFORMATION: ESSAYS IN MEMORY OF MAX GLUCKMAN

Edited by Bruce Kapferer

Bruce Kapferer: The Anthropology of Max Gluckman

Luc de Heusch: Sacred Kingship as a Politico Symbolic Structure: A Re-Evaluation of Frazer's Thesis

Chandra Jayawardena: Analysis of a Social Situation in Aceh Besar: An Exploration in Micro History

Kingsley Garbett: Symbolic Labour and the Transfer of Symbolic Capital in the Production of a Ritual Field among Korekore and Zezuru of Zimbabwe

T.M.S. Evens: Psychologism and Ethnocentrism in Anthropological Interactionism

Don Handelman: Micro-Structure and Macro-Process: The Development of Infrastructure in two Israeli Work Settings

Susan Baggett Barham: Takeovers, Decision-Making and Power in Organisations

Sally Falk Moore: Dividing the Pot of Gold: Social and Symbolic Elements in an Instrumental Negotiation

Meyer Fortes: Towards the Judicial Process: A Tallensi Case

	Students (Aust)	Other Individuals	Inst
ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION	$12 00	$17 00	$30 00
SINGLE NUMBER Special Issue	$10 00	$15 00	$24 00
SINGLE NUMBER Ordinary Issue	$7 00	$11 50	$18 00
SET OF BACK ISSUES 1979-1986	$70 00	$95 00	$180 00
"SPECIAL" FOR NEW SUBSCRIBERS All back issue; plus 1987 subscription	$80 00	$105 00	$200 00

Cheques from outside Australia can be in US dollars

NAME

ADDRESS

STATE/COUNTRY

POSTCODE

SUBSCRIPTION TYPE

AMOUNT

Please mail cheque or purchaser order to Social Analysis, Dept. of Anthropology, University of Adelaide, G.P.O. Box 498, Adelaide, 5001, Australia

All prices include the cost of overland postage.

A review of the literature on the variation of the human sex ratio at birth makes it clear that this ratio varies (if only slightly) with a large number of variables, including race, season, wartime, legitimacy, birth order, & paternal age. In addition, variation is likely to occur relative to the psychological status of parents, the smoking status of the mother, the handedness of the parents, the location of an anomalously implanted pregnancy, occupation, & maternal age. None of this variation is substantial, however, more recent research stemming from medical (rather than demographic) sources seems to have identified a few conditions with which sex ratio varies substantially, e.g., time of insemination within the cycle, some forms of parental disease at the time of conception, hormonal treatment of the parents for subfertility or other condition, & inadvertent exposure of parents to deleterious chemicals. These latter forms of research occupy only a tiny fraction of the existing literature on sex ratio, but they seem to comprise the most promising lead in the search for causes of variation (& for means of control) of sex ratio. 6 Tables, 19 References. HA

88T6355

Johansson, S. Ryan & Mosk, Carl (Group Demography U California, Berkeley 94720). Exposure, Resistance and Life Expectancy: Disease and Death during the Economic Development of Japan, 1900-1960. ♦ Population Studies, 1987, 41, 2, July, 207-235.

An analysis of Japan's unique place in modern mortality history. It was the first non-Western country to make the epidemiological transition from epidemic/endemic infectious disease to degenerative diseases as leading causes of death, & also (at least initially) maintained a relatively high level of life expectancy. Using government statistics for the period 1900-1960, Japan's mortality patterns are discussed within the context of its economic & cultural development, & compared to those of European countries that experienced a similar rate of industrialization & modernization. The role of biological determinants of life expectancy levels, e.g., protection from & resistance to disease exposure, is examined. It is revealed how these interacted to produce superficially similar high life expectancy levels in Japan, Italy, GB, & Wales, despite their economic & social disparities in 1900. Japan, however, was unable to maintain this level until after WWII, when M life expectancy again surged. Three factors are identified as responsible for this increase: (1) reduced cost & increased efficiency of disease control techniques, (2) increased public health expenditures, & (3) urbanization. 8 Tables, 3 Figures. K Hyatt

88T6356

Jun, Kwang Hee (Brown U, Providence RI 02912). Reproductive Behavior of Rural-Urban Migrants in Korea: An Analysis of the Proximate Determinants. ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1893-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8715515.

88T6357

Kim, Tai-Hun (Australian National U, Canberra ACT 2601). Mortality Transition in Korea: 1960-1980. ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1893-A-1894-A.

1 Available from UMI; contact the degree-granting university.

88T6358

Larson, Eric Martin (U Texas, Austin 78712). International Migration and the Labor Force: A Study of Members of Migrant Households versus Members of Domestic Households in the Dominican Republic. ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1322-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8717463.

88T6359

Lee, Richard. The Post-Demographic Transition in East and South East Asia: Similarities and Contrasts with Europe. ♦ Population Studies, 1987, 41, 2, July, 187-206.

During the past fifteen years spectacular changes in demographic behavior have occurred in parts of East & Southeast Asia. These changes have been examined & contrasted with those that have taken place in parts of Europe during the corresponding period, using data from a variety of official published & unpublished sources. Although it was to be expected that the Asian transitions would have been much shorter than in Europe, it is surprising that the transition in Asian countries has in many respects caught up with & even overtaken that in the European countries. 10 Tables, 2 Figures. Modified HA

88T6360

Mason, Karen Oppenheim (U Michigan, Ann Arbor 48109). The Impact of Women's Social Position on Fertility in Developing Countries. Sociological Forum, 1987, 2, 4, fall, 718-745.

¶ An examination of ideas about possible ways in which the extent of women's autonomy, women's economic dependency, & other aspects of their position vis-à-vis men influence fertility in Third World populations. Women's position or "status" seems likely to be related to the supply of children because of its links with age at marriage. Women's position may also affect the demand for children & the costs of fertility regulation, though some connections suggested in the literature are implausible. Suggestions are made for future research. 1 Table, 4 Figures, 72 References. HA

88T6361

Maxsey, Douglas S. (U Pennsylvania, Philadelphia 19104). Do Undocumented Migrants Earn Lower Wages than Legal Immigrants? New Evidence from Mexico. ♦ U International Migration Review, 1987, 21, 2, summer, 216-274.

¶ The extent to which undocumented status lowers wage rates among immigrants to the US from 4 Mexican communities is examined, based on community surveys conducted during 1982/83 in which SE information was collected on 6,312 Rs enumerated in 885 households in Mexico & Calif. Here, analysis utilizes data gathered on 1,376 M household members. Regression equations were estimated to determine the effect of legal status on wages independent of other demographic, social, & economic variables, & special efforts were made to control for possible sample selection biases. Findings suggest that the data are relatively free from selectivity problems that have characterized earlier studies, & that legal status had no direct effect on wage rates earned by M migrants from the 4 Mexican communities. Legal status also had little effect on the kind of job that migrants take in the US, but it does play an important indirect role in determining the length of time that migrants stay in the US. By reducing the duration of stay, illegal status lowers the amount of employer specific capital accruing to undocumented migrants, & thereby lowers wage rates relative to legal migrants. 9 Tables, 86 References. HA

88T6362

Matthews, P. W., Ethnidemography, Plural Societies, 1987, 17, 1, May, 1-33.

¶ The concept of "ethnic" is proposed to replace existing terms for distinct peoples. Almost all states contain more than one ethnic, typically, one is dominant over the others. Three distinct types of ethnic are identified: territorially based, immigrant derived, & internal immigrant derived. An examination of data on ethnic groups in five countries: the USSR, China, Israel, the US, & Australia reveals the difficulties of defining ethnicity. Key components of an ethnic's identity are (1) recognition of an ancestral people, (2) existence of a descendant people, (3) perception of a historical link between the two, (4) utilization of the descendant people's culture, & (5) location of the descendant people in a state. An approach is outlined to identify ethnics, & the need is asserted for policy favorable to ethnics. 6 Tables, 29 References. W H Stoddard

88T6363

Mehrlander, U. (Friedrich-Ebert-Stiftung, Godesberger Allee 149 D-5300 Bonn Federal Republic Germany). Sociological Aspects of Migration Policy: The Case of the Federal Republic of Germany. ♦ International Migration/Migrations Internationales/Migraciones Internacionales, 1987, 25, 1, Mar, 87-96.

¶ A revised version of SA 34 3/86S18257/ISA/1986/4837

88T6364

Menken, Jane (U Pennsylvania, Philadelphia 19104). Proximate Determinants of Fertility and Mortality: A Review of Recent Findings. Sociological Forum, 1987, 2, 4, fall, 697-717.

¶ Social, cultural, & economic factors that influence fertility must work through intermediate variables or proximate determinants (PDs) that directly affect reproduction. The PDs framework & recent advances in knowledge of its components are reviewed. In addition, efforts to develop a comparable model for analysis of mortality are described. It is concluded that, for fertility, although gaps in knowledge of PDs remain & continuing periodic measurement is necessary to monitor their levels & changes, the primary need now is to improve understanding of the causal links between the SE features of a population & the PDs. 2 Tables, 90 References. HA

88T6345

Dow, Malcolm M. (Dept Anthropology Northwestern U, Evanston IL 60201), Nonparametric Inference Procedures for Multistate Life Table Analysis, The Journal of Mathematical Sociology, 1985, 11, 3, June, 245-263.

¶ Recent generalizations of the classical single-state life-table procedures to the multistate case provide the means to analyze simultaneously the mobility & mortality experience of one or more cohorts. Within this multidimensional demographic literature, however, little attention has been paid thus far to problems of statistical inference. Here, an inferential & hypothesis testing strategy is proposed based on fairly general nonparametric matrix permutation procedures. Several examples are presented to illustrate this matrix combinatorial approach to hypothesis testing. 5 Tables, 51 References. HA

88T6346

Easterlin, Richard A. (U Southern California, Los Angeles 90089-0152), Toward the Cumulation of Demographic Knowledge, Sociological Forum, 1987, 2, 4, fall, 835-842.

¶ A review essay on a book edited by Ansley J. Coale & Susan Cotts Watkins, The Decline of Fertility in Europe (Princeton: Princeton U Press, 1985 [see listing in IRPS No. 43]). This volume represents results of a 1979 conference that attempted to describe the general patterns of fertility decline across Europe through 1960 & develop some causal generalizations using data from the European Fertility Project (EFP). Contributors, all intimately connected with the EFP, analyzed historical demographic statistics to determine the effects of infant mortality, urbanization, industrialization, secularization, & cultural factors (religion, ethnicity, language, & region) on marital fertility & nuptiality. A brief summary of their principal conclusions is provided, with emphasis on the finding that differences in the onset of the fertility decline were associated with differences in cultural conditions. Methodological innovations employed in the EFP are also discussed. Despite a lack of comparisons with fertility patterns in modern-day less-developed countries, it is concluded that the EFP made vast contributions to demographic knowledge at comparatively little cost. 1 Figure, 8 References. K. Hyatt

88T6347

El-Attar, Mohamed (Mississippi State U, Mississippi State 39762), Internal Migration and Development: Data Sources and Measurement, International Journal of Contemporary Sociology, 1987, 24, 1-2, Jan-Apr, 112-125.

¶ A review of available data sources on internal migration as surveyed by the UN, including general population censuses, continuous population registers, periodical sample surveys, & combinations of two or more instruments. A total of 141 countries report at least one of the following: place of birth, place of previous residence, duration of current address, place of residence on particular date, or reason for change of residence on one or more instruments. A framework is proposed for the collection of genuinely comparative international data. Techniques of using such data to measure internal migration are described & are illustrated with data from various nations. 4 Tables. W. H. Stoddard

88T6348

Forbes, John F. & McGregor, Alan (Social Paediatric & Obstetric Research Unit U Glasgow, G12 8LS Scotland), Male Unemployment and Cause-Specific Mortality in Postwar Scotland, International Journal of Health Services, 1987, 17, 2, 233-240.

¶ A report of a time-series analysis of M unemployment & mortality in postwar Scotland, using official statistics. The results provide little evidence to support the hypothesis that unemployment exerts a significant & consistent positive impact on mortality from all causes—eg, lung cancer, ischemic heart disease, & cerebrovascular disease. Although significant positive associations between unemployment & mortality from lung cancer & ischemic heart disease were detected for older Ms in the short term, the long-term association between unemployment & mortality tends to be negative. Further progress on establishing possible causal relationships between unemployment & health requires both the collaboration of medical & social scientists & a well-designed prospective study that avoids many of the problems associated with time-series & cross-sectional analyses. 2 Tables, 16 References. HA

88T6349

Furhoff, Anna-Karin & Furhoff, Lars, Mortality among Swedish Journalists, U Journalism Quarterly, 1987, 64, 2-3, summer-autumn, 533-536, 663.

¶ To test the veracity of the belief that journalists die young, ty rate among M members of the Swedish Union of Journalists for the years 1950-1972, & compared to that of M al Swedish population in 1970, using government statistics. It indicates that a larger number of deaths than expected died reporters aged 50-59; however, the leading causes of death—group—heart disease & cancer—were the same as for the M p a whole. The effect of various environmental conditions & the journalistic lifestyle are investigated, including poor die irregular working hours, stress, smoking, & alcohol abuse. Hyatt

88T6350

Gmelch, George (Dept Sociology & Anthropology Union neclady NY 12308), Work, Innovation, and Investment: of Return Migrants in Barbados, U Human Organization, 2, summer, 131-140.

¶ In an examination of return migration to both Ur & Ru sel eastern Caribbean island of Barbados, the impact of student r those who were Coll educated or received technical training compared with that of worker migrants. Results of fieldwork involving a questionnaire survey & open-ended interviews (2 show that returning student migrants, most of whom enter or other white-collar occupations at home, often introduce n techniques into the workplace. The returning worker migrant impact they are often employed at jobs that do not make overseas work experience, & they generally lack the position t changes in the workplace. It is concluded that return migration dos, involving the transfer of ideas, attitudes, work skills, & c contribute to the nation's development. 4 Tables, 36 References. HA

88T6351

Goldscheider, Calvin (Brown U, Providence RI 02912), and Social Structure: Analytic Issues and Comparative Perspectives in Developing Nations, Sociological Forum, 1987, 2, 4, fall,

¶ There are profound relationships between migration & s ture, reflecting the varieties of migration types, complexity structure, & reciprocal ways migration & social structure are ed over time, in different societies, & for different community groups. Almost every thread of social structure may be linke tion patterns at macro- & micro-levels of analysis, cross-se longitudinally, with variation over the life cycle, connections SE development, & relationships to SC & political control is on several propositions that identify & illustrate the com these linkages in developing nations. Ways in which an under social structure enhances the analysis of migration processes l are suggested. 39 References. HA

88T6352

Hayes, Delores Miller (North Carolina State U, Raleigh), Ecological Model for the Study of Social Mobility of Populations, * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1553-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8718

88T6353

Hogan, Dennis P. & Kertzer, David I. (Dept Sociology IL 60637), The Social Bases of Declining Infant Mortality from a Nineteenth-Century Italian Town, European Journal of Population/Revue européenne de démographie, 1987, 2, 361-385.

¶ An analysis of social forces bearing on declining infant based on data from the Italian population register & related for the town of Casalecchio di Reno for 1865-1921. In this per ricultural community near Bologna shifted from sharecro wage-labor economy, & infant mortality rates declined sharp tions of various social & demographic factors are examined & explanations for the historical decline in infant mortality. Figure, 40 References. Modified HA

88T6354

James, William H. (Medical Research Council Mammalia ment Unit University Coll London, NW1 2HE England), * Sex Ratio. Part 1: A Review of the Literature, U Human Biology, 1987, 59, 5, Oct, 721-752.

mid-1980s to 600,000+ in the mid-1990s. As a result, will a third of the U.S. close, & will industry & commerce be able to cope with the potential reduction in skilled manpower production? A method is described for forecasting graduate numbers & their quality by discipline, & suggestions are made about how society could influence unacceptable trends. 1 Table, 5 Figures, 13 References. HA

88T6376

Verbrugge, Lois M. & Wingard, Deborah L. (Instit Gerontology U Michigan, Ann Arbor 48109-2007), Sex Differentials in Health and Mortality, Women and Health, 1987, 12, 2, summer, 103-145.

* It is common knowledge that Fs tend to live longer than Ms. In the U.S. & most other countries, F death rates are lower than M rates for all age groups. However, throughout life, Fs' health seems to be worse than Ms'. Health surveys repeatedly show that Fs have higher rates of illness, disability days, & health services use. Using previously published studies & 1980 census data, sex differentials in mortality & physical health are presented. Possible explanations for these sex differentials are discussed, & the apparent contradiction why there is excess F morbidity but excess M mortality is considered. 2 Appendixes, 107 References. Modified AA

88T6377

Watkins, Susan Cotts (U Pennsylvania, Philadelphia 19104), The Fertility Transition: Europe and the Third World Compared, Sociological Forum, 1987, 2, 4, fall, 645-673.

* A comparison of the declines in fertility in Europe & the Third World. Lower levels of fertility found are largely due to the adoption of innovative behavior within marriage. So far this transformation of reproduction has been monotonic & rapid. SE development is associated with the timing of the onset of the transition & is responsible for differences among groups during the transition, although it is not yet possible to rule out alternative explanations such as ideational or institutional change. The pace & pervasiveness of the declines, however, suggest that a mechanism of diffusion is involved. 125 References. HA

88T6378

West, Patrick C., Blahna, Dale J. & Fly, J. Mark (School Natural Resources U Michigan, Ann Arbor 48109-1115), The Unemployment Impacts of the Population Turnaround in Northern Lower Michigan, U Rural Sociology, 1987, 52, 4, winter, 522-531.

† A revised version of SA 33 3/85S16936/RSS/1985/1784

88T6379

Wilson, Franklin D. (Center Demography & Ecology U Wisconsin, Madison 53706), Aspects of Migration in an Advanced Industrial Society, U American Sociological Review, 1988, 53, 1, Feb, 113-126.

† A test of the hypothesis that 1935-1980 US migration patterns, both within & between metropolitan & nonmetropolitan areas & regions, & migrant/nonmigrant educational differences reflect regional changes in SE development & settlement patterns. Data on gross migration flows from the 1/100 Public Use Microdata files of the 1940 & 1980 decennial censuses support the mobility transition hypothesis & the idea that developmental changes in metropolitanization structure the context of migration. Since the Great Depression, SE transformations of the periphery have reduced differences in migration patterns between the periphery & core regions. While migrants still have more education than nonmigrants, their differences vary systematically by regional SE development. Specifically, migrant/nonmigrant educational differences are (1) similar at origin & destination when both are at similar levels of SE development, (2) lower at the origin if the origin is higher in SE development, & (3) higher at the origin if the destination is higher in SE development. 7 Tables, 2 Figures, 1 Appendix, 53 References. HA

44 human biology/sociobiology

88T6380

Kirschke, Siegfried (Sektion Marxistisch-leninistische Philosophie Martin-Luther-U Halle-Wittenberg, DDR-4010 Halle German Democratic Republic), Zu Bedeutung und Grenzen der Soziobiologie für das Verständnis des Menschen (The Importance and Constraints of Sociobiology with Regard to the Understanding of Man), Deutsche Zeitschrift für Philosophie, 1987, 35, 9, 815-823 (GER).

* A critical discussion of the underlying assumptions of sociobiology & its contribution to the understanding of humanity. F. O. Wilson's claims for sociobiology's power to explain all social behavior are compared to previous efforts to bring evolutionary theory into social analysis, & are found to be overextended. Basic features of Marxist philosophy's picture of humanity are reviewed & contrasted to the ahistorical reductionist picture common in sociobiology. The importance of learning processes in human adaptation is shown to undermine any strict reliance on evolutionist explanations of social behavior. J. Anderson.

88T6381

Ruse, Michael (Depts History & Philosophy U Guelph, Ontario N1G 2W1), Is Sociobiology a New Paradigm?, U Philosophy of Science, 1987, 54, 1, Mar, 98-104.

* Though sociologically speaking, sociobiology may represent a new paradigm, epistemologically it does not. It is shown that sociobiology relies on an orthodox understanding of natural selection. Thus, in crucial epistemological respects, sociobiology is continuous with the rest of Darwinian evolutionary theory. 35 References. Modified HA

88T6382

Schwartz, Andrew (Dept Psychiatry Saint Elizabeth's Hospital, Washington DC 20032), Drives, Affects, Behavior and Learning: Approaches to a Psychobiology of Emotion and to an Integration of Psychoanalytic and Neurobiologic Thought, Journal of the American Psychoanalytic Association, 1987, 35, 2, 467-506.

† Drawing on concepts & data from psychoanalysis, neuroscience, ethology, & experimental psychology, it is suggested that affects are the prime movers of human motivation & have, in addition, these properties: (1) they are neurophysiologically generated, sensation-like signals originating not in classical sensory systems, but in limbic structures, (2) activation of the neurobiologic affect generators reliably triggers motor stereotypes, eg, facial expression, posture, & tone of voice which in turn transmit the physical data underlying empathy & emotional communication; & (3) appetitively sought pleasant emotions-sensations & aversive dysphoric feelings serve respectively as the ultimate, "brain-synthesized" positive & negative reinforcers of emotional learning. The latter ideas point to derivative hypotheses: parental nonverbal behavior & communication evoke in children the emotions that guide character development & choice of defense, & these processes are consistent with an affect-reinforced associative learning model comprising both operant & classical conditioning paradigms. Psychoanalysis as therapy, then, may mechanistically rely for its clinical effectiveness on extinction-like processes in which new experience in the analyst-patient relationship leads to the modulation or extinction of initially crippling signal affects associatively linked to various other affects, appetites, & behaviors. The core hypotheses mesh both with recent findings from the cellular study of affect & learning mechanisms & with associative learning-unlearning assumptions variably explicit in psychoanalytic writings. 136 References. HA

88T6365

Michalowski, Margaret (Demography Division Statistics Canada, Tunney's Pasture Ottawa Ontario K1A 0T6). Adjustment of Immigrants in Canada: Methodological Possibilities and Its Implications. ♦ International Migration/Migrations Internationales/Migraciones Internacionales, 1987, 25, 1, Mar, 21-39

¶ An examination of research on the SE: adjustment of immigrants, with focus on recent Canadian studies. It is argued that a conceptual approach to the analysis of the adjustment process must incorporate behavioral & economic factors. Three types of general explanatory models of immigrant adaptation are distinguished, & an alternative approach is proposed, which recognizes person's age at the moment of arrival in Canada as the predominant measurable characteristic. This approach permits the identification of principal & second-order factors influencing the adaptation process, & examination of relationships between them. The approach is also useful in the analysis of differences between immigrant & Canadian-born populations within the same ethnic group. 3 Figures, 43 References. Modified AA

88T6366

Millman, Sara (Dept Sociology Brown U, Providence RI 02912). Breastfeeding and Contraception: Why the Inverse Association?. Studies in Family Planning, 1985, 16, 2, Mar-Apr, 61-75

¶ Recent research results on infant feeding practices in developing countries have consistently shown a strong negative association between breast feeding & contraceptive use. This relationship is explored in-depth with a detailed analysis of survey data obtained from nationally representative samples of married women of reproductive age in Taiwan ($\Sigma N = 7,827$) in 1967, 1973, & 1980, & supplementary evidence from 20 developing country populations. Implications for appropriate policies relating to family planning programs & the encouragement of breast-feeding are discussed. 7 Tables, 19 References. HA

88T6367

Mohieddin, Mohamed Mahmoud (U North Carolina, Chapel Hill 27514). Peasant Migration from an Egyptian Village to the Oil Producing Countries: Its Causes and Consequences. ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1905-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8722326.

88T6368

Nauck, Bernhard (Staatsinstitut Erziehungswissenschaften & Familienforschung, Arabellastr 1 D-8000 Munich 81 Federal Republic Germany). Sozialstrukturelle und individualistische Migrationstheorien. Elemente eines Theorienvergleichs (Sociostructural and Individualistic Theories of Migration Elements of a Comparison of Theories). Kolner Zeitschrift für Soziologie und Sozialpsychologie, 1988, 40, 1, Mar, 15-39 (GER)

¶ Two approaches to the sociology of migration are compared: the sociostructural approach of Hans-Joachim Hoffmann-Nowotny's theory of structural & anomic tensions (eg, Migration: Ein Beitrag zu einer soziologischen Erklärung [Migration: A Contribution to a Sociological Explanation], Stuttgart, 1970), & the individualistic approach of Hartmut Esser's action-theoretical analyses of assimilation processes (eg, Aspekte der Wanderungssoziologie: Assimilation und Integration von Wanderern, ethnischen Gruppen und Minderheiten [Aspects of the Sociology of Migration: The Assimilation and Integration of Migrants, Ethnic Groups, and Minorities], Darmstadt/Neuwied, 1980). A methodological comparison examines their general theoretical propositions, the causal models derived from them, the empirical indicators used, & the empirical analyses based on them. It is shown that although the two approaches arrive at competing propositions on the theoretical level, there are strong convergences at the level of the derived causal models. This is because of inconsistencies between the theoretical propositions & causal models in both approaches. It is discussed how far rational choice models can overcome the identified theoretical weaknesses of migration research. 6 Figures, 42 References. Modified HA

88T6369

Okeke, Barnabas Ikechukwu (Temple U, Philadelphia PA 19122). Towards the Verification of an Inter-Disciplinary Theory of Migration: The Nigerian and Israeli Contexts. ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1906-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8716387.

88T6370

Oyinlade, Abidemi Olu* (South Dakota State U, Brookings). The Effects of Nonmetropolitan Net Migration Rate on Socioeconomic and Employment Characteristics in the Agricultural Plains Division of the West North Central Region, 1970-1980. ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1894-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8722147

88T6371

Rindfuss, Ronald R., Palmore, James A. & Bumpass, Larry (U North Carolina, Chapel Hill 27514). Analyzing Birth Intervals for Demographic Theory and Data Collection. Sociological Forum, 1987, 2, 4, fall, 811-829

¶ In the last decade, the study of birth intervals has been greatly stimulated by a rapid expansion in data availability & by improved analytical techniques. Unfortunately, the results emerging from in-level, empirical studies of birth interval dynamics do not correspond to the predictions of standard demographic theory. A series of individual studies are reviewed, with focus on the finding that there is a small SE variation in childspacing after controlling statistically for mate variables. Possible explanations for the lack of fit between theory & results at the microlevel are offered, & it is concluded that most likely are poor measurement of the four principal proximal determinants & the exclusion of additional proximate determinants. 3 Figures, 44 References. Modified HA

88T6372

Sattenspiel, Lisa (Dept Anthropology U Michigan, Ann Arbor 48109). Population Structure and the Spread of Disease. Human Biology, 1987, 59, 3, June, 411-438

¶ A model is developed & analyzed that considers two different types of interactions between individuals in the spread of disease: subpopulation geographic proximity interactions, & interactions between the different subpopulations due to attendance at common social functions. Three idealized patterns of social interaction are discussed in relation to social interactions found among children in attendance at day centers, using Bernalillo County (Albuquerque, NM) Health Dept data on the spread of hepatitis A among preschool children, 1979-1982. 2 Figures, 1 Appendix, 22 References. Modified HA

88T6373

Saxena, Prem C., Verma, Ravi K. & Sharma, Arun K. (Dept Mathematical Demography & Statistics IIPS, Govandi Station Rd Bombay 400088 India). Errors in Age-Reporting in India: A Social and Psychological Explanation. ♦ The Indian Journal of Social Work, 1986, 47, 2, July, 127-135

¶ Since the first Indian census, errors in age reporting have been noted & attributed to illiteracy & underdevelopment. The adequacy of this explanation is analyzed on the basis of state-level statistics. Patterns of variation in illiteracy & age-reporting errors are significantly dissimilar. An alternative explanation is advanced based partly on differences in Rs & interviewers alike for the digits 5 & 10. Consistent overestimation for specific age groups suggests cultural causes: under- or overestimation at each age range. 3 Tables, 8 References. Modified HA

88T6374

Stycos, J. Mayone (c/o Sociological Forum, Cornell U Ithaca NY 14853-7601). Demography as an Interdiscipline. Sociological Forum, 1987, 2, 4, fall, 616-618

¶ It is argued that demography should be regarded as an "interdiscipline" as it draws heavily on biology, sociology, economics, geography & the health sciences. Recognition of the need to solve concrete problems has encouraged increased interdisciplinary efforts, & financial & technological developments have expanded usually scarce resources. Professional productivity has increased, & the real world of demography has begun to be appreciated. In turn, demography has acquired a new regard for the place of theory as well as empirical models & conceptual schemes. 4 References. K. Hyatt

88T6375

Taylor, Bryan J. R. & Taylor, Elizabeth A. (U Bath, Clarendon Road BA2 7AY England). Planning Responses to Demographic Change. ♦ Research in Higher Education, 1987, 26, 2, 14

¶ The UK faces a decline in the 18-year-old cohort from 900,000

1900 the family and socialization

38 sociology of the child

88T6383

Beautrais, Arnon (Hospital Sick Children, Great Ormond St London WC1N 3JH England). Physical and Sexual Abuse of Children-The Role of the Family Therapist. Journal of Family Therapy 1987, 9, 4, Nov, 383-388

† An examination of the role of the professional or the family therapy orientation to physical & sexual abuse of children. It could be argued that if all members of the family are the client, then reporting a family member for the abuse of another to police or social work authorities would seem to be against the spirit of seeing the family as a whole. However, although therapists should safeguard information obtained in the therapy session, there is a responsibility to report if there is clear & imminent danger to a client or others, or when a specific requisite of the law takes precedence. It is argued that when the professional has a role within a hierarchy of professionals, even though he practices family therapy as his main modality, he also has a particular responsibility within society in relationship to his clients. He not only may need to report problems with major damaging consequences to individuals, but he may be able to find a way of relating himself not only to family members, but also to the societal context as a way of ensuring that the family therapeutic work can be achieved. 12 References. Modified AA

88T6384

Berger, Brigitte (Dept Sociology Wellesley Coll, MA 02181). Limits of Doing Good. ♦ US Society, 1987, 24, 3(167), Mar-Apr, 28-27

* A discussion of the US government's responsibility in the support & care of the nation's children, & the current debate over the appropriate role of the federal government in the affairs of the family. Much of the controversy is seen to be cast in the predictable mold of liberal vs conservative politics, with both pressing for greater government involvement albeit for different reasons. Implications of this increase in government intervention are assessed, & negative aspects of such programs are evaluated. Examples, including teenage motherhood, are discussed. 1. Rasmussen

88T6385

Denzin, Norman K. (U Illinois, Urbana 61801). Postmodern Children. ♦ US Society, 1987, 24, 3(167), Mar-Apr, 32-35

* A critique of Neil Gilbert's "The Unfinished Business of Welfare Reform" (see abstract in this section). The situation of the unwed, teenage mother is interpreted in light of C. Wright Mills's argument that the postmodern period of US history is characterized by bureaucratic rationality, lodged in the hands of institutional practitioners who work from a perspective of illiberal practicality. It is argued that the welfare system of the 1940s is no longer adequate for the situation of the postmodern mother & child in the 1980s. AA

88T6386

Gilbert, Neil (Dept Social Welfare U California, Berkeley 94720). The Unfinished Business of Welfare Reform. ♦ US Society, 1987, 24, 3(167), Mar-Apr, 5-11

* An analysis of how social policy objectives in areas of family life are often muddled by incompatible desires to protect children & to liberate parents. This predicament is illustrated in the way the program of Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) treats unwed teenage mothers. While various public constraints are imposed on adolescents, when it comes to caring for children, public policy assumes a remarkably lax attitude toward teenage parents. Despite the fact that rates of child abuse & neglect & sudden infant death syndrome are significantly higher among unwed teenage mothers than in the general population, the parental competence of this group goes unquestioned, & teenage parents are given support under AFDC to nurture & socialize helpless infants with virtually no conditions attached. The historical & ideological reasons for the presumption of competence in AFDC policy are examined, & policy alternatives for the protection of children explored. AA

88T6387

Harper, Lawrence V. & Huie, Karen S. (Dept Applied Behavioral Sciences U California, Davis 95616). Relations among Preschool Children's Adult and Peer Contacts and Later Academic Achievement. US Child Development 1987, 58, 4, Aug, 1051-1065

† Relations between day-to-day variations in the amounts of time individual children aged 2-5 spent interacting with peers & adults are analyzed. Observational data reveal that, at all ages, in a variety of settings, US youngsters from a broad SE spectrum & the offspring of Mexican migrant farmworkers ($2N = 211$) tended to treat social interactions with age-mates & adults as alternatives. Moreover, across an 8-month period, US Mc 2-, 3-, & 4-year-olds showed progressive increases in the proportion of time that they spent interacting with peers relative to time with adults, although only 3- & 4-year-olds showed increases in the degree to which involvement in the 2 categories of behavior was treated as a trade-off. Individual children's day-to-day variance for the combined behaviors was not consistently smaller than that for either one alone. These findings suggest that relationships with caregivers & with peers represent 2 partially incompatible behaviors & that, for individuals, sociability is not unidimensional. Because being adult-oriented may facilitate adjustment to grade school, a follow-up study was done in which the free-play activity choices of 50 US Mc 4-year-olds in preschool were correlated with their later academic achievement in third grade. The results indicate that early, adult oriented activities were positively related to later academic achievement. The findings are consistent with the contention that conditions fostering the early development of a preference for involvement with peers, as opposed to adults, may reflect a social orientation that interferes with later academic success in grade school. 8 Tables, 1 Figure, 24 References. HA

88T6388

Luftig, Richard L. (Miami U, Oxford OH 45056). The Stability of Children's Peer Social Status over Social Situations. US Education, 1987, 107, 4, summer, 417-423

† The presumed relationship between childhood problems in peer SS & later maladjustment in adolescent & adult life is predicated on the belief that childhood SS is a relatively stable phenomenon. Here, an attempt is made to measure both the extent to which children fall into the categories of popular, rejected, & neglected status, as well as the extent that children retain their status over a variety of social situations. Peer-nomination instruments completed by 366 second-, fourth-, & sixth-grade students were used to determine peer SS as well as peer choices for 4 social situations. Results indicate that %s of popular, rejected, & neglected children were lower than those found in earlier studies. Stability of peer SS across social situations was quite high, even among second grade Rs. The therapeutic needs of rejected & neglected schoolchildren are discussed. 4 Tables, 18 References. Modified HA

88T6389

Matheny, Adam F., Jr. (Child Development Unit Dept Pediatrics Health Sciences Center U Louisville, KY 40292). Psychological Characteristics of Childhood Accidents. ♦ The Journal of Social Issues, 1987, 43, 2, summer, 45-60

† Research on childhood injuries has revealed various personality & behavioral traits associated with such injuries. Over a 15-year period, interview data were collected from parents of twins on health & injury. The relevance of personality traits & home environments to childhood injury are examined for samples of these children aged 0-3 ($N = 96$) & 6-9 ($N = 76$). For the younger cohort, parental, home environment, & child characteristics all correlated with injuries, for the older cohort, only home environment & child characteristics did so. Multiple regression analysis identifies relevant characteristics in more specificity & eliminates some. Implications are noted for injury prevention. 3 Tables, 32 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T6390

Pless, I. B. & Arseneault, L. (Montreal Children's Hospital, 2300 Tupper St Quebec H3H 1P3). The Role of Health Education in the Prevention of Injuries to Children. ♦ The Journal of Social Issues, 1987, 43, 2, summer, 87-103

† Most societies attempt to educate their children in ways of avoiding ac-

Journal of ADOLESCENT RESEARCH

The Journal of Adolescent Research is devoted to the presentation of empirical research, descriptive research and theoretical papers regarding all aspects of adolescent development.

The journal is interdisciplinary and interprofessional providing diverse and relevant information to researchers and practitioners concerned with the area of adolescence.

The Journal of Adolescent Research is peer refereed by editors representing more than twenty different disciplines thereby providing a journal of professional merit and practical interest.

Manuscripts for publication consideration are welcomed

Communication Regarding Manuscripts
Ellen Thornburg, Editor

Subscriptions
Kristen Muench
Managing Editor

Please enter a subscription to the Journal of Adolescent Research for:

- () institutional—$65
() individual —$30.

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State: _____

Zip Code: _____

To: Journal of Adolescent Research
1201 E. Calle Elena
Tucson, AZ 85718

It is necessary for individual subscriptions to be prepaid.

to Eastern European youth. Data from both ethnographic observation & informal interviews with 37 young people, aged 16-21, their parents, & other adults (N unspecified) in 2 cities reveal the uses of these items as symbols of status, personalized styles, & identification with the West. 21 References. Modified HA

88T6400

Billingham, Robert E. (Dept Applied Health Science Indiana U, Bloomington 47405). Courtship Violence: The Patterns of Conflict Resolution Strategies across Seven Levels of Emotional Commitment. Family Relations, 1987, 36, 3, July, 283-289.

* Unmarried white & black US Coll students who were currently involved in a dating relationship (N = 174 Ms & 361 Fs) completed a questionnaire that used subscores of the Conflict Tactics Scale in an attempt to determine the impact that gender, level of emotional commitment, & interactive status had on choice of conflict resolution tactic: reasoning, verbal aggression, or violence. Only status yielded significant differences on all three subscores, gender & level of commitment yielded significant differences only for the reasoning & verbal aggression subscores. The results strongly suggest that violence in relationships occurs much earlier in the development of emotional commitment than has been previously suggested. In addition, these results suggest that for some couples, violence may serve as a catalyst for moving the relationship to more committed levels of involvement. Intervention/prevention programs must be sensitive to the different roles that violence may serve in a relationship. 1 Table, 3 Figures, 17 References. Modified HA

88T6401

Carle, Jan (Dept Sociology U Gothenburg, S-414 59 Sweden). Youth Unemployment-Individual and Societal Consequences, and New Research Approaches. Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 2, 147-152.

* An examination of the individual & societal consequences of youth unemployment in Sweden, based on a review of the literature through mid 1982. Periods of joblessness for the young are generally short & alternate with job programs or school programs, a situation that can be described as "permanent impermanence." Unemployment must also be seen in light of its occurrence during a central stage of personal development. Its social effects are primarily of three kinds: those limited to individual welfare, usually expressed psychosomatically or sociomedically; those concerning individuals' connections to their groups, expressed sociopsychologically; & those concerning the individual's relationship to society, expressed socioculturally or socially. 1 Figure. Modified HA

88T6402

Felice, Marianne E., Shragg, G. Paul, James, Michelle & Hollingsworth, Dorothy R. (Division Adolescent Medicine UCSF Medical Center, 225 Dickinson St H814-1 San Diego CA 92103). Psychosocial Aspects of Mexican-American, White, and Black Teenage Pregnancy. Journal of Adolescent Health Care, 1987, 8, 4, July, 330-335.

* The psychosocial characteristics of pregnant Mexican-American teenagers are compared to those of their pregnant black & white peers using data obtained during clinical interviews & retrospective medical chart reviews for patients aged 11-19 (Σ N = 199) followed prospectively at the U of California San Diego Medical Center Teen Obstetric Clinic from 1978 through 1981. Differences in education, perceptions of family support, relationship to the father of the infant, & delivery outcome (disposition of the infant) are revealed. It is concluded that pregnant teenagers from these 3 racial/ethnic backgrounds have different psychosocial profiles & hence, different psychosocial problems & needs. 4 Tables, 20 References. Modified HA

88T6403

Forehand, Rex, Long, Nicholas, Faust, Jan, Broudy, Gene H., Burke, Marie & Fauber, Robert (Dept Psychology U Georgia, Athens 30602). Physical and Psychological Health of Young Adolescents: The Relationship to Gender and Marital Conflict. Journal of Pediatric Psychology, 1987, 12, 2, June, 191-201.

* A study of the response of early adolescent Ms & Fs to parental marital conflict. Self-, mother-, & teacher-reported scale data on physical, externalizing (eg, acting out), & internalizing (eg, anxiety) problems were examined. Adolescents (N = 39) from intact families were divided into 4 groups based on gender & mother's report of marital conflict: Ms, high-conflict homes; Fs, high-conflict homes; Ms, low-conflict homes; & Fs, low-conflict homes. The hypothesis that Fs would respond to marital conflict by demonstration of physical &/or internalizing difficulties was not supported. However, as predicted, Ms, but not Fs, demonstrated more externalizing problems in high- than in low-conflict homes. Several explanations for Ms' responsiveness to marital conflict by the manifestation of externalizing problems & for the absence of a relationship between physical health & marital conflict are proposed. 2 Figures, 26 References. Modified AA

88T6404

Friebel, Harry (Von-der-Tann-Str 6, D-2000 Hamburg 6 Federal Republic Germany). Wunschberuf, Berufstart und Arbeitslosigkeit: Objektive Setzung und subjektiver Sinn im Prozess der Jugend (Vocational Choice, First Employment and Unemployment: Objective Situation and Subjective Meaning in the Process of Youth). Soziale Welt, 1987, 38, 3, 350-364 (GfR).

* Young people's transition from school to work was explored in a longitudinal study in Hamburg, West Germany. A representative sample of 252 youths who left school in 1979 participated in 4 waves of the study (which combined interviews, group discussions, & written questionnaires) up to 1986, the number of Rs had decreased to 115 by the last wave. The findings document the interrelation between the social processing of adolescence & the individual experience & life planning of young people; the results point out the objective & subjective importance of the realm of work. A complex of social mechanisms canalizes the labor market careers of young people. This social selection is very important for their self confidence & life perspectives. 4 Figures, 32 References. Modified HA

88T6405

Greenfield, Patricia M., Bruzone, Lisa, Koyamatsu, Kristi, Satuloff, Wendy, Nixon, Karey, Brodie, Mollyann & Kingsdale, David (U California, Los Angeles 90024). What Is Rock Music Doing to the Minds of Our Youth? A First Experimental Look at the Effects of Rock Music Lyrics and Music Videos. Journal of Early Adolescence, 1987, 7, 3, fall, 315-329.

* A report on the results of three preliminary studies of the cognitive effects of rock music lyrics & music videos. Study 1 (based on questionnaire data obtained from 10 students each in grades 4, 8, & 12, plus 25 Coll students) indicates that comprehension of rock music lyrics develops with age & that lyrics are often misunderstood, particularly by young children who lack relevant world knowledge & are at a concrete stage of cognitive development. Study 2 (based on experimental research with 26 Ss in grades 5 & 6) shows that music videos provide less stimulation to the imagination & are enjoyed less than the songs alone. Study 3 (based on an experimental research design with 12 Coll students & 11 control Ss, using different methods) confirms the negative effect of music videos on the imagination. The results also demonstrate that a rock song, without any visuals, evokes & elicits more feelings than when it is part of a music video. 3 Tables, 43 References. Modified HA

88T6406

Gwartney-Gibbs, Patricia A., Stockard, Jean & Bohmer, Susanne (Dept Sociology U Oregon, Eugene 97403). Learning Courtship Aggression: The Influence of Parents, Peers, and Personal Experiences. Family Relations, 1987, 36, 3, July, 276-282.

* Based on a differential association/social learning framework & sex-role theory, four research questions concerning the zero-order & relative influences of parents, peers, & individuals' personal experiences on three types of courtship aggression, abuse, violence, & sexual aggression are examined. Mail questionnaire data obtained from a random sample of undergraduates (N = 289) at a public US U on the West Coast are examined separately for aggressors & victims as well as for Fs & Ms. Results of logit analysis indicate that influences most proximate in time & place affect courtship aggression most strongly, ie, individuals' own experiences as victims & perpetrators are stronger influences than are parents & peers in predicting courtship aggression. Patterns of results vary by type of aggressive behavior & sex of Rs. Implications for research & practice are discussed. 3 Tables, 1 Appendix, 36 References. Modified HA

88T6407

Kanner, Allen D., Feldman, S. Shirley, Weinberger, Daniel A. & Ford, Martin E. (Stanford U, CA 94305). Uplifts, Hassles, and Adaptational Outcomes in Early Adolescents. Journal of Early Adolescence, 1987, 7, 4, winter, 371-394.

* The relationship of uplifts & hassles to early adolescents' anxiety, decidental injury. An approach to evaluation of the effectiveness of such education is outlined & applied to the cases of seat restraint use & injuries in the home. Improvements in injury prevention over the past few years can be seen. A national injury prevention strategy is advocated & described. W. H. Stoddard

88T6391

Rivara, Frederick P. & Mueller, Beth A. (Harborview Medical Center, Mailstop ZA-53 325 Ninth Ave Seattle WA 98104), The Epidemiology and Causes of Childhood Injuries, ♦ The Journal of Social Issues, 1987, 43, 2, summer, 13-31

¶ Injuries are a major cause of death in the U.S., especially for the young, & have not declined in recent years as have other causes of death. This problem is examined from the perspective of epidemiology & public health, & a conceptual framework is proposed for evaluating injury prevention strategies. Important factors that must be considered include the host factors of age, sex, & other characteristics of the child, family background, parental risk taking, & drugs & alcohol, the environmental factors of SF variation, physical environment, & legislation, & such agents & vectors of injury as fireworks, poisoning, burns, & firearms. Recommendations for reducing childhood injury rates are offered. 2 Tables, 1 Figure, 77 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T6392

Roberts, Michael C. & Brooks, Penelope H. (Dept Psychology U Alabama, Tuscaloosa 35487-2968), Children's Injuries: Issues in Prevention and Public Policy, ♦ The Journal of Social Issues, 1987, 43, 2, summer, 1-12

¶ An introduction to a special issue of Journal of Social Issues that explores injuries among children from the perspective of many disciplines. Injuries are the single most important cause of death & lasting nonfatal harm in children & youths. The pervasiveness of such injuries, the involvement of sociological factors in their occurrence, the issue of conflict between freedom & the public good, & the occurrence of inequities in their incidence make them a major social issue. This issue is examined in social & historical context. Key concepts for understanding children's injuries are their being foreseeable & preventable, the possibility of varied interventions reflecting varying disciplines' orientations, & the complexity of such interventions. 1 Figure, 26 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T6393

Robinson, Diane & Pinch, Steven (Dept Primary Medical Care Aldermoor Health Centre Faculty Medicine U Southampton, SO9 5NH England), A Geographical Analysis of the Relationship between Early Childhood Death and Socio-Economic Environment in an English City, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 1, 9-18

¶ The relationship between early childhood death & SF conditions in Southampton, England, was investigated via a geographical analysis of the home addresses of 254 infants & children aged 0-5 years when they died between 1977 & 1982. The addresses were grouped into 142 super-enumeration districts, then categorized into 15 cluster types that highlighted their major social characteristics. A strong relationship was found between high rates of early childhood death & cluster types displaying adverse social conditions, particularly high levels of unemployment, single-parent families, & poor housing amenities. Such a social area analysis could be useful to medical professionals, social workers, & local authorities in highlighting target groups that might benefit from increased resource allocation. 2 Tables, 2 Figures, 1 Appendix, 24 References. Modified HA

88T6398

Ashton, David N. (Labour Market Studies U Leicester, L31 7RH England), Sources of Variation in Labour Market Segmentation: A Comparison of Youth Labour Markets in Canada and Britain, ♦ Work, Employment and Society, 1988, 2, 1, Mar, 1-24.

¶ In spite of superficial similarities in levels of unemployment, major differences in the structure of the youth labor markets in Canada & the UK are revealed. It is argued that labor market segmentation theory, by according primacy to such factors as product markets, industrial structures, & technology, can provide only a partial explanation for the observed difference. A more adequate explanation will have to take greater

88T6394

Tully, Bryan & Tam, Kam-oi, Helping the Police with Their Wives: The Development of Special Care Questioning Techniques, Children & Society, 1987, 1, 3, autumn, 187-197.

¶ When children are dealt with in the justice system, by the police courts, the results are often highly emotionally distressing, & do to the true purpose of testimony. A training program developed to help police force in the UK of "special care questioning" that employs psychologists is described here. It is concluded that the task of police children cannot be the exclusive domain of either clinical social practitioners or legal officers. Creative & ethical cooperation is required & necessary. 26 References. Modified HA

88T6395

Underwood, Peter & Margetts, Barrie (Dept Community Practice Western Australia, Claremont 6010), Cultural Change, Growth, & Feeding of Children in an Isolated Rural Region of Yemen, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 1, 1-7

¶ The influence of cultural & social factors associated with mothering on childrearing, growth, & feeding patterns in Raymah, an isolated rural region of North Yemen, are investigated. Sociological & anthropometric data were obtained via examination of 381 children under 5 who were seen at an El Jabin clinic, & interviews with their parents. In spite of the appearance of a homogeneous traditional society, there were significant differences in the growth & health of children from different villages. Marasmus was extremely common & was associated with infant feeding practices—particularly the use of bottled milk & frequent infections, these were also undoubtedly responsible for the poorer growth & higher mortality of children from the small township that serves as the administrative center of the region, as compared to those from the hinterland, where breastfeeding was more common & prolonged. 2 Figures, 26 References. Modified HA

88T6396

Vahsiner, Jaana & Lightfoot, Cynthia (Dept Psychology U North Carolina, Chapel Hill 27514), Process Structure of Parent-Child Environment Relations and the Prevention of Children's Injuries, The Journal of Social Issues, 1987, 43, 2, summer, 61-72

¶ A socioecological approach to the occurrence of childhood injuries is outlined. Three components are emphasized: the relation between child's actions & thoughts & the environmental setting, the care control of this relation, & the caregiver's reasoning & a frame for actions. Three examples are given of caregiver reasoning in relation to children of varied ages. The content of caregiver reasoning in these relations is discussed. 1 Figure, 17 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T6397

-----, Progress Review of the Child Survival and Development Initiative 1983-1986, Assignment Children, 1987, 1, 1-48

¶ A report prepared for the 1985 UN Children's Fund executive describes the relevance of the Child Survival & Development Review (CSDR) approach: an alternative low-cost & cost-effective method of preserving child health & promoting child development during the period of global recession & consequent economic readjustment. A review of the development of the CSDR interventions as part of a basic services strategy & primary health care is provided. Also described are CSDR contributions to the generation of political will, social mobilization, the establishment of program linkages, & increased international cooperation on behalf of children. The major components of CSDR are detailed & future trends reviewed. 13 Tables, 4 Figures. Modified HA

39 adolescence & youth cognizance of the interaction between political, cultural, & social factors which are seen to exert an independent effect on the structure of labor markets. 89 References. HA

88T6399

Bar-Haim, Gabriel (Dept Sociology & Anthropology Tel Aviv 42011), The Meaning of Western Commercial Artifacts for European Youth, Journal of Contemporary Ethnography, 1987, 2, July, 205-226.

¶ An examination of the symbolic meaning of Western commercial

88T6416

Passinelli, Sergio. C'era una volta l'impegno giovanile (Once upon a Time There Was a Youth Movement). Futurogiovani Notizie, 1987, 2, 5, Jan-Mar, 6-14 (ITA)

Today's studies of young people generally use terms such as uncertainty, disillusion, & apathy; the youth movement of the 1960s seems to belong to a distant past. However, it is argued that a series of experiences in the 1970s & 1980s testify to the continuance of collective action among the young, though it may now take less obvious forms. Drawing on numerous studies, three aspects are investigated here: voluntarism, various types of cooperative, & ecology-oriented groups. The significance of these movements & their role in political life are discussed. Although they have often been considered as outside politics, or "postpolitical," it is possible that they could come to form part of the political mainstream. 46 References. C. Waters

88T6417

Portera, Agostino (Albert-Ludwigs-Universität Freiburg im Breisgau, Federal Republic Germany). Situazione psico-sociale e identità dei giovani italiani in Germania (Psychosocial Situation and Identity Crisis of Italian Youth in Western Germany). La Critica Sociologica, 1987, 81, Apr-June, 89-103 (ITA)

Empirical research that examined the identity problems of Italian youths in West Germany is described. In a 1982 qualitative study, the tape recorded life histories of 20 second-generation Italians aged 15-25 living in Freiburg, West Germany, were analyzed for factors affecting their psychosocial situation: relations with family & peer group, experiences in school, work, & leisure time, & linguistic competence in Italian & in German. Three different groups were distinguished among the Ss: those with Italian, German, or "diffused" identity. For all groups, the process of establishing identity is a serious & painful. Modified HA

88T6418

Rapoport, Tamar & Kahane, Reuven (Hebrew U Jerusalem, Israel 91905). Informal Socialization Agencies and Role Development. Sociological Inquiry, 1988, 58, 1, winter, 49-74

It is hypothesized that informal youth organizations influence processes of transition to adulthood by facilitating role development, i.e., the conversion of child-oriented roles into adult-oriented ones. Organizational informality is defined in terms of seven organizational components: moralism, symmetry, dualism, multiplexity, expressive instrumentalism, voluntarism, & pragmatic symbolism. The impact of these components on role development is measured by three indicators: role scope, role types, & role aspects. Questionnaire & observational data collected at residential summer camps for children aged 14-16 ($N = 194$) from development towns in Israel reveal a positive significant relationship between the level of informality & level of role development, especially in the long run. Findings are explained by the particular experiences youth undergo in informal socialization contexts, in which trial & error behavior, balanced reciprocity, & normative ambivalences are institutionalized. 4 Tables, 3 Figures, 2 Appendixes, 46 References. Modified HA

88T6419

Signorielli, Nancy (U Delaware, Newark 19711). Children and Adolescents on Television: A Consistent Pattern of Devaluation. Journal of Early Adolescence, 1987, 7, 3, fall, 255-268

Data collected on samples of major & minor characters ($N = 19,337$ & 5,296, respectively) in annual week-long samples of prime-time & weekend-daytime network dramatic programs broadcast between 1969 & 1985 show that children are very underrepresented on TV. Children under age 10 made up less than 2% of the characters in prime time & only 3.6% in weekend-daytimes. Adolescents are seen more frequently, especially in weekend-daytime programs. Children on TV are presented in limiting roles that often serve to enhance adult roles rather than present childhood & children in a favorable way. Children are too often victimized, portrayed in ill health, & in the later adolescent years seen smoking & drinking, with a few even experimenting with drugs. The overall image is one that conveys a sense of unimportance & devaluation of children & childhood. 4 Tables, 18 References. Modified HA

88T6420

Solanta, Tytti (Dept Public Health Science U Helsinki, SF-00100 Finland). Hopes and Worries of Young People in Three European Countries. Health Promotion, 1987, 2, 1, 19-27

Results are presented of part of a World Health Organization collaborative study of children's hopes & worries about the future, conducted in Austria, England, & Finland by means of a classroom questionnaire ($N = 600, 596, & 665$ Rs, respectively, aged 11-15). The top hope expressed in each country concerned work & employment—Austria 53%, England 79%, Finland 60%. The chief worry of Austrian Rs concerned school & studies (52%), the English schoolchildren's main concern was over work & employment (59%), while for the Finns, it was war (78%). In each country boys expressed more concern for the material aspects of life than girls, & girls more hopes & worries about human relationships. 3 Tables, 1 Figure, 20 References. Modified HA

88T6421

Streitmatter, Janice L. (Coll Education U Arizona, Tucson 85721). The Effect of Gender and Family Status on Ego Identity Development among Early Adolescents. Journal of Early Adolescence, 1987, 7, 2, summer, 179-189

Questionnaire data from 265 seventh graders are used to examine the relationship between gender, family status, & ego identity. Analysis of variance results indicated that Fs were more mature than Ms on a measure of moratorium (exploration of alternatives), early adolescents living in an intact family environment were more likely to make commitments without examining alternatives (high foreclosure scores) than were their cohorts who reported living in disrupted family environments; & Ms from the former condition were more diffused (not questioning & non-committal). Overall, the impact of family disruption was more notable among Ms than Fs. Findings support E. Erikson's contention that identity development is a lifelong prospect that is mediated by internal & external change (Identity, Youth and Crisis, New York: Norton, 1968). 5 Tables, 27 References. HA

88T6422

Vink, Marian. Ontloken talent. Studenten aan de Universiteit van Amsterdam: de sociale samenstelling (sociale herkomst en sekse) 1965-1985 (Blooming Talent. Students from the University of Amsterdam. Social Composition [Social Origin and Sex] 1965-1985). Mens en Maatschappij, 1988, 63, 1, Feb, 67-76 (DUT)

The % of students from Wc origins at the U of Amsterdam is relatively low, & did not change during the period 1965-1985. The % of F students, however, has increased, except for those from families of middle-level employees. Social origin & sex influence direction of study, previous education, & age at start of U study. 6 Tables. Modified HA

88T6423

Walters, Lynda Henley, Walters, James & McKenry, Patrick C. (Dept Child & Family Development U Georgia, Athens 30602). Differentiation of Girls at Risk of Early Pregnancy from the General Population of Adolescents. The Journal of Genetic Psychology, 1987, 148, 1, Mar, 19-29

An analysis of 2 psychological characteristics, locus of control & purpose in life, that have been associated with early pregnancy. These characteristics were examined using questionnaire data obtained from samples drawn from a general population of adolescents & from samples of ever-pregnant & never-pregnant adolescents ($2N = 1,196$). Results show that ever-pregnant girls differed neither from the general population of adolescents nor from the matched sample of never-pregnant girls on the 2 psychological dimensions. Alternatives for conceptualizing risk are proposed. 2 Tables, 36 References. HA

88T6424

Weiss, David I. & Felton, Judith R. (Dept Home Economics Bowling Green State U, OH 43403). Marital Exclusivity and the Potential for Future Marital Conflict. Social Work, 1987, 32, 1, Jan-Feb, 45-49

Questionnaire data from 379 F undergraduates are analyzed to assess attitudes toward marital exclusivity, utilizing a 5-point exclusivity scale. Results indicate a large potential for marital conflict over the issue of exclusivity, even with regard to nonsexual relationships. Basic types of conflict are identified & discussed. The need for additional research is highlighted. 2 Tables. F. Rasmussen

88T6425

Wroblewski, Roberts & Huston, Aletha C. (U Kansas, Lawrence 66045). Televised Occupational Stereotypes and Their Effects on Early Adolescents: Are They Changing?. Journal of Early Adolescence, 1987, 7, 3, fall, 283-297

By the mid-1980s, prime-time TV contained frequent portrayals of Fs in traditional M occupations, eg, lawyer, police officer, & private detec-pression, distress, self-restraint, perceived support from friends, perceived social competence, & general self-worth is examined using questionnaire data from a sample of 232 sixth graders. Results indicate that both hassles & uplifts are substantially related to the various outcomes in the expected directions, with the exception of a modest positive association between uplifts & anxiety for girls. In most cases uplifts add significantly to the relationship between hassles & outcomes. Other findings indicate that uplift/hassle patterns vary as a function of sex & the particular outcome being considered. Similarities & differences from adult findings are discussed in regard to sex-role & general development. 6 Tables, 2 Appendixes, 42 References. Modified HA

88T6408

Kapferer, Judith L., (Flinders U, Bedford Park South Australia 5042), Youth Policy and the State: Australia, Britain, Sweden, ♦ Discourse, 1987, 8, 1, Oct, 1-24

¶ It is claimed that youth policies serve to promote & maintain the commodity relations on which the capitalist state depends for its effective economic functioning. The development of youth policies is taken to be a symptom of a legitimization crisis of states in economically precarious situations, with little or no control over their own planning contexts. Such states are designated "nondetermining," forced, for economic reasons, to pay unceasing attention to ideological training. School retention rates, manpower planning, & youth employment in three countries, Sweden, GB, & Australia are analyzed in these terms. The fusion of education & training, & the tightening of the school/work nexus are seen to have dire consequences for liberal curricula, with school curricula & labor market training programs focused on the commodification of knowledge & social relations. The identification of people & state in Sweden, which facilitates such practices, is contrasted with the combative relations between people & state in Australia, where the import & imitation of foreign educational, social, & cultural models (eg. Japanese & American) only benefit the exporters of these models, diminishing Australia's independence & autonomy. Youth policies are an attempt by the state to continue the unfinished ideological business of the educational apparatus & the labor market in attaching young people to the commodity relations of international capitalist enterprise. Some signs of resistance are discerned, especially in GB, despite the success of governments in turning youth policies to the service of capital. 23 References. Modified AA

88T6409

McClellan, Dorothy Spektorov (Coll Arts & Humanities Corpus Christi State U, TX 78412), Soviet Youth: A View from the Inside, ♦ UM Crime and Social Justice, 1987, 29, 1-25

¶ An interdisciplinary perspective on juvenile delinquency in the USSR based on interviews with Soviet scholars & graduate students in the fields of criminology, criminal law, psychology, philosophy, & "communist upbringing" at major U.S. in Moscow. Emphasis is on how Soviets define the problem, explain its causes, & attempt to deal with/prevent it. A national concern for the problems of youth & their socialization into an appropriate communist lifestyle is evident. A massive school reform program has been undertaken to facilitate the development of the "new Soviet person," & the role of the family is recognized as equally important in teaching the values that further socialism. A historical overview of the problem of crime among Soviet youth is presented, current reports indicate that the rate of juvenile crime is quite low, particularly when compared to that in the US. Primary emphasis is on prevention rather than building more detention facilities or imposing harsher penalties. New developments in this direction via school reform, family therapy, & a massive campaign against alcoholism are discussed. 48 References. K. Hyatt

88T6410

Milanesi, Giancarlo, Nuove marginalità e vecchie logiche di sviluppo (New Marginality and Old Logics of Development), Tuttogiovani Notizie, 1986, 1, 3, July-Sept, 5-13 (ITA)

¶ A discussion of marginalization, especially in relation to youth, based on a review of various studies. As a result of the student movements of the 1960s, the ideas arose that youth might represent a new SC, & that there was a solidarity between students & marginalized social groups. An attempt is made here to clarify the concept of marginality, which is determined to have a plurality of meanings. Aspects considered include: marginalization & economic development; transitory & structural marginalization; & marginalization in the Third World. In order to combat marginalization, especially of youth, political & educational policies based on realism are needed. 34 References. C. Waters

88T6411

Mion, Renato, Quarant'anni di studi sui giovani: 1945-1985 (Years of Studies of Youth: 1945-1985), Tuttogiovani, 1986, 1, 1, Jan-Mar, 5-19. (ITA)

¶ A review of empirical research on youth since WWII, focusing on studies, though the rest of Europe & the US are also considered. The period is subdivided into 4 phases: 1945-1968, 1968-1975, 1975-1980-1985. For each of these phases, the leading ideas & approaches identified, & some of the most important works are briefly outlined. Waters

88T6412

Miura, Irene T. (School Education San Jose State U, CA) Gender and Socioeconomic Status Differences in Middle-School Computer Interest and Use, ♦ Journal of Early Adolescence, 1988, summer, 243-253

¶ Studies of educational computing have reported both gender differences in access to & use of microcomputers in schools. Gender differences are usually related to student-oriented, motivational, while SES differences in educational uses of the computer reflect institutional issues, eg. the number & types of computers available & school-related uses of the machines. Here, survey data are used to assess computer interest & use for high- & low-SES middle-school students ($N = 136$ & 100 , respectively), & to examine motivational factors predicted to affect these outcomes. The results reveal both gender & SES differences for the outcome variables & for the processes predicted to affect them. Gender differences, however, were mediated by SES of the students. It is suggested that gender & SES factors be considered together in research on computer interest & use. 2 Tables, 17 References. HA

88T6413

Montesperelli, Paolo, Assenza di fondamento e nuove generazioni (Lack of Foundation and New Generations), Tuttogiovani, 1986, 1, 2, Apr-June, 5-14 (ITA)

¶ A discussion of various modern social theories & how they relate to concrete conditions of youth. The collective experience of modernity is one of pluralism & relativism, characterized by the lack of any firm or fixed values. Different schools of philosophy, science, & epistemology compete or coexist, as do ideologies such as Marxism, gnosticism, nihilism. For many people, the nostalgia for certainty has led to a myth, hence the popularity, in developed societies, of cults, religions, & charismatic leaders. In general, the response of the majority of youth to the "experience of emptiness" of modern society is one of silence. The implications of this situation for political & social life are discussed. No clear solutions are perceived. 44 References. C. Waters

88T6414

Nalepka, Claire D., O'Toole, Richard & Turbett, J. Patrick (Callander Dr, Hudson OH 44236), Nurses' and Physicians' Recognition and Reporting of Child Abuse, Issues in Comprehensive Pediatric Nursing, 1981, 5, 1, Jan-Feb, 33-44

¶ The influence of SES, ethnic status, & level of injury on recognition & reporting of child abuse by nurses & MDs is investigated from the perspective of labeling theory. Results ($N = 178$ nurses & 76 MDs) suggest that nurses' (emergency room forms) in which these variables were mentally manipulated. Results indicate that MDs' judgments regarding child abuse were affected by SES, ethnic status, & level of injury. Nurses' judgments were affected by level of injury, but not by ethnic status. The implications of nurse & MD judgments are explored with respect to identification of treatment, use of research data from medical records, & development of etiological theories. The nurse's role as a member of the health care team in recognizing & reporting child abuse is considered. 2 Tables, 22 References. HA

88T6415

Orlando, Vito, I giovani meridionali: ambiente, orientamenti e integrazione sociale (Young People in the South of Italy: Environment, Life Orientations, and Social Integration), Tuttogiovani Notizie, 1986, 1, 4, Oct-Dec, 5-12. (ITA)

¶ A review of recent studies of young people in Italy focuses on southern Italy & the historicocultural & socioenvironmental factors that are specific to that region. It is noted that the majority of empirical studies have been undertaken deal with students aged 14-20; therefore, little information is available concerning other groups, eg. school dropouts. In general, the environment of southern Italy is characterized by poverty & passivity. The difficulties that young people experience in attempting to realize their life orientations & efforts at social integration in this environment are discussed. 29 References. C. Waters

88T6435

Heardrick, Susan & Hendrick, Clyde (Dept Psychology Texas Tech U, Lubbock 79409). Multidimensionality of Sexual Attitudes. ♦ Journal of Sex Research, 1987, 23, 4, Nov, 502-526

¶ Results of several studies of the Sexual Attitudes Scale (SAS), a new multidimensional instrument, are used to: (1) conclude final construction of the scale, (2) assess the relationships between the scale & three criterion measures, & (3) provide initial construct validation of the instrument through demonstrated relationships with several relevant psychosocial variables & personality/attitude measures. The instrument was initially administered to a large sample ($N = 807$), the scores were factor analyzed, & scales were defined. A refined version was cross validated on another large sample ($N = 567$), with results that mostly replicated earlier findings. The SAS was then administered to another sample ($N = 105$), along with the Sexual Opinion Survey, the Reiss M & F Premarital Permissiveness Scales, & the sex-guilt subscale of the Revised Mosher Guilt Inventory. Results show the SAS to have moderate & conceptually consistent correlations with these other scales. Additional results reveal significant relationships between Ss' sexual attitudes & relevant demographic/psychosocial variables (eg, gender, love experience) & demonstrate substantial links between the SAS & measures of related concepts, eg, sensation seeking & love attitudes. It is concluded that the SAS is a psychometrically sound scale assessing sexual permissiveness, sexual practices, communion, & instrumentality. 9 Tables, 29 References. HA

88T6436

Howard, Judith A. (Dept Sociology U Washington, Seattle 98195). A Structural Approach to Sexual Attitudes: Interracial Patterns in Adolescents' Judgments about Sexual Intimacy. ♦ Sociological Perspectives, 1988, 31, 1, Jan, 88-121

¶ An evaluation of the utility of cultural & structural perspectives in accounting for interracial patterns in sexual values & attitudes. Definitions of both consensual & nonconsensual sexual behavior were obtained via questionnaires & interviews from 932 black & white adolescents in metropolitan Milwaukee, Wis. There were no racial differences in attitudes toward rape or toward M-F relationships. The responses of black & white women to a "classic rape" were very similar, while differences were found in responses to a less stereotypic, nonconsensual sexual assault & to a consensual sexual incident. Blacks anticipated more negative reactions from the police & expressed greater distrust of other institutional agencies than did whites. Accordingly, black women were more likely to anticipate turning to their parents or other family members for support. Overall, however, most racial differences disappeared when structural variables were controlled, suggesting that structural processes, rather than innate or cultural factors, are responsible for differences in sexual attitudes & values. 6 Tables, 46 References. Modified HA

88T6437

King, Dave (Dept Social Work Studies U Liverpool L69 3BX England). Social Constructionism and Medical Knowledge: The Case of Transsexualism. Sociology of Health and Illness, 1987, 9, 4, Dec, 351-377

¶ M R Bury (see SA 35 1/87R2757) & M Nicolson & C McLaughlin (see SA 35 5/87T0616) have respectively attacked & defended social constructionism in relation to medical sociology. An attempt is made to further the debate by considering how a form of constructionism has been used to study a small area of medical knowledge that relating to transsexualism. The literature on this topic reveals two competing claims: one that transsexualism has been discovered, the other that it has been invented. Here, the invention story is evaluated, based on interviews conducted with psychiatrists, clinical psychologists, & surgeons ($N = 22$) in GB who had experience with transsexual patients. It is argued that the invention story exaggerates the legitimacy of transsexualism & sex change surgery, in addition, what it depicts as peculiar to transsexualism is also common to other areas of medical knowledge & practice. Implications of this case study for the wider issues surrounding the social construction of medical knowledge are considered. It is concluded that some of the weaknesses of the invention story of transsexualism are shared with the discovery story & with Bury's position. 48 References. Modified HA

88T6438

Knauff, Bruce M. (Dept Anthropology Emory U, Atlanta GA 30322). Homosexuality in Melanesia. ♦ The Journal of Psychoanalytic Anthropology, 1987, 10, 2, spring, 155-191.

¶ A review essay on a book edited by Gilbert H. Herdt, Ritualized Ho- mosexuality in Melanesia (Berkeley, Calif: U of California Press, 1984 [see listing in IRPS No. 43]). A survey of existing data reveals that institutionalized homosexuality was present in at least 10% of all traditional Melanesian societies. Homosexuality & its variants in traditional Melanesia are complex & have exhibited significant structural permutations even among closely related areal cultures. It does not covary systematically with general features of social structure or early socialization. The strengths as well as the limitations of psychoanalytic explanations of homosexuality eg, as displacement of oedipal desires onto men are explored in detail with respect to the Gebusi & the Sambia. It is concluded that consideration of psychodynamic processes is necessary but not sufficient to account for Melanesian homosexuality. Future studies are encouraged to explore the empirical & theoretical articulation of sociological, cultural/symbolic, & psychodynamic processes in Melanesian homosexuality, at both macro- & microlevels. The study of secondary socialization is likely to be particularly fruitful in this regard. 72 References. Modified AA

88T6439

Lance, Larry M. (Dept Sociology U North Carolina, Charlotte 28223). Variety in Teaching Human Sexuality: Involvement of Community Experts and Guests. Teaching Sociology, 1987, 15, 3, July, 312-315

¶ A teaching technique is described that provides variety for human sexuality classes of all sizes, incorporating into class discussions community experts & guests who deal with various social & social-psychological aspects of human sexuality on a daily basis. Various categories of guest speakers are identified. This technique provides students with information about views, policies, & procedures used in the community. Modified HA

88T6440

Lenz, Ilse (Institut Sociologie, Bismarckhof 5-6 D-4400 Münster Federal Republic Germany). Zwischen fremden Spiegeln... Zur Figur der wandernden Prostituierten in ostasiatischen Gesellschaften (Reflections in Alien Mirrors: The Migrating Prostitute in East Asian Societies). ♦ Peripherie, 1987, 7, 27, winter, 51-72 (GER)

¶ A historical comparison of international migration & trade in prostitutes from Japan (nineteenth century), China to British Malaya (nineteenth-twentieth century), & contemporary Thailand to Western countries. The structural causes of this migration are attributed to capitalist modernization & patriarchal economical & cultural elements. It is proposed that the trade in women be considered in a historical context as an evolution of different systems of prostitution ie, from the bonded labor systems to free prostitution, to the owner-controlled brothel system. The prostitute's perspective & struggle for survival are described. 33 References. Modified HA

88T6441

Matacin, Mala L. & Burger, Jerry M. (Dept Psychology Santa Clara U, CA 95053). A Content Analysis of Sexual Themes in Playboy Cartoons. Sex Roles, 1987, 17, 3-4, Aug, 179-186.

¶ Critics of pornography have argued that the way men & women are portrayed in these media create images that can result in harmful gender socialization. The cartoons from all 1985 issues of Playboy were content analyzed for the presence or absence of four themes that have been identified by these critics. It was found that, when these themes appeared, women were more often the victims of sexual coercion, depicted as sexually naive & childlike, & shown with a more attractive body than were the men in the cartoons. 2 Tables, 20 References. AA

88T6442

Mayerson, Suzin E. & Taylor, Dalmis A. (U Maryland, College Park 20742). The Effects of Rape Myth Pornography on Women's Attitudes and the Mediating Role of Sex Role Stereotyping. Sex Roles, 1987, 17, 5-6, Sept, 321-338

¶ An investigation of the effects of pornography on women's self-concepts & attitudes toward sexuality, rape, & interpersonal violence. Three pornographic stories, largely drawn from Playgirl & Penthouse magazines, were selected in which elements of consent & arousal on the part of a F character in response to a M's aggressive sexual advances were manipulated. F undergraduates ($N = 96$) at the U of Maryland, randomly assigned to one of the stories or a no-story control group, completed various attitude scales measuring rape myth acceptance, belief that sexual relationships between Ms & Fs are adversarial, acceptance of interpersonal violence, & self-esteem; Rs were also classified according to live. To determine whether young people's gender schemas about such occupations have been affected by these portrayals, 65 fifth- & sixth-grade students were administered questionnaires about stereotypically feminine & masculine occupations encountered frequently in real life, occupations often shown on TV, & those infrequently encountered in real life or TV. Children knew more about the "real life" & "TV" occupations than about the remaining jobs, confirming the prediction that TV serves as a source of occupational information. TV occupations were regarded as more extremely sex-stereotyped than real life occupations, & students had more negative attitudes about Ms participating in occupations on TV than in real life, occupations. The results for 1 supported the hypothesis that gender schemas have changed for "A" pations on TV; girls expressed interest in engaging in these occu. Individual differences in home viewing did not predict knowledge tudes, except that girls who expressed high aspirations for F TV tions (eg, model) often watched programs showing traditional : & infrequently viewed programs with nontraditional roles. 5 Ta References Modified HA

40 sociology of sexual behavior

88T6426

Atwater, Lynn (Seton Hall U, South Orange NJ 07079), The Anonymous Essay as Symbolic Interaction between Sexuality Professor and Student, Teaching Sociology, 1987, 15, 3, July, 250-256

¶ A report on a pedagogical technique, the anonymous sexuality essay, which has been used & tested for eight semesters in an undergraduate sociology of sexuality course as a device to bridge conflicts between the traditional structure of the classroom & the somewhat unusual demands involved in teaching sexuality. Using a symbolic interactionist perspective, it is found that the series of anonymous essays creates a "private world" between professor & student, coexisting with but separate from the more traditional, overt academic environment. Within the different norms of this private world, students behave differently. Rewards occur for both students & professor as the essays open a channel for an alternative method of communication within the traditional course structure. 17 References. HA

88T6427

Baron, Larry (Yale U, New Haven CT 06520), Immoral, Inviolable or Inconclusive?, ♦ UM Society, 1987, 24, 5(169), July-Aug, 6-12

¶ A discussion of pornography as a powerful symbol of social malaise in the US. The Meese Commission's conclusion that most pornography causes rape is criticized, & it is argued that feminist support of the Commission's conclusions is misguided & counterproductive to the goal of ending violence against women. The Meese Commission is seen as being more concerned with censoring sexual depictions than with ending violence against women. Empirical evidence supporting the conclusion that nonviolent pornography increases aggression against women is reviewed & found to be inadequate. 5 References. F. Rasmussen

88T6428

Brannigan, Augustine (U Calgary, Alberta T2N 1N4), Is Obscenity Criminogenic?, ♦ UM Society, 1987, 24, 5(169), July-Aug, 12-19

¶ The 1986 US Attorney General's study of the public risk from exposure to pornography advised more aggressive control of erotica of virtually every variety. However, the social science theory on which such conclusions were based does not support the censorship policies that have been attributed to it. Here, some of the policies that surround studies of media effects are outlined, as well as some of the outstanding methodological issues not yet addressed in the scientific literature. Parallels are drawn between the current controversy over pornography & rape, & fears over comics & delinquency prevalent in the 1950s. 5 References. AA

88T6429

David, Ralph Orla (U Arkansas, Fayetteville 72701), An Investigation of the Accuracy of College Students' Knowledge of Sexual Terms and Practices, * Dissertation Abstracts International, A. The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1326-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8718800.

88T6430

DeLucia, Janice L. (Purdue U, West Lafayette IN 47907), Gender Role Identity and Dating Behavior: What Is the Relationship?, Sex Roles, 1987, 17, 3-4, Aug, 153-161

¶ Data on gender-role identity & dating behaviors of Coll students (N = 197) were obtained using the Bem Sex-Role Inventory & a behavioral questionnaire. Results indicate that high-masculine individuals (androgynous & masculine individuals) scored higher on the masculine dating behavior index & that high-feminine individuals (androgynous & feminine individuals) scored higher on the feminine interactional index. The results support the hypothesis that gender-role identity influences self-reported dating behavior of Coll students. 2 Tables, 23 Ref. Modified AA

88T6431

Eisen, Marvin & Zellman, Gail L. (Sociometrics Corp, 685 #2E Palo Alto CA 94301), Changes in Incidence of Sexual Intercourse of Unmarried Teenagers following a Community-Based Sex Education Program, ♦ UM Journal of Sex Research, 1987, 23, 4, 527-533

¶ The effects of sex education programs on teenagers' subsequent intercourse status are assessed, based on prospective data from 1,000 teenagers (N = 74 Fs & 46 Ms, aged 13-18) who were interviewed before enrollment in a public health theory-based 15-hour pilot sex education program & reinterviewed 3-6 months after completion. No net change in self-reported sexual intercourse status was reported: 62% remained abstinent, 7% became coitally active, & 7% who were coitally active before the program reported no sexual intercourse after the program. Findings strengthen conclusions from previous cross-sectional & prospective studies that sex education does not promote sexual intercourse among participants. 1 Table, 11 References. AA

88T6432

Florence, Heather Grant (Bantam Books Inc, 666 Fifth Ave, New York NY 10103), Controlling Ideas, ♦ UM Society, 1987, 24, July-Aug, 19-21

¶ A discussion of the efforts in the legal arena to regulate sexual expression. The effect of obscenity legislation on the free flow of ideas is assessed. The Miller v. California case, particularly its emphasis on community standards, is explored, & current legal efforts to challenge obscenity restrictions are described. The importance of such legal efforts is stressed, & implications for society as a whole are assessed. Rasmussen

88T6433

Fridell, Lorie Ann (U California, Irvine 92717), Diversion Programs for Intrafamilial Child Sexual Abuse Offenders: The Clients, the Referral Decision, and the Resumption of Prosecution, * Dissertation Abstracts International, A. The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1545-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8719498

88T6434

Harrison, Paul Raymond (Dept Sociology La Trobe U, Bk 1, Victoria 3083 Australia), From Bodies to Ethics: The Second and Third Volumes of Foucault's History of Sexuality, ♦ Eleven, 1987, 16, 128-140

¶ A review essay on two vols of a book by Michel Foucault: History of Sexuality. Vol 2: L'usage des plaisirs, & Vol 3: Le souci de soi. History of Sexuality. Vol 2: The Use of Pleasures, & Vol 3: The Care of the Self. Paris: Gallimard, 1984 (see listing in IRPS No. 43). The Pleasures & the Care of the Self are analyzed in the context of Foucault's reformulated project, sympathetically noting his shift from of the intellectual as a "tool box" for social movements to one that emphasizes intellectual activity as a form of askesis or modificatory of oneself. Four possible criticisms of his approach are raised, concerning his conceptualization of the subject & of modernity, as well as his argument of the question of normative foundations & of political action. In general, it is argued that while his shift from an emphasis on the body & its rebellions to the field of ethics is a productive one, individual skepticism prevents the full potential of such a shift from being realized. AA cialization & value transmission. Experience with the project in a large introductory level human sexuality course suggests that it effectively encourages students to explore personal attitudes & experiences & relate them to social scientific research, & provides them with hands-on experience with a common method of research. 1 Table, 9 References. HA

88T6453

Troiden, Richard R. (Miami U, Oxford OH 45056), Walking the Line: The Personal and Professional Risks of Sex Education and Research, Teaching Sociology, 1987, 15, 3, July, 241-249.

* Stigma theory is used to argue that sexuality professionals are marked as sexually suspect. Personal & professional risks & benefits associated with careers in sexuality education & research are identified, as are the reactions of sexuality experts to their stigmatization. Audience & actor characteristics that facilitate personal stigmatization are isolated, along with factors that reduce professional stigmatization in academic settings. The origins of personal & professional risks are located in audience-held expectations about what sexuality experts are like as people. These audience-held stereotypes provide a backdrop against which the professional achievements of sexologists are assessed & evaluated in academic settings, constituting a potential source of bias. 11 References. HA

88T6454

Weir, Stuart, Thrills on the Line, WM New Society, 1987, 81, 1290, 18 Sept, 17-18.

* A report on telephone services in GB that offer salacious stories for phone-in M customers. The emphasis in these unpornographic stories is on the flimsy nature of the heroine's dress. Usually the girls tell their own stories often fantasies of the farmer's daughter variety. Although a watchdog committee has pronounced them harmless, they are seen as mindless & disabling for both employees & customers. 1 Rasmussen.

41 sociology of the family

88T6455

Arnett, Cynthia Ellen (U North Carolina, Greensboro 27412), The Relationship of Marital Partnership Status to Husband/Wife Bargaining Mode, * Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1325-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8719147.

88T6456

Barr, Eugenia (Texas Tech U, Lubbock 79409), Marital Relationships and Stress in Couples with a Diabetic Spouse, * Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1896-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8717326.

88T6457

Beland, François & Groupe de recherche interdisciplinaire en santé (Faculty Medicine U Montreal, Quebec H3T 1A8), Multigenerational Households in a Contemporary Perspective, International Journal of Aging and Human Development, 1987, 25, 2, 147-166.

* The multigenerational household is often considered a remnant of the past linked with a Ru mode of life. Contemporary data from the US & Canada show that the elderly are living with one of their children in far greater numbers than the stereotypes would allow. Given these data, multigenerational households should be explained in contemporary terms in reference to the normative & structural factors that determine the life-cycle of the contemporary family. Using 1981 Canadian Census data on the elderly of Quebec, it is shown that the frequency of multigenerational households does not vary with the Ru or Ur location of the elderly. Rather, age & sex of the elderly & homeownership by their children are among the factors that explain family living arrangements. It is concluded that multigenerational households can be realistically considered as a resource available to frail elderly. 2 Tables, 5 Figures, 28 References. HA

88T6458

Bennett, Neil G., Blanc, Ann Klimas & Bloom, David E. (Dept Sociology Yale U, New Haven CT 06520-1965), Commitment and the Modern Union: Assessing the Link between Premarital Cohabitation and Subsequent Marital Stability, WM American Sociological Review, 1988, 53, 1, Feb, 127-138.

* In recent years, the incidence of premarital cohabitation has increased dramatically in many countries of Western Europe. % in the US. Analyzing data from the 1981 Women in Sweden survey (N = 4,300) using a hazards-model approach, focus is on the relationship between premarital cohabitation & subsequent marital stability. The results indicate that women who cohabit premaritally have almost 80% higher marital dissolution rates than those who do not. Women who cohabit for 3+ years prior to marriage have 50+ % higher dissolution rates than women who cohabit for shorter durations. Finally, cohabitators & noncohabitators whose marriages have remained intact for 8 years appear to have identical dissolution rates after that time. The evidence strongly suggests a weaker commitment to the institution of marriage on the part of those who cohabit premaritally. 7 Tables, 2 Figures, 33 References. HA

88T6459

Bhargava, Gurn (Dept Sociology Brescia Coll U Western Ontario, London N6G 1H2), Seeking Immigration through Matrimonial Alliance: A Study of Advertisement in an Ethnic Weekly, ♦ WM Journal of Comparative Family Studies, 1988, 19, 2, summer, 245-259.

* A content analysis of newspaper advertisements (N = 148) placed in a New York City ethnic weekly, India Abroad, by Asian Indians seeking or offering an opportunity to migrate to North America through matrimony. Comparisons are made between Ms & Fs, between seekers & offerers, & between direct & indirect statements. Ms tend to be direct seekers, & Fs indirect. Seekers tend to be younger than announcers & are more likely never to have been married. About 50% of seekers live outside North America. Seekers often advertise possession of a marketable skill or a professional or North American degree to indicate good prospects. 6 Tables, 42 References. Modified HA.

88T6460

Blume, Thomas Wylie (Texas Tech U, Lubbock 79409), Cognitive and Behavioral Aspects of Marital Conflict: A Test of a Constructivist Model, * Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1325-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8717328.

88T6461

Bonney, Norman (Dept Sociology U Aberdeen, AB9 1FX Scotland), Gender, Household and Social Class, WM The British Journal of Sociology, 1988, 39, 1, Mar, 28-46.

* A new approach to the analysis of gender & SC is suggested that focuses on the joint behavior of partners in a household rather than on the individual as the basic unit for SC analysis. Evidence from the 1971 Census of GB suggests that, there is homogeneity in labor market position, & that wives' economic activity tends to support rather than undermine SC divisions based on differential M labor market roles. An emphasis on stratification within the FIF & its correspondence with stratification among M workers yields considerable insight into current processes of change in the labor market & a way forward from the current theoretical & empirical impasse. 3 Tables. Modified HA.

88T6462

Bosman, Rie & Louwes, Wiepke (Vakgroep Sociologie Rijks U Groningen, NL-9700 AB Netherlands), Eenouder- en tweeoudergezinnen en schoolloopbanen (One-Parent and Two-Parent Families and School Careers), WM Mens en Maatschappij, 1988, 63, 1, Feb, 5-23 (DUT).

* Data from a 1977 national survey of Dutch secondary school students are used to investigate the relationship between growing up in a one-parent family & the school careers of children, with emphasis on F-headed families. Children living in F-headed families were individually matched by sex, age, family size, & SES with children living in two-parent families. Results show a negative effect of the one-parent family on the level of academic achievement. Sex of the child has no effect on this relationship, but children of divorced parents are more at risk than children of widows. Three possible explanations will be compared in further research: income position, labeling & stigma, & parent-child interaction. 7 Tables, 36 References. Modified HA.

whether they demonstrated a high or low degree of sex-role stereotyping (SRS). Results indicate few significant main effects for consent or arousal, though all stories did have some effect on Rs' self-esteem & attitudes primarily a greater acceptance of rape myths & interpersonal violence, high vs low scorers on the SRS measure shared this tolerance, & also had lower self-esteem. In general, SRS appeared to mediate the effects of reading pornography, suggesting that a cognitive process of some type (eg, primary effect) is responsible for attitudinal differences, though pornographic content is also a factor. 1 Table, 3 Figures, 27 References. K. Hyatt

88T6443

Miller, Brent C., Christensen, Roger B. & Olson, Terrance, D. (Utah State U, Logan 84322-2905), Adolescent Self-Esteem in Relation to Sexual Attitudes and Behavior, IM Youth and Society, 1987, 19, 1, Sept, 93-111

¶ The relationship between self-esteem & sexual intercourse experience was investigated in surveys of 2,423 high school students in 3 western US states in 1983/84. In this sample, self-esteem was related to sexual attitudes & behavior in ways that are consistent with a normative context hypothesis. That is, among those who were in conservative groups (frequent church attenders & Mormons) there was a significant negative relationship between self-esteem & permissive sexual attitudes & behavior. The relationship was also mediated by personal attitudinal permissiveness, with self-esteem being positively related to sexual intercourse among adolescents who believed that premarital sex was usually or always right, & negatively related to sexual intercourse among those who believed it was always wrong. 6 Tables, 28 References. Modified AA

88T6444

Milne, Kirsty, Porn: What Do Women Want?, IM New Society, 1987, 82, 1295, 23 Oct, 18-20

¶ A report on a Sept 1987 conference held at Middlesex Polytechnic in London, England, on pornography & erotica, which examined how women's sexuality finds expression in a culture where desire is M-defined. Distinctions are drawn between pornography & erotica, & women's reactions to erotica directed to the F market are analyzed. There will never be pornography for women in the way it is presently defined, culture & the construction of sexual identity are against it. 3 Photographs, 5 References. F. Rasmussen

88T6445

Moy, Caryl T. (Sangamon State U, Springfield IL 62708), From Divergent Lifestyles to Professional Issues: Fifteen Years with a University Sexuality Course, Teaching Sociology, 1987, 15, 3, July, 263-267

¶ Described is a course on human sexuality taught for fifteen years at Sangamon State U, Ill, in which emphasis has consistently been given to the individual's freedom to choose sexual values. Teaching techniques include values clarification, resource personnel use, audiovisual presentations, personal journals, sensual object disclosure, & awareness of sexual exploitation. Student responses to these approaches are discussed. 1 Appendix, 6 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T6446

Parrot, Andrea (Dept Human Services Studies Cornell U, Ithaca NY 14853), Is Queen Victoria Lecturing Today? Teaching Human Sexuality Using Famous Personalities, Teaching Sociology, 1987, 15, 3, July, 257-262

¶ An approach to teaching human sexuality is described in which the instructor plays the part of famous women in history & present society: Queen Victoria, Margaret Sanger, Renee Richards, Virginia Johnson, & Madonna. Guidelines based on personal experience are offered for using this strategy effectively & avoiding problems, especially that of students who find the approach frivolous. 11 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T6447

Pollis, Carol A. (Social Change/Development Program U Wisconsin, Green Bay 54301-7001), The Apparatus of Sexuality: Reflections on Foucault's Contributions to the Study of Sex in History, IM Journal of Sex Research, 1987, 23, 3, Aug, 401-408

¶ A discussion of Michel Foucault's approach to the study of sexual history, as presented in The History of Sexuality, Vol. 1: An Introduction (Hurley, R. [Tr], New York, Viking, 1980). Critical reaction to Foucault's thesis by historians & philosophers, who have not evaluated his philosophical history through comparison with conventional historical studies of sexuality, is briefly summarized. It is argued major contributions to sexual history & to the study of sexuality mainstream sexual science are that (1) it raises important questioning philosophies of history & science in relation to the prior sexual science, & (2) it has been a key stimulus to the development of social constructionist theories of sexuality by feminist & critical. 30 References. AA

88T6448

Rumenik, Donna Katherine (Kent State U, OH 44242), Rec Physical and Nonphysical Sexual Contact between Adult and C Exploratory Study, Dissertation Abstracts International, Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, 1543-A-1544-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8719581

88T6449

Simon, William (U Houston, TX 77004), Testing Freedom of Choice, IM Society, 1987, 24, 5(169), July-Aug, 27-30

¶ A discussion of pornography, focusing on the relationship between exposure to sexually explicit material & dangerous or offensive behavior. The degree to which human sexuality has been invoked for legal uses is assessed. The Meese Commission Report on Pornography analyzed in these terms, & implications for society in terms of & constraint are discussed. 3 References. F. Rasmussen

88T6450

Singer, Barry & Toates, Frederick M. (Dept Biology Open University MK7 6AA England), Sexual Motivation, IM Journal of Sex Research, 1987, 23, 4, Nov, 481-501

¶ A discussion of the long-standing "sex-as-drive-or-affect" controversy: whether sexual desires may arise on their own, from states, or whether they only arise when attractive stimuli are present. Sexual motivation is integrated within an umbrella theory of motivational systems that closely follows currently dominant incentive models. In this formulation sexual motivation, like hunger, emerges from an interaction of external incentives & internal state. Privation acts to enhance the palatability of incentives but does not set an internal goal, ie, there is no aversive internal sensation associated with sexual deprivation. Findings from research on other motivational (eg, hunger or thirst) are used to clarify why orgasm & sexual motivation can be decoupled, how F sexual motivation arises & is similar to how novel stimulation affects sexual motivation, & why measure of sexual motivation seems to vary with experimental technique. Sexual stimulation is accounted for under this model. Predictions are given for the outcomes of both human & animal experiments, & practical applications are discussed. 81 References. HA

88T6451

Sprecher, Susan & Pocs, Ollie (Dept Sociology/Anthropology Illinois State U, Normal 61761), Teaching Sexuality: Two Techniques for Personalizing the Large Class, IM Sociology, 1987, 15, 3, July, 268-272

¶ Described are two teaching techniques used to supplement the standard lecture format in large class sections of sociology of human sexuality. The first is the traditional teaching practice of "homework assignments," five types of which are described & their benefits to students outlined. The second is a procedure for having discussions when funds &/or graduate students are not available for individual students who have completed the introductory sexuality course. Both techniques make the course material more meaningful & personalized for the students in introductory sexuality courses. 7 References. Modified HA

88T6452

Stinson, Kandi M. (Dept Social Relations Lehigh U, Bethlehem 18015), Conducting Family Interviews for a Course in Human Sexuality, Teaching Sociology, 1987, 15, 3, July, 273-278

¶ A project for use in human sexuality courses is described that asks students to administer a questionnaire on sexual attitudes to members & age-peers. A novel aspect of the assignment is the requirement that students predict the responses before administering the questionnaire. Results can be used to illustrate the differences between & perceived generation gaps & a number of other aspects of sex relationships within the family, based on data collected through field research in a southern Indian village. It is found that patriarchy, an androcentric ideology, is built into the social structure. Women occupy a lower position in the sexual hierarchy & in the opportunity structure. Men & women are systematically socialized to follow this custom, & women as mothers are coopted into the patriarchal family to aid in socializing the next generation. Questionnaire data from a comparison sample of first-generation Asian-Indian immigrants in a Canadian metropolitan area ($N = 250$) show that equal opportunity & exposure to multiple ideologies that include egalitarianism lead to equal relationships between the sexes, suggesting that the patriarchy ideology's power can erode under certain conditions. 13 References. Modified HA

88T6473

Driver, Edwin D. & Driver, Aloo E. (Dept Sociology U Massachusetts, Amherst 01003), Social and Demographic Correlates of Consanguineous Marriages in South India. ♦ Journal of Comparative Family Studies, 1988, 19, 2, summer, 229-244

* Open-ended interviews with a random sample of household heads or their spouses in 400 households in metropolitan Madras, India, in 1966 revealed that many women married consanguineously. Most often these women married men who were defined in their communities as preferred mates: mother's brother, mother's brother's son, or father's sister's son. These marriages were usually arranged by the parents, occurred at young ages for both spouses, & produced more offspring & had higher infant & child mortality. These findings, together with others reported from studies of Tamil Nadu & Karnataka states, provide a vivid contrast to marital patterns elsewhere in India & in other nations. 16 Tables, 9 References. Modified HA

88T6474

Edwards, John N. (Virginia Polytechnic Instt & State U, Blacksburg 24061), Changing Family Structure and Youthful Well-Being: Assessing the Future. Journal of Family Issues, 1987, 8, 4, Dec, 355-372.

* The vanishing nuclear family constitutes one of the most significant demographic & social transformations in recent history. A voluminous body of theoretical & empirical literature in family studies, proceeding on the assumption that the nuclear family is the optimum child-rearing structure, suggests this change will have dire consequences for the well-being of future generations. That conclusion is challenged here, pointing out various methodological & conceptual problems with the extant research on which this prediction is based. HA

88T6475

Fishman, Laura T. (Dept Sociology U Vermont, Burlington 05540), Patterns of Accommodation among Wives of Criminals. Journal of Contemporary Ethnography, 1987, 16, 2, July, 176-204

* An examination of how wives of currently incarcerated prisoners in Vt have accommodated to their husbands' involvement in criminal activities & other "fast-living" lifestyle patterns prior to their husbands' arrest. In depth interviews with 30 such women & observations of "rap sessions" in which a number of them participated allowed identification of a succession of accommodative strategies used to deter their husbands from troublesome patterns of behavior & to allow their marriages to continue. 14 References. HA

88T6476

Gleason, Frank Samuel (U Southern California, Los Angeles 90089), Self-Completion as a Factor in the Couple Personality Complementarity of a Marital Counseling Sample. * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1897-A Unavailable from UMI; contact the degree-granting university.

88T6477

Gleason, Norval D. (U Texas, Austin 78712), Continuity versus Change: Sanguineous versus Concern: Views of the American Family in the Late 1980s. Journal of Family Issues, 1987, 8, 4, Dec, 348-354

* In the 1970s & early 1980s, the social science literature on the U.S. family stressed its adaptability & continuity, in opposition to beliefs in its disintegration & decay held by journalists & the lay public. However, the more recent literature has expressed a new concern over the state of the family, hinting that changes have been more fundamental, & their consequences more far-reaching, than was previously believed. The eight-teen contributions to this special journal issue (see abstracts in SA 36.3) are classified according to whether they emphasize family change or continuity & to whether their authors express concern or sanguineness. It is found that change & concern predominate, particularly regarding the effects of changing marital patterns on children & the happiness/satisfaction of married persons. This latter issue is explored using data from the 1972-1986 General Social Survey, & it is concluded that high divorce rates are accompanied by a decline in the association between marriage & happiness, particularly for women. Despite general societal changes toward equality for Ms & Fs, the quality of life in general for Fs has suffered. 2 Tables, 8 References. K. Hyatt

88T6478

Goettsch, Stephen L. (Dept Sociology/Anthropology Miami U, Hamilton OH 45011), Textbook Sexual Inadequacy? A Review of Sexuality Texts. Teaching Sociology, 1987, 15, 3, July, 324-338

* A review of eight current (published during 1983-1987) human sexuality textbooks (see listings in IRPS No. 43), focusing on general organization & substantive content. Eight specific content areas are addressed: (1) sexual response cycle, (2) sexual dysfunction, (3) acquaintance rape, (4) AIDS (acquired immune deficiency syndrome) & sexually transmitted diseases, (5) extramarital sex, (6) abortion, (7) homosexuality, & (8) pornography. The latter three areas are discussed using historical & cross-cultural material, which is essential in helping the reader understand the relationship between sexuality & society. 3 Tables, 1 Appendix, 36 References. Modified HA

88T6479

Goode, Dolores Alleyne (F. Heller Graduate School Brandeis U, Waltham MA 02254), Strengths, Stress and Coping in Black American Families with a Severely Mentally Retarded Child. * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1902-A
Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8722495.

88T6480

Goody, Esther (Dept Anthropology U Cambridge, CB2 1TN England), Why Must Might Be Right? Observations on Sexual Hierarchy. The Quarterly Newsletter of the Laboratory of Comparative Human Cognition, 1987, 9, 2, Apr, 55-76.

* A discussion of two paradoxes in M-F relations. (1) Across societies there is a pattern of effective dominance of Ms in relations between households & larger groups, myths & ideologies often assert the legitimacy of this dominance as a result of women's weakness, stupidity, or evil nature. (2) In contemporary Western society, women are often subject to routinized violence in conjugal relationships; they tend to respond by feeling that they are to blame, & remain for years in the destructive situation. In both cases, there is a dynamic that places men in control of women, & justifies this morally by women's own weakness. While it is not possible to watch the construction of myth, the interface between action & belief can be observed in the dynamics of domestic violence. Men who beat their wives frequently assert that they do so to punish them for failure in conjugal, domestic, or maternal roles. In this way the husband defines what is right & what is wrong, & establishes the rules (the morality) of the home. Thus, the social system persists, & is seen by the participants as legitimate. This dynamic is replicated continually on the domestic level, & is subject to cultural elaboration in the form of myth & theology. The correspondence between M physical superiority over Fs, & the myths that legitimize this as necessary & natural is too strong to be dismissed as a coincidence. 121 References. Modified AA

88T6481

Groves, Melissa Marion (Virginia Polytechnic Instt & State U, Blacksburg 25061), An Investigation of Adult Attachment and Parental Style. * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1326-A
Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8719009.

88T6482

Gurak, Douglas T. (Fordham U, Bronx NY 10458), Family Formation and Marital Selectivity among Colombian and Dominican Immigrants in New York City. ♦ International Migration Review, 1987, 21, 2, summer, 275-298

* Utilizing data from a 1981 survey (N not specified) of Dominican & Colombian immigrants to New York City, & from 1975 marriage certificates for the entire city, the extent of family formation in the US & pat-

88T6463

Brecl, Michael G. & Klein, Ross A. (c/o Klein-Skidmore Coll, Saratoga Springs NY 12866), Communications and Relationship Simulation (CARS): A Reality-Based Means for Teaching Courtship, Marriage, and the Family, Teaching Sociology, 1987, 15, 3, July, 285-295

† In teaching courses on courtship, marriage, & the family, Coll instructors are faced with the tension between student interest in the functional, everyday mechanics of relationships, marriage, & family, & faculty desire to present sociological knowledge & understanding. A set of simulated exercises the Communications & Relationship Simulation (CARS) game designed to help students synthesize formal & practical knowledge is described. These exercises take students through the life of a relationship from dating to marital & family life. They are organized around three microthemes emphasizing communication skills, methods for joint decisionmaking, & means for achieving awareness of self- & three macrothemes which challenge students to look critically at sex roles & sex-role socialization, social & cultural influences on the dynamic process of relationships, & the function of rites of passage & events in the process of courtship, marriage, & family life. 1 Appendix, 14 References. Modified HA

88T6464

Browning, Paul Keith (U California, Los Angeles 90024), Mormon Marital Satisfaction: A Perceived Congruence of Expectations and Outcomes and Factors Related to Satisfaction and Expectations, Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1896-A-1897-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8723149.

88T6465

Callahan, Cheryl Mann (U North Carolina, Greensboro 27412), Fathers' Coping Strategies and Family Environment when College Freshmen Leave Home, Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1325-A-1326-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8719152.

88T6466

Cardoso, Lawrence A. (Dept History U Wyoming, Laramie 82071), Review Essay: Hispanics in the United States, The Social Science Journal, 1987, 24, 4, Oct, 461-463

† A review essay on books by: Alfredo Mirande, The Chicano Experience: An Alternative Perspective (Notre Dame, Ind: U of Notre Dame Press, 1985), Richard Griswold del Castillo, La Familia Chicano Families in the Urban Southwest, 1848 to Present (Notre Dame, Ind: U of Notre Dame Press, 1984), & Felix M. Padilla, Latino Ethnic Consciousness: The Case of Mexican Americans and Puerto Ricans in Chicago (Notre Dame, Ind: U of Notre Dame Press, 1985 [see listings in IRPS No. 43]). Mirande argues that traditional explanatory models of immigration/acclimation/assimilation, Marxism, & internal colonialism are not valid for the Chicano experience in the US. Rather, social scientists must adopt a broader set of values sensitive to the unique needs & concerns of this population, ie, a Chicano sociology from a Chicano perspective. Griswold del Castillo provides an analysis of the Chicano family in the southwestern US since the Mexican-American War of 1848, with focus on the struggle between culturally conditioned family values & the US capitalist system. The inevitability & desirability of the assimilation & acculturation of minorities are discussed, & it is suggested that the Hispanic family must be understood as an institution of defiance against the new order & protector of traditional values. Padilla offers a case study of the successful coalition between Mexican Americans & Puerto Ricans in Chicago, Ill, during the 1970s. The two groups were able to transcend their separate aims & mobilize to fight political & economic discrimination. K. Hyatt Cheek, Gael Frances (U Minnesota, Minneapolis 55455), Power and Ideology in Marriage: A Reexamination of Resource and Normative Theory Using Multiple Measures of Power, Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1547-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8718636.

88T6467

88T6468

Chekki, Dan A. (Dept Sociology U Winnipeg, Manitoba R3B 2E9), Family in India and North America: Change and Continuity

among the Lingayat Families, Journal of Comparative Studies, 1988, 19, 2, summer, 329-343.

† The Lingayat religious community of South Asia has been little studied since Max Weber's The Religion of India (see 595445). The current state of this community is described on of intergenerational, historical, ethnographic, participant & non participant observation, & interview (N not given) data. Emphasis is continuity in the process of change in family structure, & the modernization & change are reviewed. Key factors appear to be population growth, urbanization, education, occupational mobility, migration. Characteristics of North American Lingayat families examined. 21 References. Modified HA

88T6469

Chekki, Dan A. (Dept Sociology U Winnipeg, Manitoba R3B 2E9), Recent Directions in Family Research: India and North America, Journal of Comparative Family Studies, 1988, 19, 2, summer, 171-186

† A review of research on families in India & on Indian families in America introduces a special issue of Journal of Comparative Studies. Indian family traditions & the changes they have undergone as a result of modernization are emphasized. Several common trends in various papers in this special issue (see abstracts in SA 363) are noted. 83 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T6470

Conklin, George H. (Dept Sociology North Carolina Central Univ, Durham 27707), The Influence of Economic Development on Patriarchal Power and Extended Family Residence in India, Journal of Comparative Family Studies, 1988, 19, 2, summer, 187-205

† Household decision making has emerged over the past twenty years as a major concern of family studies. Information on this subject is collected from 64 Indian & 63 US families through a questionnaire completed by early adolescent students & through performance on mental tasks & completion of standardized questionnaires by fathers. In both cultures, the spouse who controls the most resources has decision-making power. In India, urbanization & increasing educational employment for women are associated with forces that make more powerful, however, demographic evidence reveals no trend toward nuclear households. This may be due to reduced fertility rates, steeply graded income profiles associated with jobs in the modern economy, & local customs that tolerate migration for employment. educated women seem to be able to exercise power in both nuclear & extended households. 4 Tables, 57 References. Modified HA

88T6471

Dahl, Ann Sale, Cowgill, Kathryn Markhus & Asmundsson, (Connecticut Remarriage Research & Consultation Group, Middle Haddam 06457), Life in Remarriage Families, U of Connecticut Press, 1987, 32, 1, Jan-Feb, 40-44.

† An examination of how nonclinical remarried families feel about family format, how they manage, & what social arrangements enhance family functioning, based on data obtained via semistructured home interviews conducted with a snowball sample of 30 couples of their children. Lengths of remarriage ranged from 4 months to 20 years. It was postulated that multiple family memberships, overlapping family boundaries, & a variety of biological, step, & exspousal relationships would contribute to complicated & confusing family formation. It was found that remarriage families were more similar in the way they handled social situations than they had believed themselves to be. There appeared to be some emerging norm for remarriage preparation, use of kinship terms, relationships with exspouses, visitation arrangements. Remarriage families' most frequent advice for new families was to proceed slowly & patiently & to expect difficulties in the early stages of the marriage. Remarriage families were more satisfied than had been expected. It is suggested that supportively confirming the normality of fused & overwhelmed feelings in such families may prove helpful to those entering a remarriage. Modified AA

88T6472

Dhruvarajan, Vanaia (Dept Sociology U Winnipeg, Manitoba R3B 2E9), Religious Ideology and Interpersonal Relationships in the Family, Journal of Comparative Family Studies, 1988, 19, 2, summer, 273-285.

† An examination of how religious ideology determines the nature

88T6493

MacDorman, Marian Frances (Australian National U., Canberra ACT 2601). Contemporary Marriage Practices in North India: Evidence from Three Uttar Pradesh Villages. * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1894-A

Unavailable from UMI; contact the degree-granting university.

88T6494

Mason, Karen Oppenheim & Lu, Yu-Hsia (U Michigan, Ann Arbor 48109). Attitudes toward Women's Familial Roles: Changes in the United States, 1977-1985. ♦ Gender & Society, 1988, 2, 1, Mar, 39-57

† Changes between 1977 & 1985 in Fs' & Ms' attitudes toward Fs' familial roles in the US are examined using National Opinion Research Center General Social Survey data. Despite speculation that a backlash against feminism occurred during the late 1970s & early 1980s, & evidence from past studies of a possible slowdown in gender-role attitude change, the data show a significant increase in profeminist views of the wife & mother roles among both Fs & Ms. More of this change occurred within cohorts than through cohort succession. With the exception of Coll-graduate Fs, whose support for gender equality was high at both periods, the profeminist trend occurred about equally in all sociodemographic subgroups of the population, although even in 1985, Ms were less feminist in orientation than Fs. 4 Tables, 32 References. HA

88T6495

Massey, Ellen P. (U Houston, TX 77004). A Study of Home Background Factors Related to School Achievement of Fifth Grade Boys from Single Parent and Two Parent Homes. * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1327-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8718602.

88T6496

McKinney, Kathleen (Dept Sociology Oklahoma State U., Stillwater 74078). Two Issues in the Teaching of the Sociology of Human Sexuality: A Sociological Approach and an Applied Emphasis. Teaching Sociology, 1987, 15, 3, July, 303-306

† A discussion of two issues in the teaching of human sexuality as a sociological subject: (1) the definition of a sociological approach to this subject as distinct from clinical, psychological, & biological approaches, & (2) the linking of course material to the personal lives of students. Recommendations for attaining both these goals are offered. 3 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T6497

McRae, James A., Jr. & Kohen, Janet A. (U South Carolina, Columbia 29208). Changes in Attributions of Marital Problems. Social Psychology Quarterly, 1988, 51, 1, Mar, 74-80

† Attribution theory suggests that attributions of personal responsibility are less likely to be made when forces external to individuals are believed to be important. Data from national surveys of US adults (2 & 4, 724) collected in 1957 & 1976 indicate a reluctance to attribute marital problems to oneself & a decreased tendency to attribute them to one's spouse; the decrease was especially pronounced among divorced Rs in describing previous marriages, although this differential change led to only a partial convergence of the married & the divorced. In both years, mentions of spouse are less frequent among those groups most exposed to secular forces: Ms, the young, & the better educated. This finding suggests that the decreased f of attributing responsibility to the spouse is due to the secularization of marital values. Further evidence for this perspective is obtained from the relationship of spousal blame with the f of church attendance. 2 Tables, 1 Figure, 30 References. HA

88T6498

Miller, Gale (Dept Social & Cultural Sciences Marquette U., Milwaukee WI 53233). Producing Family Problems: Organization and Uses of the Family Perspective and Rhetoric in Family Therapy. Symbolic Interaction, 1987, 10, 2, fall, 245-265

† Literature on the micropolitics of trouble & family rhetoric perspectives is applied & extended through an analysis of observation data gathered in 1984/85 on how family therapists practicing the brief model used family rhetoric in defining & responding to client problems. Family rhetoric involves the use of images of family (the family perspective) to (1) persuade others to one's preferred orientation to issues of mutual concern, & (2) attribute identities to one's self & others. In general, troubles were defined & remedied by treating them as products of clients' family systems, defined as enduring roles, relationships, & perspectives. The therapists sought to remedy client troubles by initiating changes assessed as appropriate for their troubles & family systems. Implications of the findings for the sociological study of human service work are considered. 20 References. Modified HA

88T6499

Myers, Robert Calvin (Brigham Young U., Provo UT 84602). Marital Quality: A Test of the Lewis and Spanier Model. * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1548-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8719812.

88T6500

Nemenyi, Maria. Valas-ideológiák (Ideologies of Divorce). Sociologia, 1984-85, 3-4, 329-348. (HUN)

† Abstract not currently available

88T6501

Ormsby, Patricia & Fairchild, G. Ted (Coll Health U Utah, Salt Lake City 84112). Perceived Income Adequacy and Selected Financial Management Practices among Families in Chile and Mexico. Social Indicators Research, 1987, 19, 3, Aug, 317-327

† Explored are the perceived adequacy of families' incomes & selected financial management practices (food budgeting, debt, saving) in Chile & Mexico, based on data obtained in an interview survey of 537 families. Results reveal major international differences in the income adequacy responses & also major intranational differences in income levels. Implications of the findings for policymakers & curriculum planners who work in developing countries with inflationary conditions & income inadequacies are discussed. 2 Tables, 2 Figures, 10 References. Modified HA

88T6502

Parnell, Allan McMillan (U North Carolina, Chapel Hill 27514). Marriage and Motherhood: Changing Social Relationships in the United States. * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1894-A-1895-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8722335

88T6503

Penna, Richard George (Drew U., Madison NJ 07940). Design and Implementation of a Support Group for Stepparents in a Local Church. * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1327-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8717111.

88T6504

Rajah, Mireille Savina (U California San Diego, La Jolla 92093). The Mauritian Muslim Family in Transition: Structural and Ideological Changes, a Cultural Diffusion Approach. * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1548-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA87120212.

88T6505

Ramu, G. N. (Dept Sociology U Manitoba, Winnipeg R3T 2N2). Marital Roles and Power: Perceptions and Reality in the Urban Setting. ♦ Journal of Comparative Family Studies, 1988, 19, 2, summer, 207-227

† Interview & participant-observation data are used to examine the perception of roles & distribution of power among 163 M & 149 F members of households in an industrial city of Karnataka State, India. Although Indian society is experiencing modernization, cultural norms continue to influence family life. Consensus between spouses about marital roles has increased markedly, with husbands defined as wage earners & wives as homemakers. Nearly 90% of R husbands are sole providers, & nearly all their wives, including a few who are employed, are dependents. It is generally thought that husbands have the right to make important decisions & hold undisputed authority over their wives, but in fact there is close consultation & bargaining in the exercise of domestic authority. The nuclear family structure has helped wives gain substantially more decision-making power & interpersonal influence. 5 Tables, 45 References. Modified HA terms of marital selectivity of recent Hispanic immigrants residing in New York City are described. The analysis aims to provide indicators of the extent & nature of integration processes at an early stage of the immigration. 5 Tables, 1 Appendix, 50 References. HA

88T6483

Haynes, Alan E. (Dept Sociology U Saskatchewan, Saskatoon S7N 0W0), A Research Project for Family Sociology Students on Family History, Teaching Sociology, 1987, 15, 3, July, 279-284

† A two part research project was developed as a term assignment for an undergraduate course in family sociology. Each student is asked to respond thoughtfully in writing to 18 open-ended questions that focus on what & how he or she has learned about his/her family's past. Using the same questions as an interview schedule, the student interviews two additional people & writes a paper. The project (1) helps to bridge the distance between family experiences & sociological insights covered in the course, (2) challenges students to discover & analyze how family histories are transmitted across & between generations, (3) develops students' interviewing skills & demonstrates the difficulties involved in organizing, controlling, & analyzing qualitative data, & (4) shows students how to communicate their results & insights in written form. 1 Appendix, 27 References. Modified HA

88T6484

Henry, Gwendolyn Carol (Brigham Young U, Provo UT 84602), Generational Transmission of Patterns of Social Behavior in Marriage, * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1326-A-1327-A
Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8716993.

88T6485

Hetler, Carol Beth (Australian National U, Canberra ACT 2601), Female-Headed Households in a Circular Migration Village in Central Java, Indonesia, * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1893-A Unavailable from UMI; contact the degree-granting university.

88T6486

Kaufman, Gladis M., Relationship between Marital Power and Symptoms of Stress among Husbands and Wives, ♦ Wisconsin Sociologist, 1988, 25, 1, winter, 35-44

† An examination of the relationship between different types of marital power structures & the stress experienced by a sample of 50 husbands & 50 wives. Analysis of interview data shows that wives tend to have the least stress in egalitarian marriages, while husbands are less stressed in egalitarian & husband-dominated marriages. Both husbands & wives reported most stress in wife-dominated marriages. 4 Tables, 44 References. Modified HA

88T6487

Khatrī, A. A. (Dept Sociology U Alabama, Birmingham 35294), Some Dimensions of Asiatic Family: A Quantitative Evaluation, ♦ U Journal of Comparative Family Studies, 1988, 19, 2, summer, 261-272

† In an effort to evolve a scale to measure jointness of family structure, families of 118 children in 2 schools in Ahmedabad, India, were classified into 4 broad types, & a parent or adult relative in each family was interviewed. Two dimensions are identified: jointness in residence & jointness in visits. It is found that 2+ conjugal units reside together in a joint family in about 25% of cases, also 1+ relatives reside with a conjugal unit in about 25% of cases. About 33% of nonresidential family units receive 1+ visits per week, in a significant number of visits, relatives stay & take meals in each other's households. 8 Tables, 35 References. Modified HA

88T6488

Knodel, John, Kamnuansilpa, Peerasi & Chamratrithirong, Aphichat (Dept Sociology & Population Studies Center U Michigan, Ann Arbor 48104), Infant Feeding Practices, Postpartum Amenorrhea, and Contraceptive Use in Thailand, Studies in Family Planning, 1985, 16, 6(1), Nov-Dec, 302-311

† Findings from Thailand's Third Contraceptive Prevalence Survey, involving interviews with 7,259 non-Moslem, ever-married women from the country's 4 major regions & the Bangkok metropolitan area in 1984, suggest that an earlier trend (1969-1974) toward reduced breast-feeding though its duration shows substantial Ru-Ur, regional, & ed variations. The introduction of supplemental food is very common when infants are quite young, the median duration of breastfeeding in the absence of any supplemental food is only one month. A minority of women begin practicing contraception during postmenorrhea, but as this stage is of only moderate duration, the overlap in protection against pregnancy is very modest; the re of menses is clearly associated with a substantial increase in contraceptive practice. 9 Tables, 1 Figure, 13 References. Modified HA

88T6489

Koch-Hattem, Alberta, Hattem, David M. & Plummer, J. (Dept Family Medicine School Medicine U North Carolina Hill 27514), The Role of Mental-Health Resources in Family Adaptation to Stress: A Preliminary Analysis, ♦ Family Medicine, 1987, 5, 2, summer, 206-219

† The construct validity for the FAMS measure (Koch, Alberta, Family Adaptation to Medical Stressors, "Family Systems Medicine", 1, 78-87) is estimated, using the nonrecursive model that it was to test (see SA 34 5/86R1162). Also compared is the applicability of both the model & the instrument to explaining family adaptation to medical as well as medical stressors, using data from 570 R's. U adults aged 18-25, & divorced adults who were participating in independent cross-sectional analyses. Results of a regression analysis test the hypothesis that mental health resources would contribute to explanation of variance in mental health outcomes indicated by up of stressors, role inflexibility, rules prohibiting emotional expression, family income, & perceived severity of stressors were all influential in explaining negative outcomes. Results of an analysis of covariance in 2 samples in which R's selected the stressors to which their response differed supported the hypothesis that these findings were unrelated to whether a medical or nonmedical stressor was chosen. It is concluded that the results warrant use of both the model & the instrument in longitudinal studies of family adaptation to medical & nonmedical stressors. 7 Tables, 15 References. Modified HA

88T6490

Lesthaeghe, Ron & Meekers, Dominique (Centrum Sociologisch U Brussels, B-1050 Belgium), Value Changes and the Decline of Familism in the European Community, European Journal of Population/Revue européenne de démographie, 1987, 2, 3-4, 225-268

† An analysis of family formation in the European community questionnaire data from R's (N = 12,464) to the European Value Survey conducted in 9 countries in 1981. Value orientations are explored & compared across countries & across age groups. Two latent dimensions identified with regard to familism: (1) tolerance of nonconformity in family formation, & (2) meanings attached to parenthood. They suggest that fertility is very likely to remain at below replacement level. 11 Tables, 3 Figures, 1 Appendix, 50 References. Modified HA

88T6491

Liu, Sung-Ling (Arizona State U, Tempe 85287), Marital Instability and the Child-Bearing and Companionship Functions of Marriage, * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1898-A
Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA872201

88T6492

Loseke, Donileen R. (Dept Sociology Skidmore Coll, S. Springs NY 12866), Lived Realities and the Construction of Problems: The Case of Wife Abuse, Symbolic Interaction, 1987, 10, 2, fall, 229-243.

† The official & subjective realities involved in wife abuse are explored & consequences of differences between these two types of reality are considered. Claims appearing in the professional literature are used to define the specific content of the official social problem, & characteristics of wife abuse as experienced are compared with this official definition from a worker logbook & conversations with residents & workers at a shelter for battered women are used to illustrate official definition of wife abuse acts & actors has reduced the visibility of the phenomenon in lived experience & also set the stage for official-definition contests in social services for abused wives. This illustrates the importance of examining sociologically the specificity of social problem claims & the necessity of attending to social use of particular content themes. A typology of content themes was derived from transcripts of conversations ($N = 77$) & the content themes of different marital types (ie, traditional, separate, & independent) & more & less satisfied spouses were compared. As expected, traditional couples emphasized communal themes, eg, togetherness, & separate couples emphasized individualistic themes, eg, personality & separateness. Although the effects of marital satisfaction were not consistent, satisfaction tended to be positively associated with communal & impersonal themes, & negatively associated with individual themes. Generally, the results confirm predicted relationships between content themes & self-reports about the marriage. 6 Tables, 52 References. HA

88T6516

Skiff, Thomas, Robinson, James D. & Wallace, Samuel P. (Dept Communication U Dayton, OH 45469), Portrayal of Families on Prime-Time TV: Structure, Type and Frequency, U Journalism Quarterly, 1987, 64, 2-3, summer-autumn, 360-367, 398.

The portrayal of family life on prime-time TV has been a primary concern of social critics in recent years, especially the issue of conventional vs nonconventional family patterns. An attempt was made to systematically document the range & extent of different family life configurations in prime-time TV (1979-1985) & to provide an index of potential audience exposure based on number of hours of programs aired across the various configurations. The findings reveal that, counter to the charges of critics, network TV tends to reinforce conservative or moderate models of family life (65.5% of all families presented), while also presenting a diversity of nonstandard interpretations of family, generally comfortably framed in a nonthreatening comedic form. 1 Table. Modified AA

88T6517

Somali, Péter, A "hagyományos háztartások" és a "polgári intimitás" (Két típus a családi kapcsolatok társadalomtörténetéből) ("Traditional Households" and "Bourgeois Intimacy" (Two Types from the Social History of Family Relations)), Szociológia, 1984-85, 1-2, 1-23 (HUN).

An examination of how the transition from feudalism to capitalism affected family relations. In traditional households as they existed in feudal societies, normative regulation of family life by local communities was characteristic, work & leisure were not separated. During the rise of bourgeois society, work & residence were separated, leading to a joint evolution of concepts of intimacy & privacy. These especially influenced choice of spouses, raising of children, & housing standards. Bourgeois intimacy is shaped by new values & norms & also by social institutions that at once motivate & hinder their observance. Currently the family evolves by partially negating these values & placing values of understanding & communication in the foreground. 1 Table, 63 References. Modified HA

88T6518

Stanfield, Jacqueline Bloom (Colorado State U, Fort Collins 80521), Dual-Career Couple Styles of Coping with Role Strain, Dissertation Abstracts International, 4 The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1327-A-1328-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8717188.

88T6519

Thornton, Arland & Fricke, Thomas E. (U Michigan, Ann Arbor 48109), Social Change and the Family: Comparative Perspectives from the West, China, and South Asia, Sociological Forum, 1987, 2, 4, fall, 746-779.

An examination of the influence of SE change on family structure & relationships, addressing questions such as, "How do such economic & social transformations as industrialization, urbanization, demographic change, the expansion of education, & the long-term growth of income influence the family?" A comparative & historical approach is taken, reviewing the experiences of three major sociocultural regions: the West, China, & South Asia. Many of the changes that have occurred in family life have been remarkably similar in the three settings: the separation of the workplace from the home, increased training of children in nonfamilial institutions, the development of living arrangements outside the family household, increased access of children to financial & other productive resources, & increased participation by children in the selection of a mate. While the similarities of family change in diverse cultural settings are striking, specific aspects of change have varied across settings because of significant preexisting differences in family structure, residence patterns of marriage, autonomy of children, & the role of marriage within kinship systems. 171 References. Modified HA

88T6520

Vecchiola, Francine June (F Heller Graduate School Brandeis U, Waltham MA 02254), An Exploratory Study of Parent Aide Programs, Dissertation Abstracts International, 4 The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1903-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8722508.

88T6521

Walters, Pamela Barnhouse & O'Connell, Philip J. (Dept Sociology Indiana U, Bloomington 47405), The Family Economy, Work, and Educational Participation in the United States, 1890-1940, U American Journal of Sociology, 1988, 93, 5, Mar, 1116-1152.

Previous studies have found that Ru areas experienced substantial growth in public school enrollments around the turn of the century. Is this finding based on a narrow definition of schooling patterns? Analysis of state-level patterns in census data for 1890-1940 show that Ur industrialism, religion, & race had varying effects across different dimensions of schooling, including public enrollment & attendance rates, & enrollments in private vs public schools & for younger vs older children. In contrast to prior interpretations, it is argued that the diversity of effects can be explained in terms of subpopulation differences in the need for children's labor contributions in the family economy, the availability of "work" (both paid & unpaid), & its compatibility (on a part-year or part day basis) with schooling. 4 Tables, 1 Appendix, 77 References. HA

88T6522

Weston, Carolyn Anne (Syracuse U, NY 13210), The Relationship between Former-Spousal Contact and Remarital Satisfaction in Stepfather Families, Dissertation Abstracts International, 4 The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1899-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8716948.

88T6523

Wilkinson, Ian (Dept Psychology Darlington Memorial Hospital, DL 1 6HX England), Family Assessment: A Review, Journal of Family Therapy, 1987, 9, 4, Nov, 367-380.

A summary of developments in the theory & methodology of family assessment used within a clinical context over the last twenty years. Assessment & therapy are conceptualized as problem-solving processes. The need to understand family problems subjectively & objectively is emphasized, particularly in relation to the concept of the therapeutic contract. Examples of assessment methods for obtaining information (eg, interviews, tasks, & self-report questionnaires) & methods for recording & organizing information (rating scales, coding systems) are given. A brief review of general trends & theoretical contributions to clinical family assessment is then made, from which thirteen principles for sounder family assessment are proposed. 3 Tables, 44 References. AA

88T6524

Williams, Steven Wilton (Florida State U, Tallahassee 32306), Parent-Adolescent Conflict Management Styles as Functions of Age, Gender, Family Cohesion and Family Adaptability, Dissertation Abstracts International, 4 The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1899-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8721865.

88T6525

Witrak, Martha Telling (Syracuse U, NY 13210), Factors Affecting Satisfaction with Intimacy in Dual-Career Couples, Dissertation Abstracts International, 4 The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1899-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8716949.

88T6526

Wu, Lawrence Li Jui (Stanford U, CA 94305), Age Dependence in Rates of First Marriage: An Exploratory Analysis of Women in the United States, 1880-1970, Dissertation Abstracts International, 4 The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1549-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8720445.

88T6527

—, American Families, Journal of Family Issues, 1987, 8, 4, Dec, 422-480.

88T6506

Reeves, Joy B. & Szafran, Robert (Dept Sociology Stephen F. Austin State U., Nacogdoches TX 75962-3047), The Significance of Personal and Family Characteristics in Occupational Outcome by Sex, Sociological Spectrum, 1988, 8, 1, 67-83

† An examination of personal & family characteristics that best distinguish between Fs in nontraditional & traditional professions, & between Ms in traditional & nontraditional professions, based on data on professional Rs to the 1972-1985 General Social Surveys (N = 695 Ms & 598 Fs). Discriminant analysis reveals that of the 12 personal & family characteristics considered, 7 significantly discriminated between Fs in traditional & nontraditional professions, while 5 significantly discriminated between Ms in traditional & nontraditional professions. Only father's occupational prestige & R's age significantly discriminated for both Fs & Ms. As a group the variables selected for study discriminated almost as well for Ms as for Fs. Results challenge the sexist assumption of the gender model of work, which alleges that personal & family characteristics are important considerations for F workers only. 2 Tables, 58 References. Modified HA

88T6507

Reiger, Kerreen (Dept Sociology & Politics Philip Inst Technol., Plenty Rd Bundoora Victoria 3083 Australia), The Coming of the Counsellors: The Development of Marriage Guidance in Australia, ♦ UM The Australian and New Zealand Journal of Sociology, 1987, 23, 3, Nov, 175-187

† A review of the historical development of marriage guidance services in Australia since their beginnings in the 1940s. Data are drawn especially from the archives of various Marriage Guidance Councils. Marital counseling organizations have been a significant part of a general process of redefining familial relationships during the twentieth century. While the role of the new Mc in promoting "modern" concepts of the individual & social ties has received some attention in the theoretical social science literature, it is argued that the gender dynamics involved also warrant investigation. 41 References. Modified HA

88T6508

Reisine, Susan T., Goodenow, Carol & Grady, Kathleen E. (Dept Behavioral Sciences & Community Health U Connecticut, Farmington 06032), The Impact of Rheumatoid Arthritis on the Homemaker, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 1, 89-95

† After reviewing the literature on measuring functional outcomes in rheumatic diseases, a measurement of homemaker functioning is developed based on a 2-dimensional conceptualization of the homemaker role: the instrumental functions associated with meeting the physical needs of the household, & a nurturant dimension concerned with meeting expressive needs. The measure is used to investigate the effects of rheumatoid arthritis on a sample of 142 homemakers aged 21-65, both with & without outside employment, who lived with husband &/or children at the time of the disease onset. Telephone interview data reveal that the disease severely limits both the instrumental & nurturant functions associated with managing a household; limitations in nurturant functioning are surprisingly high & previously undocumented, though limitations in strenuous instrumental functions are the most pronounced. Few differences in either dimension of functioning are found between women who work outside the home & those who do not, though employed women are somewhat less disabled; both groups continue to assume primary responsibility for homemaking. Assessing functioning in social roles other than work, & across both instrumental & nurturant dimensions, can greatly enhance the evaluation of the effects of chronic disease such as rheumatoid arthritis. 6 Tables, 1 Appendix, 19 References. Modified HA

88T6509

Richards, Leslie Nan (Cornell U, Ithaca NY 14853), The Ecologies of Single Parenthood: Mothers and Children Living with and without Male Partners, ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1898-A-1899-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8724159.

88T6510

Robinson, Warren C. (Dept Economics Pennsylvania State U, University Park 16802), The Time Cost of Children and Other Household Production, ♦ Population Studies, 1987, 41, 2, July, 313-323.

† The relative time cost of child care compared to other types of household tasks, & the relative time cost of producing quantity rather than quality of child services are examined, using time-budget data obtained via interviews & diaries from a randomly selected sample of suburban households in upstate NY in 1967/68. Results cast the notions that: (1) child services are more time-costly than other household tasks; (2) quantity of child services is more time-costly than quality of child services; (3) time spent on child care is an obstacle to working outside the home. An alternative economic interpretation of fertility transition is offered, centered not on changes in objectives exogenous to the household, but, rather, on the internal economic structure of the household itself. 3 Tables, 2 Figures. Modified HA

88T6511

Rothenburg-Unz, Stephanie (U Tübingen, D-7400 1 Fede lic Germany), La famiglia siciliana tra paese di origine e colonia (The Sicilian Family between Village of Origin & Colony), ♦ Studi Emigrazione/Études Migrations, 191 Mar, 47-62 (ITA)

† An investigation of the relationship between emigrants' core origin & the formation of an ethnic colony in the host country. A qualitative study examined a community of 50 families, all from village of 3,500 inhabitants in Calabria, Italy, & now living near Stuttgart, West Germany. Narrative interviews with 50 members (N not given) focused on the subjective experience of the personal relationships involved, & the strategies adopted to cope with the burden of separation. Despite the material advantages of life in the host country, the migrants felt needs & aspirations that could only be met in their home country, which kept their vision focused on their home. However, the reinvention of returned emigrants presented problems of competition with the local population, whose prosperity was based on money sent back by the emigrants. 26 References. HA

88T6512

Rytina, Steven, Blau, Peter M., Blum, Terry & Schwalbe, Michael (Harvard U, Cambridge MA 02138), Inequality and the Paradox of Motive and Constraint, ♦ UM Social Forces, 1 Mar, 645-675

† The widely varied meanings of the term "social structure" are explored. Following Emile Durkheim, social structure should refer to intra-individual, positively ascertainable social facts that exert influence on individuals. Here, the impact of inequality on association, on marriage within & among social strata is examined. The hypothesis that inequality exerts on intermarriage is less obvious than that inequality increases the motive for status homogamy. A racial model indicates, however, that inequality constrains people to unequal unions. US census data collected in 1970 for 125 SMSAs reintermarriage with respect to education, SE index, & income show that the racial model works well for education SE index. The paradox of status constraint is that greater structural inequality is imported in relations among population members in the face of empirical aversion to relations bridging status distance. Inequality is a constraint on homogamy. 1 Table, 2 Figures, 1 Appendix, 29 References.

88T6513

Salaft, Janet W. (Dept Sociology U Toronto, Ontario M5S 1A5), Family Size Intentions and Socioeconomic Status in Singapore, 1981, Studies in Family Planning, 1985, 16, 4, July-Aug.

† A revised version of SA 31.5/83S15856/ASA/1983/3584.

88T6514

Shannon, Jane Clare (Virginia Polytechnic Inst & State U, Blacksburg 25061), Father/Daughter Relationships: Exploring Transitions for the Leaving Home Process, ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 47, 1327-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA87194

88T6515

Sillars, Alan L., Weisberg, Judith, Burgraf, Cynthia S., Elizabeth A. (U Montana, Missoula 59812), Content Themes in Conversations, ♦ Human Communication Research, 1 summer, 495-528.

† It is suggested that the prominent themes in the conversations of spouses identify factors assumed to have an important effect on the relationship; also different ways of looking at marriage are reflected.

† Early parent-child relations are examined as an example of primary interactions affected by the individualization characteristic of the transition to modern society. The freeing of parent-child relations from external determinations has made parenthood more complex, demanding greater individual initiative & self-determination. The differences in the transition to parenthood according to SC & gender are discussed, & three broad types of parenting outlook are described: (1) traditional, mother-centered with little flexibility for the child; (2) modern, where parents share equally in childrearing & the child's individual needs & interests receive status equal to the parents'; & (3) avant-garde, where the welfare of the child becomes top priority & parents orient their lives entirely toward it. Advantages & risks of each type are outlined with respect to periods before & after birth & during the child's socialization. Macrosocial effects of the different types are considered. 50 References. Modified HA

77 birth control (abortion, contraception, fertility, & childbearing)

88T6535

Coll, Cynthia T. Garcia, Hoffman, Joel, Van Houten, Lori J. & Oh, William (Dept Pediatrics Women & Infants Hospital, Providence RI 02905), The Social Context of Teenage Childbearing: Effects on the Infant's Care-Giving Environment, Journal of Youth and Adolescence, 1987, 16, 4, Aug, 345-360

† Data from interviews, videotaped home visits, & questionnaires were analyzed to assess the child care modes & care-giving environment of 50 primiparous Caucasian mothers of lower to middle SES. A 24-month follow-up home visit was used to further assess maternal behavior & child care, comparing adolescent mothers to older mothers ($N = 25$ each). Results indicate that the 2 groups of mothers differed in home environment & maternal behavior at 4 months, though some of these variations decreased when maternal education & SES, child care support, & life stress were controlled. Moderate correlations were found between home environment & maternal verbalizations at 4 & 24 months. 4 Tables, 32 References. F. Rasmussen

88T6536

Cooman, Eric de, Ermisch, John & Joshi, Heather (U Catholique Louvain, Louvain-la-Neuve B-1348 Belgium), The Next Birth and the Labour Market: A Dynamic Model of Births in England and Wales, ♦ Population Studies, 1987, 41, 2, July, 237-268

† An assessment of how developments in the labor market can help to explain fluctuations in births recorded in England & Wales between 1952 & 1980. After reviewing economic theories of reproductive behavior, econometric models are estimated using official labor market statistics & data on legitimate registered births. The period rate of Fs from each of the first four parities proceeding to another birth is examined separately. Analysis shows that different birth orders respond differently to economic fluctuations, as do different age groups within a parity. Growing real wages for both Ms & Fs tend to deter older parents from adding to existing families. However, during the early stages of family building, births are inhibited by labor markets favorable to Fs, but are encouraged by labor markets favorable to Ms. 5 Tables, 13 Figures, 2 Appendixes. Modified HA

88T6537

Day, Frederick A. & Brown, Lawrence A. (Dept Geography/Planning East Carolina U, Greenville NC 27834-4353), The Field of Family Planning: A Review and New Conceptual Framework, Socio-Economic Planning Sciences, 1986, 20, 4, 207-218

† The historical efforts & conceptual underpinnings of family planning programs & research in the Third World over the last three decades are reviewed noting the diversity of approaches. A conceptual framework to integrate the field is presented that consists of two parts: (1) a macro-level model, which envisions family planning as a general diffusion process with six major components: the innovation, the setting, the diffusion agency, its strategy, the adoption process, & systematic feedback; & (2) a micro-level model, which views family planning as a transaction with four major elements—the potential user & provider, the gap between them, & the setting. Several policy implications of this new conceptualization are discussed, with focus on possibility of systematically organizing the field & the value of the framework for empirically testing the relative importance of each major aspect of family planning. 2 Figures, 73 References. Modified HA

88T6538

Freedman, Ronald (Population Studies Center U Michigan, Ann Arbor 48109), The Contribution of Social Science Research to Popula- tion Policy and Family Planning Program Effectiveness, Studies in Family Planning, 1987, 18, 2, Mar-Apr, 57-82

† Social science research has made important contributions to population policy & to the effectiveness of family planning programs. Social science concepts, theories, & methods potentially are relevant to all aspects of reproductive behavior, including actual fertility, proximate variables, & desired family size. Social science research also contributes to the understanding of the social, economic, & political institutions that potentially affect, either directly or indirectly, the biosocial reproductive system & family planning programs. At least as important as its specific theories & findings is the role of social science in testing how to adapt such knowledge to distinctive national & local cultural circumstances of family planning programs. A central point is that carefully monitored pilot projects are desirable before launching full-scale national programs, as well as being continuing resources for program development. Case studies of early programs in Asia are presented to demonstrate how some of the presumed obstacles to new programs were encountered & overcome. 89 References. HA

88T6539

Herz, Elcia J. & Reis, Janet S. (Center Population Options, 1012 14th St NW Suite 1200 Washington DC 20005), Family Life Education for Young Inner-City Teens: Identifying Needs, Journal of Youth and Adolescence, 1987, 16, 4, Aug, 361-377

† To identify the specific sexuality education needs of young, inner-city, minority adolescents, questionnaire data from 251 black M & F seventh- & eighth grade students from public schools in economically disadvantaged sections of Chicago, Ill, were analyzed. A number of key learning needs were identified. There is a clear need for more factual & practical information on the processes of conception & contraception, & with regard to interpersonal relationships & human sexuality. 4 Tables, 33 References. F. Rasmussen

88T6540

Johnson, Christine Annette (Boston U, MA 02215), Normalizing Birth: The Home Birth Movement in Massachusetts, ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1897-A-1898-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8721319.

88T6541

Milan, Richard J., Jr. & Kilmann, Peter R. (c/o Kilmann Dept Psychology U South Carolina, Columbia 29208), Interpersonal Factors in Premarital Contraception, ♦ Journal of Sex Research, 1987, 23, 3, Aug, 289-321

† A review of 52 studies published since 1970 investigating interpersonal factors related to the contraceptive behavior of unmarried adolescents & young adults. The studies focused largely on white Mc women from student & clinic populations. Methodological problems included poorly defined samples & procedures, a relative lack of random sampling techniques, & a heavy reliance on Ss' self-reports. Methodological strengths included generally high participation rates, use of experimental & longitudinal designs, & use of multivariate statistical analyses. Studies focusing on Ss' interactions with partners, parents, & peers were evaluated individually & comparatively. In general, parents were of the least importance in determining teenagers' knowledge & behaviors. Across all reference groups, the effective use of contraception was most consistent when explicit communication about contraception was given. Implications of these findings & recommendations for future research are discussed. 1 Table, 62 References. HA

¶ Comments are offered on articles by Norval D. Glenn, John N. Edwards, Steven L. Nock, & John Scanlon, all published in this issue of the Journal of Family Issues, devoted to "The State of the American Family" (see abstracts in SA 363). Contributions include Joan Aldous, American Families in the 1980s: Individualism Run Amok?; Felix M. Berardo, The American Family: A Commentary; Alan Booth, The State of the American Family; Bernard Farber, The Future of the American Family: A Dialectical Account; Viktor Gecas, Born in the USA in the 1980s: Growing Up in Difficult Times; Paul C. Glick, A Demographer Looks

Again at American Families; Janet G. Hunt & Larry L. Hunt, Here to Play: From Families to Life-Styles; Marilyn Ihinger-Tallman, The American Family: A Poem; Gary R. Lee, Aging and Intergenerational Relations; Edward M. Levine, The Realities of Day Care for Children; Pepper Schwartz, The Family as a Changed Institution; Irving Tallman, Meanings on a Theory of Family Change; Robert S. Weiss, On the Current State of the American Family; Lynn White, Freedom versus Constraint: The New Synthesis; & Martin King Whyte, Is America Well Served by Its Family System? HA

76 socialization

88T6528

Coltrane, Scott (Stevenson Coll U California, Santa Cruz 95064), Father-Child Relationships and the Status of Women: A Cross-Cultural Study, Am American Journal of Sociology, 1988, 93, 5, Mar., 1060-1095.

¶ Data from a representative cross-cultural sample of 90 nonindustrial societies are used to test the hypothesis that M participation in childrearing enhances the public status of women. Separate measures of paternal proximity, affection, & responsibility for routine child care are positively associated with F participation in community decision making, F access to positions of authority, & F origin symbolism. Multiple regression & contingency table analyses indicate that father-child relationships have a significant effect on F status not accounted for by other social-structural or child socialization variables. Statistical analyses & ethnographic comparisons suggest that the sexual DoFL in child care interacts with other institutionalized forms of M dominance to influence the relative position of women. Theoretical explanations for the link between gender differentiated childrearing & public status are discussed. 5 Tables, 1 Appendix, 66 References. HA

88T6529

Cortese, Anthony (Dept Sociology/Anthropology/Social Work Illinois State U, Normal 61761), The Internal Consistency of Moral Reasoning: A Multitrait-Multimethod Assessment, The Journal of Psychology, 1987, 121, 4, July, 373-386.

¶ The consistency of moral judgment across five dimensions: immanent justice, moral realism, retribution vs restitution, efficacy of severe punishment, & communicable responsibility from two basic, structural components of the cognitive-developmental approach was examined. The two components were (1) the more general concept of level & (2) the more specific concept of stage. Multitrait-multimethod analysis supported the compatibility of the two constructs. The methods differed in their degree of association between the five measured dimensions; the stage technique appeared to be more consistent than the level scale. Comparisons between dimensions indicated that the notion of moral development seems to be multidimensional, vis-a-vis unidimensional. 3 Tables, 33 References. HA

88T6530

Dworetz, Steven M., Before the Age of Reason: Liberalism and the Media Socialization of Children, Am Social Theory and Practice, 1987, 13, 2, summer, 187-218.

¶ The impact of TV on children creates problems for liberal political theory that have not been adequately faced. At present, US First Amendment rights permit market forces to control programs addressed to children almost unchecked. Young children, however, are highly susceptible to advertising & to the "unplanned curriculum" constituted by the content of TV programs, with violent content in particular being influential. Advertising exposure at an early age can produce a lasting attitude of mistrust. Neither industry self-regulation nor parental control is likely to be effective. Children occupy a special moral & political status that makes measures to restrict market access to them justifiable & desirable. W. H. Stoddard

88T6531

Emler, Nicholas, Ohana, Jocelyne & Moscovici, Serge (Dept Psychology U Dundee, DDI 4HN Scotland), Children's Beliefs about Institutional Roles: A Cross-National Study of Representations of the Teacher's Role, The British Journal of Educational Psychology, 1987, 57, 1, Feb., 26-37.

¶ It is argued that the school is an important source of experience in children's acquisition of beliefs about institutional roles. This process is explored using interview data from 185 French & Scottish children aged 7-11, relating to hypothetical situations involving the children's teachers in various organizational role activities—assessment of performance, distribution of help, & enforcement of regulations. Results indicate that children grasp, albeit often only intuitively, many of the characteristics of this organizational role at an earlier age than has been indicated by previous research, they have an appreciation for the formal constraints on teachers' freedom of action, the hierarchical character of institutional authority, & the separation of official duties from personal inclinations. However, class & national differences in these beliefs suggest that they are "social representations" & not merely products of individual cognitive development. 5 Tables, 21 References. Modified HA

88T6532

Felson, Richard B. & Russo, Natalie (State U New York, Albany 12203), Parental Punishment and Sibling Aggression, Am Social Psychology Quarterly, 1988, 51, 1, Mar., 11-18.

¶ It is suggested that powerful third-party mediators tend to support weaker antagonists in conflict situations, & that this support may inadvertently encourage aggression. These principles are used to help explain aggression between fourth- through seventh-grade children & their siblings. Interview data obtained from children & parents (N = 292 families) in a suburban US school district reveal that parents are more likely to punish older siblings than younger siblings for fighting, & that they are more likely to punish boys when they fight with their sisters. This tendency to punish the more powerful sibling results in more frequent aggression, while a laissez-faire approach results in less frequent aggression. Results also show that aggression against siblings is more common when the age difference is 3 years or less, girls are just as aggressive with their siblings as boys, & physical aggression is more likely between siblings of the same sex. Practical & theoretical implications are discussed. 3 Tables, 18 References. Modified HA

88T6533

Miller, Peggy & Sperry, Linda L. (Dept Education U Chicago, IL 60637), The Socialization of Anger and Aggression, Am Merrill-Palmer Quarterly, 1987, 33, 1, Jan., 1-31.

¶ The early socialization of anger & aggression & the role that language plays in this process is examined in data drawn from an ethnographic study of the early communicative development of 3 first-born children of Ur, We mothers who were age 18-20 & unmarried at the time of the child's birth. A model of socialization is proposed that takes into account not only the immediate interactional context in which the child responds with anger or aggression, but also the caregiver's past experiences & her childrearing goals & values. A major finding is that justification of anger by reference to social & moral standards is central to each of these contexts. By the age of 2.5 years the children controlled a variety of verbal resources for communicating anger & aggression & showed a rudimentary ability to justify their anger. Anger labels did not appear, but verbs of aggression occurred relatively frequently. These findings support the view that emotion encompasses not just the emotional state but other aspects of the whole emotion situation. 47 References. HA

88T6534

Schälein, Johann August (Institut Allgemeine Soziologie und Wirtschaftssoziologie Wirtschafts U Wien, A-1090 Austria), "Vater (oder Mutter) sein dagegen sehr." Über strukturelle Veränderungen von Primärkontakten am Beispiel der frühen Eltern-Kind-Beziehungen ("... Father (or Mother) Are Very Much against This." Structural Change in Primary Interaction. The Example of Early Parent-Child Relations), Soziale Welt, 1987, 38, 4, 411-436 (GER)

2000 sociology of health and medicine

45 sociology of medicine (public health)

88T6550

Aday, Lu Ann (School Public Health U. Texas Health Science Center, Houston 77225). The Ethical Implications of Prospective Payment and Corporate Medical Practice: A Research Agenda, Social Justice Research, 1987, 1, 3, Sept., 275-296

An examination of the ethical implications of the growth of prospective payment & the corporatization of medical practice in the US in the context of the goals of access, cost containment, & quality. Concern is often expressed that the dominant emphasis on cost containment may threaten the attainability of the other goals. A research agenda that addresses this issue is outlined on the basis of a review of empirical evidence on the impact of these changes on health system goals. 1 Table, 106 References. Modified HA

88T6551

Baer, Hans A. (Dept Sociology & Anthropology U. Arkansas, Little Rock 72204). Divergence and Convergence in Two Systems of Manual Medicine: Osteopathy and Chiropractic in the United States, Medical Anthropology Quarterly (New Series), 1987, 1, 2, June, 176-193

Although osteopathy & chiropractic emerged as medical revitalization movements with a similar disease theory during the late nineteenth century, osteopathy has evolved into osteopathic medicine & surgery, & chiropractic into a musculoskeletal specialty. An attempt is made to explain the divergent evolution of these two schools of manual medicine in the US by considering their respective roles in addressing various structural problems in US health care, their contrasting relationships with biomedicine, biomedicine's stance toward them, & internal organizational conflicts within them. Both osteopathy & chiropractic were forced to converge to some degree, conceptually & therapeutically, with biomedicine. 10 References. Modified HA

88T6552

Bartley, Mel (Dept Social Policy U. Edinburgh, EH8 9JN Scotland). Unemployment and Health: Selection or Causation? A False Antithesis?, Sociology of Health and Illness, 1988, 10, 1, Mar., 41-67

Observations on the effect of unemployment on health note that the clustering in certain geographic areas of low income, job insecurity, & poor housing are the experience of the same groups of people. Considerable difficulties exist in isolating the different aspects involved. Based on examination of secondary data, collected primarily in the UK, it is argued that (1) the effects of each separate strand are dependent on & reinforced by the others, (2) it is possible to clarify the ways in which the elements interrelate, & (3) it is the whole pattern that most satisfactorily explains currently available data on unemployment & health. 8 Tables. 5 References. Modified HA

88T6553

Beiser, Morton, Waxler-Morrison, Nancy, Iacono, William G., Lin Tsung-Yi, Fleming, Jonathan A. E., & Husted, Janice (Dept Psychiatry U. British Columbia, Vancouver V6T 2A1). A Measure of the "Sick" Label in Psychiatric Disorder and Physical Illness, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 3, 251-261

An operational measure of the labeling construct is developed: the Social Response Questionnaire (SRQ) that incorporates moralistic attitudes, fear of dangerousness, & negative expectations attached to the label of the severely psychiatrically ill by psychotics themselves & their significant others. Here, the 32-item SRQ was administered to 4 groups: (1) 50 in Vancouver, British Columbia (1) individuals experiencing a first episode of schizophrenia ($n = 116$) or affective psychosis ($n = 59$), (2) 19 individuals experiencing a first episode of Crohn's disease ($n = 19$), (3) a sample of 121 normal recruits matched by age, sex, & social class to the psychotics; & (4) a community sample ($n = 319$). Results indicate that psychotics label themselves & are labeled by others more harshly than persons with Crohn's disease or normals, however, there is no agreement between psychotics' self-ratings & those of significant others. Two competing hypotheses are advanced to explain these findings. It is concluded that the SRQ is internally stable, exhibits construct validity, & permits the study of dose-response relationships. Potential uses for the SRQ in longitudinal research are discussed. 7 Tables, 1 Appendix, 56 References. Modified HA

88T6554

Bennett, F. J. (PO Box 20811, Nairobi Kenya). AIDS as a Social Phenomenon, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 6, 529-539

A discussion of acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) as a social phenomenon. This new lethal, & at present incurable, largely sexually transmitted disease entails remarkable social repercussions that are not yet fully explicit. Political, behavioral, economic, legal, & social reactions to AIDS are described, including stigmatization, changes in the sick role, & the growth of voluntary organizations & international collaboration efforts. Communication, education, & information aspects of AIDS are considered via analysis of the multimedia barrage on the subject. It is clear that a massive educational approach to modify behavior must be the basis for a control program. 44 References. Modified HA

88T6555

Brenner, M. Harvey (Dept Behavioral Sciences/Health Policy/Sociology Johns Hopkins U., Baltimore MD 21205). Relation of Economic Change to Swedish Health and Social Well-Being, 1950-1980, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 2, 183-195

An examination of to what extent & through what mechanisms the deterioration of economic conditions affects the health of national populations. National statistical data from Sweden for 1950-1980 are analyzed using multiple regression time series methods. It is found that economic growth reduces mortality at nearly all ages, while economic recession increases total mortality for virtually all age groups & for both sexes. Per capita alcohol consumption is an important factor in several types of mortality rates, cigarette consumption & fat consumption rates are also significant for some types of mortality. 2 Tables, 59 References. Modified HA

88T6556

Briscoe, Monica E. (General Practice Research Unit Inst Psychiatry, De Crespigny Park Denmark Hill London SE5 8AB England). Why Do People Go to the Doctor? Sex Differences in the Correlates of GP Consultation, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 5, 507-513

Medical records & questionnaire data from 256 patients aged 16-45 of a single general practitioner in the National Health Service in GB are analyzed to explore variables associated with consultation behavior. Focus is on long-term effects of consultation, predictor variables include predisposing, enabling, & need factors. Results indicate that not only do F patients consult more often than M patients, but the correlates of primary care utilization differ between the sexes. Health status & social role factors are found to be more important for M patients, while psychological predisposition is of greater significance among F patients. 5 Tables, 1 Appendix, 24 References. Modified HA

88T6557

Brownlee, Arthur (School Australian Environmental Studies Griffith U., Nathan Brisbane Queensland 4111). Participation: Myths, Realities and Prognosis, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 6, 605-614

The prospects for increased participatory approaches in health arenas are enhanced by some recent developments, eg, "rights" legislation, global health program approaches, social action acceptability, growth in community advocacy skills, & freedom of information legislation, yet, some long-standing impediments persist, eg, entrenched medical dominance, antagonistic bureaucratic cultures, a centralist supremacy, an intractable political economy of health, & inhibitory professional paradigms. There are wide variations between societies in the way that these developments & impediments are traded off or balanced, ultimately depending on how such issues as the sharing of knowledge & skills, information access, & challenges to power practice paradigms are being recognized & resolved in specific contexts. 13 References. Modified HA

88T6542

Nock, Steven L. (U Virginia, Charlottesville 22903). The Symbolic Meaning of Childbearing. Journal of Family Issues, 1987, 8, 4, Dec, 373-393

¶ Women born during the baby boom in the US are predicted to have historically high rates of childlessness & low fertility. Many popular explanations for such predictions point to the costs involved in having & rearing children: both direct & opportunity costs. The evidence for such costs, however, is quite weak. The costs in earnings, LF time, & time with one's spouse are considered & argued to be inadequate to explain contemporary women's low fertility. Instead, it is argued that fundamental values held by women about M-F relationships & the role of women in society are quite important in affecting women's fertility. Limited empirical tests of this argument provide consistent support. It is noted how, for growing numbers of women, the role of mother is being redefined in ways quite similar to the traditional role of father. Financial support of children. 3 Tables, 22 References. HA

88T6543

Scanlon, John (U Florida, Gainesville 32611). Families in the 1980s: Time to Refocus Our Thinking. Journal of Family Issues, 1987, 8, 4, Dec, 394-421

¶ The state of US families in the 1980s is examined in light of a series of issues regarding the paradigm currently prevailing within family studies. On the basis of those issues, the question is raised of whether an alternative perspective might more validly describe currently emerging family-type empirical realities. The outlines of such a perspective are described, drawing on the emerging cross-disciplinary focus on close or primary relationships. 72 References. HA

88T6544

Soloway, N. Maxine & Smith, Rebecca M. (Dept Pediatrics Duke U, Durham NC 27710). Antecedents of Late Birthing Decisions of Men and Women in Dual-Career Marriages. U Family Relations, 1987, 36, 3, July, 258-262

¶ In-depth, unstructured interview data obtained from 30 recent fathers & mothers in a southeastern US U town are used to develop a model of the antecedent factors associated with late birthing decisions by couples in dual-career marriages. Results suggest that the F biological time clock precipitates a reassessment of family injunctions about the status of education, occupation, finances, & marriage, which, in turn, precipitates issues about sex-role identity/individuation before deciding to have a child. Couples who appear to be having communication problems in deciding on late birthing may in fact be having problems of sex role identity/individuation. Suggestions are provided to guide marriage counselors working with such couples. 1 Figure, 23 References. Modified HA

88T6545

Sullivan, J. P. (U California, Santa Barbara 93106). The Ethics and Politics of Abortion. ♦ U Philosophy of the Social Sciences, 1987, 17, 3, Sept, 413-425.

¶ A review of books by Ronald Reagan, Abortion and the C the Nation (Camden & New York: Thomas Nelson, Nash Kristin Luker, Abortion and the Politics of Motherhood (Be California Press, 1984), Connie Paige, The Right To Lifers Summit Books, 1983); & Jay L. Garfield & Patricia Henn Abortion. Moral and Legal Perspectives. (Amherst: U of M Press, 1984 [see listing in IRPS No. 43]) These works exar rent abortion controversy. The philosophical issues raised a with emphasis on (1) the emergence of the issue of whether a person, & (2) the evidence that this issue really disguises ences of social, cultural, & economic backgrounds & of way sides being inconsistent at an intellectual level. W. H. Stod Woods, R. I. (Dept Geography U Sheffield, S10 2TN Er proaches to the Fertility Transition in Victorian & Population Studies, 1987, 41, 2, July, 283-311

88T6546

¶ Various explanations offered by demographers & social l the decline of fertility in nineteenth- & early twentieth- (1861-1911) are outlined, & a number of theoretically & based approaches are specifically critiqued. Theories in industrial transition, demographic responses (eg, Ru-Ur mig gration, restrictions on marriage), social diffusion, the contra olution, demographic balance maintenance, & social attitude ined in detail. The utility of three forms of investigation: surveys, ecological analyses, & time-series ana explored. Each approach is shown to contribute clues to v were responsible for the secular decline of marital fertility, m sions are outlined. The value of these propositions for expla tions in fertility in other areas is discussed along with implica general use of social theory in demography. 6 Tables, 10 Figu all

88T6547

Wreen, Michael (Dept Philosophy Marquette U, Mil 53233). Abortion: The Extreme Liberal Position. The Medicine and Philosophy, 1987, 12, 3, Aug, 241-265

¶ The extreme liberal view of abortion argues that neither i any state of development, nor the young infant has a right general argumentative strategy employed by a number of phi arriving at this view is critiqued as a step toward clarifying d on the abortion debate. 22 References. Modified HA

88T6548

Wright, Kathleen Hughes (Syracuse U, NY 13210). Tenancy and Abortion: Demographic, Epidemiological and Al cal Considerations in Relation to Euro-American Family ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International. A The Humanit cal Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1549-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8714

78 sociology of death & dying

88T6549

Caudrey, Adriana. The Art of Dying. U New Society, 1987, 82, 1302, 11 Dec, 14-16

¶ A report on a project involving two sculptors who worked with patients at Saint John's Hospice in Lancaster, England. After overcoming initial hostility, the two artists were able to capture the very essence minal care was about, with patients, relatives, & staff memi ing deeply involved in the creative process. Seen as catalysts growth, the artists had a profound effect within the hospic graphs. F. Rasmussen resulting twelve types provide a means of describing state intervention in medical care at a given point in time, changes in state control & population coverage over time are described by three theoretical paths reflecting broad historical trends in three major groups of countries: Western industrialized, socialist, & nonsocialist underdeveloped. Several variables are analyzed according to their effect on the patterns of convergence & divergence in the form & degree of state intervention between countries. 3 Figures, 45 References. Modified HA

88T6568

Fujimura, Joan Hideko (U California, Berkeley 94720), Bandwagons in Science: Double Problems and Transportable Packages as Factors in the Development of the Molecular Genetic Bandwagon in Cancer Research, Dissertation Abstracts International, 4, The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov., 1320-A-1321-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8717987.

88T6569

Gallagher, Eugene B. (Dept Behavioral Science U Kentucky Medical Center, Lexington 40506), Modernization and Medical Care, U Sociological Perspectives, 1988, 31, 1, Jan., 59-87.

Concepts drawn from modernization theory, particularly the notion of "carriers of modernity" (Berger, Peter L., Berger, Brigitte, & Kellner, Hansfried, The Homeless Mind-Modernization and Consciousness, New York: Random House, 1973), are used to examine medical care in modernizing societies. Compared with premodern modes of health care, modern health care has a calculable, "commodity" character. Its production has become a major & increasingly systematized sector of the economy. In addition to its manifest clinical benefits, health care conveys the symbolic meanings of modernity: it participates in the broad though uneven passage of technology & values from Western societies to U & R areas of developing societies. Health care as the focus of demodernization strains is also examined, using case examples drawn from traditional Amish & Islamic cultures that are being challenged by modernization. 29 References. Modified HA

88T6570

Gallagher, Eugene B. & Ferrante, Joan (Dept Behavioral Science U Kentucky, Lexington 40536), Medicalization and Social Justice, Social Justice Research, 1987, 1, 3, Sept., 377-392.

Most social justice critiques of medical care focus on the allocation of existing but scarce resources. An alternative perspective is used here, which emphasizes factors that shape the supply & availability of medical care: (1) medicalization, (2) social inclusion, (3) biomedical transcendence, & (4) health absolutism. While the first three of these emphasize access & social equity for professional medical care, the fourth deemphasizes both. All of these forces enhance the place of health as a social value, but they do not necessarily lead toward a more medically just society. A need is seen for critical analysis of the cultural processes that shape both the medical care system & the broad social concern with medical care. 19 References. Modified HA

88T6571

Gogel, Edward L. & Terry, James S. (Dept Medicine Long Island Coll Hospital, Brooklyn NY 11201), Medicine as Interpretation: The Uses of Literary Metaphors and Methods, The Journal of Medicine and Philosophy, 1987, 12, 3, Aug., 205-217.

Theorists at the interface of medicine & the humanities have recently suggested that interpretation as a literary activity can be applied to the practice of clinical medicine. Such theories & their literary metaphors & methods are reviewed here, & it is proposed that a number of guidelines can be applied to interpretation as a practical activity for clinical medicine. 20 References. HA

88T6572

Goodman, Madeleine J. & Goodman, Lena E. (U Hawaii, Honolulu 96822), Medicalization and Its Discontents, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 6, 733-740.

An exploration of the ethically proper balance in health care policy between the medical-clinical-high technology model of health service & the grassroots, community-based, or traditional models of care. Paradoxical balances between the two approaches are traced to political, economic, & prestige factors; case studies are presented to illustrate some repercussions of this conflict. It is argued that a balanced approach to world health problems rests not on inflationary lowering of health care standards to achieve nominal victories, nor on high technology panaceas, but on mobilizing resources around human needs. 13 References. Modified HA

88T6573

Gostin, Larry & Ziegler, Andrew (Harvard School Public Health, Boston MA 02115), A Review of AIDS-Related Legislative and Regulatory Policy in the United States, U Law, Medicine and Health Care, 1987, 15, 1-2, summer, 5-16.

A survey of US public health statutes & regulations to control the spread of the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV), using data collected by the Harvard School of Public Health (Boston, Mass.) & by the Inter-governmental Health Policy Project at George Washington U (Washington, DC). The statutes are classified according to their broad public health function or purpose: (1) advisory task forces can be established or guidelines published to recommend strategies & precautions for slowing the spread of acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS); (2) enabling or appropriating public health officials can be authorized or required to provide education, counseling, treatment, care, & social support; (3) regulatory legislatures can use compulsion against individuals via regulatory functions; & (4) protective legislation can be designed to safeguard the civil liberties of persons with HIV. It is argued that public health law need not be restrictive or punitive, rather, the law can make a rich contribution to public health efforts by setting standards, mandating education & services, funding research, & safeguarding individual privacy & rights. Modified AA

88T6574

Gostin, Lawrence O., Curran, William J. & Clark, Mary E. (Harvard School Public Health, Cambridge MA 02138), The Case against Compulsory Casefinding in Controlling AIDS-Testing, Screening and Reporting, American Journal of Law and Medicine, 1986, 12, 1, spring, 7-51.

The spread of acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) demands a comprehensive & effective public health response. Because no treatment or vaccine is currently available, traditional infection control measures are being considered. Proposals include compulsory testing & screening of high risk populations. The fairness & accuracy of compulsory screening programs depend on the reliability of medical technology & the balancing of public health & individual confidentiality interests. Criteria are proposed for evaluating compulsory testing & screening programs. It is concluded that voluntary identification, education, & counseling of infected persons is the most effective means of encouraging the behavioral changes that are necessary to halt the spread of AIDS. HA

88T6575

Graham, Hilary (Dept Applied Social Studies Coventry Polytechnic, CV1 5LB England), Women's Smoking and Family Health, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 1, 47-56.

Despite the emphasis on maternal smoking in epidemiological studies, little attention has been paid in psychological & social research to the experience of smoking in the contexts of motherhood & poverty. After summarizing research on women's smoking & family health, the relationship between smoking, daily health/child care, & poverty in a sample of 57 low-income mothers in GB was investigated using data from interviews, a subjective health profile, & a daily activity diary. Results indicate that for a significant minority of these mothers, poverty & caring combine with low levels of physical & emotional energy, sleep problems, & feelings of social isolation. In this context, smoking appears to provide a way of coping with the demands of full-time caring & the struggle of making ends meet, particularly for single mothers. 3 Tables, 1 Figure, 53 References. Modified HA

88T6576

Hall, David (Dept Sociology U Liverpool, L69 3BX England), Social and Psychological Care before and during Hospitalisation, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 6, 721-732.

While maternal separation has been seen as a major cause of distress among hospitalized children, a broader perspective is required to understand the links between individual, familial, professional, institutional, & structural levels of hospital care affecting children. A model of discontinuity is proposed to analyze the experience of children, parents, & professional staff in the ward. Various strategies designed to improve the psychosocial care of children both prior to & during hospitalization are described, based on a review of the literature. Implications for hospital organization, policies, & practices are discussed, along with the changing role of the family in children's hospital care. 1 Table, 103 References. Modified HA

88T6558

Bury, M. R., Social Constructionism and Medical Sociology: A Rejoinder to Nicholson and McLaughlin, Sociology of Health and Illness, 1987, 9, 4, Dec, 439-441

¶ A reply to the critique by M. Nicholson & C. McLaughlin (see SA 35 5/87T0616) of M. R. Bury's "Social Constructionism and the Development of Medical Sociology" (see SA 35 1/87R2757). It is argued that Nicholson & McLaughlin fail in their attempt to defend a view of medical knowledge that is simultaneously both realist & socially constructed, as they do not address how reality is problematized in social constructionism. Indeed, their effort to advance a case for methodological relativism reveals how shaky the social constructionist case is. It is argued that medical knowledge consists of more than a set of beliefs or social constructions, & sociology has an important role in trying to determine their validity. Nicholson & McLaughlin are also accused of frequently misattributing a number of statements to Bury, which adds to the overall confusion of their argument. 4 References. K. Hyatt

88T6559

Carnerie, Fran, Crisis and Informed Consent: Analysis of a Law-Medicine Malocclusion, American Journal of Law and Medicine, 1986, 12, 1, spring, 55-97

¶ Many individuals develop a temporary state of cognitive & emotional impairment after being diagnosed with catastrophic illness. Thus, when crucial decisions about medical treatment are required, they are unable to assimilate information, or worse, the legal need to be informed can rival a psychological desire to not be informed. The Canadian informed consent doctrine is unresponsive to crisis & clinically impracticable, & so paradoxically compromises the integrity & autonomy it was designed to protect. Many aspects of the MD-patient relationship & clinical setting also undermine the philosophical values enshrined in this doctrine, which further jeopardizes the individual's integrity. Proposals for change are explored, eg. delaying the informing & consenting, improving the concept of consent, & improving the role of the MD. 1 Appendix. HA

88T6560

Carr-Hill, Roy (Centre Health Economics U York, Heslington YO1 5DD England), The Inequalities in Health Debate: A Critical Review of the Issues, Journal of Social Policy, 1987, 16, 4, Oct, 509-542

¶ The ongoing dispute about inequalities in health in GB has recently been given a new edge by three publications: the proceedings of a 1983 SSRC Workshop, the Registrar General's Decennial Supplement for 1979-1983, & a report from the Health Education Council. The first & third broadly claim that inequalities in health are widening, but the second asserts that they are irrelevant. The debate since 1980 around the issues of measurement (how to assess differences between social groups & how to compare across time) & the four kinds of explanation examined by the 1980 Black Report are reviewed. The concluding discussion emphasizes the essentially political nature of the debate over the "trends," but concludes that, while most agree on the importance of materialist/structuralist variables, there are differences in the policy implications of the different explanatory positions. However, on the whole these will not be resolved by "further research": the time is long overdue for a redistribution of resources to eradicate poverty. 15 Tables, 2 Figures, 80 References. HA

88T6561

Coates, Thomas J., Stall, Ron, Mandel, Jeffrey S., Boccellari, Alicia, Sorensen, James L., Morales, Edward F., Morin, Stephen F., Wiley, James A., & McKusick, Leon (Division General Internal Medicine U California, San Francisco 94143), AIDS: A Psychosocial Research Agenda, Annals of Behavioral Medicine, 1987, 9, 2, 21-28

¶ T. J. Coates's, L. Temoshok's, & J. Mandel's psychosocial research agenda ("Psychosocial Research Is Essential to Understanding and Treating AIDS," American Psychologist, 1984, 39, 11, 1309-1314) for the acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) epidemic includes four major components: (1) strategies for preventing the spread of infection; (2) assessment of the impact of psychosocial variables on disease incidence & progression; (3) analysis of the impact of the disease process itself on the behavior & psychological functioning of those infected with the AIDS virus; & (4) the efficacy of various interventions for modifying the effect of the epidemic on individuals coping with the threat of the disease. Empirical findings relative to these areas of inquiry that have been obtained to date are reviewed, & some directions for future research on ate scientific attention if the epidemic is to be controlled. Modified HA

88T6562

Conrad, Peter (Brandeis U, Waltham MA 02254), The Impact of AIDS, Journal of Social Policy, 1986, 17, 1, summer,

¶ The social reaction to AIDS (acquired immune deficiency) in the US is structured by particular social features, including: (1) the social reaction to AIDS (acquired immune deficiency) in the US is structured by particular social features, including: (2) social transmission; (3) the role of contagion, & (4) the deadly disease. The social meanings create a triple stigma for AIDS: the image of the disease must be changed. Preliminary are presented. Modified AA

88T6563

Curtin, Roberta Braun (U Wisconsin, Madison 537), Provider Interaction: Strategies for Patient Care, Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1889-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA87

88T6564

Duffy, Linda Claire (State U New York Buffalo, Am), Followup Study of Inflammatory Bowel Disease: Effect Biological Markers, Dissertation Abstracts International, Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 47, 1547-A-1548-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA87

88T6565

Falck, Hans S. (School Social Work & Medicine Virginia Commonwealth U, Richmond 23284), Social and Psychological and during Hospitalization, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 24, 7, 711-720

¶ Social & psychological care can be viewed as either a set of procedures or as a complex set of services rendered to their potential & actual patients. The latter case requires a re-examination of the structural, political, economic, & ideological context of hospital care. Several empirical studies are reviewed that describe social care of adults & children prior to & during hospitalization. In addition, practicing clinical social workers' perceptions of social services are examined via analysis of 60 articles published in major health social work journals over a 12-year period. It is concluded that fully integrated medical & psychosocial health care in these programs, remains a goal for the future. 58 References. HA

88T6566

Freimuth, Vicki S., Edgar, Timothy & Hammond, Sherry (Communication Arts & Theatre U Maryland, College Park 20742), College Students' Awareness and Interpretation of Risk, Journal of Science, Technology, and Human Values, 1986, 11, 37-40.

¶ In programs aiming to restrict the transmission of acquired deficiency syndrome (AIDS), College students are an important population. The characteristics of this population are explored via questionnaire responses from 458 full-time students at the University of Maryland, College Park. Respondents were generally fairly knowledgeable about infection, though they overestimated the risk of it; however, they largely failed to personalize their knowledge. With regard to types of behavior, few students showed any behavioral changes based on these findings are offered for AIDS education programs aimed at College students. 1 Table. W. H. Stoddard

88T6567

Frank, Julio & Donabedian, Avedis (Centro Investigaciones Publicas, Mazatlan 117 Col Condesa 06140 Mexico DF), Intervention in Medical Care: Types, Trends and Variables, Medical Care, 1987, 25, 1, Mar, 17-31.

¶ A cross-national perspective is offered as a strategy for the study of state intervention in medical care. A typology of state intervention is proposed based on two dimensions: the form of control over terpersonal strategies are suggested. West uses conversation analysis in four microanalytic studies of MD-patient communication practices: turn-taking, questions & answers, repairs of misunderstandings, & the use of laughter & social commentary. Cassell's two-volume work also analyzes these communications, using a wide range of linguistic & communicative theory to normalize utterances rather than relying on strict conversational analysis techniques, with the goal of helping MDs appreciate the theoretical & practical complexities of human communication: a skill their medical training too often neglects. K. Hyatt

88T6585

Kagan, Aubrey R. (World Health Organization Psychosocial Centre, Fack S-104 01 Stockholm Sweden). Unemployment Causes Ill Health: The Wrong Track. Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 2, 217-218.

* A critique of typical arguments that treat unemployment as a cause of ill health. Employment is associated with causes of specific pathologies, whereas unemployment is not. However, exposure to common stressors during unemployment can cause disease. Thus, social policy should emphasize reducing such stressors. As a first step, people in authority should stop misleading the public by saying that unemployment in itself causes ill health; this leads only to etiogenic disease. Modified HA

88T6586

Kain, Edward L. (Dept Sociology Southwestern U, Georgetown TX 78626). A Note on the Integration of AIDS into the Sociology of Human Sexuality. Teaching Sociology, 1987, 15, 3, July, 320-323.

* Acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) is a topic that merits inclusion in courses on human sexuality as an important social problem. Three reasons are noted for doing so: the illustration of sociological concepts by AIDS; cultural, historical, & social factors in AIDS transmission; & students being a population at risk. Questionnaire data from 309 Coll students reveal limited personal acquaintance with AIDS victims & several areas where significant minorities of people are misinformed about AIDS. The areas of ignorance indicate a need for increased education about AIDS in courses on human sexuality. 3 Tables, 17 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T6587

Keeling, Richard P. (Dept Student Health U Virginia, Charlottesville 22908). Risk Communication about AIDS in Higher Education. WM Science, Technology, and Human Values, 1987, 12, 3-4(60-61), 26-36.

* Many Colls & Us have undertaken to provide their students with education about acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS). The difficulties in achieving a medical treatment make educational intervention vital, though it has risks for institutions that attempt it. Problems surrounding AIDS education include the involvement of students in experimental behavior, their use of recreational drugs, acquaintance rape, difficulties in acknowledging sexual feelings & behavior, belief in invincibility, resistance to using condoms, issues of self-esteem, & peer pressure. Effective risk reduction education must involve students & recognize their diversity; it must emphasize consumer orientation, social marketing, community consensus, awareness of developmental issues, & formulation of an effective risk reduction message. W. H. Stoddard

88T6588

Kutner, Nancy G. (Dept Rehabilitation Medicine Emory U, Atlanta GA 30322). Social Ties, Social Support, and Perceived Health Status among Chronically Disabled People. Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 1, 29-34.

* An investigation of the nature of social ties, perceived/received support, & perceived health status in a sample of 332 chronically disabled adults interviewed at a treatment center in the southeastern US. Major disability groups represented were musculoskeletal, neuromuscular, cardiac, & end-stage renal disease. Size of kin networks was inversely related to Rs' SES. Disabled women were less likely than disabled men to be married, more likely to be single-parent heads of households, & more likely to be socioeconomically disadvantaged. All Rs perceived a high level of family support, & though perceived health status did not vary with amount of perceived support, it did vary with amount of received help within disability groups. 5 Tables, 33 References. Modified HA

88T6589

Labisch, Alfons (Fachbereich 4 Gesamthochschule Kassel U Landes Hessen, D-3500 Federal Republic Germany). The Role of the Hospi- tal in the Health Policy of the German Social Democratic Movement before World War I. International Journal of Health Services, 1987, 17, 2, 279-294.

* An empirical sociohistorical approach to the history of hospitals is proposed & illustrated by an examination of the hospital's role in health policy as seen by German Social Democrats in the late nineteenth & early twentieth centuries. The social democratic hospital represented a compromise between the abstract ideals of party theoreticians & the pragmatic views of the rank & file. At the same time, the hospital evolved from a charity institution to a modern municipal medical care center. The social role of the hospital & of modern medicine generally changed constantly according to broader social change, & cannot be understood in terms of the perspective of medical institutions themselves. 2 Tables, 27 References. Modified HA

88T6590

Laderman, Carol (Dept Sociology & Anthropology Fordham U, Bronx NY 10458). Destructive Heat and Cooling Prayer: Malay Humoralism in Pregnancy, Childbirth and the Postpartum Period. Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 4, 357-365.

* The Malay peninsula, an ancient trade crossroads, was the recipient of Chinese & Ayurvedic humoral ideas & later, those of medieval Islam. These ideas were readily accepted since they were highly congruent with preexisting notions among Malay aboriginal peoples involving a hot-cold opposition in the material & spiritual universe & its effect on human health. Islamic Malays have adapted these aboriginal beliefs to correspond to the Greek-Arabic humoral model in matters concerning food, disease, & medicine. Contemporary beliefs & practices regarding human reproduction, however, while essentially following a humoral pattern, diverge from other major humoral doctrines. Examination of pregnancy, childbirth, & postpartum practices & beliefs of Ru Malays reveals a reproductive theory (like that of non-Islamic aboriginal peoples) that equates coldness with health & fertility & heat with disease & sterility. These ideas are, in turn, related to beliefs regarding the nature of the spirit world, the destructiveness of spiritual heat & the efficacy of cooling prayer. 28 References. Modified HA

88T6591

Lareau, Annette P. & Hendrix, Jewellyn (Southern Illinois U, Carbondale 62901). The Spread of AIDS among Heterosexuals: A Classroom Simulation. Teaching Sociology, 1987, 15, 3, July, 316-319.

* A classroom exercise is described that develops student awareness of the transmission of AIDS (acquired immune deficiency syndrome) through heterosexual human populations. Students perform a series of actions that simulate choice of sexual partners over a period of several years. The approach actually underestimates the transmission of AIDS through a human population, but has several realistic elements. Positive & negative student reactions to the simulation are discussed on the basis of a poll of 140 students. 9 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T6592

Le Grand, Julian (Suntory-Toyota International Centre Economics & Related Disciplines London School Economics, 10 Portugal St WC 2A 2AT England). Equity, Health, and Health Care. Social Justice Research, 1987, 1, 3, Sept, 257-274.

* Discussions of health policy commonly treat equity goals as primary. It is questioned, however, whether these conceptions capture the way in which the term equity is generally used. Standard conceptions of equity ignore the processes by which health states are determined, & thus the extent to which they arise from factors beyond individual control. An alternative conception is advanced that directly incorporates these considerations. 1 Figure, 20 References. Modified HA

88T6593

Locker, David & Kaufert, Joseph (Faculty Dentistry U Toronto, Ontario M5G 1G6). The Breath of Life: Medical Technology and the Careers of People with Post-Respiratory Poliomyelitis. Sociology of Health and Illness, 1988, 10, 1, Mar, 23-40.

* An examination of the impact of medical technology on the careers of people with postpolio respiratory disability, based on data from multiple in-depth interviews with 10 people in Manitoba who contracted polio during the epidemics of the early 1950s, all of whom used or had used various methods of mechanical respiratory support. Focus is on ideologies of disability & the adoption of technology, management of respiratory insufficiency, & strategies of "trading off," whereby the benefits of technology are examined & the costs minimized. While technology made an enormous contribution to the quality of life of these people, the problems it created transformed both their experience of the illness & the character of their everyday existence. 23 References. HA

88T6577

Harkness, Sara (Harvard School Public Health, 55 Shattuck St Boston MA 02115), The Cultural Mediation of Postpartum Depression, Medical Anthropology Quarterly (New Series), 1987, 1, 2, June, 194-209

¶ Current theories of the etiology of postpartum depression provide three explanations for this emotional process: hormonal changes after birth, personality traits of women, & interaction of the stress of birth with other factors. Anthropological & psychological data collected in a Ru Kipsigis community in Kenya including ethnographic data on the cultural structuring of pregnancy, birth, & the postpartum period & interview data from 10 women during pregnancy & childbirth cast doubt on these theories. There appears to be no evidence of postpartum depression in this setting, indicating a significant role for culture as a mediating factor between the physiological processes of birth & their psychological outcomes. 1 Table, 29 References. Modified HA

88T6578

Hilgartner, Stephen & Nelkin, Dorothy (Center Study Society & Medicine Coll Physicians & Surgeons Columbia U, New York NY 10032), Communication Controversies over Dietary Risks, U Science, Technology, and Human Values, 1987, 12, 3-4(60-61), 41-47

¶ A set of public controversies over risk communication is analyzed. Data from case studies of disputes about the relationship of nutrition to cancer are used to examine communication controversies in four related contexts: news reports, scientific advice & recommendations, promotional claims (eg, advertising), & disclosures (eg, mandatory product labeling). In each of these communication contexts, actors approach the issues with different economic & professional interests & competing political & ideological concerns. Most fundamentally, disputes over risk communication reflect questions of political & social control. AA

88T6579

Hinkle, Lawrence F., Jr. (440 East 69th St, New York NY 10021), Stress and Disease: The Concept after 50 Years, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 6, 561-566.

¶ Although there is no generally accepted definition of "stress" in biological or social systems, biologists & social scientists continue to use the term, & communicate meaningfully despite their different emphases on concrete & observable or psychological sources of stress. The central thesis of the stress theory of disease, developed by Walter B. Cannon & Hans Selye (eg, see "What is Stress?", Metabolism, 1956, 5, 525), appears to have been thoroughly accepted: disease can be regarded as a phenomenon that occurs when an agent or condition threatens to destroy the dynamic steady state on which the integrity of the organism depends; disease manifestations appear to be, in large measure, manifestations of the organism's efforts to adapt to or contain these threats. In addition, disease can be influenced to some extent by activities of the nervous & endocrine systems that are initiated by the central nervous system in response to information from the social & interpersonal environment. On the other hand, the theoretical explanation of how stress causes disease, which was developed in the 1930s & 1940s using a model derived from the engineering concepts to hypothesize a "state of stress" within the organism, is clearly incorrect. Rather, the relation of an organism to its environment is a communicative interaction, & an organism's response to threats to its integrity are highly specific, based on an evaluation of the information received. 11 References. Modified HA

88T6580

Hsia, H. J. (Instit Mass Communications Texas Tech U, Lubbock 79409), The Health-Information Seeking Behavior of the Mexican-Americans in West Texas, Health Marketing Quarterly, 1987, 4, 3-4, spring-summer, 107-117

¶ Survey data (N = 440 Rs) are used to examine the media & health-information-seeking behavior of Mexican Americans in western Tex in relation to income & education. Results show that Rs rely almost exclusively on relatives & friends for medical & health information. In general, available medical facilities were underutilized even though Rs were well exposed to mass media where information about free or inexpensive medical care was periodically disseminated. Of the three major media—newspapers, radio, & TV—only newspapers seemed to be a promising medium for dispensing health care information. Both education & income were found significantly correlated with newspaper reading & radio listening but not with TV watching; they were also correlated with health status, family planning, child care, & food/nutrition information seeking behavior. 5 Tables, 11 References. Modified AA

88T6581

Hughes, David (Centre Sociological Studies Wolfson Coll, OX2 6UD UK), When Nurse Knows Best: Some Aspects of Doctor Interaction in a Casualty Department, Sociology of Health and Illness, 1988, 10, 1, Mar, 1-22.

¶ It is commonly supposed that the working relationship between doctors & nurses is one in which the latter are subordinate to the former. Analysis of previously unpublished data from a wider study of cases of patient categorization in one casualty setting (emerger in a British general hospital) reveals areas in which nurses' work to move closer to the focal tasks of diagnosis & treatment, & served patterns of MD-nurse interaction at odds with the common view. 42 References. HA

88T6582

Hughes, David, May, David & Harding, Susan (Centre Sociological Studies Wolfson Coll, Oxford OX2 6UD England), Growing Up in Ward Twenty: The Everyday Life of Teenagers in a Mental Hospital, Sociology of Health and Illness, 1987, 9, 378-409

¶ Among closed institutions surviving in contemporary GB, handicap hospitals are virtually unique in assuming responsibility for the primary socialization & the long-term adult care of a population. Ethnographic data is used to describe Ward Twenty, a section of a Scottish mental handicap hospital housing 16 moderately severely handicapped young people. The process of growing up in hospital is examined, along with the extent of cultural patterning of life, sources of cultural knowledge open to patients, & the major preoccupations & concerns of the two staff groups—nurses & teachers. Major responsibility for patient management. 40 References. H

88T6583

Hull, F. M. (Jasmine Cottage, Hampton Lucy Warwick CV35 9JL England), The Role of Socio-Behavioural Scientists in Health Practice, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 6, 679-687

¶ An analysis of some of the complex problems facing primary care practice in the modern developed world. It is argued that the medical effectiveness & efficiency have been accompanied by a depersonalization & a reduction in the quality of the MD-patient relationship; these, in turn, have led to changes in diagnostic methodology, organization of primary care, & in the stress laid on interventive, & rehabilitative care. Major alterations in medical attitudes & established medical education are needed to cope with the increasing demands of primary health care. The role of sociobehavioral science in helping the medical profession remove some of its attitudinal & structural barriers to creating a new concept of the MD is discussed. 11 References. Modified HA

88T6584

Hyde, Michael J. (Northwestern U, Evanston IL 60201), The Patient as a Person, The Quarterly Journal of Medicine, 1986, 72, 4, Nov, 456-469

¶ A review essay on books by Edmund D. Pellegrino & David M. Asch, A Philosophical Basis of Medical Practice: Toward a Philosophy and Ethic of the Healing Professions (New York: Oxford UP, 1981); Jay Katz, The Silent World of Doctor and Patient (New York: Free Press, 1984); Candace West, Routine Complications: A Study of Talk between Doctors and Patients (Bloomington, Ind: Indiana UP, 1984); Eric J. Cassell, Talking with Patients, Volume 1: The Theory of Doctor-Patient Communication & Volume 2: The Technique (Cambridge, Mass: MIT Press, 1985 (see listings in 88T43)). These works discuss key theoretical & practical issues surrounding the important role of communication in the MD-patient relationship. MDs, conditioned by medicine's progressive mentality to consider patients as nothing more than diseased bodies, often become insensitive to the fact that they are humans with personal values & beliefs that must be taken into account in making clinical judgments. Pellegrino & Asch attempt to develop a philosophy & corresponding ethical principles for healing professions to enable MDs to incorporate patients' special values within the science & technology of medicine in clinical actions. Katz reveals how medicine's "history of silence" & a sense of "uncertainty" have inhibited MDs from effectively communicating with their patients, & describes how various historical, legal, & personal factors have contributed to this situation. Some implications health economy that arise from: (1) the split between innovation & evaluation as social processes, resulting in treatments being used with poor scientific evidence; & (2) the split between provider & consumer interests. Unique problems arise for Ms because of the interaction of M social roles & modal personalities with the sick role, but Fs will continue to have special problems as health care consumers because they have more needs relating to reproductive functions & conditions of sex-specific organs, they have less economic capacity & insurance coverage, & they face political blocks to certain needed services. There is a gender bias in contraception & sterilization, & there appears to be less thorough follow-up of symptoms common in both sexes if the patient is F. For both sexes, a narrow conception of health dominates program priorities & restricts opportunities for better health & quality of life. AA

88T6603

Neslund, Verla S., Matthews, Gene W. & Curran, James W. (Centers Disease Control, 1600 Clifton Rd NE Atlanta GA 30333). The Role of CDC in the Development of AIDS Recommendations and Guidelines. W Law, Medicine and Health Care, 1987, 15, 1-2, summer, 73-79

An examination of the role of Centers of Disease Control (CDC) in developing an approach to acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS). The history of this effort is recounted & the content of various sets of proposed guidelines discussed. The reception of these sets of guidelines by various audiences has varied significantly. W H Stoddard

88T6604

Nichter, Mark (Dept Anthropology U Arizona, Tucson 85721). Cultural Dimensions of Hot, Cold and Sema in Sinhalese Health Culture. Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 4, 377-398

The hot-cold conceptual framework is a pervasive feature of Sinhalese folk culture. An examination is presented of those Sinhalese in Sri Lanka for whom hot/cold & phlegm constitute special health concerns, with a distinction drawn between those at risk due to temporary illness or expected physiological changes. Socialization of the former group is considered in light of social labeling theory, while the health behavior of the latter group is highlighted. It is shown that a wide range of behaviors, from folk dietary prescriptions & procedures to birth control practices, are influenced by hot/cold reasoning. The hot/cold conceptual framework serves an integrative function in the traditional health care arena, & is presently being extended as a means of interpreting & using modern health information & cosmopolitan medicine. Recognition of the importance of the hot/cold concept for the Sinhalese layperson is vital for health educators & practitioners. Modified HA

88T6605

Nordstrom, R. D. & Steinke, Elizabeth (California State U, Fresno 93740). How Do Patients Select a Doctor?. Health Marketing Quarterly, 1987, 4, 3-4, spring-summer, 37-46

An analysis of attributes that influence a patient's selection of a MD, based on a review of the literature & questionnaire data (N = 200 Rs). Results indicate that MD's manner, credentials, convenience or ease of access, & office decor are the prime factors influencing MD selection. MDs who desire to market her/his practice for broader appeal can use the findings to assess the type of patient they desire & plan to meet their need. 5 Tables. Modified AA

88T6606

Ost, John & Straus, Murray A. (State & Regional Indicators Archive U New Hampshire, Durham 03824). Capital Intensive Hospital Technology and Illness: An Analysis of American State Data. Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 1, 75-87

The development of a hospital technology index (HTX) to measure the level of capital-intensive medical technology throughout the US is described. All three subscales of the HTX are shown to have high reliability, & there is at least some evidence of construct & discriminant validity. In addition, they are reasonably orthogonal. Significant interstate variations in scores on the HTX are found. An illness index is computed to investigate whether scores on the HTX are linked to the overall health of a state's population. Multiple regression analysis suggests that there is either no relation between capital-intensive medical technology & the rate of illness, or there is a slight tendency for illness to increase as the level of technology increases. Eight possible explanations involving methodological artifacts, regulatory & funding efforts, & iatrogenic effects of technology are advanced, & implications for health planning discussed. 2 Tables, 2 Appendixes, 67 References. Modified HA

88T6607

Pargetter, Robert & Prior, Elizabeth W. (Dept Philosophy La Trobe U, Bundoora Victoria 3083 Australia). Discrimination and AIDS. W Social Theory and Practice, 1987, 13, 2, summer, 129-153.

An examination of the morality of discriminatory treatment of persons who test positive for HTLV-III, the virus that causes AIDS (acquired immune deficiency syndrome). A theory is advanced as to what constitutes a morally relevant discriminating property. It is argued that infection with HTLV-III as such does not constitute a morally relevant property. However, certain standards of morally responsible behavior apply to persons in this state, & in cases where these standards are not met, discrimination may be justified. W H Stoddard

88T6608

Parker, Richard (Dept Anthropology U California, Berkeley 94720). Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome in Urban Brazil. Medical Anthropology Quarterly (New Series), 1987, 1, 2, June, 155-175

A comparative perspective on acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) is sought through a case study of Brazil one of the countries with the largest numbers of confirmed cases, though it has received little attention as such from either the international community or its own government. The model used for understanding AIDS transmission has been drawn from the different social contexts of the US & Western Europe. Experience in research on Brazil's sexual culture suggests its relevance for understanding AIDS transmission in Brazil. A sharp dichotomy of homosexual & heterosexual is foreign to native Brazilian sexual categories, which instead contrast the "active" & "passive" roles. Further, anal intercourse is a widespread practice both between Ms & between Ms & Fs. The need to recognize cultural factors in AIDS transmission is evident. 55 References. Modified HA

88T6609

Petchey, Roland (Dept Applied Social Studies Sheffield City Polytechnic, S1 1WB England). Health Maintenance Organisations: Just What the Doctor Ordered?. W Journal of Social Policy, 1987, 16, 4, Oct, 489-507.

Following GB's recent reorganization of the management of the hospital sector of the National Health Service, the government is currently engaged in a review of the primary health care sector. Certain of its proposals may be interpreted as suggesting movement toward a system modeled on US-style health maintenance organizations (HMOs). The context in which HMOs have developed is explored to assess their current performance & to evaluate their potential impact on the health delivery system. It is suggested that they must be understood primarily in the context of initiatives aimed at reducing health expenditure, & it is found that the cost advantages claimed for them are achieved through reduced utilization rather than through greater efficiency. It is also argued that this reduced utilization is likely to increase inequalities in health care. 49 References. HA

88T6610

Peterson, Lizette, Farmer, Janet & Mori, Lisa (Dept Psychology U Missouri, Columbia 65211). Process Analysis of Injury Situations: A Complement to Epidemiological Methods. W The Journal of Social Issues, 1987, 43, 2, summer, 33-44

Epidemiological research increasingly recognizes injury as having definable causes & contexts. It is argued, however, that the epidemiological approach fails to reveal the causation of injury in sufficient detail. A process analysis approach is outlined & then applied to the specific case of injury to children, particularly very young children. Its implications for the prevention of accidental injury are considered. 31 References. W H Stoddard

88T6611

Phifer, James F., Kamiasty, Krzysztof Z. & Norris, Fran H. (Ur Studies Center U Louisville, KY 40292). The Impact of Natural Disaster on the Health of Older Adults: A Multiwave Prospective Study. W Journal of Health and Social Behavior, 1988, 29, 1, Mar, 65-78

In a panel study, 200+ older adults were interviewed both before & after each of 2 floods that occurred in southeastern Ky in 1981 & 1984 in order to assess short- & long-term impacts of flood exposure on Rs' physical health. Data from 1-to-5 postflood follow-up interviews reveals that: (1) Flood exposure was related to modest health declines. (2) Symptomatic reactions to the less severe flood appeared to be seasonal, peaking in

88T6594

Lurie, Nicole & Shapiro, Martin F. (Center Health Services Research U Minnesota, Minneapolis 55455), Equity, Access, and Outcomes: The Status of the Art, Social Justice Research, 1987, 1, 3, Sept, 297-314

† A rationale is offered for including analyses of outcome in evaluations of the impact & equity of changes in health care policy for the poor. Equity in access to health care requires equal access only to services that are believed to be efficacious. Three cost-containment strategies: restrictions in eligibility, coinsurance, & capitation are examined & their limitations are discussed. Directions for future research focusing on outcomes are discussed. Rather than using access to care to assess outcome, outcome is viewed as the framework for assessing access & equity. 1 Table, 22 References. Modified HA

88T6595

Lyddon, William J. (Counseling Psychology Program Dept Education U California, Santa Barbara 93106), Emerging Views of Health: A Challenge to Rationalist Doctrines of Medical Thought, The Journal of Mind and Behavior, 1987, 8, 3, summer, 365-393

† A historical & metatheoretical context for evaluating current views of health & disease as encompassed by the field of behavioral medicine is provided. Toward this end, the antithetical relationship between rationalist & empirical traditions of medical thought is chronicled with particular emphasis on its most recent historical expression in allopathic & homeopathic approaches to healing. A brief historical sketch of the development of the field of behavioral medicine is offered, along with a description of its recent differentiation into "behavioral" & "biopsychosocial" camps. From this analysis, the basic ideas advanced here reveal that behavioral & biopsychosocial formulations may be contrasted along metatheoretical lines (ie, mechanistic & systemic world views, respectively) & that this conceptual bifurcation may well represent yet another expression of the age-old rationalist-empirical dichotomy. While behavioral models appear to be most closely aligned with the interventionist ideology of the rationalist doctrines of medical thought, emergent biopsychosocial formulations clearly indicate a trend toward a holistic, empirical philosophy of health & disease. 1 Table, 124 References. HA

88T6596

Madan, T. N. (Instit Economic Growth University Enclave, 110007 Delhi India), Community Involvement in Health Policy: Socio-Structural and Dynamic Aspects of Health Beliefs, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 6, 615-620

† The notion of community involvement in health has found wide acceptance in all kinds of political regimes, particularly in Third World countries. Though promising to provide comprehensive, cost-effective solutions to public health problems, such schemes are often plagued by operational problems, related in part to a lack of conceptual clarity. Evidence from India shows that community enthusiasm tends to wane after a short period of time, yet both governmental & nongovernmental organizations & agencies continue to promote community involvement in health care. It is argued that, ideally, community health initiatives should come from the people, with governments & other agencies providing assistance; however, this is rarely the case in reality. After discussing some impediments to community participation, some suggestions are offered for improving it, & illustrated using case studies of Indian projects. 18 References. Modified HA

88T6597

McKeown, C. Timothy, Rubinstein, Robert A. & Kelly, James G. (Dept Anthropology Northwestern U, Evanston 60201), Anthropology, the Meaning of Community, and Prevention, Prevention in Human Services, 1987, 5, 2, spring-summer, 35-64

† Successful health promotion & disease prevention efforts must be designed with a thorough knowledge of the community in which they are to be used. Here, the nature of communities is clarified by examining how the concept has been treated in classic community studies. Three important points emerge: (1) community is a multifaceted concept, (2) communities are best viewed as assortments of social processes, & (3) each community has within it many different communities. These findings are illustrated with a commentary on J. G. Kelly's longitudinal community psychology study of adolescent boys attending two high schools (Adolescent Boys in High School. A Psychological Study of Coping and Adaptation, Hillsdale: Laurence Erlbaum Assoc, 1979). 4 Figures, 27

88T6598

Milanovic, Vladimir (School Medicine U Belgrade, Yugoslavia), Humanism and Medicine, Social Science Medicine, 1987, 25, 1, 35-37

Comments, 37-41, Rejoinder, 41

† The degree & nature of communication problems concerning evaluation of medical organization & health care in Yugoslavia are examined. Economic, political, & ideological divisions within threaten the free search for truth & intellectual activity; how communal concern with the complete fulfillment of human need for increased freedom can bridge communication chasms. 1 are discussed with reference to Donna E. Parmelee's critique of policy & practice under socialism in Yugoslavia (see 86Q8794). The question of whether worker/citizen self-management promote improved health care & eliminate health/social inequities explored in depth. It is concluded that policy change will require participation by workers/citizens, not a bureaucratized of experts & elites. In Comments, Vuk Stambolovic (School of U of Belgrade, Yugoslavia) explores how the logic of integrative social sciences leads to illogical conclusions & biases. An alternative of problematization is employed to examine why a state-coordination system would not help overcome health inequities would continue to promote the interests of elites. Donna E. P. argues that expert democracy is not the most desirable arrangement; the most likely given the history of past self-management efforts. Legitimacy of a central state coordination of health care is stressed. Optimism is expressed regarding the possibility of individual responsibility & democratic participation. In Rejoinder, M. Stambolovic reiterates that without real democracy, technical & medical progress "have no human meaning." Efforts to establish democratic systems in Yugoslavia, however, continue to be impeded by powerful elites. 5 References. K. Hyatt

88T6599

Molnar, Attila, Korondi, István & Fodor, Orvoshozfordulási szokások-hatvan délbudai család példái (Consulting Physicians-The Example of Sixty Southern Buda), Szociologia, 1984-85, 1-2, 175-179 (H)

† Abstract not currently available

88T6600

Moon, Marilyn (American Assoc Retired Persons, 1909 Washington DC 20049), The Elderly's Access to Health Services: The Crude and Subtle Impacts of Medicare Changes, Health Research, 1987, 1, 3, Sept, 361-375.

† Since 1981, Medicare has been subjected to varied legislative changes intended to reduce its costs. About 33% of these in activities that directly increase patient cost sharing, others while aimed at improving efficiency, may also shift costs on beneficiaries. Available statistical data are used to estimate the impact of such program changes by age & income of elderly care enrollees & to evaluate that impact in the light of equity regarding their access to care. It appears that the greatest burden changes fall on the old & those with modest incomes, which is not able from an equity viewpoint. 5 Tables, 11 References. Modified HA

88T6601

Morgan, Lynn M. (Dept Anthropology U California, 94720), Dependency Theory in the Political Economy of Anthropological Critique, Medical Anthropology Quarterly, 1987, 1, 2, June, 131-154.

† The political economy of health encompasses at least three perspectives: orthodox Marxism, cultural critiques of medicine, & dependency theory. Anthropologists have tended to overemphasize the latter, which has been widely criticized in the sociological literature. Some basic premises of dependency theories are identified, & contributions to the development of theory in the political economy are evaluated. A need is seen for a reciprocal integration of political economy of health & anthropology as the path to perspective on sickness & health. 113 References. Modified HA

88T6602

Muller, Charlotte (Graduate School & U Center City U, NY 10036), Women and Men: Quality and Equality in Health, U.S. Social Policy, 1986, 17, 1, summer, 39-45.

parison of US & Canadian national statistics. Though Canada provides much more institutional care than the US & has about the same level of availability for MDs, it spends considerably less per capita, & as a percentage of gross domestic product. This may be due partly to the higher participation of the public sector in funding Canadian health care. Both federal & the provincial governments participate in this funding. A recently completed key-informant survey provides information on bureaucratic actions, the role of the long-term care system, medicalization, the importance of community & mental health, the influences of cost constraints & funding, & the role of housing, income, & caregivers in the health of the elderly. 11 Tables, 13 References. Modified HA

16621
Jelin, Jonathan G., The Language of AIDS: Public Fears, Pedagogical Responsibilities. ♦ U Teachers College Record, 1987, 89, 1, Fall, 19

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) is now a subject on which action is demanded from educators. The plague metaphor & its ethical implications—which have resonances throughout the development of Western culture—shape discourse regarding AIDS in ways that educators must sometimes be prepared to counteract. Within sex education, definition of any aspect of the curriculum in relation to a social problem leads to an exclusive focus on practical solutions, without regard to the problematic character of human sexuality. AIDS specifically is a case of “the Other”—a concept that allows people in general to feel safe. This desire to attain safety leads to a language of containment. A simple dichotomy—individual rights vs the public good—impairs discourse. Educators must explore not only the practical questions about AIDS but also the ethical issues. W. H. Stoddard

16622
Singer, Eleanor, Rogers, Theresa F. & Corcoran, Mary (Center Social Sciences School International Affairs Columbia U, New York NY 10027), AIDS. ♦ The Public Opinion Quarterly, 1987, 51, 4, winter, 580-595

A summary of PO survey data about acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) collected between 1983 & the end of 1986. Focus is on trends in six areas: awareness of the disease, concern about it as a serious social problem in general & for one's own health, perceptions about the likelihood of its spread, beliefs about methods of transmission, attitudes toward measures for protecting the public, & reported changes in one's behavior to avoid exposure. Twenty-two surveys are drawn on, most from nationwide, obtained from published & unpublished sources. 1 appendix, 5 References. AA

16623
Skevington, Suzanne M., Blackwell, Frances & Britton, N. F. (School Humanities & Social Sciences U Bath, Claverton Down BA2 7AY England), Self-Esteem and Perception of Attractiveness: An Investigation of Early Rheumatoid Arthritis. ♦ The British Journal of Medical Psychology, 1987, 60, 1, Mar, 45-52

The self-esteem of 74 early rheumatoid patients was compared to that of controls from the general population of Bath, England, matched individually by age & sex, using the Carlson Adjective Checklist. It was found that at their first visit to outpatient clinics, patients had lower self-esteem than did controls, & particular items of low self-esteem showed similarity with features of the rheumatoid personality. An observation of the word “attractive” in the checklist was rarely used by either group & that items at the beginning & end of the checklist were less often marked, led to a second study of 67 U of Bath undergraduates in which the position of the word attractive was experimentally varied in 3 items of the scale. The results show that position only marginally affects response to this item. Probability analyses confirm that the word attractive is used very rarely by patients, rarely by healthy adults, & less often than expected by healthy U students, possibly demonstrating the respective effects of pain, illness, & age. Attractive tends to be included in the self-concept only after self-esteem reaches a relatively high level. 2 Tables, 14 References. Modified HA

T6624
Spruit, Ingeborg P. & Kromhout, Daan (Insttit Social Medicine U Leiden, NL-2300 RC Netherlands), Medical Sociology and Epidemiology: Convergences, Divergences and Legitimate Boundaries. ♦ Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 6, 579-587

Important convergences & divergences in the history of medical sociology & epidemiology are traced to establish whether there is a tendency to (illegitimately) trespass constituted boundaries. Some comparisons are drawn between the history of both disciplines, their fields & aims of study, & their characteristic concepts & constructs. Analysis of articles (N = 227) from the 1985 volume of a major international journal in each field, Social Science & Medicine & the International Journal of Epidemiology, reveals areas of convergent & divergent interest/competence & legitimate ways that interdisciplinary boundaries can be crossed. 3 Tables, 31 References. Modified HA

88T6625
Telesky, Carol Williams (U California, Los Angeles 90024), The Effects of Chronic versus Acute Health Problems, Social, and Psychological Factors on Reports of Illness, Disability, and Doctor Visits for Symptoms. ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, 4, The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1544-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8719995.

88T6626
Toombs, S. Kay, The Meaning of Illness: A Phenomenological Approach to the Patient-Physician Relationship. ♦ The Journal of Medicine and Philosophy, 1987, 12, 3, Aug, 219-240

It is argued that philosophical phenomenology can provide important insights into the patient-MD relationship. In particular, it is noted that the MD & patient encounter the experience of illness from within the context of different worlds, each world providing a horizon of meaning. Such phenomenological notions as focusing, habits of mind, finite provinces of meaning, & relevance are shown to be central to the way these worlds are constituted. An eidetic interpretation of illness is proposed that discloses certain essential characteristics that pertain to the experience of illness per se, regardless of its manifestation in terms of a particular disease state. It is suggested that, if a shared world of meaning is to be constituted between MD & patient, the eidetic characteristics of illness must be recognized by the MD. 33 References. HA

88T6627
Vellimirovic, B. (Insttit Social Medicine U Graz, A-8010 Austria), AIDS as a Social Phenomenon. ♦ Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 6, 541-552

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) is an infectious but also a social disease, posing problems in social, political, ethical, & legal areas that extend far beyond traditional medical interest in its natural history & epidemiology. In turn, these problems create polarization among the public, the press, politicians, & MDs, though the gravity of the disease has become more prominent, no consensus has been reached on the effectiveness of the means used & proposed to check its spread. There is rapidly accumulating knowledge of social influences on the spread of the disease, but as yet, scant information on the influences of social factors on control & behavioral prevention strategies. Among major risk groups, individual perceptions of fear & menace are affected by various ideologies & societal values. Conflict between the perception of individual vs collective rights is bound to grow. The effects that AIDS will have on complex social structures in general, & on health structures in particular, as well as on problems that might shape future attitudes, values, & morals, can only be vaguely foreseen. 59 References. Modified HA

88T6628
Ward, Peter (Dept Geography U Cambridge, CB2 3EJ England), Reproduction of Social Inequality: Access to Health Services in Mexico City. ♦ Health Policy and Planning, 1987, 2, 1, Mar, 44-57.

The structure & performance of health care in Mexico are examined, with focus on an evaluation of the extent to which the principle health & welfare institutions have been successful in narrowing spatial & social inequalities. The provision of health care by social security organizations, government, & the private sector is better in Mexico City than elsewhere in the country, but there are considerable inequalities within Ur areas, particularly in the location of health service facilities. Results of a questionnaire survey completed by 630 households located in low-income irregular settlements at the city's periphery indicate that the poor are obliged to pay for private services nearby due to the expense of traveling to the public health care facilities that they are eligible to attend. It is argued that the structural problems of Mexico's health care system are a deliberate outcome of the political system & highly resistant to change, since they covertly function to coopt the most powerful sectors of the population. 3 Tables, 4 Figures, 22 References. Modified HA the first spring after the incident, decreasing by that fall, then increasing to a lesser degree the following spring. However, this seasonal trend was found only for those who had experienced both high personal losses & high community destruction in the floods. (3) The persistence of health effects was related directly to flood intensity. 3 Tables, 2 Figures, 41 References. Modified HA

88T6612

Philliber, Susan G. & Philliber, William W. (Columbia U, New York NY 10032). Social and Psychological Perspectives on Voluntary Sterilization: A Review. Studies in Family Planning. 1985, 16, 1, Jan-Feb, 1-29

¶ A review of social science research on the antecedents & consequences of voluntary sterilization. The major conclusions are that SES has little impact on the decision to be sterilized & that sterilizations are rare among those without sons & among nonwhite Mx. Significant others are important sources of encouragement & information, & good marital relations increase the likelihood of having the procedure performed. Most acceptors experience no change in sexual activity, quality of marital relationship, or work-related behavior, & few regret their choice. Negative consequences are more likely among those in India, those who did not understand the consequences of the procedure, those with health complications after sterilization, & those couples who have unstable marriages or who disagree about sterilization. 13 Tables, 282 References. HA

88T6613

Prior, Lindsay (Dept Sociology & Social Anthropology U Ulster, Jordanstown Northern Ireland). The Architecture of the Hospital: A Study of Spatial Organization and Medical Knowledge. In The British Journal of Sociology. 1988, 39, 1, Mar, 86-113

¶ After reviewing recent developments in the sociology of spatial organization & examining some of the ontological & epistemological assumptions that are embedded within current theorizations of space, a number of arguments are advanced concerning the interrelationships between forms of knowledge, social practice, & physical design. Using architectural plans, these arguments are developed with reference to the study of the spatial organization of hospital wards in three contexts: pediatric wards for the care of infants & children, asylums for the containment of madness during the period 1807-1845, & the modern psychiatric unit between 1973 & 1982. It is concluded that schemes of spatial organization are best understood in relation to the discursive practices of which they form a part, rather than as decontextualized & reified social facts that exhibit their own logic. 4 Figures, 56 References. Modified HA

88T6614

Rayner, Geoffrey (9 Dalebury Rd, London SW17 7HQ England). Lessons from America? Commercialization and Growth of Private Medicine in Britain. International Journal of Health Services. 1987, 17, 2, 197-216

¶ An examination of the transition of the private medical sector in GB from a mere appendage to the National Health Service to a significant business sector involving multinational enterprise. It is argued that private medicine continues to be in a state of flux because its degree of independence is limited by its links to the dominant public sector, particularly with regard to staffing, & is still vulnerable to attacks from the opposition parties. Private medicine, despite rapid growth in the late 1970s, is beset by mounting costs & intense competition. 79 References. HA

88T6615

Reagan, Joey & Collins, Janay (Washington State U, Pullman 99164). Sources for Health Care Information in Two Small Communities. In Journalism Quarterly. 1987, 64, 2-3, summer-autumn, 560-563, 676

¶ An examination of the hypothesis that as the type of information persons seek becomes more specific, non-mass media are more likely to be selected as information sources than are mass media. Telephone interviews were conducted with a random sample of 219 persons in Ru communities of Latah County, Idaho, & Whitman County, Wash, to determine their use of area hospitals & MDs & health-related information sources. Results support the hypothesis that non-mass media sources—eg, interpersonal sources & advertising flyers & newsletters—are relied on more in seeking specific medical information; several explanations for this are advanced. In order to determine whether media content influenced source choice, local newspaper coverage of health care issues was analyzed for a 1-year-period, only 18 out of 81 items could be considered informative. Even though recall of mass media health care advertising was high, these sources were not cited as important in decision. 1 Table. K. Hyatt

88T6616

Reinsland, Nadja & Burghart, Richard (Dept Experimentology U Oxford, OX1 2JD England). The Role of Massage in Asia: Child Health and Development, Social Science and 1987, 25, 3, 231-239

¶ Massage & breastfeeding are the two fundamental nurturers of women in south Asia. Analysis of field research on beliefs connected with massage in the Mithila region (India) & how important the practice is considered to the preservation of health: daily massage is expected to foster infant strength & ability, & mothers are subject to public censure if it is not performed. The practice is predicated on the belief that between birth & weaning is highly impressionable & hence, its identity can be shared by women who nurture it. Implications for child health care work in communities are discussed. 6 Figures. Modified HA

88T6617

Rogers, Theresa F. (Columbia U, New York NY 10027). The Fit between Social Science and Health Care Practice: Next Steps for the Researcher. Social Science and Medicine. 1987, 25, 6, 689-696

¶ It is argued that both social scientists & health care professionals have complementary intellectual interests in fostering empirical research on health & illness, yet barriers built into the orientation & culture of both professions impede collaborative efforts. After reviewing recent research on health & illness, suggestions are offered for enhancing its utility for practical health care. Several substantive methodological directions to be encouraged are discussed that will improve opportunities for comparative work, synthesis, & the development of a knowledge base that will permit generalizations, increasing the value of social science findings for the delivery of health care training of health professionals. 65 References. Modified HA

88T6618

Romito, Patrizia & Hovelque, Françoise (Istit Infanzia Belfio, Via dell'Istria 65/1 I-34100 Trieste Italy). Changing Patterns in Women's Health: New Insights and New Pitfalls in Prenatal Care. International Journal of Health Services. 1987, 17, 2, 241-258

¶ The standard definition of risk factors in pregnancy is not a technical process that women may assume it to be, but is the context of a capitalist & patriarchal society. In such a society, paid work is valued, & thus there is little study of the ill effect of work on pregnant women. MDs & the mass media emphasize smoking, while not mentioning that many drugs prescribed are unsafe. It is hypothesized that MDs can represent risk factors in fee-for-service medical systems. Approaches that emphasize information & make it the women's responsibility are seen as a victimization, recognition that the key factor in prenatal care is the educational level implies that there is a need to change a social system that keeps women in ignorance. Thus the solution to problems of prenatal care requires thinking in SC & feminist terms. 3 Tables. Modified HA

88T6619

Schofield, William (Dept Psychiatry Medical School U of Minnesota Minneapolis 55455). Beyond the Purchase of Friendship: Society. 1987, 24, 3(167), Mar-Apr, 69-75

¶ An adaptation of the introduction to a 1986 reissue of William Field's philosophical & social analysis of the social phenomenon of psychotherapy, The Purchase of Friendship (1964). Historical events of broad social & political impact that have occurred between 1964 & 1986 are reviewed. Particular attention is given to events & movements with implications for mental health given their specific impact on patterns of demand for psychotherapy. It is concluded that most of the theses & paradoxes of psychotherapy first offered over twenty years ago remain cogent. AA

88T6620

Schwenger, Cape W. (Dept Health Administration Faculty U Toronto, Ontario M5S 1A1). Health Care for the Elderly in Canada. Journal of Public Health Policy. 1987, 8, 2, summer, 1-10

¶ An examination of health care for the elderly in Canada, 1 assessment"—points out three areas that require assessment after a suicide attempt: the conditions under which the attempt occurred, the individual's state of mind, & the suicide attempt itself. The problem of treatment referral is considered also. (9) "Treatment" explores counseling strategies appropriate to adolescent suicide attempters & notes as common issues activity vs passivity, object loss, sensitivity to rejection or separation, ambivalence, low self-esteem, aggression, hopelessness, constriction, separation & termination, confidentiality, anniversaries, use of the telephone, family involvement in treatment, & group & peer group counseling. Case studies are presented. (10) "Education and prevention"—explores the value of death education coping skills training, of peer group counseling in dealing with suicide. 228 References. W. Stoddard

6637

Denk, Charles E. (City U New York, NY 10021), Many Roads Lead to Rome: Implications of Heterogeneous Diffusion for Institutionalization and "Internal Imperatives", Am American Journal of Sociology, 1988, 93, 5, Mar., 1224-1231

Reply, 1231-1235

A comment on the argument put forth by James N. Baron, Frank R. Dobbin, & P. Devereaux Jennings (see SA 351/87R1652) that the widespread growth of bureaucratic forms of personnel administration in industry during the Depression & WWII was attributable to external constraints placed on organizations by institutionalizing agents rather than to internal organizational imperatives. However, the specifics of their diffusion were not identified, leading to certain logical & empirical ambiguities in predicting the consequences of such constraints. Reanalysis of their data reveals that only the prevalence of personnel departments centralized employment showed decreasing variation during this period. Other administrative practices & forms (eg, job analysis/evaluation, placement/promotion testing) showed an increased variability. This is at odds with the accepted hypotheses of simple diffusion, & suggests that internal organizational factors were of more importance than Baron et al recognized. Two well-known models of diffusion are reviewed & applied to the data to explain this heterogeneous diffusion. In Rome Wasn't It in a Day: Reply to Denk, Baron et al attempt to demonstrate why these models cannot be meaningfully applied to these data. They reiterate that factors other than internal, firm-level ones have a significant impact on organizational administrative structure & practices. 3 Tables, 9 References. K. Hyatt

6638

Dressler, William W. (U Alabama Tuscaloosa 35497), Social Consistency and Psychological Distress, Am Journal of Health and Social Behavior, 1988, 29, 1, Mar., 79-91

Various hypotheses have been proposed regarding the stressful nature of a lack of consistency among different dimensions of SS. Three of these, termed respectively the status inconsistency, goal-striving stress, & style incongruity models, are evaluated with data collected in an in-home survey of 285 household heads or spouses in a southern US black community. Of these three models, lifestyle incongruity in interaction with age proves the best predictor of depressive symptoms. More symptoms are reported by younger persons, whose style of life, assessed by material consumption patterns & adoption of cosmopolitan behaviors, exceeds their household SC. Implications of these results for theories of social consistency are discussed. 7 Tables, 49 References. HA

6639

Dressler, William W. (School Medicine U Alabama, University 35486), The Stress Process in a Southern Black Community: Implications for Prevention Research, Am Human Organization, 1987, 46, 3, Fall, 211-220

Interest has grown in the development & implementation of primary prevention programs for various forms of mental illness. Primary prevention strategies for mental illness (& other disorders) hold great promise in reducing psychiatric morbidity by altering the etiologic factors that lead to dysfunction. Such programs must first be tested to evaluate their efficacy. The implications for research on primary prevention programs, discussed in the context of findings of a study of depression in a southern US black community involving observation & interviews (N = 1,000 households). Three major issues are discussed that must be addressed in the design of prevention research. These are: (1) the development of a model of disease etiology specific to the community studied, (2) the design of a culturally appropriate intervention, & (3) the selection of an appropriate institutional focus for introduction of the intervention into the community. 1 Table, 2 Figures, 45 References. Modified HA

88T6640

Franks, Deborah D. (F Heller Graduate School Brandeis U, Waltham MA 02254), The High Cost of Caring: Economic Contribution of Families to the Care of the Mentally Ill, Dissertation Abstracts International, 4, The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan., 1901-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8722485.

88T6641

Frese, Michael & Mohr, Gisela (Inst Psychology U Munchen, D-8000 40 Federal Republic Germany), Prolonged Unemployment and Depression in Older Workers: A Longitudinal Study of Intervening Variables, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 2, 173-178

A questionnaire was administered in 1975 & again in 1977 to 51 unemployed blue-collar workers aged 45+ in West Germany. It was found that prolonged or experienced unemployment leads to depression, reduced hope, & financial problems. Being employed or retired reduces depression & financial problems. Financial problems & disappointed hope play a role in the development of depression after prolonged unemployment. Variables such as internal/external control, passivity, sickness, & age do not effect the relationship between unemployment & depression. 1 Table, 3 Figures, 29 References. Modified HA

88T6642

Gray, Philip Michael (State U New York Buffalo, Amherst 14260), Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder among Vietnam Veterans: A Case-Control Study, Dissertation Abstracts International, 4, The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov., 1321-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8718536.

88T6643

Hiday, Virginia Aldige & Scheld-Cook, Teresa L. (Dept Sociology North Carolina State U, Raleigh 27695-8107), The North Carolina Experience with Outpatient Commitment: A Critical Appraisal, International Journal of Law and Psychiatry, 1987, 10, 3, 215-232

Outpatient commitment (OPC) is evaluated with a 6-month follow-up, & its effects are compared with those of release & involuntary hospitalization. Data on 1,226 allegedly mentally ill in NC, of whom 295 were ordered to OPC, indicate that OPC is successful. When patients show up for treatment, OPC works in terms of keeping them in treatment & on medication, increasing compliance, permitting residence outside an institution, encouraging social interaction outside the home, & maintaining them in the community. OPC works to maintain even chronic patients with histories of dangerousness in the community with no more dangerous episodes than those who are released or involuntarily hospitalized. 4 Tables, 17 References. Modified AA

88T6644

Johnson, Robert J. & Kaplan, Howard B. (Dept Psychiatry Baylor Coll Medicine, Houston TX 77030), Gender, Aggression, and Mental Health Intervention during Early Adolescence, Am Journal of Health and Social Behavior, 1988, 29, 1, Mar., 53-64

A test of the hypothesized effects of aggression on observed higher treatment rates for M than F adolescents over 3 waves of a panel (N = 15,920 seventh graders in Houston, Tex, who completed questionnaires in 1971, 1972, & 1973). On the assumption that treatment is a social control response to deviant behavior, including aggression, it was hypothesized that higher treatment for Ms are accounted for by higher rates of aggression by Ms. Also considered are the value hypothesis, which states that M adolescents are more highly valued & thus are more likely to be treated for problems, & the tolerance hypothesis, which states that differential treatment rates vary by differential tolerance of deviance for Ms & for Fs. The findings suggest that initially observed gender differences in these treatment rates are accounted for partially (in seventh grade) or entirely (in eighth & ninth grade) by increased likelihood of M aggression as measured by overt interpersonal aggressive behavior. Little evidence is found to support the other explanations. 3 Tables, 1 Figure, 1 Appendix, 34 References. HA

88T6645

Kuo, Sou-Hong, Chien, Ching-Piao & Mills, Mark J. (Center Foren-

Fleck's theory regarding the development of scientific fields (Entstehung und Entwicklung einer wissenschaftlichen Tatsache [The Emergence and Development of Scientific Facts], Frankfurt am Main: Suhrkamp Verlag, 1980 [1935]). Structures of co-word networks around al terms in the field are considered for different periods of time between 1970 & 1984. The development of the concept of minimal brain malformation (MBD) is provided as an example. It is concluded that the results in these structures do not support Fleck's hypothesis. 2 Tables, 10 Figures. Modified HA

655

White, Marni, Kasl, Stanislaw V., Zahner, Gwendolyn E. P. & Will, Julie C., Perceived Crime in the Neighborhood and Mental Health of Women and Children, W. Environment and Behavior, 1987, 19, 5, Sept., 588-613

¶ A report on a study of 337 black & Hispanic women over a 3-year period to assess the impact of neighborhood environment on the mental health of the Rs & their children. Focusing on the perceived lack of safety & the fear of crime, it was hypothesized that (1) perceived crime has a negative impact on the mental health of women & children, (2) the physical quality of the residential environment acts as a conditioning variable in the association between crime & mental health, & (3) the quality of the social environment also has a conditioning effect. Results suggest some adverse effects on the mental health of adults, but no reliable effects on the mental health of children were identified, & few interactive effects with other residential & social-environmental parameters were observed. 3 Tables, 42 References. Modified HA

79 substance use/abuse & compulsive behaviors (drug abuse, addiction, alcoholism, gambling, eating disorders, etc.)

656

Ilamiani, Allaman (Istit. formazione psicosomatica, Florence, Italy), Alcolismo: approccio sistemico e terapia familiare (Alcoholism: The Systems Approach and Family Therapy), ♦ Terapia Familiare, 1987, 23, Mar., 7-25 (ITA)

Various studies concerning the treatment of alcoholics, especially in Italy, are reviewed. The systems approach (in which the family is considered as a system) is an innovative means for improving the quality of care of alcoholic patients & their families; family therapy also provides an important tool for treating pathological alcoholic behavior. The problem of dependency & the role of alcohol in stabilizing families are discussed. Several case studies are presented to illustrate the therapeutic process of family therapy for alcoholism. It is hypothesized that family therapy can function as "shame therapy" in this situation. 48 References. Modified HA

657

Richman, Jerald G., Johnston, Lloyd D., O'Malley, Patrick M. & Humphrey, Ronald H. (Inst. Social Research U. Michigan, Ann Arbor 48106-1248), Explaining the Recent Decline in Marijuana Use: Differentiating the Effects of Perceived Risks, Disapproval, and General Lifestyle Factors, W. Journal of Health and Social Behavior, 1988, 29, 1, Mar., 92-112

Marijuana use among US high school seniors has been declining since 1976. Two alternative explanations of this trend are explored: that young people have become more conservative in general, or that specific changes in views about marijuana have led to the decline in its use. Bivariate & multivariate analyses are reported of questionnaire data from a nationwide survey (1976-1986) of high school seniors ($N =$ approximately 30,000). Lifestyle factors such as religious commitment, frequency, & evenings away from home are linked strongly to individual differences in marijuana use; these factors, however, have not trended in a way that can account for much of the recent decline in marijuana use. On the other hand, the analyses suggest that if perceived risks & disapproval associated with regular marijuana use had not risen substantially in recent years, the decline in actual use would not have occurred. The implications for drug use prevention efforts are discussed. 4 Tables, 2 Figures, 1 Appendix, 41 References. HA

658

Icon, Selden D. (16 Renear St., Vineyard Haven MA 02568), Alcohol Problem Prevention: A "Common Sense" Approach, Journal of Drug Issues, 1987, 17, 4, fall, 369-393

In light of the absence of any significant progress in the reduction of alcohol problems in the US over the past 200 years, it is suggested that a commonsense approach be adopted as an alternative to social science approaches. Through the development of a common vocabulary & direct methods of data collection, such an approach would provide for identifying the strengths of the multitude of past & current efforts to deal with alcohol problems in terms of both intervention & treatment. The commonsense approach is exploratory in nature, guided by both humility & confidence, & rejects preconceptions. Its methodological aspects are extended & questions about implementation are addressed. Possible benefits of the approach are discussed along with reasons why established policy groups & social institutions may perceive it as threatening as well as innovative. 1 Reference. Modified HA

88T6659

Bergmark, Anders & Oscarsson, Lars (Dept. Social Work U. Stockholm, S-106 91 Sweden), The Concept of Control and Alcoholism, British Journal of Addiction, 1987, 82, 11, Nov., 1203-1212

¶ An analysis of control concepts within the alcohol dependence syndrome (ADS) perspective & the theoretical framework that surrounds controlled drinking as a therapeutic goal. Problems associated with an ambiguous definition of the concept of control are discussed, & two basic interpretations of control are proposed. Practical & theoretical problems associated with the use of an unarticulated control concept are detailed. 42 References. Modified HA

88T6660

Caetano, Raul (Alcohol Research Group Medical Research Inst., San Francisco, 1816 Scenic Ave. Berkeley CA 94709), Acculturation and Drinking Patterns among U.S. Hispanics, British Journal of Addiction, 1987, 82, 7, July, 789-799

¶ The relationship between drinking patterns & acculturation of Hispanics to US society is examined using interview data from a multistage probability sample of 1,453 adults in Hispanic households in the 48 contiguous states. Acculturation—a composite measure covering language use, media preferences, & other aspects of daily life—is more strongly & consistently associated with drinking patterns for Fs than for Ms. More acculturated Fs are 5 times as likely to be drinkers as are those who are less acculturated, & 9 times more likely to be frequent heavy drinkers. Acculturation is associated with decreased abstinence among older Ms, & with a higher rate of frequent heavy drinking among younger Ms. Suggestions are offered for further analyses of these data. 4 Tables, 42 References. Modified HA

88T6661

Didier, Marcelo (School Psychology Catholic U. Chile, Santiago), Attributions in the Evaluation of Alternative Solutions to Social Problems, Journal of Social Psychology, 1987, 127, 4, Aug., 357-365

¶ A study of causal attributions in decision making utilizing questionnaire data from vocational counseling students ($N = 47$) & first-year undergraduate students ($N = 207$). The relative importance of 8 different causes of alcohol problems & the potential value of 8 solutions were rated by Rs. Multiple regression analysis was used to evaluate criterion variables (probable effectiveness of solutions) with the importance of different causes & the R's sex as regressors. Results indicate that the importance attributed to the cause that was eliminated was always the best predictor of the value given to any solution in the undergraduate student sample & most frequently among members of the counselor student sample. 1 Table, 12 References. Modified HA

88T6662

Engs, Ruth C. & Hanson, David J. (Indiana U., Bloomington)

ic Sciences, 463 20th St Santa Monica CA 90402), Forensic Psychiatry in Taiwan: Civil Litigation, International Journal of Law and Psychiatry, 1987, 10, 3, 297-309

¶ When forensic psychiatry was introduced to Taiwan in the 1960s, its original emphasis was on criminal law proceedings. In recent years, however, it has also been applied to civil cases. Records of 66 such cases assessed at a mental hospital in southern Taiwan between 1973 & 1984 are analyzed. Forensic psychiatry is important for several types of cases, interdiction (equivalent to the US concept of conservatorship) being particularly important. Schizophrenia is the most common psychiatric diagnosis overall, followed by mental retardation, different diagnoses are common in different types of cases. Court decisions are usually consistent with diagnoses. Families are reluctant to request court intervention until a psychiatric syndrome becomes extremely severe & has clearly visible symptoms. An expanding role is seen for forensic psychiatry in the Taiwanese judicial system. 3 Tables, 1 Figure, 10 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T6646

Landrine, Hope (Dept Psychology California State U, San Bernardino 92407-2397), On the Politics of Madness: A Preliminary Analysis of the Relationship between Social Roles and Psychopathology, Genetic, Social, and General Psychology Monographs, 1987, 113, 3, Aug., 341-406

¶ A discussion of the argument that diagnostic categories of madness & their prototypes are equivalent to the fulfillment of the roles & role stereotypes of the status groups that tend to receive the diagnoses most often. Two studies provided tentative support for the theory. In the first study, 12 clinicians attributed to the stereotypes of various status groups precisely those diagnoses that the groups tended to receive. In the second study, 30 undergraduates who were given diagnostic prototypes from the DSM-III & asked to predict the status characteristics of the persons described therein, correctly reproduced well-known epidemiological data. These results imply an intimate relationship between social & psychiatric taxonomies, & thus raise questions about the meaning of madness in US society. 5 Tables, 241 References. HA

88T6647

Lerner, Harriet Goldhor (Menninger Foundation, Topeka KS 66601), Work and Success Inhibitions in Women: Family Systems Level Interventions in Psychodynamic Treatment, W Bulletin of the Menninger Clinic, 1987, 51, 4, July, 338-360

¶ A clinical case is highlighted to provide a partial theoretical formulation for work & success inhibitions in women & to illustrate the usefulness of systems-level interventions in psychodynamic treatment. Clinical interventions pivotal in the process of change are described as they relate to marital dynamics & to the nuclear & multigenerational family system. Special focus on the mother-daughter dyad illustrates the importance of helping patients address toxic emotional issues at their source, ie, with key family members. 17 References. Modified HA

88T6648

Loring, Marti & Powell, Brian (c/o Powell Dept Sociology Indiana U, Bloomington 47405), Gender, Race, and DSM-III: A Study of the Objectivity of Psychiatric Diagnostic Behavior, W Journal of Health and Social Behavior, 1988, 29, 1, Mar., 1-22.

¶ Sociologists have long been interested in the consequences of psychiatrists' & clients' social location on diagnostic judgment. Previous research provided conflicting evidence on the effects of sex & race on diagnosis, but it has been suggested that with the institution of a formalized diagnostic system, the American Psychiatric Assoc's Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, 3rd edition (Washington, DC: APA, 1980) ie, the DSM-III the effects of gender & race on diagnosis have become minimal. The accuracy of this claim is assessed using an analogue approach in which 290 US psychiatrists evaluate, via mail questionnaire, 2 case studies in which race & sex are manipulated. Results indicate that sex & race of both client & psychiatrist influence diagnosis even when clear-cut diagnostic criteria are presented. It is concluded that it is premature to close the question on the influence of sex & race on diagnostic assessments. 7 Tables, 2 Charts, 60 References. Modified HA

88T6649

Menzies, Robert J. (School Criminology Simon Fraser U, Burnaby British Columbia V5A 1S6), Cycles of Control: The Transcendental Careers of Forensic Patients, International Journal of Law and Psychiatry, 1987, 10, 3, 233-249.

¶ In a longitudinal study of 571 criminal defendants over a 2-year period subsequent to their psychiatric assessment in a pretrial forensic clinic at Toronto, Ontario, correctional & mental hospital data were compiled, & follow-up data obtained, including provincial correctional files, police information data, psychiatric reports, medical records from the Canadian Penitentiary Service, & Toronto Coroner's Office documents. The findings reveal that such criminals experience repeated & cyclical confrontations with legal & psychiatric institutions. Within the 2-year period, the 571 Ss received a total of 663 terms of imprisonment, 592 inpatient hospitalizations, & 229 subsequent court-ordered remands for further mental evaluation. Repeated court-ordered assessments were used primarily to consolidate previously existing labels & to demonstrate the longitudinal validity of clinical judgments about mental disorder & criminality. These findings provide further evidence concerning the mutual convergence of therapeutic & legal ordering practices, as mentally disordered defendants are increasingly being exposed to extensive & recurrent cycles of medicolegal control in the transcendental system. 43 References. Modified AA

88T6650

Michels, Bernard E. (F. Heller Graduate School Brandeis U, Waltham MA 02254), Does Marriage Enhance Adult Well-Being? An Examination of the Terman Life Cycle Study, * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, Jan., 1898-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8722499.

88T6651

Mitchell, Chester N. (Dept Law Carlton U, Ottawa Ontario K1S 5B6), Legal Restraint, Happiness, and Anxiety-Parallels between Utilitarianism and Psychiatry, International Journal of Law and Psychiatry, 1987, 10, 3, 265-281

¶ An investigation of the psychological consequences of a general escalation of legal restraints to determine whether law is a source of increased anxiety & neurosis. Both utilitarians & psychiatrists properly begin with a materialist, hedonistic model of motivation, but both misunderstand the paradoxical nature of happiness, & thus offer contradictory & unscientific prescriptions to legislators. Building on D. G. Gahan's theory of opposite causation (Against Ourselves, 1979), it is contended that legal restraint is a prerequisite of civilization, but that increased law results in no net increase in either anxiety or happiness. Law must therefore be evaluated strictly in objective terms. AA

88T6652

Takeda, Sharon Gail (Stanford U, CA 94305), Determinants and Implementation of State Mental Health Policy, * Dissertation Abstracts International, A The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, Jan., 1903-A

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8723095.

88T6653

Turner, R. Jay & Noh, Samuel (Dept Psychiatry U British Columbia, Vancouver V6T 2A1), Physical Disability and Depression: A Longitudinal Analysis, W Journal of Health and Social Behavior, 1988, 29, 1, Mar., 23-37

¶ The association between disability & risk for depression is considered & the relevance of stress process variables in accounting for variations in depression is examined, using 2 waves of interview data obtained from representative samples of physically disabled persons (N = 1,697 adults aged 19-91 in southwestern Ontario). It is demonstrated that the disabled are at dramatically elevated risk for depressive symptoms, & that this high level of depression characterizes both men & women of all ages. Longitudinal analyses show eventual stress, chronic strain, mastery, & social support to be significant determinants of depression in this population, only the effects of mastery & social support, however, are clearly observable within all age groups. 4 Tables, 1 Figure, 81 References. Modified HA

88T6654

van Rossum, W. (Vakgroep Welzijnsbeleidsvraagstukken en werkgroep Wetenschapsonderzoek Rijks U Groningen, NL-9700 AB Netherlands), De ontwikkeling van een wetenschappelijk begrip? Een co-woord-analyse van het MBD Syndroom (The Development of a Scientific Concept? A Co-Word Analysis of the MBD Syndrom), W Mens en Maatschappij, 1987, 62, supplement, 88-113. (DUT)

¶ Co-word analysis is used to operationalize the cognitive consequences

2100 social problems and social welfare

43 social gerontology

88T6678

Anderson, Sharon Eylar (U Colorado, Boulder 80309). An Ethnographic Study of the Effects of Illness on Social Integration in a Life-Care Community. * Dissertation Abstracts International. 4 The Humanities and Social Sciences. 1987, 48, 5, Nov, 1328-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8716235.

88T6679

Chevan, Albert (Dept Sociology U Massachusetts, Amherst 01003). Homeownership in the Older Population: 1940-1980. Research on Aging. 1987, 9, 2, June, 226-255.

* An investigation of the disproportionately large (288%) increase in homeownership among the US elderly population between 1940 & 1980 within the framework of compositional analysis. Using data on the entire continental population of the US obtained from the 1/1,000 public use samples of the 1940-1980 US censuses, significant compositional effects on homeownership are found. The relationship of seven independent variables—age, sex, income, race, marital status, place of residence, & headship to homeownership is discussed, with particular attention to changes in income distribution & living arrangements that account for virtually all the increase in elderly homeownership. As compositional changes in the older population are likely to continue, high levels of homeownership are likely to persist over the next twenty years. 4 Tables, 3 figures, 32 References. Modified HA.

88T6680

Cloutterbuck, Sally Jane Cooper (F Heller Graduate School Brandeis U, Waltham MA 02254). The Self-Perceived Quality of Life of the Southern, Rural, Black Elderly: Correlates and Predictors. * Dissertation Abstracts International. 4 The Humanities and Social Sciences. 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1900-A-1901-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8722504.

88T6681

Gass, Kathleen A. (School Nursing U Wisconsin, Madison 53792). The Health of Conjugally Bereaved Older Widows: The Role of Appraisal, Coping and Resources. Research in Nursing and Health. 1987, 10, 1, Feb, 39-47.

* Relationships between bereavement, coping, resources, & health dysfunction were investigated in 100 older women (mean age = 71.3) widowed 1-12 months prior to the interview. Differences in coping were hypothesized for those who appraised their bereavement as either (1) harmful loss, but without major accompanying losses, (2) harmful loss with other anticipated threats, or (3) a challenge. Response to the Ways of Coping Checklist & Sickness Impact Profile, & appraisal of bereavement & resources revealed that the 3 groups differed significantly in overall problem-focused coping, wishful thinking, help seeking/avoidance, self-blame, & growth-oriented coping. There were no differences in use of emotion-focused coping & ways to minimize threat & seek social support. Social support, strong religious beliefs, practice of rituals, beliefs in control over bereavement, & good prior mental health were related to less psychosocial &/or physical dysfunction. Greater number of resources, but not greater numbers of coping strategies, also were related to less dysfunction. 3 Tables, 31 References. HA.

88T6682

Haber, Carole & Gratton, Brian (Dept History U North Carolina, Charlotte 28223). Old Age, Public Welfare and Race: The Case of Charleston, South Carolina, 1800-1949. ♦ Journal of Social History. 1987, 21, 2, winter, 263-279.

* The evolution of public support for the needy elderly in Charleston, South Carolina, between 1900 & 1950 is traced, based largely on records of the city's almshouses, old age homes, boards of outdoor relief, & municipal yearbooks. Quantitative & qualitative methods are employed to depict the unique character of old-age care in this southern city. In Charleston, race, far more than any other factor, served to determine the type of care awarded needy citizens in their old age. In the twentieth century, this race-conscious attitude continued to shape welfare policies. Social Security benefits granted to blacks were markedly less than those to whites. Nevertheless, it is concluded, the New Deal measures marked a significant improvement in the allocation of assistance to blacks. Modified AA.

88T6683

Heaton, Tim B. & Hoppe, Caroline (Demographic Research Inst Brigham Young U, Provo 84602). Widowed and Married: Comparative Change in Living Arrangements, 1900-1980. Social Science History. 1987, 11, 3, fall, 261-280.

* Recent changes in sociodemographics have greatly affected the likelihood that older persons will live alone. The availability of institutionalized support & rising incomes have enabled the elderly to maintain preferred living arrangements, changing norms have altered preferences in living arrangements, & demographic shifts have increased exposure to the risk of residing alone. An analysis of 1950 & 1981 US census data & evidence from previously published studies reveals that while married & widowed elderly have demonstrated similar increases in the tendency to live alone, these shifts have been different for men & women. Between 1900 & 1980 widows & married women experienced nearly identical changes in the likelihood of remaining independent. However, the increase was smaller for widowers than for married men. The changing living arrangements of the aged demonstrate some continuity in traditional sources of support in old age, as well as important societal shifts in household composition. 4 Tables, 1 Appendix, 28 References. Modified AA.

88T6684

Hendricks, Jon & Leedham, Cynthia A. (Dept Sociology U Kentucky, Lexington KY 40506). Making Sense of Literary Aging: Relevance of Recent Gerontological Theory. Journal of Aging Studies. 1987, 1, 2, summer, 187-208.

* Literature provides rich resources for interpretation of the meaning of aging in cross-cultural & historical circumstances. A theoretically informed understanding of such literature should be rooted in contextual understanding of literature as an art form, including: considerations of style, genre, & intentions of authors & of audiences, an awareness of perspectives of analysts, & explanatory frameworks drawn from gerontology. Early theories in gerontology focus on the individual level, taking structure as a given. Second generation models modernization & age stratification focus on structure excluding the individual. Recent frameworks political-economic approaches cognizant of intentionality & structurally informed social-psychological perspectives address the confluence of individual & structural factors. A hermeneutic-dialectical framework incorporates the dynamic interplay between structural factors, individual meaning-giving, & action. To illustrate, five brief vignettes from cross-cultural literature are analyzed, drawing on recent gerontological theory. A hermeneutic-dialectical approach to literature provides a forum for debate, research, & theory-building, rather than an overarching model of aging in cross-cultural context. 99 References. HA.

88T6685

Iijima, Yuko Nakayama (Iowa State U, Ames 50010). Incidence of Poverty among Elderly Men and Women. * Dissertation Abstracts International. 4 The Humanities and Social Sciences. 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1889-A-1890-A.

Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8721895.

88T6686

Kahana, Eva F., Kahana, Boaz & Young, Rosalie (Elderly Care Research Center Case Western Reserve U, Cleveland OH 44106). Strategies of Coping and Postinstitutional Outcomes. Research on Aging. 1987, 9, 2, June, 182-199.

* The relationship between diverse coping strategies & well-being among newly institutionalized elderly is examined using data from a 4-wave longitudinal study of 253 older adults entering 14 long-term care facilities in 2 large midwestern US cities. The nature of coping & the stability of coping strategies from the preinstitutional to 3-month postinstitutional period are explored based on information obtained during interviews &

SOCIOLOGIA DEL LAVORO/ 29

LAVORO E NON-LAVORO

Condizione sociale e spiegazione della società

A. Bagnasco, M.L. Bianco, G. Bonazzi
L. Bordogna, G.P. Cella, L. Gallino,
E. Invernizzi, H. Kern, A. Mutti, N. Negri,
M. Olagnero, I. Pipau, G. Romagnoli,
S. Scamuzzi, A. Touraine e W. Tousijn

a cura di:

Gian Primo Cella e Paolo Ceri

88T6712

Linka, Allen E., Sanchirico, Andrew & Reed, Mark D. (Dept Sociology, State U New York, Albany 12222). Fear of Crime and Constrained Behavior Specifying and Estimating a Reciprocal Effects Model. ♦ U Social Forces, 1988, 66, 3, Mar, 827-837

* Empirical support for the effects of fear on social behavior is mixed, reflecting two problems: extant research does not control for the negative effect of social behavior on fear while estimating the effect of fear on social behavior, & it assumes that the effect of fear on social behavior is the same for all people. Using a sample from the mid-1970s National Crime Survey (N = 6,500) dataset & simultaneous equation techniques, this issue is addressed. Findings suggest that fear & constrained social behavior are part of a positive escalating loop (fear constrains social behavior which increases fear) & that the strength of the loop is contingent on age. 2 Tables, 26 References. Modified HA

88T6713

Logan, John R. & Messner, Steven F. (State U New York, Albany 12203). Racial Residential Segregation and Suburban Violent Crime. ♦ U Social Science Quarterly, 1987, 68, 3, Sept, 511-527

* An examination of the effects of racial residential segregation on rates of suburban violent crimes. Robert K. Merton's theory of social structure & anomie is used as a starting point for the hypothesis that racial residential segregation will exhibit positive associations with rates of criminal violence in the suburbs. Regression analyses of 1970 & 1980 US census data on the suburban rings of 54 metropolitan areas generally support this hypothesis. The results underscore the utility of considering racial residential segregation as an independent variable with important consequences for metropolitan communities. 4 Tables, 64 References. Modified HA

88T6714

Sacco, Vincent F. (Queen's U, Kingston Ontario K7L 3N6). Public Definitions of Crime Problems and Functionalist Processes: A Reassessment. U La Revue Canadienne de Sociologie et d'Anthropologie / The Canadian Review of Sociology and Anthropology, 1988, 25, 1, Feb, 84-97

* Functionalist theory has provided two distinct interpretations of the implications that crime has for patterns of social order. The first, derived from the writings of Emile Durkheim & George Herbert Mead, emphasizes the functional character of these implications; more recent viewpoints have stressed their divisive nature. An attempt is made to reconcile these positions through an examination of coping strategies that suggest definitions of crime as a private trouble & as a public issue. Employing data from the 1983 Vancouver (British Columbia) Ur Survey (N = 489 interview Rs), the interrelationship between these dimensions is examined & an attempt is made to describe the publics for whom particular definitions of the crime problem are salient. The analysis suggests that both definitions may be correct, but for different segments of the population. This resolution, it is argued, may require a reconsideration of the basic assumptions on which functionalist approaches are predicated. 3 Tables, 35 References. Modified HA

88T6715

Sherard, Regina Ganelle. Fair Press or Trial Prejudice? Perceptions of Criminal Defendants. U Journalism Quarterly, 1987, 64, 2-3, summer-autumn, 337-340

* The effect of criminal trial news coverage on trial outcome is examined from the perspective of those standing to lose the most in the case of prejudicial publicity: the defendants. Interviews with a nonprobability sample of 138 M felons incarcerated at a medium-security correctional facility in Jefferson City, Mo, reveal that most felt the press coverage of their trials had been fair & minimal. Though the majority nonetheless maintained that they had not received a fair trial, blame was placed on a poor defense, not the press. 2 Tables. K. Hyatt

88T6716

Wirtz, Philip W. & Harrell, Adele V. (Dept Management Science, George Washington U, Washington DC 20052). Assaultive versus Nonassaultive Victimization: A Profile Analysis of Psychological Response. ♦ Journal of Interpersonal Violence, 1987, 2, 3, Sept, 264-277

* In-home interview data were used to assess 3 measures of psychological distress at 2 points in time (1 month & 6 months postattack) among both a sample of 196 recent victims of physical assault (rape, domestic assault, & nondomestic assault) & a sample of 77 recent victims of nonassaultive crimes (robbery & burglary), in Tucson, Ariz; the groups were compared using profile analysis. While differences in levels between physical assault victims vs nonassaulted victims were clearly detectable at each of the 2 measurement periods, the profile of mean distress scores of the 2 groups appeared to be parallel at each period. These results suggest that victims of nonassaultive crimes may very well experience the same sort of psychological distress found among victims of assault, but to a lesser degree. 4 Tables, 2 Figures, 31 References. Modified HA

88T6717

Wolf, Rita, Thomason, Tommy & LaRocque, Paul (Texas Christian U, Fort Worth 76129). The Right to Know vs. the Right of Privacy: Newspaper Identification of Crime Victims. U Journalism Quarterly, 1987, 64, 2-3, summer-autumn, 503-507

* To examine possible changes in the way US newspapers treat victim identification, editors or managing editors of 205 daily newspapers were surveyed via mail questionnaire to determine their identification policies. Many Rs said their newspapers evaluate identification on a case-by-case basis, & report that they are offering more protection for private-citizen victims. Many also said they are willing to heed the pleas of the victims, even when their first inclination is to print the names. 3 Tables. Modified AA

88T6718

Zatz, Marjorie S. (School Justice Studies, Arizona State U, Tempe 85287). Chicano Youth Gangs and Crime: The Creation of a Moral Panic. Contemporary Crises, 1987, 11, 2, 129-158.

* The relationship between Chicano gangs, crime, the police, & the Chicano community is complex. Neither the problem of youth gangs nor the specialized police units created to cope with this problem arise in a social vacuum. Rather, both emerge from a particular historical structuring of social, economic, & political relations. An investigation of how & why a "moral panic" arose concerning Chicano youth gangs in Phoenix, Ariz, in the late 1970s & early 1980s is reported. A variety of qualitative & quantitative data from media reports, interviews, & juvenile court records are used to assess whether it was the actual behavior of Chicano youths or the social imagery surrounding them that formed the basis for the gang problem in Phoenix. It is suggested that the image of gangs, especially Chicano gangs, as violent converged with a view of Mexicans & Chicanos as different to create the threat of disorder. In addition, it was in the interests of the police department to discover the gang problem & build an even greater sense of threat so as to acquire federal funding of a specialized unit. 2 Tables, 53 References. AA

48 applied sociology

88T6719

Avruch, Kevin & Black, Peter W. (Dept Anthropology & Sociology, George Mason U, Fairfax VA 22030). A Generic Theory of Conflict Resolution: A Critique. Negotiation Journal, 1987, 3, 1, Jan, 87-96.

Comment, 97-99, Reply, 99-100

* John W. Burton has proposed (Deviance, Terrorism and War, New York: St. Martin's, 1979, & with Sandole, Dennis J. D., see SA 35:1/87R1358) a Kuhnian paradigm shift in the study of conflict, moving from a power/coercion/zero-sum game model of social exchange to one based on individual human needs. A generic, interdisciplinary theory of conlict & its resolution is offered to replace institutional, discipline-based paradigms. This proposition is analyzed, & it is concluded that it contains serious logical & conceptual problems, primarily in its development of a generic theory based on the supposition of universal human needs, most important of which is that of role defense. An alternative strategy is briefly outlined that retains an emphasis on conflict & conflict resolution as social exchanges between individuals rather than between social institutions, but focuses on culture rather than arbitrarily defined, empirically weak conceptions of need. In Expanding the Debate on Generic Theory of Conflict Resolution: A Response to a Critique, John W. Burton & Dennis J. D. Sandole (George Mason U, Fairfax, Va) take issue with

88T6703

Streib, Gordon F. (Dept Sociology U Florida, Gainesville 32611). Old Age in Sociocultural Context: China and the United States. Journal of Aging Studies, 1987, 1, 2, summer, 95-112

† Available data from a variety of social science sources are used to compare how the sociocultural context of China & the US impact differentially on their older populations. Three major determinants specify the theoretical context: economic development (the level of production achieved by an economic system), traditional cultural patterns (norms, roles, relationships), & social control mechanisms (regulatory processes based on the legal & sanctioning systems). These determinants provide a theoretical orientation for analyzing the outcome variables involved in the behavior & adaptation of the old. In US society, cultural norms & values are advantageous for active older persons in good health, particularly those with a favorable economic situation. In contemporary Chinese society, which blends traditional customs with the values of a revolutionary & changing society, there are advantages for the frail elderly. 1 Table, 75 References. HA

88T6704

Vincent, John A., Tibbenham, Alan D. & Phillips, David R. (Dept Sociology U Exeter, EX4 4QJ England). Choice in Residential Care: Myths and Realities. Journal of Social Policy, 1987, 16, 4, Oct, 435-460

† An examination of whether policies enacted & legitimized in the name of "choice" have actually had the effect of increasing the effective choice of service by welfare consumers. A review of interview data collected during 2 1984 surveys of owners/operators of private residential care homes for the elderly in Devon, England ($N = 118+$, & $819+$, respectively) illustrates some of the myths & realities concerning choice in residential accommodations & in other types of elderly welfare provision. Although the expansion of the private sector may seem to have enlarged the range of alternatives available to the elderly, closer examination reveals this not to be the case. In particular, there seems to be major flaws in current policies by which the operation of the Dept of Health & Social Security subsidy directs choice toward residential rather than domiciliary care. It is argued that the key policy debate concerns priorities, i.e., whether resources should be concentrated on providing residential placements for the increasing number of the very disabled elderly or used to increase the alternatives available to larger, more able groups. The former option will require the specialized skills of social workers & other professionals, while the latter can be achieved through market mechanisms. 8 Tables, 37 References. Modified HA

88T6705

Wolfe, Barbara & Gottschalk, Peter (Dept Economics U Wisconsin, Madison 53706). The Distribution of Health Care Financing in the Overall Population and among the Elderly. Social Justice Research, 1987, 1, 3, Sept, 315-328

† Four means of financing health care for the elderly—income tax, payroll tax, direct payments, & insurance premiums—are evaluated with respect to efficiency of utilization, risk sharing across time, risk sharing across people, & equity. A review of published statistics shows that the heavy reliance on direct payments as a means of paying for such health care makes its financial impact on the elderly more regressive than is the case for the nonelderly. 5 Tables, 6 References. Modified HA

47 sociology of crime & victimology

88T6706

Buchholz, Erich (Sektion Rechtswissenschaft Lehrbereich Strafrecht Humboldt U, DDR-1086 Berlin German Democratic Republic). Reasons for the Low Rate of Crime in the German Democratic Republic. Journal of Crime and Social Justice, 1987, 29, 26-42

† Since WWII, statistics indicate that crime has decreased remarkably in the German Democratic Republic, while it has increased in the Federal Republic of Germany. These differences are attributed to living conditions & SF factors pertinent to each society. In East Germany, SF relations have been closely linked with important changes in the sociodemographic structure that have resulted in high levels of social security & social justice, which are important crime deterrents. Also, crime prevention in East Germany is considered to be a task of the whole society. 7 Figures, 7 References. Modified AA

88T6707

Ellis, Lee (Dept Sociology State U North Dakota, Minot 58701). Religiosity and Criminality from the Perspective of Arousal Theory. Journal of Research in Crime and Delinquency, 1987, 24, 3, Aug, 215-232

† In a recent literature review (see SA 34 1/86Q4379), it was concluded that religiosity & criminality are related in at least the following three ways: high probabilities of delinquency & crime are associated with infrequent church attendance, skepticism about the reality of an afterlife, & being Christian (especially Catholic) as opposed to being Jewish. It is argued that arousal theory may explain such relationships better than other explanations offered so far. 2 Figures, 102 References. HA

88T6708

Gansler, B. (U Graz, A-8010 Austria). Gauner und kriminelle Unterschichten. Eine sozialhistorische Betrachtung der Kriminalität vom Zeitalter der Aufklärung bis zum Jahre 1848 (Crooks and Criminal Lower Classes: A Sociohistorical Paper on Criminality in Styria from the Era of Enlightenment to 1848). * Dissertation Abstracts International: C European Abstracts, 1987, 48, 4, winter, 662. (GER) Unavailable from UMI; reference copy at Österreichische Nationalbibliothek, Vienna.

88T6709

Gravel, Pierre Bettez (Northern Illinois U, De Kalb 60115). Review Essay on Social Bandits and Banditry. Journal of Political and Military Sociology, 1987, 15, 2, fall, 285-287

† A review essay on a book edited by Richard Slatta, Bandits (Greenwood Press, 1987 [see listing in IRPS No. 43]), which purports to be a test of Eric Hobsbawm's model of social banditry (no reference given). In a sense, the work succeeds in showing that Hobsbawm's model is invalid for the bandits of Latin America. However, it fails to recognize that Hobsbawm's model is faulty in that it deals with the mythologized version of real bandits. 1 Reference. HA

88T6710

Humphrey, John A. & Palmer, Stuart (U North Carolina, Greensboro 27412). Race, Sex, and Criminal Homicide Offender-Victim Relationships. Journal of Black Studies, 1987, 18, 1, Sept, 45-57

† An examination of some dynamics of the offender-victim relationship in cases of homicide, with focus on characteristics that differentiate black-white & M-F offenses. Data on 985 homicide offenders incarcerated in the NC correctional system during 1972, 1976, & 1977, & demographic data on 943 victims obtained from the NC chief medical examiner's office, reveal many racial/gender differences, including (1) blacks are more likely to kill or be killed by friends than by strangers, & victimize their families less frequently than do whites, (2) wives are the usual victims of M homicides, & (3) intraracial homicide predominates, while interracial acts tend to involve nonprimary relations between offenders & victims. The inordinately high rate of young black Ms killing each other is attributed to the persistent difficulty black Ms have in forming a viable masculine identity; violence becomes a (tragically fatal) way of overcoming alienation, attaining power & control, & developing a sense of manhood. 3 Tables, 22 References. K Hyatt

88T6711

Kercher, Kyle (Dept Sociology U Washington, Seattle 98195). The Causes and Correlates of Crime Committed by the Elderly. Research on Aging, 1987, 9, 2, June, 256-280.

† Some variables that influence the illegal behavior of older persons (age 55+) in the US are examined & compared to those that predict such behavior in younger age groups. A review of the theoretical & empirical literature is presented, & the effects of demographic factors, prior criminal behavior, relationships with significant others/criminal associates, anomalies, & deterrence factors are discussed. Age- & non-age-specific theories of criminal behavior are compared. It is concluded that the causes & correlates of crime do not change as individuals grow older. 109 References. Modified HA

88T6729

Schmabel, Paul (Faculteit Sociale Wetenschappen Rijks U Utrecht, NL-3508 TC Netherlands). Onderzoek doen voor een ander. De betekenis van het onderscheid tussen kwalitatief en kwantitatief onderzoek voor een in opdracht werkend onderzoeksinstituut (Doing Research for Somebody Else: The Meaning of the Difference between Qualitative and Quantitative Research in Contract Work in a Research Institute). ♦ Sociologische Gids, 1987, 34, 6, Nov-Dec, 471-479. (DUT)

† In contract research, such questions as the choice of qualitative or quantitative methods often depend on practical limitations & on the requirements of the sponsoring organization—in other words, on factors external to science. The combination of qualitative & quantitative methods reduces project risk & enhances its impact on decision making. Research institutes that work for a particular sector of society must especially aim at clarifying the problems of their principals, as described by Peter van Hoeseel in "Programmering van beleidsonderzoek" ((Programming of Policy Research) 1985, no other publication data provided) Modified HA

51 juvenile delinquency

88T6730

Abrams, Dominic, Simpson, Amanda & Hogg, Michael A. (Dept Psychology U Kent, Canterbury CT2 7NZ England). Different Views: The Impact of Sex, Area of Residence, and Victimization on Teenagers' Explanations for Delinquency. Journal of Youth and Adolescence, 1987, 16, 4, Aug, 401-413

† Students (N = 32 Fs & 42 Ms) from a comprehensive school in Leeds, England, were administered a questionnaire to assess their understanding of the meanings of delinquency, & to survey their opinions regarding what should be done about it. Results indicate that Rs understood the general meaning of delinquency, but in response to questions on what should be done about it, only 2 suggested strict & punitive detention, 19 advocated punishment, but the remaining 33 thought that social intervention, education, family support, & facilities for recreation would be most effective. 3 Tables, 30 References. F. Rasmussen

88T6731

Gray, Phyllis A. (Iowa State U, Ames 50010). The Relative Effects of Family Factors and Opportunity Factors on Juvenile Delinquency. ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1891-A-1892-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8721888.

88T6732

Jacobs, Mark D. (U Chicago, IL 60628). "Screwing the System and Making It Work": Public Evasion and the Spirit of Modern Tragedy in American Juvenile Justice. ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1902-A. Unavailable from UMI; contact the degree-granting university.

88T6733

Osgood, D. Wayne, Johnston, Lloyd D., O'Malley, Patrick M. & Bachman, Jerald G. (Dept Sociology U Nebraska, Lincoln 68588-0324). The Generality of Deviance in Late Adolescence and Early Adulthood. Am American Sociological Review, 1988, 53, 1, Feb, 81-93

† A report on an analysis of 3 waves of self-report questionnaire data regarding heavy alcohol use, marijuana use, use of other illicit drugs, dangerous driving, & other criminal behavior for a nationally representative sample of white high school seniors (Σ N = 15,000-19,000 Rs in approximately 130 high schools). A relatively stable general involvement in deviance accounted for virtually all association between different types of deviance, but the stability of each behavior could only be explained by equally important & stable specific influences. Thus, theories that treat different deviant behaviors as alternative manifestations of a single general tendency can account for some, but far from all, of the meaningful variance in these behaviors. The only significant influence of one type of deviance on another was that of marijuana use on later use of other illicit drugs. The causal model also revealed interpretable shifts in the associations among these behaviors over the four years following high school. 3 Tables, 2 Figures, 35 References. Modified HA

88T6734

Van Ness, Sheila R. (Kent State U, OH 44242). Theoretical Origins of Predatory Violence Phenomenon: A Study of Juvenile Offenders in Ohio. ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1545-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8719593.

88T6735

Von Cleve, Elizabeth Hahn (U Washington, Seattle 98195). The Effects of Teacher and Parent Training on Early Risk Factors for Delinquency. ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International, A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1545-A-1546-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8713412.

88T6736

Walsh, Anthony, Beyer, J. Arthur & Petee, Thomas A. (Dept Sociology/Anthropology/Criminal Justice Administration Boise State U, ID 83725). Violent Delinquency: An Examination of Psychopathic Typologies. The Journal of Genetic Psychology, 1987, 148, 3, Sept, 385-392

† An attempt is made to determine the combined effects of psychopathy, low intellectual functioning, & love deprivation on violent delinquency, using case file data on all M juvenile delinquents (N = 256) referred for psychological testing in Toledo, Ohio, & Boise, Idaho, between 1980 & 1984. Low-intellectual-functioning psychopaths were significantly more violent than were low- or high-intellectual-functioning nonpsychopaths or high-intellectual-functioning psychopaths. Love deprivation was more strongly related to violence than was psychopathy/intellectual functioning; severely love-deprived, low-intellectual-functioning psychopaths were the most violent. 3 Tables, 25 References. HA the attempt to discern whether generic patterns of behavior are based on genetic or cultural influences, arguing that the matter is irrelevant to a theory of conflict resolution since universal patterns of human behavior exist, a generic approach to conflict is warranted. The necessity of a paradigm shift from power-based to problem-solving approaches is reiterated, & recent examples of such a shift are evidenced in new mediation techniques. In .. And Ayruch and Black Reply, the authors contend that Burton & Sandole have now considerably clarified their portrayal of role defense (though it is different from their original conception). On the other hand, the paradigm shift that they claim is occurring is not supported; rather, apparently new needs-based approaches to conflict resolution are still based on a "thinly disguised" functionalist approach. 17 References. K. Hyatt

88T6720

Beckman, Carl B. (Dept Sociology State U New York Coll, Buffalo 14222), Policy Research at the Congress: A Case Study of a Research Unit at the U.S. Senate, in The American Sociologist, 1987, 18, 4, winter, 340-355.

¶ A case study of the Survey & Statistical Analysis section (SSA) of the U.S. Senate Computer Center, which provides information to the U.S. Congress. Most information processed by the SSA is either gathered or analyzed using sociological research methods. The activities of the SSA, uses of SSA information by the Senate, certain special issues affecting policy research for the Senate (the adversarial nature of the Senate, the unsuitability of Neyman-Pearson hypothesis testing, & the ethics of participating in the misinterpretation of data), & the place of sociology in the activities of the SSA are discussed. Some attention is given to skills utilized by the SSA in conducting its research. 9 References. HA

88T6721

Houglund, James G., Jr. (Dept Sociology U Kentucky, Lexington 40506), External Ties and Program Performance: A Study of Programs for Displaced Homemakers, The Journal of Applied Behavioral Science, 1987, 23, 3, Aug, 413-428.

¶ Appropriate relationships with external actors having important resources is usually necessary for organizations, especially "people-processing" ones providing training & placement services. An effort is made to determine the effects of extraorganizational ties by studying programs for displaced homemakers in Ky, interviewing coordinators of 19 programs in Feb & Mar 1983, & examining management information system data on clients. The findings indicate that rates of job placement & wage levels for clients were not much affected by ties with advisory boards with diverse memberships, positively affected by ties with advisory boards members with business resources, & negatively affected by ties with organizations offering nonbusiness resources. It is concluded that the nature of the external actors with whom organizations establish ties has an impact on program success. 4 Tables, 23 References. HA

88T6722

Jansen, Dorothea (Lehrstuhl Rechtssoziologie und Rechtsphilosophie Ruhr-U Bochum, D-4630 1 Federal Republic Germany), Ein entscheidungstheoretisches Modell zur Analyse von Vermittlungsverfahren und das Konzept der Konfliktnahe (A Decision Theory Model for the Analysis of Mediation and the Concept of Nearness to Conflict), Zeitschrift für Soziologie, 1988, 17, 1, Feb, 3-18 (GER).

¶ In a functional analysis of conflict, Josef Falke & Volkmar Gessner have postulated nearness to conflict as a mechanism for the resolution of disputes ("Konfliktnahe als Massstab für gerichtliche und aussergerichtliche Streitbehandlung" [Nearness to Conflict as a Measure for Judicial and Extra-Judicial Resolution of Disputes] in Alternativen in der Ziviljustiz [Alternatives in Civil Justice], Blankenburg, Erhard, et al [Eds], Köln: Bundesanzeiger, 1982). Here, a model of the mediation process based on decision & game theory is developed to explain the conditions for the acceptance & success of mediation. The model allows for the deductive conclusions of Falke & Gessner within the framework of an individualistic theory. Attention is drawn to the often overlooked role of the mediator & his goals, in order to shed light on the problems & dangers of a policy of institutionalizing mediation as an alternative to the courts. 3 Tables, 84 References. Modified HA

88T6723

Johnson, Doyle Paul, Brown, William R., Hage, Jerald, Lyson, Thomas A., Orthner, Dennis K., Paulson, Steven K., Squires, Gregory D., & Wimberley, Ronald C. (Dept Sociology U South Florida, Tampa 33620), The Challenge of Training in Applied Sociology, in The Amer- ican Sociologist, 1987, 18, 4, winter, 356-368.

¶ It is argued that the challenge of expanding nonacademic employment opportunities for sociologists, & training students for such employment should be seen as an opportunity to demonstrate the relevance of sociological knowledge & expertise to society & to advance the intellectual development of the discipline. Moreover, the achievement of these benefits does not require sacrificing the distinctive intellectual core of sociology as a humanistic liberal arts discipline. To help bridge the gap between academic & nonacademic cultures, several interrelated strategies are suggested that address issues of marketing & public relations, as well as curriculum revision. The internship, as a key feature of applied programs, is crucial in terms of both training students & facilitating contacts with potential employers. 30 References. HA

88T6724

Kraan, J. R., Kwalitatief en kwantitatief onderzoek bij een grote opdrachtgever (Qualitative and Quantitative Research for a Large Organization), in Sociologische Gids, 1987, 34, 6, Nov-Dec, 480-486 (DUT).

¶ Of the 100+ current research projects commissioned by the Dutch Ministry of social welfare, 20% use quantitative methods, 30% use qualitative methods, & 50% combine the two methods. An example of each research primarily aimed at political decision making is briefly described. All three research methods can be politically effective, providing that the results are presented in an acceptable & accessible manner. 3 References. M. Barker

88T6725

Kwasniewicz, Wladyslaw (Jagiellonian U, PL-31-007 Cracow Poland), Problems of Polish Applied Sociology, in The Polish Sociological Bulletin, 1985, 1-4(69-72), 59-72.

¶ Polish sociology has lately turned its attention to its own history & past findings. It is argued that this concern should be directed not only to the orical findings but to applied research. The history of Polish applied sociology is reviewed, & it is argued that applications have been a key determinant of sociology's evolution. W. H. Stoddard

88T6726

Richardson, James T., Swain, K. Gregory, Codega, Jeffrey & Bazzell, Ken (Dept Sociology U Nevada, Reno 89557-0067), Forensic Sociology: Some Cautions and Recommendations, in The American Sociologist, 1987, 18, 4, winter, 385-393.

¶ Experience involving change-of-venue research & jury work in a mass murder case is used as a vehicle for examining a number of problem areas in forensic sociology. Discussed are time pressures, secrecy, special methodological problems, & the issue of researcher privilege & dealing with subpoenas. Recommendations are made to those planning to become involved in forensic sociology, including having access to legal counsel & special precautions to protect confidential sources. 8 References. HA

88T6727

Rossi, Peter H. (Social & Demographic Research Instit U Massachusetts, Amherst 01003), The Overlooked Contributions of Applied Work in Sociology: Who Now Reads S. A. Rice?, in The American Sociologist, 1987, 18, 4, winter, 369-374.

¶ Because so little attention is paid to the history of research methods, eg. the work of Stuart A. Rice, it is easily overlooked that much current research technology originated in applied social research. Such contributions include probability sampling of human populations, many statistical techniques, & general strategies of data collection. The major reason the history of methods has been overlooked is that there are no classics in methods, one would not learn much by reading old methods texts, because the newer texts clearly supersede the "classics." Thus, the development of methods is cumulative, unlike the development of social theory. 1 Reference. HA

88T6728

Sabin, Edward (4717 Hale Haven Dr, Ellicott City MD 21043), Hidden Jobs: Good News for Sociologists, in The American Sociologist, 1987, 18, 4, winter, 394-399.

¶ Applied sociology, if defined broadly enough, is a ray of light for sociology graduates in an otherwise dismal career landscape. This is particularly true in the Washington, DC, metropolitan area. Sociologists' general or liberal arts skills are as valuable, if not more so, as research specialization. Finding a job in government requires a different strategy than a job with a government itself contractor. Unfortunately, in neither case is there a rational path or match-up between a person's skills & finding the job that utilizes these skills. Local knowledge can help in making the match. 10 References. HA

2200 sociology of knowledge

33 sociology of knowledge

88T6737

Arif, Muhammad. The Islamization of Knowledge and Some Methodological Issues in Paradigm Building: The General Case of Social Science with a Special Focus on Economics. ♦ The American Journal of Islamic Social Sciences, 1987, 4, 1, Sept, 51-71

† Scientific justification & methodological validity are provided for the theoretical paradigm & practical research program underlying the Islamization of knowledge as a means of reviving the world leadership of the Islamic Umma, efforts pioneered by Abdūl Hamīd AbuSalaymān & Ismā'īl Rājī al Fārūqī (see, respectively, "Islamization of Knowledge with Special Reference to Political Science," The American Journal of Islamic Social Sciences, 1985, 2, 2, Dec, 263-289; & "Islamization of Knowledge Problem, Principles, and Perspective," Islam Source and Purpose of Knowledge, (Herndon, Va: International Instit of Islamic Thought, 1987) Rationale is offered for replacing the Western secular approach to knowledge & reason, which is based on materialism, with an Islamic one, which is guided by an epistemology of revelation; the complementarity between Islam & logical positivism is discussed. The role of social scientists in Islamizing knowledge within their own disciplines is examined, & compared to that of theoretical physicists, who use the concept of idealization as a first step toward meaningful paradigm building. This must be the case in the social sciences as well, but an idealized vision of the paradigm will first require stratification, ie, an analysis of the primary concepts generated by social science's philosophical foundations & their behavioral implications for the object of study. The methodology of stratification is demonstrated using the case of the Islamic, capitalist, & socialist economic systems, & criteria for evaluating the performance of such systems are proposed. K Hyatt

88T6738

Bakan, Mildred, Arendt and Heidegger: The Episodic Intertwining of Life and Work. Philosophy and Social Criticism, 1987, 12, 1, spring, 71-98

† An examination of the significance for Hannah Arendt's intellectual development of her relationship with Martin Heidegger, as revealed in Elizabeth Young-Bruehl's Hannah Arendt, for Love of the World (New Haven, Conn: Yale U Press, 1982) Arendt's Jewishness was of crucial importance to her life. Her relationship with Heidegger had two active periods: from 1924, when she became his student, until 1933, when he joined the Nazi Party; & from 1950 on. The significance of their relationship for their work in philosophy is explored, as is the political context of their relationship. The two reflect two basic traditions in Western philosophy: Heidegger that of understanding human society on the model of nature, Arendt that of understanding it on the model of person-to-person relationships. W H Stoddard

88T6739

Barrett, Michèle (City U London, EC1V 0HB England), The Concept of 'Difference'. ♦ Feminist Review, 1987, 26, summer, 29-41

* Ways that the concept of "difference" has been deployed in recent feminist writing & debate are explored. It is shown that difference has historically figured in feminist debates as one side of a political tension in which equality—usually interpreted as androgyny—is the other side. Two competing interpretations of what difference means in the context of feminist politics are identified: (1) the idea of differences between Ms & Fs, & (2) a more deconstructive model that focuses on differences within the category of woman itself as well as within specific social existences of Fs. Difficulties with reconciling these models are discussed in relation to three uses of the difference concept: as experiential diversity, as positional meaning; & psychoanalytically, as sexual difference. It is concluded that these perspectives are irreconcilable & should be identified separately. 30 References. K Hyatt

88T6740

Bérend, Jacqueline, Sociologie de la connaissance et psychanalyse: autour du concept de représentation (The Sociology of Knowledge and Psychoanalysis. Concerning the Concept of Representation). Cahiers Internationaux de Sociologie, 1987, 34, 83, July-Dec, 393-409. (FRE)

† An investigation of the contribution that psychoanalysis can make to the sociology of knowledge. It is necessary to analyze the creations of the mind not only with reference to their concrete social basis but also taking into account their relationship with the interiorization process. In this context, various aspects of psychic representations are discussed: representation & desire, the origin of the self/other dichotomy; & the relationship to reality. 22 References. Modified HA

88T6741

Conover, Pamela Johnston, Feldman, Stanley & Knight, Kathleen (U North Carolina, Chapel Hill 27514), The Personal and Political Underpinnings of Economic Forecasts. ♦ U American Journal of Political Science, 1987, 31, 3, Aug, 559-583

† Considerable research has been performed on the impact of prospective evaluations of the economy on vote choice, but little attention has been given to how such evaluations are formed. Panel data collected by telephone interviews with residents of Lexington, Ky (N = 915 in Apr 1982, 579 in Nov 1982, 426 in Apr 1983) are used to test a model of the formation of prospective evaluations of inflation & unemployment. Results indicate that retrospective assessments of economic conditions do not greatly influence economic forecasts; instead, they are shaped by personal economic circumstances & partisan assessments of governmental performance. The political implications of these findings are discussed. 4 Tables, 1 Appendix, 28 References. Modified HA

88T6742

Kniss, Fred (U Chicago, IL 60637), Toward a Theory of Ideological Change: The Case of the Radical Reformation. ♦ U Sociological Analysis, 1988, 49, 1, spring, 29-38

† The validity of treating ideology as an independent variable along with economic & political variables in theories of social change is supported. Complementary theories of economic, political, & ideological change should enrich grand theories of social change like those of Max Weber. The logical/analytical structures of Immanuel Wallerstein's theory of the world economic system (eg, see The Capitalist World Economy, (Cambridge: Cambridge U Press, 1979) & Randall Collins's theory of geopolitical change (eg, see IRPS No. 39/87c00852) are used to propose some elements of a theory of ideological change. Finally, some applications of the theory to the study of the radical Reformation are suggested. 1 Figure, 35 References. Modified HA

88T6743

Krieger, Nancy (Dept Biomedical & Environmental Health Sciences School Public Health U California, Berkeley 94720), Shades of Difference: Theoretical Underpinnings of the Medical Controversy on Black/White Differences in the United States, 1830-1870. International Journal of Health Services, 1987, 17, 2, 259-278.

† The mutual influence of scientific theory & ideology is explored through a review of the medical literature on racial differences & slavery published in the US from 1831 to 1865. Opposing MDs invoked the same science, but relied on contrary assumptions to reach antagonistic conclusions. Reductionist, biological determinist, & ahistorical premises supported the majority view that innate racial differences led to black bondage & racial health disparities; antireductionist & historicist approaches supported the minority view that social factors rooted in the planters' need for cheap labor explained both. Historical changes in the terms of the debate are described, & it is argued that it offers a parallel to current controversies on racial differences in disease. Modified HA

88T6744

Langsdorf, Lenore (Dept Philosophy U Texas, Arlington 76019), Ethical and Logical Analysis as Human Sciences. Human Studies, 1988, 11, 1, Jan, 43-63

† R. Zaner's presentation at the Society for Phenomenology & the Human Sciences ("Is 'Ethicist' Anything to Call a Philosopher?") (see SA 33 2/8506728) raised the question of identifying the nature of his activities as an ethicist on a medical faculty. Explored here is the proposal that his activities could be characterized as critical thinking, based not

Education and Society is a new journal which will publish original research and contributions dealing with major up-to-date issues concerning the relationship between education and society. It will provide a new forum, where teachers and scholars throughout the world, working in education and related areas, will be able to examine and evaluate current issues and problems in education and society from a broad and balanced social, cultural and economic perspective. The journal, by focusing on both education and society, hopes to appeal to many educators and scholars from diverse educational backgrounds. Each issue of the journal will contain a special symposium concerned with some of the more immediate problems affecting education, educational systems and society in a changing world.

The journal should be of interest to teachers, academics, research scholars, educational administrators and consultants, students in teacher training institutes and social workers.

Contributions are invited (normally no more than 5000 words, typed double spaced in two copies) and should be sent to the Editor, Education and Society, James Nicholas Publishers, P.O. Box 244, Albert Park, Australia, 3206.

In order to ensure that articles are of the highest quality all contributions are submitted to at least two independent referees before acceptance for publication.

The journal will appear twice a year, in June and December. These two issues will constitute one volume. An annual index will be included in the December issue.
ISSN 0726-2655

Subscription rates (payable in advance): one year US$48.00
Individuals and elementary and secondary schools US$24.00 (for accelerated surface postage and packing add US$5.00 per issue. Orders and remittances should be addressed to:

James Nicholas Publishers, P.O. Box 244, Albert Park, Australia, 3206

EDITOR Dr Joseph Zajda CONSULTING EDITORS

Professor Orlando Albornoz, University of Venezuela
Professor John Eggleston, University of Warwick
Professor Nigel Grant, University of Glasgow
Professor Henry Levin, Stanford University
Professor David Nyberg, State University of New York (Buffalo)
Professor Douglas Sloan, Columbia University
Professor Seth Spaulding, International Bureau of Education Geneva
Dr Joan Whitehead, University of Cambridge
Dr John Wilson, University of Oxford
Professor Charles Willie, Harvard University

RECENT AND FORTHCOMING ISSUES

Martin Carnoy Education and the Theories of the State
Edmund King Changing Education for a Changing Society
John Eggleston Schooling and Work
Otto Newman Leisure and Social Change
Nick Kach Curriculum Reform in Alberta
Arthur Jensen Factors Influencing Academic Achievement
Kazim Bacchus Integration of School and Community Learning
Paul Butterfield Education in South Africa
Douglas Ray Impact of Research on Canadian Education
John Hunt Structure of School Control
H. Sui Shapiro Education and the Crisis of the Welfare
Nigel Grant Impact of Comparative Education on Society
Michael Grady & Charles Willie Community Participation in Education
Gunnar Berg The School Organization
Joseph Zajda Moral Curriculum in Soviet Secondary Schools
Ivan Illich On Education

EDUCATION AND SOCIETY

ORDER FORM

Please enter my subscription to Education and Society

We enclose $

Name

Address

Signed

Date

88T6752

Wright, Theodore P., Jr. (State U New York, Albany 12203), The Sociology of Knowledge: Jewish and Muslim Impact on American Social Sciences. ♦ The American Journal of Islamic Social Sciences, 1987, 4, 1, Sept., 89-100.

* Some reasons underlying the disproportionate role of Jewish as compared to Muslim scholars in the development of the social sciences, particularly after WWII in North America, are discussed. A survey of members (N not provided) of the 10 most prestigious US political science departments between 1948 & 1968 revealed that the proportion of white Anglo-Saxon Protestant faculty decreased by 50%, while that of Jews tripled; Muslim representation remained minimal. Consequences of this Jewish dominance for US foreign policy in the Middle East & for shaping the concepts, paradigms, jargon, attitudes, & values that guided social scientists, particularly in their comprehension of, & dealings with, the Muslim world, are discussed. It is predicted that the influence of Muslims could change as a result of the oil situation in the 1970s, increased Muslim self-confidence, & a movement of Jewish social scientists into other more lucrative career areas. Muslim academicians, however, must be able to demonstrate the relevance & utility of classical Islamic concepts & practices to the modern world & non-Muslim societies. K. Hyatt

52 history of ideas

88T6753

Buchanan, Allen E., Marx, Morality, and History: An Assessment of Recent Analytical Work on Marx, Ethics, 1987, 98, 1, Oct., 104-136

* Anglo-American philosophers are giving renewed attention to the philosophical thought of Karl Marx. The major work within this new approach is reviewed. Two central issues are emphasized: the validity of the historical-materialist model of historical explanation, & the question of whether moral concepts play a significant role in Marx's critique of capitalism & his account of revolutionary motivation. An agenda is outlined for future research in analytical Marxism. 1 Figure, 43 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T6754

Kettler, David, Meja, Volker & Stehr, Nico (Dept Political Studies Trent U, Peterborough Ontario K9J 7B8), Karl Mannheim et "Le conservatisme" (Karl Mannheim's "Conservatism"), Cahiers Internationaux de Sociologie, 1987, 34, 83, July-Dec., 245-256 (FRE)

Translated by Tufan Orel.

* A translation of an article originally published in English in the Newsletter of the International Society for the Sociology of Knowledge (1983, 9, Aug., 1-2). The full text of Karl Mannheim's Le Conservatisme ([Conservatism], Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1985 [1925]), which was discovered only recently, sheds light on both the historical movement of conservatism & the complexity of Mannheim's political positions. Mannheim's work approaches conservatism from the standpoints of its internal structure & juridical & philological content, & the history of ideas. Le Conservatisme is at the same time an excellent monograph on the sociology of knowledge. Modified HA

88T6755

Lewin, Kurt, The Conflict between Aristotelian and Galileian Modes of Thought in Contemporary Psychology, Contemporary Psychoanalysis, 1987, 23, 4, Oct., 517-554

¶ (Originally published in Journal of General Psychology, 1931, 5, 141-177.) The transition in the history of physics from Aristotelian to Galileian modes of thought offers a model for psychology. Aristotelian concepts are essentially evaluative, separating phenomena that reflect a thing's inner nature from those imposed by outside forces; they consider lawfulness as manifested in events that always or often occur, but not in individual events, & they emphasize classification. Galileo shifted to homogenization of the physical world & to reliance on conditional-genetic concepts. An examination of current psychology reveals Aristotelian tendencies; the need to attain a Galileian approach in psychology is argued. Some examples are given of how such an approach might be attained. 1 Table, 2 Figures. W. H. Stoddard

88T6756

Ravinder, Shashi (Traffic Authority New South Wales, 56 Rothschild Ave Rosebury 2018 Australia), Androgyny: Is It Really the Product of Educated, Middle-Class Western Societies?, Journal of Cross-Cultural Psychology, 1987, 18, 2, June, 208-220

¶ Scale data measuring the sex-role identity of Coll students in India & Australia (N = 115 & 216, respectively) are used to test the hypothesis that androgyny is the product of educated, Mc, Western societies. Results reveal that sex role transcendence, rather than androgyny, is the product of Western societies, eg, Australia. Androgyny, on the other hand, was found to be more predominant in the traditional cultures of India, & was particularly predominant among Indian Ms. 3 Tables, 32 References. Modified HA on formal logic but on phenomenology. A definition is offered of critical thinking, & its distinctness from logic is defended. An argument is presented for the classification of Zaner's activities as critical thinking. More specifically, it is proposed that clinical ethics as Zaner practices it relates to ethics as critical thinking relates to logic. The implications of this identification for the practice of ethical & logical analysis as human sciences are explored. 38 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T6745

Quinney, Richard (Northern Illinois U., DeKalb 60115). Beyond the Interpretive: The Way of Awareness. ♦UM Sociological Inquiry, 1988, 58, 1, winter, 101-116

¶ Thought by itself is incapable of arriving at truth. In fact, thought of the discursive form is a source of our incapacity to know. Knowledge including interpretation is conditioned by the limitations of Western rational thought. However, within the esoteric or perennial tradition there is the possibility of an awareness that goes beyond the conditionality of thought. The path to awareness involves a transformation in our being, a transformation that requires a mind that is unattached & compassionate & allows a healing of the separation between the observer & the observed. In mindfulness in attention to our oneness with all things we become aware of things as they really are, here & now. 33 References. HA

88T6746

Roche, Maurice (Sheffield U., S10 2TN England). Lived Time and Clockwork Culture: Elliot Jaques and the Study of Time in the Human Sciences. ♦UM Philosophy of the Social Sciences, 1987, 17, 3, Sept., 443-451

¶ A review of a book by Elliot Jaques, The Form of Time (London: Crane Russak & Heinemann, 1982 (see listing in IRPS No. 43)). Jaques places the concept of time at the foundation of the human sciences, offering an analysis of the form of time in monistic but not physicalistic terms. He develops a two-dimensional time concept: intention & clocktime, which he argues provides for the most objective accounts of human activity. It is difficult to see how this conception can be integrated with his Gestalt-based approach to epistemology & cognitive psychology; his account of the relationship between qualitative time & clocktime is open to question as well. Nonetheless, Jaques's account is rich & intelligent & raises important questions about its subject. W. H. Stoddard

88T6747

Singleton, Rivers, Jr. (School Life & Health Sciences Center Science & Culture U. Delaware, Newark 19716). Creationists versus Evolution: A Paradigm of Science and Society Interaction. ♦UM Perspectives in Biology and Medicine, 1987, 30, 3, spring, 324-344

¶ Since the early twentieth century in this country, a basic conflict has existed between proponents of fundamentalist religious views of biological origins (creationists) & modern science that alternates between quiescence & agitation. In the early 1980s, the conflict went through one of its active phases, generating a great deal of heat & vitriol at the local, state, & national levels, & raising classical issues, having a profound effect on school textbooks & on local school science curricula, & raising several new & different issues about science & its method. Explored are the historical development of the controversy, the nature of the creationist position & claims, the effects of these claims on our educational system, the way the controversy has been dealt with in the legal arena, & what the controversy has to say about the nature of science. It is concluded that the controversy has important lessons for both science & society. These lessons involve society's perceptions of the nature & limits of science as well as the role that science plays in modern society. 44 References. Modified AA

88T6748

Smith, Michael E. (Dept. Sociology & Anthropology Loyola U., Chicago 60626). Archaeology and the Aztec Economy: The Social Scientific Use of Archaeological Data. ♦Social Science History, 1987, 11, 3, fall, 237-259

¶ A discussion of the nature of archaeological data & its potential contributions to general social science themes. Focus is on economic interpretations of archaeological research on the Aztec state in sixteenth-century Mexico. Four advances in archaeological methods are singled out: household archaeology, trade & exchange, intensive agriculture, & obsidian technology. These are discussed for each of three types of archaeological field work on the Aztecs: settlement pattern studies, intensive surface studies, & excavation. It is concluded that anthropological archaeology is beginning to make important contributions to social science & theories in a number of areas. 69 References. AA

88T6749

Spicker, Stuart F. (Dept. Community Medicine & Health School Medicine U. Connecticut, Farmington 06032). An Introduction to the Medical Epistemology of Georges Canguilhem: Moving Michel Foucault. ♦The Journal of Medicine and Philosophy, 1987, 12, Nov., 397-411

¶ Although US philosophers & MDs are generally familiar with the writings of Claude Bernard (1813-1878)—especially his Introduction to the Study of Experimental Medicine (1865)—the medical epistemology of Georges Canguilhem, born in 1904, is virtually unknown in speaking nations. While indebted to Bernard for his conceptual methods to be employed in the acquisition of medical knowledge, Canguilhem (On the Normal and the Pathological, Dordrecht, Del., 1978) radically reformulates Bernard's concepts of disease, illness, & pathology. Contemporary exhortations to medical professionals & medical students to pay more attention to the whole patient on significance in working through the writings of Canguilhem, of importance is the relation that obtains between a patient's unique pathology & the proper drug regimen that is required. 11 References. HA

88T6750

van der Borg, Meerten B. (U. Leiden, NL-2313 AV Netherlands). Problem of Nihilism: A Sociological Approach. ♦UM Sociological Analysis, 1988, 49, 1, spring, 1-16

¶ The critique of nihilism, defined as nothingness, caused by a complete lack of authentic values & true ends, has almost completely disappeared from the Western intellectual discourse. Examining the problem of nihilism, one discovers that there is no common property that persons or society as a whole can be called nihilistic. Therefore, nihilism is studied, not as an existing thing, but as a label. Since the concept of nihilism was first used in the context of the process of modernization, the time of the French revolution, some major figures from the sociological tradition are selected for a case study: prerevolutionary writers, Charles de Montesquieu, François Marie Voltaire & Jean-Rousseau, & postrevolutionary writers, Joseph de Maistre, A. Tocqueville, Auguste Comte, & Emile Durkheim. They all label nihilistic people who were, in one way or another, their adversaries of modernization. 60 References. Modified HA

88T6751

Valone, James J. (Dept. Philosophy Bellarmine Coll., Louisville 40205). Against Epistemology: A Constructive Look at Adorno's Construction. ♦Human Studies, 1988, 11, 1, Jan., 87-97

¶ A review essay on a book by Theodore W. Adorno, Against Epistemology: A Metacritique (Domingo, Willis [Tr.], Cambridge, MA: Press, 1983 (see listing in IRPS No. 43)), analyzing Adorno's attempt to show how epistemology betrays experience. Adorno employs Husserl's work as a model in his anticipation of the movement toward the end of epistemology, & places in a critical light Husserl's analyses that pure phenomenology is not epistemology. Employing Husserl's earlier work, Adorno's reflections address the antinomy of the Husserlian search for a pure beginning, a presuppositionless ground. The issue is not what the content of the final ground is, but the validity & legitimacy of such a foundation. Within this perspective regarding phenomenology & its epistemological model as an producing, Adorno embarks on a critique of specific thematic elements of Husserl's work that exemplify concretely the points the former is making. These thematic elements include: a critique of logical absolutism; suspension of epistemological concepts in dialectics; & essence & particularity. Adorno's conclusion in light of these considerations is that the Husserlian phenomenology is one of absolute security based on the reduction of private property. This security is caught in the reduction of the world to consciousness. The paradox & antinomies of idealist phenomenology could only be sublated if consciousness were to rule over being, but idealism asserts the groundedness as founded consciousness, & not in the material historical conditions & relations themselves. Adorno's interpretation & critique of Husserl's phenomenology are idealistic, yet this train in Husserl's thought should not be distinctive way of doing philosophy mapped out by phenomenology. Moreover, it is argued that the end of traditional & idealist epistemology should hardly be identified with the end of all epistemology. A.

2300 community development

17 sociology of communities & regions

88T6757

Alafeni, Salim (Sociology Development Research Centre U Bielefeld, D-4800 Federal Republic Germany), Processes of Change and Continuity in Kinship System and Family Ideology in Bedouin Society, ♦ Sociologia Ruralis, 1987, 27, 4, 323-340

* Personal experience as a member of a Bedouin tribe in Israel is used to describe changes now occurring among the Negev Bedouins. Three main processes are examined: tribal kinship systems & Islamic ideology, monopolization of the tribal kinship system by the state, & the role of kinship ties & family ideology in Bedouin society. The continuity of the tribal kinship system & ideology of descent are discussed in the context of two sedentarization projects (Tel Sheba, established in 1966, & Rahat, 1978). The planning of settlements for Bedouin tribes without regard to the tribal composition & sociocultural background of Bedouin society has generated intratribal conflicts & social disintegration. The need for intensive research on kinship systems & tribal organization in Ru tribal society is evident. 2 Tables, 2 Figures, 27 References. Modified HA

88T6758

Dooley, David, Catalano, Ralph & Serxner, Seth (U California, Irvine 92717), Economic Development and Community Mental Health, Prevention in Human Services, 1987, 5, 2, spring-summer, 91-115

* A description of the processes believed to affect the performance of regional economies & the mechanisms that might connect these processes to the etiology of behavioral disorder. The initial findings of a survey of approximately 6,000 Los Angeles (Calif) County residents conducted between 1978 & 1982 regarding these linkages are summarized. Implications for economic policy & for the provision of mental health services are outlined. 1 Figure, 62 References. Modified HA

88T6759

Fken, Piet & Moens, Erica, Argwaan en afweer achter Artis (Suspicion and Defense in Public Space), ♦ Sociologische Gids, 1988, 35, 1, Jan-Feb, 57-67 (DUT)

* As a consequence of vast restoration activities in the 1980s, a rough terrain has developed behind the Amsterdam Zoo (Artis) in the Netherlands. Visitors to the zoo are often placed in an embarrassing situation when trying to park their cars in this area, which has been transformed into an eccentric colony of squatters. Observations were conducted of visitors' (& not provided) reactions during such confrontations in an attempt to understand how humans cope with the complexities of modern Ur life. Though the perspective employed by Lyn Lofland in A World of Strangers: Order and Action in Urban Public Space (New York: Basic Books, 1973) was readily applicable, its concepts proved to be very thin in the specific area of "embarrassing" situations. 10 References. Modified HA

88T6760

Gaston, Mauricio & Kennedy, Marie (c/o Kennedy Coll Public & Community Service U Massachusetts, Boston 02125), Capital Investment or Community Development? The Struggle for Land Control by Boston's Black and Latino Community, Antipode, 1987, 19, 2, Sept., 178-209.

* A case study of Roxbury, the center of Boston's (Mass) black & Latino community, reveals trends that are increasingly common in US inner-city areas. Having suffered from decades of disinvestment by both private & public sectors, Roxbury's residents are now threatened with displacement, as a result of new investment. Historical analysis of Boston's development shows that Roxbury's imminent reinvestment boom is a logical consequence of years of neglect: on the one hand, selective direction of investment to Boston's downtown has saturated the downtown; on the other hand, disinvestment in Roxbury has led to a high rate of vacant buildings & empty land, much of it held by the city government, making Roxbury a natural target for development. City officials, feeling the pressure of a continuing fiscal crisis, have sought to broker $750 million in private investment in Roxbury. This plan, formulated without community input, would result in massive displacement of current residents & would create housing unaffordable to the vast majority of black Ur households. However, leaders of the black & Latino communities have organized broad coalitions aimed at reasserting community representation. Participant observation research indicates that these community initiatives offer useful models for other cities. 1 Table, 24 References. Modified AA

88T6761

Geisler, Charles C. & Mitsuda, Hisayoshi (Dept Rural Sociology Cornell U, Ithaca New York 14853-7801), Mobile-Home Growth, Regulation, and Discrimination in Upstate New York, U Rural Sociology, 1987, 52, 4, winter, 532-543

* The recent surge in mobile-home (or "manufactured") housing within the nation's Ru housing stock reflects the accelerating costs of single-home alternatives in the US. Significantly, in both 1970 & 1980, mobile-home growth in Ru areas surpassed that in Ur areas. Here, 1980 Census data & current zoning ordinance listings for 92 towns in northern NY are employed to examine the influence of community SC composition on both de facto & de jure discrimination against such housing. The positive influence of population growth on mobile-home occurrence is shown to be conditioned by intercommunity SC composition. Furthermore, SC overshadows population pressure as a factor contributing to the formal regulation of mobile homes. These findings amplify sociological discourse on SC & property & have practical implications for the Ru homeless. 3 Tables, 39 References. HA

88T6762

Jones, Anne M. (School Geography Cambridgeshire Coll Arts & Technology, Cambridge England), Kin Relations in a French Alpine Community: A Preliminary Investigation, ♦ Sociologia Ruralis, 1987, 27, 4, 304-322.

* A. Plakans (Kinship in the Past, An Anthropology of European Family Life 1500-1900, Oxford: Basil Blackwell, 1984) & D. I. Kertzer (see SA 34 2/86Q5949) have proposed approaches to household structure that move beyond the standard Ru sociology typology: this new perspective is applied to documentary data from a parish in the Savoy region of France that permit the reconstruction of family households & inter-household linkages since the sixteenth century. Rather than continual narrowing of the boundaries of family households, there is a surprising survival of complex forms. 1 Table, 3 Figures, 36 References. Modified HA

88T6763

O'Neill, Brian Juan, Pul Eliya in the Portuguese Mountains: A Comparative Essay on Kinship Practices and Family Ideology, ♦ Sociologia Ruralis, 1987, 27, 4, 278-303

* The concept of pul eliya (land-water-kinship linkages) developed by Edmund Leach (Pul Eliya: A Village in Ceylon: A Study of Land Tenure and Kinship, Cambridge: Cambridge U Press, 1961) is applied to a hamlet in the northeastern Portuguese highlands of Trás-os-Montes on the basis of fieldwork conducted in the 1970s. Emphasis is given to Leach's concept of internal contradictions. Examples of watering rotation systems & bilateral partible inheritance elucidate to what degree specific ideologies of equality are reproduced or contradicted by concrete practical activity. Not one but two social systems & ideologies operate simultaneously through the subtle separation of a wealthy core of inheritors from a larger category of socially denigrated servants, shepherds, day-laborers, & bastards. Kinship theory seems inadequate to offer a coherent explanation for this living museum of irregular, Caribbean-style alternative family ties. 68 References. Modified HA

88T6764

Rigby, Ken & Vreugdenhil, Anthea (School Social Sciences South Australian Inst Technol, Adelaide 5000), The Relationship between Generalized Community Satisfaction and Residential Social Status, Journal of Social Psychology, 1987, 127, 4, Aug., 381-390.

* Questionnaire & scale data from 3 groups of Rs living in Adelaide, South Australia, in high-, middle-, & low-status suburbs (N = 181, 227, & 230, respectively) are analyzed to evaluate residential satisfaction. Contrary to adaptation theory, mean satisfaction was significantly great-

COMMUNICATION

VOL. 9 N° 1

ÉTÉ 87

Les retransmissions sportives à la télévision : pour une approche cognitive Michel Colin

Le vidéoclip et Dziga Vertov
Paul Warren

Les formes du discours sexuel dans la nouvelle vidéo masculine Thomas Waugh

Le vidéoclip : entre le postmodernisme et le « star-system »
Yves Picard

Cinéma et télévision : un vieux couple en phase de renouveau conjugal
Robert Saucier

RECHERCHE

Du Baroque et de la vidéographie
Manon Blanchette

LECTURES

Antoine CUCCA, L'Écriture du scénario

Michel CHION, Écrire un scénario

Pierre JENN, Georges Méliès cinéaste

Michel LAROUCHE, Alexandro Jodorowsky. Cinéaste panique

Germain LACASSE, L'Historiographe. Les débuts du spectacle cinématographique au Québec

Pascal BONITZER, DÉCADRAGES : peinture et cinéma

DÉRIVES 52, Cinéma québécois : nouveaux courants, nouvelles approches

À SIGNALER

 ÉDITIONS
SAINT-MARTIN

2400 policy, planning, forecasting

54 planning & forecasting

88T6766

Beit, Daniel. The World in 2013. UN New Society, 1987-88, 82, 1303-05. 18 Dec-7 Jan, 31-38.

* An attempt is made to identify significant structural changes in world society, to provide a framework for analysis of the type of world that will exist in 2013. Three levels of analysis are used: structural, political, & cultural. A matrix of activities is identified that frame the renewable & reciprocal exchanges & transactions between people, & that give some degree of stability. Changes in structural arrangements pose questions that must be addressed by the political order. Demographic & technological patterns can be quite disruptive & may create shock. While structural changes are embedded in a world economy, political orders are still national. The tension between these two, & the efforts of the nation-state to cope with the strong tides of the international economy frame the policy issues of the next twenty-five years. F. Rasmussen.

88T6767

Edwards, Ward & von Winterfeldt, Detlof (Social Science Research Instit U Southern California, Los Angeles 90089-1111), Public Values in Risk Debates, Risk Analysis, 1987, 7, 2, June, 141-158.

* A strategy is proposed to improve communication & clarify issues in public debates concerning risk regulation. Through the use of multi-attribute utility techniques (MAUT), public controversies can be resolved through quantifying & analyzing complex individual preferences among multiple decision alternatives, thus facilitating option invention & consensus. Six steps in structuring & clarifying values are identified, & demonstrated via case studies of offshore oil drilling in Calif, structuring energy objectives in the Federal Republic of Germany, & water control in Ariz. The possible uses of public value inputs in the form of a value tree or complete MAUT in the process of resolving debates about risk-related issues are considered. 3 Tables, 8 Figures, 18 References. K. Hyatt.

88T6768

Lagergren, Marten (Swedish Council Planning & Coordination Research-Forskningsrådsnämnden, Box 6710 S-113 35 Stockholm), Employment, Economy and Care in Sweden by the Year 2000, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 2, 103-110.

* An analysis of the relationships in Sweden between employment, economy, & care, based on the final report of the "Care in Society" project sponsored by the Swedish Secretariat for Future Studies (Lagergren, M., et al. Time to Care-Final Report of the Care in Society Project, London: Pergamon Press, 1984). The changed economic outlook for Sweden creates problems for employment as well as for public care systems. Employment in the future will be affected by the growing I.F., the changing structure of the labor market; the expansion of public care systems, & the shortened work week. Reduced working hours will also create more favorable conditions for the informal care sector. A conscription system for care might solve problems of care & employment in the future. 6 Tables, 4 Figures, 5 References. Modified HA.

88T6769

Leeuw, Frans L. (Instit Social Policy Research U Leiden, NL-2312 AR Netherlands), On the Acceptability and Feasibility of Pronatalist Population Policy in the Netherlands: An Empirical Approach, European Journal of Population/Revue européenne de démographie, 1987, 2, 3-4, May, 307-334.

* Survey data on the social acceptability of pronatalist policy in the Netherlands is analyzed based on three studies: 1981 (N = 5,075), 1983 (N = 952), & 1984 (N = 2,057). Factors relating to the social acceptability of pronatalist policies are identified & discussed. Although a number of policy measures appear to be acceptable in the Netherlands, their chances of being implemented are small given both their limited political feasibility & their limited demographic potential. 9 Tables, 1 Figure, 64 References. Modified HA.

88T6770

Malinvaud, Edmond (INSFE, F-75675 Paris Cedex 14 France), Analyse et prévision: leurs rôles respectifs dans la maîtrise de nos destins (Analysis and Forecasting: Their Respective Roles in the Control of Our Destinies), International Journal of Forecasting, 1987, 3, 2, 187-194. (FRF).

* A discussion of forecasting as an autonomous scientific discipline, focusing on problems inherent in expectations about potential results. Simple observations of regularities in business activity were given high priority during the interwar period, but in the 1940s, the approach was vigorously challenged as measurement without theory, & a new methodology emerged. This approach, which required identification & estimation of a structural system in which the main equations explaining the determination of the variables of interest were explicitly specified, was widely accepted, & has been almost exclusively used ever since. Recent questioning of this methodology is assessed with special attention to criticisms made by C. Sims ("Macroeconomics and Reality," Econometrica, 1980, Jan). It is argued that the direct fitting & extrapolation of multidimensional processes on a few main macroeconomic series does not seem likely to change the situation, only detailed theoretical & econometric research can alleviate the situation. Main principles for a professional ethics of forecasting are suggested. 14 References. Modified HA.

88T6771

Mumpower, Jeryl L., Livingston, Steven & Lee, Thomas J. (Nelson A. Rockefeller Coll Public Affairs & Policy State U New York, Albany 12206), Expert Judgments of Political Riskiness, Journal of Forecasting, 1987, 6, 1, Jan-Mar, 51-65.

* Survey data are used to examine professional analysts' (N = 51) judgments of the political riskiness of 49 focal countries for the period 1983-1985. Each of 9 predictor variables was significantly correlated with ratings of political riskiness. The highest r was with infant mortality & life expectancy, either accounted for roughly 50% of the variance in ratings. Other variables better predicted risk within different geographic regions. A factor analysis suggested the presence of 3 underlying factors as represented by exchange rate differential, estimated inflation rate, & infant mortality rate. Approximately 75% of the variance in ratings could be accounted for on the basis of a linear combination of these predictor variables. Cluster analysis revealed little difference among clusters of judges, ratings by undergraduate students closely paralleled those of professional analysts. It is concluded that claims of expertise in political risk analysis are better supported by command of factual knowledge than by differentially superior predictive ability. 10 Tables, 36 References. Modified HA.

88T6772

Zubrzycki, Jerzy (Research School Social Sciences Australian National U, Canberra 2601), Public Policy in a Multicultural Australia, International Migration/Migrations Internationales/Migraciones Internacionales, 1987, 25, 1, Mar, 63-72.

* A discussion of the future of multiculturalism in Australia in light of two trends appearing in the 1950s & 1960s: the doubling of the rate of natural population growth by immigration & the gradual elimination of discrimination on the grounds of race in immigration policy. Two issues dominate the debate: the extent of government involvement in creating adequate ethnic-specific institutions, & the tension between equality of access & pluralism. It is argued that the political goal of ethnic pluralism is likely to interfere with the political goal of equality. AA.

er for residents in higher-status suburbs. Variability tended to be greater in the lower-status suburbs. Occupational status & age were unrelated to community satisfaction except in the lowest status group where younger Rs were significantly less satisfied. 2 Tables, 15 References. Modified HA

88T6765

Vreugdenhil, Anthes & Rigby, Ken (c/o Rigby-School Social Studies South Australian Instit Technology, Adelaide 5000), Assessing Generalized Community Satisfaction, Journal Psychology, 1987, 127, 4, Aug. 367-374

† Questionnaire data from residents of central Adelaide & M South Australia (N = 622 & 385, respectively), are used to assess community satisfaction. The General Community Satisfaction (GCSS) was developed & evaluated in a pilot study. The instrument employed 34 items, 17 positively & 17 negatively keyed, on a Likert scale. Results from factor analysis of data obtained from divergent communities are discussed, & the GCSS is shown to be reliable. 1 Table, 19 References. Modified HA

IRAL

International Review of Applied Linguistics in Language Teaching

ISSN 0019-042X

Editors: Prof. Dr. Bertil Malmberg, Lund; Prof. Dr. Gerhard Nickel, Stuttgart

Assistant Editor: Dr. Dietrich Nehls, Stuttgart

Since its foundation in 1963, IRAL has tried to reflect the worldwide upsurge of interest in speech communication and the rethinking of the premises of language teaching. The aim has been, and will continue to be, to provide a common meeting ground for researchers concerned with applied linguistics in its various forms.

IRAL is published quarterly. (February, May, August, November). Each annual volume contains an average of ca. 360 pages.

Subscription per volume	DM 140,- (Institutions)
	DM 98,- (Individuals)
Single copies	DM 36,- Postage added

IRAL is obtainable in:

Austria from Gerold & Co., Booksellers, Graben 31, A-1011 Wien, Austria

Afghanistan, Australia, Burma, Canada, Ceylon, Cyprus, Egypt, Ethiopia, Gambia, Ghana, Gibraltar, Great Britain, Greece, Hong Kong, India, Indonesia, Iran, Israel, Japan, Jordan, Kenya, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libya, Malawi, Malaysia, Malta, New Zealand, Nigeria, Pakistan, Philippines, Rhodesia, Sam-bia, Saudi-Arabia, Sierra Leone, Singapore, Somalia, South Africa, South Korea, Spain, Sudan, Syria, Tanzania, Thailand, Turkey, Uganda, USA, Yemen

from Journals Department, Oxford University Press

Walton Street, Oxford OX2 6DP, England

all other countries from

JULIUS GROOS VERLAG

P. O. Box 10 24 23 · D-6900 Heidelberg 1

(coll. PA 19010). Ritualism in Communicating Risk Information, W Science, Technology, and Human Values, 1987, 12, 3-4(60-61), 20-25

* Much of the concern over methods of risk communication has been essentially defensive: how to transfer risk information to the public in ways that minimize overreaction—in the sense of irrational fear, unwarranted litigation, & unnecessary institutional embarrassment. The converse possibility—that risks can be communicated ritualistically, in ways that lead to deliver positive social outcomes—has received less attention. However, since rationales for risk notification are usually derived from arguments for public health & social justice, the possibility of underreaction to communicated risk represents a problem no less serious than the problem of overreaction. Risk notification programs need to be capable of affirmatively motivating & empowering citizens to make appropriate, constructive responses to risk information, in order to protect their health & pursue their justified legal remedies. Sociological considerations relevant for designing such programs are reviewed. AA

88T6782

O'Connor, Julia S. & Brym, Robert J. (Dept Sociology McMaster U, Hamilton Ontario L8S 4L8). Public Welfare Expenditure in OECD Countries: Towards a Reconciliation of Inconsistent Findings, W The British Journal of Sociology, 1988, 39, 1, Mar, 47-68

* An examination of some reasons for inconsistent findings on the determinants of welfare expenditure & outcome in advanced capitalist countries, with focus on the polarly opposite conclusions reached by Harold Wilensky (The Welfare State and Equality, Berkeley: U of California Press, 1975) & John D. Stephens (The Transition from Capitalism to Socialism, London: Macmillan, 1979). Several conceptual & methodological problems in these works are identified, & several hypotheses derived. These are tested using public & welfare expenditure data on seventeen OECD (Organization for Economic Cooperation & Development) countries, along with data on political variables, trade unions, corporatism, & societal bargaining derived from various sources, at five points in time from 1960 to 1980. It is concluded that inconsistent findings in this field are due to different conceptualizations & operationalizations of key terms &, more fundamentally, from different conceptions of the welfare state. 4 Tables, 3 Figures, 55 References. K. Hyatt

88T6783

Rycroft, Robert W., Regens, James L. & Dietz, Thomas (George Washington U, Washington DC 20052). Acquiring and Utilizing Scientific and Technical Information to Identify Environmental Risks, W Science, Technology, and Human Values, 1987, 12, 3-4(60-61), 125-130

* An examination of the impact of scientific/technological information on the environmental risk policy system in Washington, DC, based on interview data from 220 risk professionals & in-depth interview data from 102 key risk professionals. Patterns of utilization of information are highly complex & vary according to the sources of the information. Policy efforts focused solely on creating & disseminating scientific information have often had less impact than anticipated through disregard of this effect. 8 Tables. W. H. Stoddard

88T6784

South, Scott J. & Trent, Katherine (Dept Sociology State U New York, Albany 12222). Sex Ratios and Women's Roles: A Cross-National Analysis, W American Journal of Sociology, 1988, 93, 5, Mar, 1096-1115.

* Official & census data for a sample of 117 countries are analyzed to test several hypotheses derived from the Guttentag-Secord theory relating societal-level sex ratios to women's status & roles (Guttentag, Marcia, & Secord, Paul F., Too Many Women? The Sex Ratio Question, see IRPS No 26/85c00345). The theory implies that high sex ratios, which indicate a relative undersupply of women, will be positively associated with the proportion of women who marry & the fertility rate, & negatively associated with women's average age at marriage, rates of divorce & illegitimacy, & F rates of literacy, LF participation, & suicide. Although the bivariate correlations between the sex ratio at ages 15-49 & these dimensions of women's roles provide little support for the theory, most of the expected relationships emerge when the level of SE development, as measured by a multi-item index, is statistically controlled. Additional analyses indicate that the effect of the sex ratio on women's roles is more pronounced in developed than in developing countries. 5 Tables, 51 References. HA enclitic 20

Politics, New Writing, Ideas, Cultural Life

LAs review of the timely taken seriously

Writing and Visuals by La Loca; Barry Yourgrau; Stephen Wolf; Larry Marcus; R.L. Rutsky; Diego Cardoso and others.

Thoughts on the state of current challenges to corporate media; the cultural politics of the LA Weekly; social and spatial dynamics of urban Los Angeles; repackaging the 60s with New Age philosophy; from resistance to accomodation; new cultural and political movements; the politics of everyday life in Salvador; new journalism By Paul Krassner; Ruben Martinez; Jay Levin; Denise Hamilton; and others.

Address: enclitic
P.O. Box 36098
Miracle Mile Station
Los Angeles, CA 90036-0098

$5

60 social indicators

88T6773

Ferriss, Abbott L. (Dept Sociology Emory U, Atlanta GA 30322). The Uses of Social Indicators. ♦ Social Forces, 1988, 66, 3, Mar, 601-617

¶ As statistical time series, social indicators are used to monitor the social system, helping to identify changes & to guide intervention to alter the course of social change. Extending time series into the future, while an imperfectly developed art, enables more realistic planning. The geographic allocation of resources by governments through ecological indicators redistributes funds more equitably. By combining with programmatic activities to alter the rate & direction of change, social indicators may play a role in social transformations. Despite the withdrawal of federal research support, the social indicator "movement" has led to improvements in social measurement, social reporting, & social accounting & has stimulated measurement of the quality of life. Potential applications of social indicators in sociological research should include the time dimension, ecological variables, & forecasts of the future. 53 References. Modified HA

88T6774

Haas, J. C. J. M. de, Pennink, B. J. W. & Welvaart, K. (Instit Social Medicine State U Leiden, NL-2313 AV Netherlands). The Distinction between Affect and Cognition. Social Indicators Research, 1987, 19, 3, Aug, 367-378

¶ Questionnaire data are used to examine the distinction between affect & cognition in a clinical sample of 41 early breast cancer patients. As assumed by A. C. McKennell ("Cognition and Affect in Perceptions of Well-Being," Social Indicators Research, 1978, 5, 389-426), the change experienced led to a level of affect that was lower than the level of cognition & an increased discrepancy between these two components of quality of life within the first year after surgery. Cognition was stable over time, whereas affect improved. The relation between concomitants of discase & treatment & the types of affect-cognition combinations explored. 3 Tables, 1 Figure, 20 References. Modified HA

88T6775

Lipshitz, Gabriel (Dept Geography & Instit Ur & Regn Hebrew U Jerusalem, Mount Scopus 91905 Israel). Social Variables as Alternatives to Income in Measuring Regional Welfare—The Israeli Case. Social Indicators Research, Aug, 335-356

¶ Presented here is a methodological discussion of the qualities utilized for measuring regional economic welfare over time, in a situation where an "ideal" database is lacking. 1 of identifying trends in regional inequality of economic well-being is discussed. 8 Tables, 2 Figures, 42 References. Modified HA

88T6776

Lucke, Joseph F. & Schuessler, Karl (Sociology Dept Bloomington 47405). Scaling Social Life Feelings by Facets of Binary Variables. Social Indicators Research, 1987, 40, 3-4, 403-428

¶ Drawing on D. J. Bartholomew's recent work on the factor analysis of categorical data ("Scaling Binary Data Using a Factorial Approach," Journal of the Royal Statistical Society, Series B, 1980, 42, 120-123), especially as it pertains to the scaling of social life self-determination, trust, satisfaction, the logit-probit model, the probit model were fitted to five items on trust in order to characterize & to consider their utility. G. Raush's model, "A Factorial Approach to Item Analysis," (Lazarsfeld, P. F., & H. F. (Eds.), Readings in Mathematical Social Science, Cambridge, MIT Press, 1968) was fitted to the same data set to show if the Bartholomew factor models. Although recent work has provided means of categorical responses on a surer statistical basis, it is a variety of questions unanswered. 9 Tables, 25 References. Modified HA

62 policy sciences

88T6777

Battistella, Roger M. & Buchanan, Robert J. (Dept Human Service Studies Cornell U, Ithaca 14853-4401). National Health Policy: Efficiency-Equity Syncretism. Social Justice Research, 1987, 1, 3, Sept, 329-360

¶ The current national situation of slower economic growth & an aging population in the US has brought a new emphasis on efficiency to health policy. Increased reliance on market incentives to reduce health care costs does not mean that equity has been abandoned as a social objective. The new emphasis on efficiency is meant to provide more & better health care through the generation of savings from the use of management systems to improve productivity. Market incentives & new management systems are not the antithesis of equity, but are tools to provide better health care to the poor & to the elderly in a situation governed by fiscal constraints. 81 References. Modified HA

88T6778

Fujita, Kuniko (Dept Sociology Michigan State U, East Lansing 48824). Gender, State, and Industrial Policy in Japan. Women's Studies International Forum, 1987, 10, 6, 589-597

¶ It is argued that Japan's state policy for women workers, particularly its sex-blind industrial policy, has had negative effects on women in both the labor market & the family. Using official statistical data on industrial growth & the employment of women from the 1950s to the 1970s, the impact of this policy on women's wages & position in the labor market is assessed. Recommendations are made to resolve this problem. 38 References. Modified AA

88T6779

Maher, Patrick (Dept Philosophy U Illinois, Urbana 61801). Causality in the Logic of Decision. Theory and Decision, 1987, 22, 2, Mar, 155-172

Reply, 173-180

¶ In recent years, proponents of two different models of rational decision have debated their viewpoints: evidential decision theory, which principle of maximizing expected utility to be appropriate when states are probabilistically independent of the acts, & causal theory, which holds that the principle of maximizing expected utility is appropriate whenever the states are causally independent of the acts. Two main arguments for evidential decision theory claimed by Jeffrey (The Logic of Decision, second edition, Chicago, Ill: U of Chicago Press, 1983) & E. Eells (Rational Decision and Causality, Cambridge, England: Cambridge U Press, 1982) are shown not to be valid. Reply with Detachment: Reply to Maher, Ellery Eells (Philosophy of Wisconsin, Madison) reviews Maher's examples of hypothetical situations relevant to the difference between the two theories, identifies flaws, & shows how they can be seen from the point of view of evidential conditional subjective probability. 18 References. W. H.

88T6780

Munder, Johannes & Hofmann, Hans-Jurgen. Sozialpädagogik FB 22 Technische U Berlin, D-1000 10 Berlin (public Germany). Sozialpolitische Gestaltung durch die Mythos oder Realität (Community-Based Social Policy: Reality). Soziale Welt, 1987, 38, 3, 365-378 (GER)

¶ A preliminary investigation of the effectiveness of community social policy examines a program begun in 1984 in the Westfalen region of West Germany, which provided funds for 1000 new jobs for welfare/unemployment benefit recipients. It is on the interaction between labor market policy & social (welfare & unemployment) policy at the local level. It is found that social policy is only effective in combination with supranational policies; on its own, it results in irregularity, although local strategies are important for implementation. 5 Tables, 37 References. Modified HA

88T6781

Needleman, Carolyn (Occupational & Environmental Health Program Graduate School Social Work & Social Research

2500 radical sociology

55 radical sociology

88T6785

Groves, W. Byron & Sampson, Robert J. (U Wisconsin, Green Bay 54301-7001). Traditional Contributions to Radical Criminology. U Journal of Research in Crime and Delinquency, 1987, 24, 3, Aug, 181-214

* An analysis of the causes of criminal behavior as portrayed in the three dominant models of traditional criminology: strain, cultural deviance, & social control—from the perspective of radical criminology. Specifically, these traditional models are compared to radical theory based on three derived criteria: (1) SC plays an important role in the traditional theory in question, (2) the theory employs a social-structural model of crime causation, & (3) the theory offers a materialistic interpretation of the relationship between culture & social structure. Ranging from contributions that are fully compatible to those that provide fruitful possibilities for future research, it is found that traditional theories—especially macrolevel social control models—converge in crucial respects with radical criminology. It is concluded that the ideological differences between radicals & traditionalists, in conjunction with the former's suspicion of positivism & the latter's narrow emphasis on individual-level explanations, have obfuscated the development of an integrated, structural model of crime causation. 140 References. HA

80 critical sociology

88T6786

Dryzek, John S. (U Oregon, Eugene 97403). Discursive Designs: Critical Theory and Political Institutions. U American Journal of Political Science, 1987, 31, 3, Aug, 656-679

* Critical theory is frequently charged with excessive abstraction, aridity, & political irrelevance. These claims are countered by developing a critical theory program for political organization, in which epistemology is linked with social theory & institutions. The elements demanded of such a program are identified by reference to the moves accomplished by critical theory's more accepted competitor, Karl R. Popper's critical rationalism. A comparison of the practices & institutions inspired by the two programs adds weight to the claims of critical theory. 1 Table, 59 References. Modified HA

88T6787

Vigorelli, Amadeo (U Milan, I-20122 Italy). Paradigm Changes in Critical Theory: Agnes Heller's Reconsideration of Rationality. U Thesis Eleven, 1987, 16, 56-68

Translated by Julian Triado & Jim Asker.

¶ In one of her essays included in The Power of Shame: A Rational Perspective (London: Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1985), Agnes Heller explores the relationship among everyday life, the rationality of reason, & the rationality of intellect. Heller critiques both the paradigm of work & the paradigm of production as foundations for a philosophy of history. She sees objectivation as a concept that could provide the starting point for the creation of a new paradigm. Central to this philosophy would be the relation of rationality to everyday life & the distinction between rationality of reason, i.e., of practical reason & rationality of intellect. W. H. Stoddard

Document Delivery Service

The costs of reproduction are: US $0.25 per reproduced page. Orders must be PREPAID (unprepaid orders cannot be acknowledged or returned) and sent to SOCIOLOGICAL ABSTRACTS, INC. (P.O. Box 22206, San Diego, CA 92122, USA) together with the SA accession number and the complete citation of the document to be reproduced. To calculate price per document, multiply the number of pages as indicated in the citation of the abstract by US $0.25 and add a US $1.50 search fee per document. POSTAGE is EXTRA. Below is a table for postage fees that vary by weight/size of paper.

No. of Pages	US & Canada Postage Fee	All Other Countries
		Postage Fee	Air Mail Surface
1- 5	$0.39	US $1.40	US $1.00
6-10	$0.73	$2.24	$1.90
11-15	$1.07	$2.78	$2.30
16-20	$1.41	$3.32	$2.75
21 +	Additional multiples as above

CONFERENCE papers are available ONLY when the following notation precedes the text of the abstract; ● "Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search and postage. Length: pp." For copies of paper without this notation, write directly to the author, whose address is listed in the citation.

ROUTLEDGE

Ethnic and Racial Studies

Editor: John Stone, Goldsmiths' College, London

Ethnic and Racial Studies is an international journal of ethnic and race relations, providing an opportunity for study of a wide range of minority groups and cultures. Articles range from general studies of ethnic and racial matters to close considerations of local problems in specific countries. African conflicts, racial attitudes in Britain, Jewishness in America, Turkish women in Sydney, localized black and white unemployment, and racial intermarriage and sexual discrimination are some of the subjects recently covered. A book review section publishes surveys of recent publications, keeping the reader up-to-date with the fast-moving developments in this complex subject.

Selected contents of Volume 11, No 2, 1988

The salience of ethnicity in African states: a Zimbabwean case study

Marshall W. Murphree

Black American perceptions of Black Africans - Michael C. Thornton and

Robert J. Taylor

The burden of double roles: Korean wives in the USA - Kwang Chung Kim and Won Moo Hurh

From communality to ethnicity: some theoretical considerations on the Maori ethnic revival - David Pearson

A critique of recent trends in the analysis of ethnonationalism - William Douglas

Review article: The social context of the white backlash - Stephen Steinberg Research Report: Socialism, nations and international cooperation - Michael Levin.

Volume 11, will be published during 1988

Extent: 600 pages

Subscription rates for 1988

UK & World	£42.00
N. America (air)	£44.00 (US$68.00)
Individuals	£29.10 (US$50.00)
Single Copies	£10.50 (US$21.00)

Back issues: All available, price as single copies above

For further details please contact: Sally Allison, Journals Promotions Department, Routledge, 11 New Fetter Lane, London EC4P 4EE

Routledge

2600 environmental interactions

56 environmental interactions

88T6788

Brown, Phil (Dept Sociology Brown U, Providence RI 02912), Popular Epidemiology: Community Response to Toxic Waste-Induced Disease in Woburn, Massachusetts, U Science, Technology, and Human Values, 1987, 12, 3-4(60-61), 78-85

* Residents of Woburn, Mass. realized several years ago that their children were contracting leukemia at exceedingly high rates, & their own efforts demonstrated that it was traceable to industrial waste carcinogens that leached into their drinking water supply. These families filed a civil suit against corporate giants W R Grace & Beatrice Foods. The Woburn case offers a valuable example of lay communication of risk to scientific experts & government officials, through a process termed popular epidemiology, by which lay persons gather statistics & other information & marshal the knowledge & resources of experts to understand the epidemiology of disease. Popular epidemiology emphasizes basic social structural factors, involves social movements, & challenges certain basic assumptions of traditional epidemiology. The concept of popular epidemiology is developed by reviewing the Woburn case & by showing commonalities between Woburn & other communities in popular epidemiological investigation. Modified AA

88T6789

Clarke, Lee (Russell Sage Foundation, 112 East 64th St New York NY 10021), Explaining Choices among Technological Risks, U Social Problems, 1988, 35, 1, Feb, 22-35

* Addressed here is the issue of the process through which some risks, rather than others, are defined as acceptable. The predominant view, based on psychological research, is summarized & then criticized for taking insufficient account of the structural context within which decisions concerning risks are made. Evidence is then used from previous studies in the history of nuclear power, the unsafe Ford Pintos, & an instance of toxic chemical contamination to develop a more sociological perspective on acceptable risk. The analysis is grounded in organizational theory & centers on decision-making processes regarding technological risks. 75 References. HA

88T6790

Dobossy, Imre & Kulcsár, László, Ökológiai tudat és viselkedés társadalmi tényezői (Egy nemzetközi összehasonlító szociológiai vizsgálat első tapasztalatai) (Social Factors of Ecological Consciousness and Behavior), Szociológia, 1984-85, 3-4, 311-328. (HUN)

* Abstract not currently available

88T6791

Duval, Robert D. & Groeneveld, Leonard (West Virginia U, Morgantown 26506), Hidden Policies and Hypothesis Tests: The Implications of Type II Errors for Environmental Regulation, U American Journal of Political Science, 1987, 31, 2, May, 423-447

* In an examination of the federal hazardous waste regulations, an analysis of the importance of Type II statistical errors is undertaken. A method for approximating the power of the test is developed, & the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) policy is examined under selected situations. A Monte Carlo simulation is also provided that compares the efficacy of the EPA-required t-test with the Wilcoxon rank sum test. A number of conclusions about the appropriateness of the EPA test under selected circumstances is offered. It is concluded that by specifying a sampling scheme without benefit of direct discussion of Type II errors, policy decisions may lie hidden within the statistical test. 7 Tables, 1 Figure. 15 References. HA

88T6792

Hagendijk, R. P., Cramer, J. M. & Smeenk, J. W. (Vakgroep Wetenschapsdynamica U Amsterdam, NL-1012 WX Netherlands), Handeling en structuur in wetenschapsoefening: De ontwikkeling van het ecologisch onderzoek van zoete wateren in Nederland (Action and Structure in Science: The Development of Dutch Fresh Water Ecology), U Mens en Maatschappij, 1987, 62, supplement, 23-44. (DUT)

* The development of Dutch fresh water ecology is examined using three types of data: (1) scientists' perceptions of the intellectual structure of their field, (2) major episodes in the field's intellectual & institutional history, & (3) the (co)citation structure of the field. It is shown that the different types of data reflect different, strongly interrelated features of the field. It is argued that recent constructivist theorizing in social studies of science does not offer a satisfactory basis for this interrelationship. Anthony Giddens's structuration theory (see IRPS No. 26/85c00433) is presented as a better framework for the interpretation of processes of change in science. 3 Tables, 4 Figures. Modified HA

88T6793

London, Bruce (Dept Sociology & Social Psychology Florida Atlantic U, Boca Raton 33431), Ending Ecology's Ethnocentrism: Thai Replications and Extensions of Ecological Research, U Rural Sociology, 1987, 52, 4, winter, 483-500.

* Empirical research testing the Durkheimian, ecosystem, & sustenance-organization models of human ecology has been highly ethnocentric. Here, new lines of empirical development & testing of ecological hypotheses in non-Western contexts are initiated. Ecological studies that used US data to test hypotheses regarding the Doll, migration, & fertility are replicated using census data from Thailand for 1960 & 1970. Each of the Third World analyses supports the ecological approach. This movement towards an "ecology of development" reaffirms the predictive power & viability of ecological theory. 3 Tables, 44 References. Modified HA

88T6794

Mazur, Allan (Dept Sociology Syracuse U, NY 13244), Putting Radon on the Public's Risk Agenda, U Science, Technology, and Human Values, 1987, 12, 3-4(60-61), 86-93

* Prior to 1985, few people had heard much about indoor radon, then it became known as the most dangerous source of radiation in the US. Many factors converged in an unplanned way to put radon on the public's risk agenda. The risk estimate of 5,000-20,000 lung cancers annually is the crux of concern. The remarkable timing of a network news story on radon barely a week before the "Watras discovery" (an exceedingly high level of radiation found in the Pa home of a nuclear engineer, Stanley Watras) certainly influenced political & public health responses to it. The story's eventual appearance in The New York Times caused a quantum leap in attention, & roused activities in Washington, DC, & at the community level. Eventually the Environmental Protection Agency became a powerful source of radon publicity as part of its new strategy toward the hazard. By 1986 the radon story had permeated the national media & was stimulating local activities around the country. 2 Figures. Modified AA

88T6795

Ting, Tin-Yu & Jou, Susyan (Kansas State U, Manhattan 66506), Industrial Pollution and the Regional Variations of Life Expectancy at Birth in Taiwan, U Sociological Inquiry, 1988, 58, 1, winter, 87-100

* It is argued that rapid industrialization has been accompanied by negative factors that have produced unexpected environmental pollution in Taiwan. An analysis is presented of the relationship between industrial pollution & regional variations of life expectancy at birth, using the total number of factories as an indirect measure of industrial pollution. Life expectancy at birth is calculated from age-specific mortality rates using a life-table technique for 361 Ru/Ur townships. Multivariate analyses of regional variations support the hypothesis that there is a negative & significant relationship between total number of factories & the level of life expectancy at birth, after controlling other independent variables. 2 Tables, 2 Appendixes, 20 References. Modified HA

88T6796

Turner, R. Kerry (School Environmental Sciences U East Anglia, Norwich Norfolk NR4 7TJ England), Sustainable Global Futures: Common Interest, Interdependency, Complexity and Global Possibilities, Futures, 1987, 19, 5, Oct, 574-581.

An International Journal Focusing on Third World Development Problems

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT DIALOGUE

United Nations Centre for Regional Development Nagoya Japan

PAST ISSUES

Regional Development Planning for Disaster Prevention (Spring 1988), guest editor, E. L. Quarantelli

Shelter and Services for the Poor in Metropolitan Regions (Winter 1987), guest editor, Stephen H. K. Yeh

Environmental Planning and Management: Focus on Inland Waters (Autumn 1987), guest editors, Surin Setamanit and Michio Hashimoto

Planning for Local Social Development (Summer 1987), guest editors, Raymond Apthorpe and Michael M. Cernea

Training in Information Systems for Local and Regional Planning (Spring 1987), guest editor, Marvin L. Manheim

Financing Local and Regional Development (Autumn 1986), guest editor, Larry Schroeder

Local Social Development Planning (Spring 1986), guest editors, Harry W. Blair and Diana Conyers

Services for the Urban Poor: Issues on Implementation, Access, and Participation (Autumn 1985), guest editor, John D. Montgomery

FORTHCOMING ISSUES

Eastern Africa Rural Development Experience: Issues and Strategies in Local-Level Development (Summer 1988), guest editor, Richard S. Odingo and Achola-Pala Okeyo

Innovative Planning Strategies for Metropolitan Development and Conservation (Autumn 1988)

Employment, Livelihoods for the Urban Poor: Issues and Strategies in Metropolitan Planning (Winter 1988), guest editor, Yue-man Yeung

Regional Development Policies and Planning in Africa (Special issue 1988), guest editor, R. A. Obudho

Annual subscription: Developing countries US$20; Developed Countries US$40

Address: United Nations Centre for Regional Development, Nagoya 1-47-1, Nakamura-ku, Nagoya 450, Japan; Phone: (052) 561-9377; Fax: (052) 561-9375; Telex: J59620 UNCENRE; Cable: UNCENRE NAGOYA

82 social geography

88T6803

Beauregard, Robert A. (Rutgers U, New Brunswick NJ 08903), Rediscovering Space, Reinventing Cities: New Debates in Human Geography, in Urban Affairs Quarterly, 1987, 23, 1, Sept, 161-168.

A review essay on books by David Harvey, The Urbanization of Capital & Consciousness and the Urban Experience (Baltimore Johns Hopkins U Press, 1985); Derek Gregory & John Urry (Eds), Social Relations and Spatial Structures (New York: Saint Martin's Press, 1985); Doreen Massey & John Allen (Eds), Geography Matters! (Cambridge U Press, 1984), & Allen J. Scott & Michael Storper (Eds), Production, Work, Territory (Boston: Allen & Unwin, 1986 [see listings in IRPS No. 43]). These works reflect an ongoing series of debates about the role of space in social life, in particular, about materialist perspectives on space—a concern central to David Harvey's work. While critical of economic determinism, this new geography agenda still gives importance to the sphere of production. Though the city is sometimes given little significance in this approach, some of these scholars have made valuable contributions to a spatial understanding of urbanization. 4 References. W H Stoddard

88T6804

Brunn, Stanley D. & Yanarella, Ernie (U Kentucky, Lexington 40506), Towards a Humanistic Political Geography, in Studies in Comparative International Development, 1987, 22, 2, summer, 3-49.

Comments, 50-83, Reply, 83-36

It is argued that research in political geography can be enhanced through integrating methodological & philosophical elements from humanistic geography; changes in this direction are already evident. Contemporary currents in humanism are explored along with how & why they should be adopted by political geography. A working definition of humanistic political geography (HPG) is developed, & major concepts & themes are illustrated via a review of political science/geographical research in the area of international studies. A future research agenda is proposed. In Comments on "Towards a Humanistic Political Geography," Kenneth E. Boulding (U of Colorado, Boulder) argues that both structures & processes must be examined by geographers, the latter of which includes a space-time element & sense of history that is too often ignored. Hwa Yol Jung (Moravian Coll, Bethlehem, Pa) reviews the epistemological, methodological, & substantive aspects of HPG, with particular focus on how humanism is related to deep ecology, phenomenology, & technology. David B. Knight (Carleton U, Ottawa, Ontario) posits that there is a difference between a humanistic political geography & political geographers who are merely humanistic. The themes that Brunn & Yanarella propose for HPG are accepted, but placed in a different order of importance. Jim MacLaughlin (University Coll, Cork, Ireland) questions HPG's potential as a liberating discipline, since it cannot operate within a sociopolitical vacuum. A history of political geography is presented along with the political assumptions inherent in HPG. It is cautioned that HPG should resist applying too liberal a humanist perspective to the fields of ethnonationalism & national separatism. In Comments and Rejoinders, Ernie Yanarella & Stan Brunn address each comment in turn & reiterate the merits of HPG, particularly for peace research & ecostudies. 3 Tables, 258 References. K Hyatt

88T6805

Ferrão, Joao (Dept Geografia Faculdade Letras U Lisboa, P-1699 Codex Portugal), Social Structures, Labour Markets and Spatial Configurations in Modern Portugal, Antipode, 1987, 19, 2, Sept, 99-118.

An examination of the recomposition of Portuguese society over the last twenty years, using data from the 1960, 1970, & 1981 censuses. SE trends identified include: a decline in Ru activities, the tertiarization of society, relative stagnation of industrial employment, & increasing participation of women in the formal labor market. Territorial trends include increasing urbanization & increasing population in coastal areas. SE mechanisms are identified that explain the persistence of these trends in the face of such disruptive factors as the changing role of Portugal in the international DoFL & the revolution of 1974. It is suggested that the trends observed indicate the modernization of Portuguese society; however, such changes also represent defensive strategies for survival & adaptation to a context of economic crisis. Portugal's future prospects, particularly those associated with the nation's recent entry into the European Economic Community, are also considered. 7 Tables, 1 Figure, 7 References. Modified AA

Document Delivery Service

The costs of reproduction are: US $0.25 per reproduced page. Orders must be PREPAID (unprepaid orders cannot be acknowledged or returned) and sent to SOCIOLOGICAL ABSTRACTS, INC. (P.O. Box 22206, San Diego, CA 92122, USA) together with the SA accession number and the complete citation of the document to be reproduced. To calculate price per document, multiply the number of pages as indicated in the citation of the abstract by US $0.25 and add a US $1.50 search fee per document. POSTAGE is EXTRA. Below is a table for postage fees that vary by weight/size of paper.

No. of Pages	US & Canada Postage Fee	All Other Countries
		Postage Fee	Air Mail
1-5	$0.39	US $1.40	Surface US $1.00
6-10	$0.73	$2.24	$1.90
11-15	$1.07	$2.78	$2.30
16-20	$1.41	$3.32	$2.75
21+	Additional multiples as above

CONFERENCE papers are available ONLY when the following notation precedes the text of the abstract; "Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search and postage. Length: pp." For copies of paper without this notation, write directly to the author, whose address is listed in the citation.

† A comparative analytical review of three major, recent futures reports The Global Possible & its executive summary, World Enough and Time Successful Strategies for Resource Management (Repetto, R. [Ed], New Haven & London: Yale U Press, 1985 & 1986, respectively), the Club of Rome report, Managing Global Issues Reasons for Encouragement (Jarva, V. [Ed], Helsinki: U of Helsinki, 1985), & the World Commission on Environment & Development (Brundtland Commission) report, Our Common Future (Oxford: Oxford U Press, 1987 [see listings in IRPS No. 43]). These documents are the latest in a long line of global reports going back to the Club of Rome's 1970 Limits to Growth publication. They bring together in new juxtapositions extensions &/or modifications of concepts & ideas that, to a large extent, were first formulated in the pre-1983/84 reports. These earlier reports failed by & large to influence the status quo in the international economic system. The prospects of the new reports acting as catalysts for reform are assessed. HA

88T6797

—, Symposium, U of Contemporary Sociology, 1988, 133-139

† A review symposium on Amos H. Hawley's Human Ecological Essay (Chicago: U of Chicago Press, 1986 [see lis No. 43]). Basil G. Zimmer (Brown U, Providence, RI) finds an elegant & parsimonious presentation of a complex, the briefly summarized in terms of its central concepts: collect adaptive process with environment posing the problem of population adapting to it, & ecosystem being the mechanism. Change in ecosystems takes place through two process evolution. Hawley's work makes several major innovations sociology, notably in moving beyond its former focus on it. J. L. Berry (U of Texas, Dallas) sees Hawley's worthwhile, fundamentally flawed by its mechanistic approach to human society leaves no room for cultures to interpose between environment through their effects on cognition, nor does he recognize of ideas & myths in social organization. Ultimately, Hawley even the tradition of ecological sociology as it was created. W. H. Stoddard

81 disaster studies

88T6798

Baldinieri, Alberto (Dipartimento di Scienze Sociali U Torino, I-10124 Italy). Determinanti organizzative di incidenti tecnologici (Some Organizational Determinants of Technological Accidents). Quaderni di Sociologia, 1987, 33, 8, 49-73. (ITA)

† An investigation of the causes of some recent, disastrous technological accidents: (1) the explosion of the petrol tanker Betelgeuse at Whiddy Island, Ireland, in 1979, (2) the meltdown at Three Mile Island nuclear power station, Pa., in 1979, (3) the explosion of a petroleum storage facility in Mexico City in 1984, (4) the leak of toxic gas at the Union Carbide plant in Bhopal, India, in 1984, (5) the accident at Chernobyl nuclear power station, USSR, in 1986, & (6) the explosion of the US space shuttle "Challenger" in 1986. The evidence from official reports & other accounts shows that technological accidents are not the prerogative of newly industrialized countries, also, the hypothesis of colonialist policy in Bhopal is not supported. In all cases except Three Mile Island, recurrent forces were in action before the events: violations of safety & operation rules, deficiencies in the training of operators, lack of technical & organizational innovation, & narrow-minded management unable to predict possible sources of malfunctioning. Cost-cutting at the expense of safety was a factor in many cases, while considerations of prestige probably played a role in the Challenger affair. Implications for further research on man/machine interaction are discussed. Modified HA

88T6799

Behler, Gerald Thomas, Jr. (U Delaware, Newark 19711). The Nuclear Accident at Three Mile Island: Its Effect on a Local Community. * Dissertation Abstracts International, 4. The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec, 1551-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8719516.

88T6800

Cuthbertson, Beverley H. & Nigg, Joanne M. (c/o Nigg School Public Affairs Arizona State U, Tempe 85287). Technological Disaster and the Nontherapeutic Community: A Question of True Victimization. U of Environment and Behavior, 1987, 19, 4, July, 462-483.

† The therapeutic community has been proposed as a useful mechanism for overcoming the trauma & stress experienced by disaster victims. The origin, components, & applications of the therapeutic community concept for natural disaster situations are reviewed, & the question is raised whether such a mechanism emerges in response to environmental agents other than rapid onset, natural disaster agents. Based on data from two technological events, one involving the aerial release of pesticides & the other the disposal of asbestos tailings, it is argued that under certain circumstances, the classic therapeutic community is unlikely to develop in technological disasters. The factors against its development are examined with primary focus on the formation of "true victimization," the formation of victim clusters, & the formation of community conflict. 32 References. HA

88T6801

Man, Anton de & Simpson-Housley, Paul (Dept Psychol U, Lennoxville Quebec J1M 1Z7). Factors in Perceptual Hazard: An Exploratory Study. Social Behavior and Personality, 1987, 15, 1, 13-19.

† Questionnaire data from residents of South Carolina (N = 100) who experienced a 1984 tornado disaster are analyzed to assess the relationship between selected predictors & responses to potential tornado hazards. Results of backstep regression analysis indicate that (1) Rs' education were the best predictors of perceived probability of occurrence, (2) ratings of potential damage severity were related to education, & (3) Rs' sex accounted for a significant % of the variance in anxiety reported in response to a tornado prediction. 2 Figures. Modified HA

88T6802

Paigen, Beverly, Goldman, Lynn R., Magnant, Mary N., Joseph H. & Steegmann, A. T., Jr. (Bruce Lyon Memorial Laboratory Children's Hospital Medical Center, 747 5th Avenue, New York, NY 10022). Growth of Children Living near the Love Canal. Human Biology, 1987, 59, 3, 489-508.

† Health risks for children (N = 493) residing near a toxic waste disposal site (Love Canal, NY) are assessed by comparing anthropometric & health information collected in June & July 1986 of children (N = 428) living in matched census tracts (Niagara Falls, NY) away from environmental hazards. Children born & living near the toxic waste site area had significantly shorter stature than control children, a difference not accounted for by differences in midparent height, SC, nutrition, birth weight, or child sex. 6 Tables, 3 Figures, 40 References. Modified HA

2700 studies in poverty

57 studies in poverty

6806

Waal, A. (Nuffield Coll U Oxford, OX1 1NF England). The Perception of Poverty and Famines. International Journal of Moral and Social Studies. 1987, 2, 3, autumn, 251-262

Famines are grossly misunderstood events. In particular, anticipated mortality in famines in the Third World is usually greatly exaggerated. This is striking because in normal times a set of biases operate to make poverty "unperceived" by outsiders, which creates a selective misunderstanding of poor societies as being less poor than they actually are. The question is addressed of how, in famine situations, the effects of these biases & misunderstandings are reversed: they magnify perceived mortality. This misperception is compounded by a misleading concept of famine itself. The experience & concept of famine on the part of the victims & the outsiders are contrasted. Evidence from the recent famine in Ethiopia is used to support the argument. 15 References. AA

6807

Freeman, Richard B. & Hall, Brian (National Bureau Economic Research, 1050 Massachusetts Ave Cambridge MA 02138). Permanent Homelessness in America? Population Research and Policy Review. 1987, 6, 1, 3-27

An attempt to profile the homeless in the US, using interview data collected from 516 homeless persons on the streets & in shelters of New York City, NY, in 1985. Results indicate that: (1) the much-maligned study by the US Dept of Housing & Urban Affairs was roughly correct: estimate of 250,000-350,000 homeless persons in 1983; (2) despite economic recovery since 1983, the number of homeless persons, particularly homeless families, has grown; (3) homelessness is a relatively long-term state for many individuals, with an average (corrected for growth in the homeless population) incomplete duration of 6 years & an estimated completed duration twice that long; (4) much of the homeless problem can be attributed to increases in the number of the poor in the 1980s & to a state of rough constancy in the number of low-rent housing units, & relatively few homeless persons receive any form of general assistance or welfare, & a large proportion have spent time in jail. It is concluded that economic recovery will not solve the problem of homelessness without corresponding changes in the housing market or in the economic position of the very poor. 4 Tables, 1 Appendix, 39 References. Modified HA

6808

Jimenez, Martha E. (U Colorado, Boulder 80309). The Feminization of Poverty: Myth or Reality? ♦ The Insurgent Sociologist. 1987, 14, 1, fall, 5-30

The concept of the feminization of poverty is widespread in the US among social scientists, politicians, & feminists. National statistical data are used to examine the sex composition of the poor population from 1959 through 1986. A complex distribution of poverty among sex & age groups is found. Sex differences among women vitally alter their chances of becoming poor; poverty is primarily a risk for propertyless women, & largely a product of the immiseration of the West. The sex ratio of the poverty population has changed little since 1966, although more poor women than formerly are under age 44. The feminization of poverty thus appears as a myth. 1 Table, 31 References. W H Stoddard

6809

Horton, James (Dept Sociology Memorial U Newfoundland, Saint John's A1C 5S7). Public Relief and Social Unrest in Newfoundland in the 1930s: An Evaluation of the Ideas of Piven and Cloward. ♦ Canadian Journal of Sociology/Cahiers canadiens de sociologie. 1988, 13, 1-2, winter-spring, 143-169.

Since the early 1970s, the work of F. F. Piven & R. A. Cloward (eg. Organizing the Poor: The Functions of Social Welfare, New York: Vintage, 1977) has been an important source of ideas for those trying to understand changing patterns of state involvement in the provision of a variety of public relief measures & the role that popular mobilization plays in shaping state policy in this area. Examined is the framework developed by Piven & Cloward for analyzing the forces that shape public relief policy & devoting critical attention to the analysis of the impact of poor people's movements on this area of state policy through a discussion of public relief policy & social unrest in Newfoundland in the 1930s. It is argued that, while Piven & Cloward's work provides a useful source of questions about the factors that shape relief policy & the politics of public relief, it does not adequately capture the complex & shifting relationship between economic & political crisis, state policy concerning public relief, law & order, & other areas, & the rhythms of social unrest in Newfoundland in the 1930s. It is concluded that their rather simple & mechanistic model does not provide an adequate basis for interpreting changes in public relief policy. 49 References. HA

88T6810

Proch, Kathleen & Taber, Merlin A. (School Social Work U Illinois, Urbana 61801). Helping the Homeless. Public Welfare. 1987, 45, 2, spring, 5-9, 46

Available information on homelessness in the US is compared with policies that have been proposed. Estimates of the number of people who are homeless, published since 1980, range from 200,000 to over one million, but there is surprising agreement on characteristics of the homeless. Most people who are homeless are young adult Mx who do not have attachments to other people & who are mentally or physically disabled. Policies recommended in the literature include further study, stimulation of local government & voluntary efforts, reform of all welfare programs, & creation of a comprehensive personal social & health service system for the homeless. The proposals seem to reflect the political position & causal theories of their authors, but the proposals are not consistent with what is known about homelessness & do not promise to provide shelter to most people who are homeless. Here, it is estimated that the cost of providing safe shelter for the homeless would conservatively exceed $1.5 billion per year & cannot be met by local government & voluntary efforts. It is suggested that the need for other reforms in social provision should not be allowed to obscure the need for shelter & to delay assumption of federal responsibility for provision of shelter. 1 Photograph.

88T6811

Sahn, David E. (International Food Policy Research Instit, Washington DC 20001). Changes in the Living Standards of the Poor in Sri Lanka during a Period of Macroeconomic Restructuring. UN World Development. 1987, 15, 6, June, 809-830

Beginning in 1977, Sri Lanka moved away from its welfare-oriented economy characterized by extensive government intervention in controlling prices & expensive consumer subsidies toward a more market-oriented, outward-looking liberalized economy. Investment increased due largely to dramatic increases in the inflow of foreign capital combined with greater deficit financing. Unemployment declined & the rate of economic growth increased. The major increase in foreign assistance, coupled with deficit spending, enabled the government to undertake the ambitious infrastructure projects that stimulated demand. However, this policy change had deleterious consequences for the poor. Rapid inflation, which resulted in a decline of real wages, coupled with dramatic decreases in the value of the food stamp scheme, brought about a decline in calorie consumption for lower expenditure groups. In addition, levels of malnutrition, as measured by acute wasting, were higher after the policy change. 9 Tables, 3 Figures, 45 References. HA

88T6812

Schulz, Dorothy M. (Metro North Commuter Railroad Police, Grand Central Terminal New York NY 10199). Holdups, Hobos, and the Homeless: A Brief History of Railroad Police in North America. UN Police Studies. 1987, 10, 2, summer, 90-95

The history of the use of specialized police for transit systems in North America is examined, focusing on the vulnerability of systems of public transit & the people who use them. Security problems facing the early railroads are described, & the development of the railroad police is traced. Expansion of specialized police for other transit systems is discussed, & contemporary problems facing these law enforcement agencies are assessed. 21 References. Modified HA

ETHNIC STUDIES REPORT

INTERNATIONAL CENTRE FOR ETHNIC STUDIES

The Ethnic Studies Report (ESR) is the only recognised international journal o that is published in the third world. It is published biannually in January and July as journal of the ICES, Sri Lanka. ESR carries articles by scholars of repute on a wide themes both theoretical and empirical covering many parts of the globe. The follo sample from recent issues :

Management of Protracted Social Conflict in the Third World by Edward Azar.
Realities and Dreams : Ebb and Flow in the Politics of Separatism by W. H. Morris-Jones.
Culture and Society in Latin America : A Reappraisal by Rodolfo Stavenhagen.
Religious Minorities in Burma in the Contemporary Period by Trevor Ling.
Ethnic Relations in Indonesia : Recent Developments by Koentjaraningrat.
Security in a Multi-Ethnic State : The Canadian Experience by Ed Ratushny.
Devolution and the Problems of National Integration in the Sudan by Mohammed Beshir Hamid

Subscriptions (surface postage inclusive) ; Per copy US $ 8; Annual US $ 15; Two Year US $ 30. (Ch drafts payable to ICES)

ICES members get the ESR free of charge. (They are also entitled to receive other ICES publications at discount.)

Membership : (Members located in North America, Western and Eastern Europe, Australia, New : Japan)

	Individual
	US $
	20
(For other countries)	15

All communications should be addressed to :
Managing Editor, Ethnic Studies Report
International Centre for Ethnic Studies,
554/1, Peradeniya Road,
Kandy, Sri Lanka.

2800 studies in violence

58 studies in violence

88T6815

Davis, Liane V. & Carlson, Bonnie E. (School Social Welfare State U. New York, Albany 12203). Observation of Spouse Abuse: What Happens to the Children?. ♦ Journal of Interpersonal Violence, 1987, 2, 3, Sept., 278-291

Following a review of the meager literature on children of battered women, interview data obtained from 66 such children aged 4-11 living with their mothers in 5 NY domestic violence shelters are reported. Mothers (N = 78) were also interviewed & administered the Child Behavior Checklist. Results indicate that intervention with these children, 60% of whom were themselves abused, should become a professional priority. The seriousness of the effects is influenced by the gender & age of the child. Children who both witness the spousal abuse & are victims of abuse appear more seriously affected than those who are only witnesses. Results are identical to anecdotal evidence & to those of P. Jaffe et al (see SA 34 4/86Q9092), differences from other empirical studies are attributed to different instrumentation. Intervening in domestic violence shelters & in schools is recommended. 2 Tables, 20 References. Modified HA

88T6816

Gelles, Richard J. & Maynard, Peter E. (Dept Sociology U Rhode Island, Kingston 02881-0809). A Structural Family Systems Approach to Intervention in Cases of Family Violence, (M Family Relations, 1987, 36, 3, July, 270-275

An attempt is made to bridge the gap between theory, research, & clinical intervention through application of a structural family systems perspective to clinical intervention in violent families. A review of theoretical & empirical work on family violence employing a systems conceptual framework suggests that intervention using a structural family systems approach may be more effective than the typical individual level interventions based on medical or psychopathological views of the causes of domestic violence. A case study is described in which structural family therapy techniques were used with a multi-problem family whose symptoms included family violence. The need for cooperation among researchers, therapists, & therapy trainers who would use a systems approach to analyze & treat domestic violence & abuse is discussed. 42 References. Modified HA

88T6817

Prothrow-Stith, Deborah, Spivak, Howard & Hausman, Alice J. (Massachusetts Dept Public Health, 600 Washington St Boston 02111). The Violence Prevention Project: A Public Health Approach, (M Science, Technology, and Human Values, 1987, 12, 3-4(60-61), 67-69

¶ Violence is an important cause of death in the US that is beginning to be conceptualized as a public problem. An account is given of the Violence Prevention Project of the Health Promotion Program for Ur Youth sponsored by the Boston (Mass) Dept of Health & Hospitals. This effort centers on a violence prevention program used in high schools, but also involves community implementation, a support service network, & a mass media campaign. Advantages of the program are discussed. W. H. Stoddard

88T6818

Scott, Joseph E. & Cuvelier, Steven J. (Dept Sociology Ohio State U, Columbus 43210). Sexual Violence in Playboy Magazine: A Longitudinal Content Analysis, ♦ (M Journal of Sex Research, 1987, 23, 4, Nov., 534-539

¶ An examination of the amount of sexual violence in cartoons & pictorials in Playboy magazine from Jun 1954 through Dec 1983. Content analysis reveals that depictions of sexual violence were rare; the average number of sexually violent cartoons per year was 2.07 or 0.17 per issue & the average number of violent sexual pictorials per year for the 30-year period was 0.9 per year or 0.08 per issue. Such depictions did not increase over the period examined, even though the magazine has increased considerably in size (number of pages, as well as number of cartoons & pictorials per issue). A curvilinear relationship was found for the number of sexually violent cartoons & pictorials by year with the maximal occurrence in the mid-1970s, decreasing by 1983 to the level of the mid-1960s. 2 Figures, 14 References. AA

84 terrorism

88T6819

Bluhm, Louis H. (Dept Sociology Mississippi State U, Mississippi State 39762). International Terrorism: An Analysis of Some Fundamental Parameters and Issues, International Journal of Contemporary Sociology, 1987, 24, 3-4, July-Oct., 141-153

A conceptual analysis & theoretical synthesis of the role of trust & trust mechanisms in society. A typology, based on predictability & evaluation of events in conjunction with vested interest configurations, identifies three general types of trust mechanisms, as well as an "antitrust" mechanism. (1) the Blood Brother Pact, which is based on interests that are anonymous, & is typically associated with a segmented type of social structure, characterized by primary relationships; (2) the Inspection Ritual, which is characterized by a neutrality of interests among the actors & concentrates on regulation to insure predictability in secondary relationships; (3) the Iron Clad Guarantee, which assumes divergent interests & concentrates on retributive activities that neutralize the potential negative consequences of interaction; & (4) the antitrust mechanism of terrorism, in which interests are antagonistic & not subject to retributive processes. It is argued that inherent tensions in modern society related to trust allocation push the system toward utilization of coercive measures to create conformity in order to provide the requisite predictability. Modified AA

88T6820

Buchanan, Paul G. (US Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey CA 93940). The Varied Faces of Domination: State Terror, Economic Policy, and Social Rupture during the Argentine "Proceso," 1976-81, ♦ (M American Journal of Political Science, 1987, 31, 2, May,

336-382

¶ An exploration of the varied usage of state terror as a complement to a specific economic project under the military-bureaucratic authoritarian regime that governed Argentina between 1976 & 1981. To do so, a neo-Gramscian theoretical approach is adopted in order to demonstrate that state terror was an essential part of the exercise in domination that was the so-called Proceso de Reorganización Nacional (Process of National Reorganization). It is demonstrated that both overt & more subtle forms of state terror were used by the military regime & its civilian allies in a systematic attempt to disrupt the economic & political strength of those believed responsible for the chaotic social conditions they inherited: the domestic bourgeoisie & organized Wcs. An appraisal is made of the impact this application of state terror had on collective identities within the victimized classes, as well as on Argentine society as a whole. 89 References. HA

88T6821

Denton, Jeremiah (US Senate, Washington DC 20510). International Terrorism-The Nuclear Dimension, (M Terrorism, 1987, 9, 2, 113-123

¶ Nuclear terrorism is discussed within the overall context of worldwide violence & terrorism, particularly the growing problem of state-sponsored/-supported terrorism initiated as a means of advancing revolutionary foreign policy. The ever increasing proliferation of nuclear weapons & materials makes the threat of their being stolen by or supplied to terrorists a chilling possibility, political ramifications of such an incident are discussed. It is argued that security surrounding the transportation & storage of nuclear waste materials & protection of nuclear missile

88T6813

Sundet, Paul A. & Mermelstein, Joanne (U Missouri, Columbia 65211). Why Aren't Farmers Banging Down Agency Doors?. Public Welfare, 1987, 45, 3, summer, 15-19.

1 An investigation of some reasons why poverty-stricken US farmers who are eligible fail to take advantage of public assistance programs. Data collected during interviews with farmers' advocates & administrators, staff, & representatives of public welfare agencies & other service structures in Ru areas (N not provided) are supplemented with information on 992 farm families served through the Mo Financial Advisory & Resource Management Support network (MOFARMS). Results provide a profile of the Ru poor farmer, & reveal that attitudinal rather than physical barriers are primarily responsible for keeping farmers from obtaining services; in addition, farmers often lack knowledge on how to apply for benefits & what services are available to them. Discrepancies are also found between policies & how farmers & their advocates perceive them; this misinterpretation may be due to misunderstandings & lack of empathy on the part of public agency personnel regarding the farmers' plight. Several intervention strategies are suggested to improve communication in these areas & enhance farmers' use of public assistance services. 3 Tables. K Hyatt

88T6814

Wallace, Claire (Plymouth Polytechnic, PL4 8AA England). Girls. UK New Society, 1987, 82, 1301, 4 Dec, 16-17.

1 A discussion of young women in GB who are unemployed & receive welfare, based on a survey of young men & women (N = 109) who were in school in 1979 in an area of high unemployment. While unemployment often brings out a macho spirit in young men, girls on the dole become depressed & withdrawn. Young women resignedly accept an unattractive & unexciting lifestyle while young men escape through fantasy. Rasmussen

THESIS ELEVEN

Single Issue A87
Subscriptions:
(3 issues)
Individuals A816
(overseas) A818
(airmail) A830
Institutions: A840
(airmail) A848

Please make cheques payable to:

Thesis Eleven

Send to:
Thesis Eleven
Dept of Anthropology and Sociology
Monash University
Clayton 3168
Victoria Australia

Current Issue, number 17, 1987 includes:

JAPAN AND MODERNISATION

ARNASON
DEUTSCHMANN
OOMS

FEMINISM AND WELFARE

M Markus on Arendt's "Anti-feminism" & Fraser on Women and the Politics of Welfare

Current Issue, number 16, 1987 on the work of Agnes Heller, includes:

The Human condition

Agnes Heller

Agnes Heller: philosophy, Rational Utopia and Praxis Freedom & Happiness

Richard Bernstein

Peter Murphy

Agnes Heller On Rationality

Amadeo Vigorelli

Agnes Heller on our needs

David Cooper

Critical Theory of Communication

Sandor Radnoti

Plus Dick Howard's Post Marxist Radicalism, John Murphy on Australian Radical Nationalism and Francis Castle's Australia and Sweden

2900 feminist/gender studies

59 feminist studies

88T6825

Anderson, Joan M. (School Nursing U British Columbia, Vancouver V6T 2B5). Migration and Health: Perspectives on Immigrant Women. Sociology of Health and Illness, 1987, 9, 4, Dec, 410-438.

A phenomenological examination of how Fs construct health & emotional concerns in their everyday lives, based on a 3-year field study of Indo-Canadian & Greek F immigrant janitors ($\Sigma N = 46$) in Canada. Interview data show that Fs' ongoing experiences with health professionals determine how they present the circumstances of their lives to them. It is argued that the sources of distress for Fs are located within a social context, although health professionals have defined social problems as within the domain of health care, this very care is shaped by the dominant ideologies that determine the subjective experiences of Fs in the context of their daily lives. Health care practices, then, are seen to be embedded within a broader sociocultural context, & in turn, legitimize dominant ideologies. 30 References. Modified HA.

88T6826

Armstrong, M. Jocelyn (Instit Research Human Development U Illinois Urbana 61820). Women's Friendships under Urbanization: A Malaysian Study. Women's Studies International Forum, 1987, 10, 6, 623-633.

One of the less visible but often serious adaptations for women in developing countries undergoing urbanization is finding support in the form of friendships with other women. The friendship experiences of women from three ethnic groups, Malay, Chinese, & Indian, employed in white-collar occupations in Ur Malaysia are examined. In-depth interviews with 30 such women in Kuala Lumpur reveal how F friendships are established & maintained & help contribute to women's successful survival in the city. Though there is much ethnic variation in friendship patterns, & cross-ethnic friendships are still rare, occupation also appears to be an important factor, since the friendship experiences of white-collar women differ in many respects from those of women in other occupations. 26 References. Modified HA.

88T6827

Brandell, Inga. America Manna: femmes et migrations dans une perspective globale (America Manna Women and Migration from a Global Perspective). ♦ Studi Emigrazione/Etudes Migrations, 1987, 24, 85, Mar, 2-12 (FRE).

A general discussion of the role of migrant Fs & their contribution to the demographic, social, & economic development of the receiving countries. Migration from the South to the North in Europe, specifically to Norway, is taken as an example. The high level of development in host countries has been favored by the ready availability & replaceability of the immigrant LF. With the crisis of the rotation model of immigration in the 1970s, the cost of replacing that LF has been further concentrated in the countries of origin. Official policies of host countries that limit the immigration of family members place a greater burden on the wives & children of emigrants & increase the danger of their progressive marginalization. Modified HA.

88T6828

Brown, Marie Annette (U Washington, Seattle 98195). Employment during Pregnancy: Influences on Women's Health and Social Support. Health Care for Women International, 1987, 8, 2-3, 151-167.

As common as it has become for US women to remain employed during the prenatal period, little is known about what critical psychosocial influences affect an employed woman's health during pregnancy. Mail questionnaire data obtained from a cross-section of 313 expectant mothers in the latter half of pregnancy who were attending a prenatal clinic or childbirth education classes are used to compare employed & nonemployed women's experiences of support & health. Though some significant differences are revealed, their magnitude is very small. Discriminant analysis reveals specific health symptom differences between employed women & homemakers as well as those who differ in their plans to resume employment postbirth. In addition, differences in sources of support & perceived changes in support offered by partners are indicated. Thus, employment may weakly affect certain dimensions of pregnant women's health & support, though overall, findings do not substantiate arguments that employment is in any way detrimental to health. 4 Tables, 40 References. Modified HA.

88T6829

Buechler, Steven M. (Dept Sociology Mankato State U, MN 56001). Elizabeth Boynton Harbert and the Woman Suffrage Movement, 1870-1896. WM Signs, 1987, 13, 1, autumn, 78-97.

¶ Elizabeth Boynton Harbert was a prodigious reformer, author, journalist, & organizer whose involvements in the Midwest from 1870 to 1896 included woman suffrage, temperance, social science, women's clubs, & home economics. Her heretofore ignored biography richly illustrates the ideological transformation of the woman suffrage movement from a radical & emancipatory movement seeking women's rights, equality between the sexes, & the abolition of separate spheres to a narrow & conservative movement with an essentialist ideology of woman's nature that assumed reciprocity between the sexes & a distinct F nature that could be used to promote a more organically harmonious social system. It is argued that these shifts in suffrage ideology, as illustrated through Harbert's writings, were caused by the development of a distinctive Mc consciousness of harmony & equilibrium in response to class conflict & the pressures exerted by other reform movements, especially temperance, toward a more moderate suffrage ideology. Filtered through a leader like Harbert, these pressures resulted in a new suffrage ideology that sought the vote on the basis of a "God-given woman nature" & a "mother instinct for government" as a means of social reform & adjustment.

88T6830

Ferber, Marianne A. (U Illinois, Urbana). Citations and Networking. ♦ Gender & Society, 1988, 2, 1, Mar, 82-89.

¶ Based on citation analysis of articles written in each of 5 fields (developmental psychology, sociology, labor economics, financial economics, & mathematics) in 1982/83, it is shown that references to publications written by women constitute a significantly larger proportion of citations in articles written by Fs than in articles written by Ms in the same subfields. Further, the difference between citation patterns of M & F authors increases as the proportion of Fs in the discipline decreases, showing that these Fs are doubly disadvantaged in accumulating citations. These results suggest that the problems of members of an out-group tend to be most serious when their numbers are small, & that they will find it increasingly easier to gain acceptance & recognition as their numbers increase. 2 Tables, 30 References. Modified HA.

88T6831

Fillmore, Kaye Middleton (Alcohol Research Group Medical Research Instit San Francisco, 1816 Scenic Ave Berkeley CA 94709). Women's Drinking across the Adult Life Course as Compared to Men's. British Journal of Addiction, 1987, 82, 7, July, 801-811.

¶ Previous studies of drinking differences by age & sex are extended to describe the prevalence, incidence, & duration of multiple drinking patterns & problems in each decade of adult life for Fs as compared to Ms. Interview data collected from a US longitudinal probability sample of the adult population in 1967 & again in 1974 ($\Sigma N = 890$) are analyzed; in addition, a cohort analysis is conducted to assess abstinence & heavy frequent drinking using 3 data sets (1964/65, 1979, & 1984, $\Sigma N = 9,725$). Results suggest that the emergence & persistence of some drinking patterns that put persons at risk for serious alcohol problems occupy a smaller temporal space for Fs than for Ms. Fs are more likely to display these patterns in their 30s, while the risk for Ms remains high throughout the life course. Fs display higher rates of remission than do Ms across all decades. The cohort analysis supports the longitudinal results. 3 Tables, 4 Figures, 22 References. Modified HA.

88T6832

Greif, Geoffrey L. (School Social Work & Community Planning U Maryland, Baltimore 21201). Mothers without Custody. WM Social Work, 1987, 32, 1, Jan-Feb, 11-16.

¶ A national survey of 517 mothers who did not have custody of at least sights & reactors must be increased. However, current US policy on terrorism is fragmented & only semideveloped. Some recent Congressional initiatives for dealing with terrorism are reviewed. K. Hyatt

88T6822

Petras, James (State U. New York, Binghamton 13901), The Anatomy of State Terror: Chile, El Salvador, and Brazil, Am. Science and Society, 1987, 51, 3, fall, 314-338.

† It is argued that state terror is defined by the political interests it serves, & as such, is an integral part of the class struggle. The level of intensity & target(s) of state terror have specific political purposes: (1) to prevent changes in the ownership of property & distribution of wealth that are sought by the organized peasantry, Wcs, & popular social movements, & (2) to destroy all democratic political & social institutions. State terrorism must be understood within a broad historical context, not as an autonomous political act, but as the result of dynamic interrelationships between state activity, the accumulation process, & the projection of (US) hegemonic power. In Latin America, state terror networks are closely interrelated & are linked to a global terror network, with Washington, DC, serving as the center for the organization & financing of client-state terrorist institutions. It is shown that US promotion of the terror network has long been a significant foreign policy tool, & that the expansion of international capital has increased the use of terrorist military repression. Although emerging social movements & the world economic crisis have weakened the internal cohesion of state terrorist regimes, this situation can lead to reinforcement of the network due to US military intervention. These arguments are illustrated via in-depth case studies of the use of state terrorism in Chile, El Salvador, & Brazil. 15 References. K. Hyatt

88T6823

Weinberg, Leonard & Eubank, William Lee (Dept. Political Science

U. Nevada, Reno 89557), Italian Women Terrorists, Int. Terror, 1987, 9, 3, 241-262.

† The role of women in the prolonged Italian experience of political terrorism is examined using biographical information (obtained from major newspapers & court records) on 451 Fs active in terrorist groups between 1970 & 1984. Results indicate that the participation of women in terrorist activities differed from that of their M counterparts in 4 ways: Fs were more likely to become involved (1) at a later chronological age & later in the cycle of terrorist activities, (2) as a result of far more romantic connections rather than prior experience in other political organizations, (3) in groups with different ideological perspectives & ethos than those that attracted Ms, & (4) less often in leadership positions. It is argued that women's participation in political terrorism spawned by a general radicalization of political life & the emphasis placed on women's issues by extreme leftist movements. 4 Tables. K. Hyatt

88T6824

----, Report on the Brinks Incident, Int. Terrorism, 1987, 9, 3, 169-206.

† An analysis of the Brinks armored car robbery/murder case, which occurred 20 Oct 1981 in Nyack, NY, using data from newspaper accounts & semistructured interviews conducted with 25 criminal justice officials directly involved in various aspects of the case. The event is unique from previous terrorist incidents in the US in two respects: (1) it began not as a traditional terrorist act designed to attain publicity as a robbery to obtain operating funds for terrorist groups, & (2) it involved collective action by a coalition of terrorist groups. Despite differences, the examination of the incident highlights a number of issues relating to the law enforcement system's response to terrorist activity, including interagency coordination & cooperation, resource availability, investigation & prosecution conflicts, & security/management adequacy. A complete chronology of the incident, its investigation, trials of participants, & aftermath is provided. 1 Figure. K. Hyatt

The Monist

An International Quarterly Journal of General Philosophical Inquiry

Editor, John HOSPERS

Editorial Board: Henry Allison, William P. Alston, John M. Cooper, Dagfinn Føllesdal, R. Barcan Marcus, Joseph Margolis, Wallace I. Matson, Joseph Owens, Bruce Vermaseren, Wilfrid Sellars, Anita Silvers, John E. Smith, Richard Wasserstrom

Managing Editor: Sherwood J. B. SUGDEN

EACH ISSUE IS LIMITED TO ARTICLES ON A SINGLE GENERAL TOPIC. Communicators in advance with the Editor for special instructions. Two nonreturnable copies (one copy outside the U.S. and Canada) should be submitted NINE MONTHS PRIOR to the announced publication date. Papers should be prepared for anonymous submission to readers, and should be from 10 to 20 double-spaced typewritten pages in length, including covers.

SCHEDULED PUBLICATION DATES:

Vol. 71, No. 1	Jan., 1988	Philosophical Problems of Space Exploration
Vol. 71, No. 2	Apr., 1988	Aesthetics and the Histories of the Arts
Vol. 71, No. 3	July, 1988	Justification
Vol. 71, No. 4	Oct., 1988	Descartes and His Contemporaries
Vol. 72, No. 1	Jan., 1989	Logic as a Field of Knowledge
Vol. 72, No. 2	Apr., 1989	Kant's Critical Philosophy
Vol. 72, No. 3	July, 1989	Kant's Practical Philosophy
Vol. 72, No. 4	Oct., 1989	The Philosophy of R. G. Collingwood
Vol. 73, No. 1	Jan., 1990	Hellenistic Ethics

Editorial Office: School of Philosophy, University of Southern California
Los Angeles, CA 90089

Business Office: Box 600, La Salle, Illinois 61301

SUBSCRIPTION RATES: United States: Annual (4 issues): Institutions, $34.00; Individuals, $15.00. Single copies: $6.00. Foreign postage: Add 50 cents to single copy rate or $1.00 to subscription.

feminist literature are unfairly & dubiously characterized as chaotic & irrational. (3) Drawing on realist philosophy, Foord & Gregson argue that biological reproduction, heterosexuality, marriage, & the nuclear family are all necessary to the meaning of patriarchy, however, these notions are anything but transhistorical or necessary parts of M-F relations, as their contested history reveals. Modified AA

88T6839

Johanson, Louise (School Humanities Deakin U, Victoria 3217 Australia). Is Academic Feminism an Oxymoron?, Women's Studies International Forum, 1987, 10, 5, 529-532

† Any word or concept subject to a feminist critique is quickly revealed as a social construction whose so-called paradoxical status is but the beginning of redefinition & the foundation for political action. So it is with academic feminism & its status as an oxymoron. On the surface, it is contradictory to teach feminism within an exclusive authoritarian, patriarchal academy, however, personal experience in the Women's Studies Program at Deakin U, Victoria, Australia, reveals positive as well as negative sides of this paradox. By subverting the academy as the sole custodian of higher learning, confronting M knowledge with the possibility of feminist knowledge, & juxtaposing feminist ways of working & organizing with preexisting structures of power & status, new avenues of redefinition & political action have been exposed that undermine the definition of academic feminism as oxymoronic. 1 Reference. Modified HA

88T6840

Jordan, Pamela L. (U Washington, Seattle 98195). Differences in Network Structure, Social Support, and Parental Adaptation Associated with Maternal Employment Status, Health Care for Women International, 1987, 8, 2-3, 133-150

† An exploration of differences in social network structure, perceived social support, marital satisfaction, & postpartum adaptation associated with maternal employment status during the perinatal period. Using a repeated measures prospective design, mail questionnaire data were collected from 48 married couples in 2 midwestern US cities at 3 time periods: the third trimester of pregnancy, & 6 weeks & 6 months postpartum. Results indicate that there were more similarities than differences between employed & nonemployed mothers, although some interesting trends in network structure & support were evident. Differences seemed related to the complementarity of work & family roles at the time surveyed. Both groups exhibited similarly high levels of postpartum adaptation. Thus, in this financially secure & educated sample, results do not support popular conjecture about the deleterious effects of maternal employment on women, the couple relationship, or parental adaptation. 6 Tables, 47 References. Modified HA

88T6841

Killien, Marcia & Brown, Marie Annette (U Washington, Seattle 98195). Work and Family Roles of Women: Sources of Stress and Coping Strategies, Health Care for Women International, 1987, 8, 2-3, 169-184

† Women's lives are affected by the roles they assume as well as when & in what sequence & combination they assume them. The daily stressors & coping strategies experienced by women with differing work & family role configurations are investigated in a subsample of 92 women aged 18-45 drawn from a larger study in a city of the US Pacific Northwest. Rs represented 4 common typologies of multiple roles: married working mothers, single working mothers, married childless workers, & homemakers. Data obtained through telephone interviews & from health diaries, which Rs kept for 90 days, indicate that the major hassles they experienced were self-referent, involving physical & emotional symptoms, unfulfilled expectations, & doubts. The most common response to these hassles was doing nothing, followed by problem solving. While there were no significant differences in the incidence of daily hassles between groups, types of hassles & coping responses differed in rank order of prevalence. 10 Tables, 33 References. Modified HA

88T6842

Martin, Patricia Yancey (Florida State U, Tallahassee 32306). A Commentary on The Feminist Case against Bureaucracy by Kathy Ferguson, Women's Studies International Forum, 1987, 10, 5, 543-548.

† A review essay on a book by Kathy Ferguson, The Feminist Case against Bureaucracy (Philadelphia, Pa: Temple U Press, 1984 [see listing in IRPS No. 43]). Applying the theoretical perspective of Michel Foucault, Ferguson attempts to provide a radical critique of modern bureaucracies & explore feminism's potential for creating an alternative vision of society. The flaws of bureaucracy are detailed along with ways that feminism can be used to subvert it, leading to a radical reconceptualization of politics, work, & individual/interpersonal relations. It is argued that this book is problematic in that it resorts to stereotypical assumptions in its condemnation of bureaucracy & idealization of feminism, in addition, it fails to delineate how feminist alternatives are fundamentally different from other forms of collectivist organizations. However, it has the potential to raise readers' consciousness regarding the relevance of feminism to the restructuring of work organizations. 22 References. K. Hyatt

88T6843

Minkler, Meredith, Wallack, Lawrence & Madden, Patricia (Dept Social & Administrative Health Sciences School Public Health U California, Berkeley 94720). Alcohol and Cigarette Advertising in Ms. Magazine, Journal of Public Health Policy, 1987, 8, 2, summer, 164-179

† An examination of advertising policies of Ms. magazine, focused on advertisements for alcohol & cigarettes. In general, magazines that carry news items on harmful effects of tobacco tend to lose tobacco advertising & to suffer other penalties. Content analysis of major advertising carried in 4 "Beauty of Health" issues of Ms. published 1983-1986 & of 4 randomly selected comparison issues from the same years, as well as editorial & story content mentioning alcohol & tobacco (N of advertisements = 414), reveals alcohol as the single product appearing in the largest share of advertisements, cigarettes appear in relatively few advertisements, but these are often in prominent locations, such as the back cover. These products are often associated with fitness, wealth, romance, & challenging of traditional sex roles. A review of Ms. tables of contents for all issues through May 1986 reveals 188 articles concerned with health-related topics, none of which mentioned alcohol or tobacco in the title, nor is their role as a health risk emphasized in the content of articles or stories. 5 Tables, 30 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T6844

Pandey, Rajendra (Dept Humanities & Social Sciences Indian Institute of Technology, Kanpur 208016 Uttar Pradesh India). Rape Crimes and Victimization of Rape Victim in Free India, The Indian Journal of Social Work, 1986, 47, 2, July, 169-186.

† Studies of rape in India are few in number, as are studies of victimization of raped women. Analysis of published data for the years 1971-1979 illuminates the nature of rape. Serious underreporting exists for this crime, because women feel stigmatized by it & seek to avoid publicity. Rape victims are predominantly aged 16-30, but may be of any age. Victims suffer psychological, physical, & social harm of several kinds. The low status of women must be considered the ultimate source of this form of crime. 3 Tables, 81 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T6845

Schneider, Beth F. (U California, Santa Barbara 93106). Political Generations and the Contemporary Women's Movement, U.S. Sociological Inquiry, 1988, 58, 1, winter, 4-21

† That the nature of political & social change is shaped by the organization of gender is a fact obscured in the conceptualizations typically employed by political sociologists, who conceive of social movement activity & politics as inherently masculine & pertaining to the public world. In particular, the concept of political generation suffers from such a narrow focus. Political generations are taken as sex-neutral phenomena with no hint that political organization is based in the social organization of gender. The major assumption of generational analysis, ie, that generations are formed during youth & its accompanying period of rebellion & change, may capture the M, but possibly not the F experience. Nevertheless, the generational model might be usefully applied to an understanding of the growth & transformation of the women's movement. Here, contemporary media use of generational analysis is examined to reveal ways that media representation has shaped some women's movement dialogue. Feminist generational thinking is explored as it attempts to account for the history of the nineteenth- & twentieth-century women's movements & for the relations between young & old proponents in the contemporary movement. Possible directions for future research & reformulation are suggested. 48 References. Modified HA

88T6846

Starrin, Bengt & Larsson, Gerry (Section Community Medicine County Council Varmland, Box 426 S-651 07 Karlstad Sweden),

1 child age 18 or younger & who were members of Parents without Partners or Mothers without Custody; these data were augmented by telephone & personal interviews conducted with 50+ mothers. Results indicate that while a number of mothers felt guilty & uncomfortable in their role, a significant number felt well-adjusted. Multiple regression analysis identifies factors associated with feeling comfortable: lack of guilt, having voluntarily chosen the noncustodial status, a satisfactory relationship with the children, & the belief that the children were better off living with the father. Implications for mental health practitioners involve building self-esteem, resolving issues of role ambiguity, & helping the mother relate differently to the children, if that is desired. 1 Table. Modified AA

88T6833

Guadagnini, Marita (Dipartimento di Scienze Politiche, Università di Torino, I-10124 Italy). Una rappresentanza limitata: le donne nel Parlamento italiano dal 1948 a oggi (A Limited Representation: Italian Women Members of Parliament from 1948 to Today). Quaderni di Sociologia, 1987, 33, 8, 130-157. (JTA)

1 A review of the situation of women members of parliament (MPs) in Italy over the past forty years, based on empirical data from various studies. Aspects examined include: the number of Fs in the nine legislatures, their turnover rate, social background, recruitment mechanisms, & career patterns. An increasing tendency toward homogeneity between M & F MPs is attributed to the fact that both must follow a structured career path for access to parliament. The accumulation of personal resources is important for this career path. F politicians remain disadvantaged in this respect. The Italian Communist Party has by far the largest % of F MPs, because of its policy on Fs' involvement, & because its party structure outweighs some of the usual disadvantages of F politicians. This very fact points out the problem of Fs' autonomy vis-à-vis their party. Different profiles of F MPs are outlined, & some viable ways to improve the presence of Fs in parliament are discussed. 9 Tables. Modified HA

88T6834

Gunew, Sneja (School of Humanities, Deakin U., Victoria 3217 Australia). Is Academic Sisterhood an Oxymoron? Women's Studies International Forum, 1987, 10, 5, 533-536.

1 Contradictions that occur when women try to work together as a feminist collective in an academic situation that promotes individualism & hierarchies are examined. Rather than seeking a model based on family relationships, it is suggested that women must develop new forms of professionally based friendships. Example is provided of an all-woman course team at Deakin U., Victoria, Australia, preparing an interdisciplinary, off-campus course on feminist theory. It is shown how differences that existed among the members were constructively channelled into illustrating the differences among various kinds of feminism. 15 References. Modified HA

88T6835

Hakim, Catherine (Dept. Employment Social Science Branch, Steel House, Tothill St. London SW1H 9NF England). Review Article: Women at Work: Recent Research on Women's Employment. Work, Employment and Society, 1988, 2, 1, Mar., 103-113.

1 A review essay on books by Veronica Beechey & Tessa Perkins, A Matter of Hours: Women, Part-Time Work and the Labour Market (Cambridge: Polity Press, 1987); Cynthia Cockburn, Machinery of Domination: Women, Men and Technical Know-How (London: Pluto Press, 1985); Shirley Dex, Women's Occupational Mobility: A Lifetime Perspective (Basingstoke: Macmillan, 1987); Shirley Dex & Lois B. Shaw, British and American Women at Work: Do Equal Opportunities Policies Matter? (Basingstoke, Hants: Macmillan, 1986); Helena Znaniecka Lopata, Cheryl Miller, & Debra Barnewolt, City Women in America: Work, Jobs, Occupations, Careers (New York: Praeger, 1986); A. T. Mallier & M. J. Rosser, Women and the Economy: A Comparative Study of Britain and the USA (Basingstoke, Hants: Macmillan, 1986); & Sylvia Walby, Patriarchy at Work: Patriarchal and Capitalist Relations in Employment (Oxford: Polity Press, 1986 (see listings in IRPS No. 43)). These seven books analyze developments concerning women's position in the labor market in the US & GB from the late nineteenth century to the present. Mallier & Rosser offer an introductory economics text that synthesizes statistical data on women's employment, though they fail to provide a critical comparison of the situation in each country. Lopata, Miller, & Barnewolt complement this work with a review of the social science literature on a wide variety of topics related to women's employment. Beechey & Perkins present seven case studies from the UK (England) of the growth in F part-time work since WW2 in manufacturing & public sector industries, & offer comparisons with countries. Dex offers a secondary analysis of data from the 1981 & Employment Survey, summarizing recent trends in occupational mobility over their life cycle. Dex & Shaw provide a case study of employment patterns in both countries, with focus on the equal opportunity policies/practices on F occupational opportunities. The conclusion found in other studies that child care provision has a dramatic impact on women's employment choices is confirmed. Cockburn elaborates on H. Hartmann's theory of the relationship between patriarchy & capitalism & its effect on women's LF participation (see Is Patriarchy, and Job Segregation by Sex? in Blaxall, M., B. (Eds.), Women and the Workplace: The Implications of Occupational Segregation Vol. 1, Chicago: U of Chicago Press, 1976, 137). Three historical case studies of cotton textiles, engineering, & work. Cockburn also uses case studies to illustrate how lack of competence (or the lack of it) is a major factor in occupational segregation. M control over technology is shown to limit Fs' access to training; however, equally important cultural barriers are not mentioned. Suggestions for further research are provided. 11 References.

88T6836

Hamilton, Roberta (Dept. Sociology, Queen's U., Kingston, K7L 3N6). Does Misogyny Matter? Its Reproduction and Consequences for Social Progress. Studies in Political Economy, summer, 123-139.

1 It is argued that misogyny matters in a more systematic & usually thought, because misogyny is not just a word used to describe nasty behavior, but rather, directs attention to a set of relations, & behaviors that are embedded within all other social relations, including relations of economic exploitation, political power & national hierarchies. Drawing on the works of Shulman (1970) & Gad (1977), the reproductive influence on relations of domination & subordination between women is described, & how the resulting psychology of power & internalized in the psychosexual development of both men & women is examined. Such an analysis is particularly important for cause it sheds light on what goes wrong with successful movements, & on why the issues around women, family, & sex are the first to be abandoned in the postrevolutionary situation. Thinking on development & the Third World must take account of hierarchy as an intrinsic aspect of their analysis & their politics. Modified AA

88T6837

Hatem, Mervat (Howard U., Washington DC 20059). Patriarchy as Competing Paradigms for the Study of Middle Eastern Women. Journal of Comparative Studies in Society and History, 4, Oct., 811-818.

1 Over the past nine years, Western analysts of the social position of Muslim women have increasingly relied on a Marxian approach. Marxian categories creates analytical limitations, however their primary focus is not on gender relations, they are often blind, & they do not cast sufficient light on patriarchy as a system of domination. An alternative approach is recommended that is more holistic & that focuses on its autonomy. Some recent works are reviewed from this point of view. Stoddard

88T6838

Johnson, Louise (Dept. Geography, Waikato U., Hamilton, New Zealand). Un/Realist Perspectives: Patriarchy and Feminism. Antipode, 1987, 19, 2, Sept., 210-217.

1 Three criticisms of Jo Ford's & Nicky Gregson's "Patriarchy: A Reconceptualisation" (see SA 35:3/87R6793) are presented. The quest to formulate a unitary, all-embracing theory of women's oppression is challenged as an ideal that has long been pursued by archaic theorists. In the past, such quests have excluded women from view & from history the sexed positions of the men who pursued them. Such theories are then seen as universally applicable, not unlike what Ford & Gregson claim for patriarchy. Inverse, historical, & politically grounded formulations of patriarchy

References HA

88T6855

Ebomoyi, Ebogie (U Ilorin, Kwara State Nigeria). Prevalence of Female Circumcision in Two Nigerian Communities, Sex Roles, 1987, 17, 3-4, Aug, 139-151

† Questionnaire interview data regarding the prevalence of F circumcision in 2 Nigerian communities (N = 1,150 Ms & 1,150 Fs) reveal that 90% of the Fs interviewed were themselves circumcised by traditional healers; cultural traditions that support this practice are described. Over 50% of the Rs supported circumcision, believing that the practice attenuated the sexual urges of young Fs, reduced clitoral growth, & enhanced childbirth. Grandfathers & fathers were reported by 36+% of the Rs to support F circumcision. Strategies to eliminate this practice are discussed. 7 Tables, 1 Figure, 25 References. Modified AA

88T6856

Irazzetti, Lisa & Rueschemeyer, Marilyn (Brown U, Providence RI 02912). Women's Many Places, W Contemporary Sociology, 1988, 17, 1, Jan, 1-4

† A review essay on books by Patricia Caplan, Class and Gender in India: Women and Their Organization in a South Indian City (London: Tavistock, 1986); Susan Dorsky, Women of Amran: A Middle Eastern Ethnographic Study (Salt Lake City: U of Utah Press, 1986); Scarlett T. Epstein, Kate Crehan, Annemarie Gerzer, & Jurgen Sass (Eds.), Women, Work and Family in Britain and Germany (New York: St Martin's Press, 1986); Joanna Liddle & Rama Joshi, Daughters of Independence: Gender, Caste and Class in India (London: Zed, 1986); & Elizabeth Vallance & Elizabeth Davies, Women of Europe: Women MEAs and Equality Policy (Cambridge: Cambridge U Press, 1986 (see listings in IRPS No. 43)). These studies examine the status of women in a variety of societies, highlighting how they are affected by colonialism, neocolonialism, & industrialization. They are especially valuable as correctives to Western parochialism, offering an opportunity to compare women's positions in India, the Near East, & Western Europe. In ensemble, they also demonstrate the complexity of women's issues. W. H. Stoddard

88T6857

Ganong, Lawrence H. & Coleman, Marilyn (School Nursing U Missouri, Columbia 65211). Sex, Sex Roles, and Familial Love, The Journal of Genetic Psychology, 1987, 148, 1, Mar, 45-52

† An examination of the influence of sex-role socialization on the expression of love among family members, based on data from 51 M & 90 F undergraduates who completed several scales & the Bem Sex-Role Inventory. Data were analyzed with separate 2 x 4 (sex x sex role) multivariate analyses of variance. Results indicate no interaction effect, & sex did not affect the expression of love toward a family member. The sex-role effect was significant: androgynous Rs were more aware of love feelings & more expressive of love feelings than were the masculine, feminine, & undifferentiated Rs. Sex-role orientation was a better predictor than sex of love behaviors & feelings in intimate relationships. It was also found that androgynous persons experience more loving family relationships than do sex-stereotyped or undifferentiated persons. 1 Table, 26 References. Modified HA

88T6858

Gill, Sandra, Stockard, Jean, Johnson, Miriam & Williams, Suzanne (Gettysburg Coll, PA 17325). Measuring Gender Differences: The Expressive Dimension and Critique of Androgyny Scales, Sex Roles, 1987, 17, 7-8, Oct, 375-400

† It is argued that new measures of gender differences in personality are needed that are based on theoretically meaningful, unidimensional variables. Two of the most commonly used androgyny scales, the Bem Sex-Role Inventory (BSRI) & the Personal Attributes Questionnaire (PAQ), are examined, & a new instrument is described that avoids many of the methodological problems associated with these measures (Johnson, M. M., et al., "Expressiveness Reevaluated," School Review, 1975, 83, 617-644). Replications of the scale via questionnaires & mail surveys administered to 4 populations in Ore-2 samples of U students (Σ N = 850): 250 high school students, & 430 M & F nurses are reported. Results, along with multivariate analyses of the BSRI & PAQ, indicate that instrumentality & autonomy are not unitary concepts, but involve subdimensions. Specifically, Ms & Fs differ chiefly in their relational orientation (expressiveness), a dimension that is distinguishable from instrumentality & autonomy/independence. Additional research is needed to further develop & validate the instrument or explore other ways of measuring the relationality dimension. Implications for ideas on gender & personality are discussed. 5 Tables, 65 References. K. Hyatt

88T6859

Grint, Keith (Dept Human Sciences Brunel U, Uxbridge Middlesex UB8 3PH England). Women and Equality: The Acquisition of Equal Pay in the Post Office 1870-1961, Sociology, 1988, 22, 1, Feb, 87-108

† While gender-related inequalities at work remain common, examples of their elimination, though rare, do exist. An empirical examination of the acquisition of equal pay by women in the GB post office between 1870 & 1961 is conducted using data from various sources. Using the dual theoretical axes of strategic action & structural constraint, the collective action of social groups & the structural constraints within which they acted are identified. Arguing that structure & action cannot be isolated from each other except for heuristic purposes, it is concluded that Ms were the primary inhibitors of equal pay, & politically buttressed market forces its crucial promoter. 91 References. HA

88T6860

Hebel, Jutta (Seminar Soziologie Politikwissenschaft und Didaktik Geschichte U Gottingen, D-3400 Federal Republic Germany). Zum Wandel der familialen Stellung der Frau in der VR China (The Change of Women's Position in the Chinese Family), Zeitschrift für Sozialisationsforschung und Erziehungssoziologie, 1988, 8, 1, Jan, 25-39 (G:R)

† Achieving equality for women in the family & in society is one of the most important goals of socialist movements, & Chinese political leaders emphasize the attainment of this goal. Legislative & political measures to overcome the traditional Chinese family system have been introduced. An attempt is made here to see if there are signs in China of a change in the family toward equality. 1 Appendix, 32 References. Modified HA

88T6861

Heilbrun, Alfred B., Jr. & Mulqueen, Constance M. (Dept Psychology Emory U, Atlanta GA 30322). The Second Androgyny: A Proposed Revision in Adaptive Priorities for College Women, Sex Roles, 1987, 17, 3-4, Aug, 187-207

† The ideological impact of the feminist movement in the US on sex-role research has been to enhance the value attributed to androgyny. Here, 4 studies are reported in which Coll women showing 2 forms of androgyny (balanced & blended) are compared with each other & with masculine or feminine women (Σ N = 302) on various indexes of maladjustment in psychometric questionnaires. The results across studies revealed that balanced androgynes reported the highest level of day-to-day stress, Type A attitudes, & menstrual distress, & blended androgynes the least. However, in a comparison of personality/behavioral traits associated with eating disorders, feminine women were the most maladapted & the 2 types of androgynes were rather similar to each other. It is concluded that the traditional conception of androgyny as a balance between prominent masculine & feminine features, flexibly displayed across situations, represented a formula for maladaptive behavior in Coll women & that blended androgyny was the most adaptive sex-role outcome. 4 Tables, 53 References. Modified AA

88T6862

Howard, Judith A. (Dept Sociology U Washington, Seattle 98195). Gender Differences in Sexual Attitudes: Conservatism or Powerlessness?, Gender & Society, 1988, 2, 1, Mar, 103-114

† A reevaluation of research on gender differences in sexual attitudes shows it to be characterized by misuse of attitude scales & misinterpretation of gender difference evidence that is obtained. A study by Susan & Clyde Hendrick, Michelle J. Slapion-Foote, & Franklin H. Foote ("Gender Differences in Sexual Attitudes," Journal of Personality & Social Psychology, 1985, 48, 1630-1642) is used to illustrate the pitfalls. The gender differences in sexual attitudes obtained in this study, characterized by Hendrick et al as indicative of women's greater sexual conservatism, are interpreted here as reflections of the different social structural positions of Fs & Ms. 1 Table, 21 References. HA

88T6863

Kay, Diana (Dept Sociology U Glasgow, G12 8RT Scotland). The Politics of Gender in Exile, Sociology, 1988, 22, 1, Feb, 1-21

† An exploration of the experiences of Chilean Ms & Fs (N = 36) exiled in Scotland since the military overthrow of the Chilean Popular Unity government in Sept 1973, using data from in-depth interviews. The very

Coping with Unemployment—A Contribution to the Understanding of Women's Unemployment, Social Science and Medicine, 1987, 25, 2, 163-171

¶ An examination of individual reactions of women to unemployment, using a grounded theory approach to analyze interview data from 36 unemployed women in a Swedish county. Reactions to unemployment are seen in relation to two core variables: relation to wage labor, & relation to alternative activities. These define four groups of unemployed women: the give-uppers, the clenchers, the refocusers, & the ambivalents. Unemployment had serious effects on the give-uppers & the clenchers; on the other hand, the refocusers enjoyed their lives & replaced the loss of work with other meaningful activities. 23 References. Modified HA

88T6847

Stefanizzi, Sonia (Istit. Universitario Europeo, San Domenico Fiesole, Firenze, Italy), Coscienza femminista e mobilitazione delle donne (Feminist Consciousness and the Mobilization of Women), Quaderni di Sociologia, 1987, 33, 9, 125-130 (ITA)

¶ A review essay on books by: (1) Ethel Klein, Gender Politics: From Consciousness to Mass Politics (Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard U. Press, 1984), & (2) Mary F. Katzenstein & Carol M. Mueller (Eds.), The Women's Movements of the United States and Western Europe: Feminist Consciousness, Political Opportunity and Public Policy (Philadelphia, Pa.: Temple U. Press, 1987 [see listings in IRPS No. 43]). These two works offer contrasting explanations for the development of the political activism of Fs. Klein sees the presence of a feminist consciousness as the principal unifying motivator. Katzenstein & Mueller cast doubt on any direct connection between this consciousness & political mobilization, & interpret this development as the outcome of processes of exchange & negotiation between Fs & the other actors within the political system. Modified HA

88T6848

Teti, Vito (U. Calabria, I-87036 Rende, Italy), Note sui comportamenti della donne sole degli "americani" durante la prima emigrazione in Calabria (Notes on the Behavior of the Women Left Behind by the "Americans" during the First Emigration from Calabria), ♦ Studi Emigrazione/Études Migrations, 1987, 24, 85, Mar., 13-46 (ITA)

¶ The impact of emigration from Calabria, Italy, to the US at the end of the nineteenth century on Calabria's traditional peasant society is investigated, drawing on various studies & historical evidence, including popular songs of the period. The culture & psychology both of those who left & those who stayed behind underwent deep change. The relationship between the "two villages"—the community of origin & the new community in the US—is examined, with focus on the women left behind (wives, sisters, & daughters of emigrants) & the men without women in the new country. By the early twentieth century, women became (sometimes unknowingly) the protagonists of profound changes in society, the family, & the relationship between the sexes. Modified HA

88T6849

Tinker, Irene & Jacquette, Jane (Equity Policy Center, 2001 S. St. NW, Washington, DC 20009), UN Decade for Women: Its Impact and Legacy, U. World Development, 1987, 15, 3, Mar., 419-427

¶ An assessment of the short- & long-term influences of the UN Decade for Women on three levels: (1) women & women's groups, (2) national governments, & (3) the international system itself. Not only was there little agreement among these three groups at the beginning of the decade on an appropriate agenda for women, but there were differences within each arena. The impact of the Decade for Women can be measured by progress toward creating a consensus on what women's issues are & how to develop policies to deal with them, & by the growth of organization at all levels to press for change & implement new ideas. 10 References. F. Rasmussen

88T6850

Tune, Ruth Anne (U. Texas, Austin 78712), The Politics of Motherhood, ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International: A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 5, Nov., 1332-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8717555.

88T6851

Walker, Cheryl, Review Article: Women's Studies on the Move, Journal of Southern African Studies, 1987, 13, 3, Apr., 433-438

¶ A review essay on books by: Fatima Meer (Ed.), Factory and Family: The Divided Lives of South Africa's Women Workers (Durban: Inst. for Black Research, 1984); Jane Barrett et al., South African Women on the Move (London: CIRR & Zed Books, 1985); Suzanne Gordon, A Talent for Tomorrow: Life Stories of South African Servants (Johannesburg: Ravan Press, 1985), & Lesley Lawson, Working Women in South Africa (London: Pluto, 1986 [1985], see listings in IRPS No. 43). Over the past decade, increased attention has been paid to the political & occupational status of women in South Africa, though sexual discrimination continues to take a back seat to the issues of apartheid. These books represent the forefront of new debates on the position of women & their role in society, with focus on the experiences of black Wc Fs. Their publication indicates a growing legitimization of women's studies in South Africa, though they are more popular texts than academic studies. Meer offers a bilingual text (English/Zulu) that explores the "divided lives" of Indian & African black women factory workers in metropolitan Durban using interview data. Barrett et al. combine interviews with life histories to explore a wide range of political issues related to African women's position at work & in the family & community. Gordon provides life histories of domestic workers in Johannesburg, & Lawson uses a variety of qualitative data to examine the changing position of women in the South African LF. It is designed as a resource book for use in alternative education, & achieves clarity & coherence without oversimplification. K. Hyatt

88T6852

Zerbi, Ghjermana de, Arpin di ghjumenta un tomba cavallu, ou, De la difficulté d'une voie/voix féministe corse (The Difficulty of a Feminist Voice or Way in Corsica), ♦ Peuples Méditerranéens/Mediterranean Peoples, 1987, 38-39, Jan-June, 219-226. (FRE)

¶ Reasons why the Corsican Women's Movement, started in 1980, failed after only two years are investigated. The following obstacles to raising feminist consciousness in Corsica are identified: (1) the patriarchal structure of Corsican society; (2) an aging, conservative population where any kind of progressive movement has difficulty taking hold, & (3) the conflict between feminism & nationalism. Corsican nationalism is rooted in tradition, & the nationalists consider challenges to the traditional F role as a threat to Corsican society. Modified HA

83 sociology of gender & gender relations

88T6853

Campbell, Paul Vance (Utah State U., Logan 84322), The Classroom Modification of Children's Gender Stereotyping of Careers, ♦ Dissertation Abstracts International: A: The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1987, 48, 6, Dec., 1547-A. Available from UMI, Ann Arbor, MI. Order No. DA8719470.

88T6854

Collmann, Jeff (U. Tennessee, Knoxville 37916), "I'm Proper Number One Fighter, Me": Aborigines, Gender, and Bureaucracy in Central Australia, ♦ Gender & Society, 1988, 2, 1, Mar., 9-23.

¶ Aboriginal fringe-dwellers in central Australia emphasize their independence of the white-dominated world around them. Because of differences in their means of support, men & women have developed variations on this perspective of independence & personal power. Ms. present themselves in terms of their white employers & base their personal collateral on those links. Fs stress their ability to care for their families without help from others & present themselves as able to play all social roles in the central Australian world. This image of woman as universal actor places moral premiums on the protection of domestic interests at the expense of wider gender, ethnic, or class interests. These ideas are explored through analysis of the life story of one woman, Katy Mayhew. Although obtained in an interview setting, the occasion of Katy's story became a life event through which she, her daughter, & her "sisters" reflected on their lives as aboriginal women. It is argued that histories of life events are particularly appropriate ways for people to reflect on the meaning of their mundane, everyday lives in contexts such as aboriginal Australia, which are dominated by bureaucratic frames, processes, & power. ¶

88T6871

Pryor, John B. (Dept Psychology Illinois State U, Normal 61761). Sexual Harassment Proclivities in Men, Sex Roles, 1987, 17, 5-6, Sept, 269-290

* An attempt is made to develop & validate a method of assessing individual differences in Ms' proclivities toward the sexual harassment of Fs. Based on the assumption that severe forms of sexual harassment are conceptually similar to rape, a self-report technique used to study rape proclivities (see SA 30:5/82M6781) is used to design a multifactor scale to measure likelihood of sexually harassing (LSH). The LSH questionnaire contains 10 hypothetical scenarios involving M & F actors in social relationships of varying power discrepancies, & requires Rs to report how they would behave in each situation knowing that no negative consequences would result from their actions. The convergent, discriminant, & behavioral validity of the questionnaire were tested in 3 separate studies involving M undergraduates ($\Sigma N = 432$) at Illinois State U & the U of Notre Dame. Rs also completed other scales variously assessing their sex-role attitudes, sexual beliefs, opinion of feminism, acceptance of interpersonal violence, empathy, belief in the rape myth, social desirability, Machiavellianism, & authoritarianism—or participated in an experiment designed to investigate situational effects on the interpretation of touching as sexual harassment. Results provide a partial profile of Ms who are more likely to sexually harass Fs, as well as the circumstances under which such tendencies are more likely to be expressed. In addition, results testify to the validity & reliability of the LSH questionnaire as a useful instrument in studying sexual behavior, suggestions for further uses of the instrument are offered. 2 Tables, 2 Figures, 47 References. K. Hyatt

88T6872

Richer, Stephen (Carleton U, Ottawa Ontario K1S 5B6). Schooling and the Gendered Subject: An Exercise in Planned Social Change, U La Revue Canadienne de Sociologie et d'Anthropologie/The Canadian Review of Sociology and Anthropology, 1988, 25, 1, Feb, 98-107

* An examination of the impact in an Ottawa, Ontario, elementary school of attempts to change traditional conceptions of gender. Student drawings secured from children in grades 1-6 in a "typical" school before & after a 7-year consciousness-raising program were utilized as indicators of children's gendered subjectivity. The results point to a strengthening of gender differentiation over the 7 years, raising the question of the school's efficacy in promoting gender-related change. 2 Tables, 19 References. HA

ences HA

88T6873

Turk, Judy VanSlyke (H. H. Herbert School Journalism & Mass Communication U Oklahoma, Norman 73019). Sex-Role Stereotyping in Writing the News, U Journalism Quarterly, 1987, 64, 2-3, summer-autumn, 613-617

* In a replication of an earlier study conducted at Syracuse U (Burnes, James, et al, "The Effect of Gender of Source and Reporter on News Coverage," unpublished paper presented at the Assoc of Education in Journalism & Mass Communication, Gainesville, Fla, 1984) seeking to determine whether bias & stereotypes filter into reporters' consciousness, affecting what they write about women, or whether reporters successfully avoid the influence of such bias—a quasi-experiment was conducted using 161 student reporters at 2 US Us, in which the gender of the reporters & the gender of their sources of information were varied. The findings indicated no blatant pattern of gender-based stereotyping, & no statistically significant interaction effect between gender of reporter & source gender, but there was evidence of at least subtle bias in the way the reporters treated the F source vis-à-vis the M source. M reporters more readily described the F source in personal terms than they did the M source, while F reporters were somewhat more even-handed. The fact that news stories about the F source tended to be longer may also indicate subtle bias, as if the length was justified because the F who did not fit the traditional F stereotype was therefore more unusual & newsworthy than the M who was just doing what Ms are "supposed" to do. 1 Table. Modified AA

88T6874

Wiley, Mary Glenn & Woolley, Dale E. (U Illinois, Chicago 60680). Interruptions among Equals: Power Plays That Fail, Gender & Society, 1988, 2, 1, Mar, 90-102

* In an experiment investigating whether interrupting would affect the perceived power, identity traits, job performance, & interpersonal relationships of equally situated M & F speakers, the genders of the interrupter & the interrupted speaker were varied in hypothetical transcripts of conversations between two corporate vice presidents. Questionnaire responses of 107 linguistics undergraduates regarding the transcripts revealed no significant effects of interrupting or being interrupted on perceptions of the relative power of M & F speakers. However, the interrupter, regardless of gender, was perceived as more successful & driving, but less socially acceptable, reliable, & companionable, than the interrupted speaker. 4 Tables, 1 Appendix, 20 References. Modified HA

Document Delivery Service

The costs of reproduction are: US $0.25 per reproduced page. Orders must be PREPAID (unprepaid orders cannot be acknowledged or returned) and sent to SOCIOLOGICAL ABSTRACTS, INC. (P.O. Box 22206, San Diego, CA 92122, USA) together with the SA accession number and the complete citation of the document to be reproduced. To calculate price per document, multiply the number of pages as indicated in the citation of the abstract by US $0.25 and add a US $1.50 search fee per document. POSTAGE is EXTRA. Below is a table for postage fees that vary by weight/size of paper.

No. of Pages	US & Canada Postage Fee	All Other Countries
		Postage Fee	Air Mail
1-5	$0.39	US $1.40	Surface US $1.00
6-10	$0.73	$2.24	$1.90
11-15	$1.07	$2.78	$2.30
16-20	$1.41	$3.32	$2.75
21+	Additional multiples as above

CONFERENCE papers are available ONLY when the following notation precedes the text of the abstract: * "Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search and postage. Length: pp." For copies of paper without this notation, write directly to the author, whose address is listed in the citation.

different accounts of political exile given by Ms & Fs are related to their different location & involvement in public & private spheres. During a period of accelerated social change from a period of socialist experimentation & a military dictatorship in Chile to exile in a developed capitalist country both public & private spheres undergo dramatic quantitative & qualitative shifts. The impact of these shifts for relations between M & F exiles is highlighted. It is argued that public & private spheres were brought into a new & more conflictual relationship in exile, politicizing areas of life that had been largely unexamined during Popular Unity. The impact of these changes for women's experiences of subordination in the home & marriage & on Fs' ability to formulate their grievances as public issues are explored. 28 References. HA

88T6864

Luhmann, Niklas (Fakultät Soziologie U Bielefeld, D-4800 1 Federal Republic Germany), Frauen, Männer und George Spencer Brown (Women, Men, and George Spencer Brown), Zeitschrift für Soziologie, 1988, 17, 1, Feb, 47-71 (GfR).

¶ Women's studies must define its object by drawing a distinction between women & men. A radical logic for this purpose is proposed by George Spencer Brown (Laws of Form, London 1971) a nonstationary calculus for processing distinctions. Here, some of the consequences of the injunction to "draw a distinction" are explored, & two constraints are developed. One is the apparent arbitrariness of the distinction chosen why women/men & not, eg. true/untrue? This problem is solved by the instruction to observe the observer who operates with his/her distinction. The other refers to societal & historical conditions of using distinctions to connect disparate issues. As the society changes its primary form of differentiation, moving from stratification to functional differentiation, the men/women distinction can no longer be used in an asymmetric sense, giving men alone the function of representing the total system within the system. The corresponding semantic must be replaced with a semantic of equality, ie, the paradox of the system within the system must be replaced with the paradox of the nondistinguishability of the distinguished. Some consequences of this change of paradox are investigated with reference to its solutions for the feminist movement. 56 References. Modified HA

88T6865

Morgan, Michael (U Massachusetts, Amherst 01003), Television, Sex-Role Attitudes, and Sex-Role Behavior, ♦ Journal of Early Adolescence, 1987, 7, 3, fall, 269-282.

¶ Amount of TV viewing, sex-role attitudes, & sex-role behavior were measured via questionnaire at 2 points in time in a sample of 287 Ru Minn eighth graders. The sex-role measures concerns Rs' attitudes about the sex-specific appropriateness of various household chores & their own self-reported tendency to perform those chores. The data show that TV viewing makes an independent contribution to adolescents' sex-role attitudes over time, but that TV is not related to their actual behavior. The relationship between viewing & attitudes, however, is mediated by behavior, but in different directions for boys & girls. Finally, there is a reciprocal relationship between amount of viewing & the degree of congruence between sex-role attitudes & behavior. 5 Tables, 32 References. HA

88T6866

Naldoo, Josephine C. & Davis, J. Campbell (Dept Psychology Wilfrid Laurier U, Waterloo Ontario N2L 3C5), Canadian South Asian Women in Transition: A Dualistic View of Life, ♦ Journal of Comparative Family Studies, 1988, 19, 2, summer, 311-327.

¶ Interview data collected during a major study of South Asian & Anglo-Celtic women (N = 298 & 153, respectively) in metropolitan Toronto, Ontario, support the hypothesis of a dualistic complementary attitude toward life among South Asian women, who are traditional about family, marriage, & religion, but contemporary about education & careers outside the home. In contrast, the Anglo-Celtic sample is consistently contemporary. The implications of the South Asian dualistic attitude for the family & the larger society are discussed. 5 Tables, 35 References. Modified HA

88T6867

Osterbusch, Suzanne E., Kelgher, Sharon M., Miller, Bala & Linsk, Nathan L. (Dept Medical Social Work Coll Associated Health Professions U Illinois, Chicago 60612), Community Care Policies and Gender Justice, International Journal of Health Services, 1987, 17, 2, 217-232.

¶ The current approach in the US to the provision of community care to the elderly interacts with the feminized structure of family caregiving foster inequities for women, who provide the bulk of informal, unpaid care. The central concern of present policies with limiting eligibility, rationing benefits results in policies that reduce the choices of these carers, many of whom are already substantially disadvantaged by their economic position in society. It is argued that gender justice requires the development of policies that address the needs & rights of carers & elderly by providing necessary supports to families, including, when appropriate, adequate compensation to carers. An approach is suggested that take into account the relationship of the adequacy of government support to the capacity of individuals to freely choose the caregiving role. 1 Table, 41 References. HA

88T6868

Perper, Timothy & Weis, David L. (717 Pemberton St, Philadelphia PA 19147), Proceptive and Rejective Strategies of U.S. and Canadian College Women, ♦ Journal of Sex Research, 1987, 23, 4, N, 455-480.

¶ An investigation of proceptivity-F behavior patterns that initiate maintain a sexual interaction-in US & Canadian Coll women (N = 48, respectively). Data were obtained from essays in which Rs explained how they would seduce & reject a man & from questionnaire assessing sexual conservatism/liberalism. Thematic analysis of the essays reveals that 87.2% mentioned proceptive themes. Degree of conservatism was not related to proceptivity either within or between US & Canadian samples. Proceptive strategies were described in 22 separate themes as an escalating set of verbal & nonverbal signals for communicating sexual interest to a man. Twenty-three rejection themes were identified, & rejection strategies fell into two categories: avoid proceptivity & incomplete proceptivity. Proceptive & rejective scripts assign symbolic meaning to specific behavior patterns, & M-F conflict may arise when men & women do not share these meanings. These scripts may allow women both to choose M partners & to limit sexual intimacy while assessing the man's potential as a partner. 3 Tables, 52 References. Modified HA

88T6869

Pillard, Richard C. & Weinrich, James D. (Family Studies Laboratory Dept Biobehavioral Sciences Boston U Medical Center, N 02118), The Periodic Table Model of the Gender Transpositions: Part I. A Theory Based on Masculinization and Defeminization of the Brain, ♦ Journal of Sex Research, 1987, 23, 4, Nov, 425-454.

¶ A periodic table model of the gender transpositions—ie, atypical masculinity, femininity, sexual object choice, gender identity, or clothing choice is presented. People have neural substrates that have been subjected to particular combinations of two distinct biobehavioral processes: masculinization & defeminization. It is hypothesized that individuals exhibit behaviors reflecting particular degrees of masculinization &/or defeminization, at least probabilistically. Therefore, each sexological group is characterized by a distinct distribution of its members centered about one particular combination of the two. Also considered are the possible mechanisms of brain masculinization & defeminization—noting genetic, hormonal, & environmental influences. 3 Figures, 107 References. Modified HA

88T6870

Preston, Kathleen & Stanley, Kimberley (Dept Psychology Humboldt State U, Arcata CA 95521), 'What's the Worst Thing...?' Gender-Directed Insults, Sex Roles, 1987, 17, 3-4, Aug, 209-219.

¶ Sex differences in language usage—specifically, the knowledge of & willingness to use taboo words—were investigated via a questionnaire administered to M & F undergraduate Coll students (Σ N = 164). Rs were asked to report the "worst thing" one person could say about another. About Fs, Fs about Ms, & each sex about their own. Responses (N = 1) different words & phrases) were sorted into 7 categories & subjected to chi-square analysis; their folk-linguistic content was also examined. Results indicate a remarkable similarity between Ms & Fs in their knowledge & expression of the vernacular, with the most frequent response being vulgar &/or sexual. However, highly significant differences were found in insults attributed/directed to the two sexes: insinuations of sexual looseness were directed solely at Fs, while those referring to homosexual behavior were aimed exclusively at Ms (by other Ms). It is concluded that M & F Coll students share a similar vocabulary of insults that is generally gender-specific & reflect conventional gender attitudes, particularly sexual double standards. 4 Tables, 27 References. K. Hyatt

3000 marxist sociology

63 marxist sociology

88T6875

Albritton, Robert R. (York U, North York Ontario M3J 1P3). Perry Anderson's Materialism. ♦ Philosophy of the Social Sciences, 1987, 17, 3, Sept, 439-441

A review of a book by Perry Anderson, In the Tracks of Historical Materialism (London: Verso, 1983 [see listing in IRPS No. 43]). A major theme of this book is the crisis in Marxism that Anderson sees as existing primarily in Latin countries. Anderson critiques structuralism & poststructuralism & argues that neither can challenge a self-confident historical materialism. Anderson also argues for the continuing strength of Marxism as a body of socialist theory, though seeing a need for research in four areas: the political structure of socialist democracy, the pattern of advanced socialist economy, sociocultural patterns of libertarian levelling, & international relations between socialist countries. Unfortunately, Anderson's call for a reunification of theory & practice disregards the weaknesses of Marxist theory as it now exists. W. H. Stoddard

88T6876

Anderson, Kevin (Northern Illinois U, DeKalb 60115). Lenin, Bukharin, and the Marxian Concepts of Dialectics and Imperialism: A Study in Contrasts. ♦ Journal of Political and Military Sociology, 1987, 15, 2, fall, 197-212

Though many writers have stressed the affinity between Nikolai Bukharin & V. I. Lenin, only Lenin made a serious study of G. W. F. Hegel's Science of Logic (1812-1816), which is argued to have influenced Lenin's concept of imperialism. Here, Lenin's book on imperialism (Imperialism and World Economy, 1915) is contrasted with that of Bukharin (Imperialism: The Highest Stage of Capitalism, 1916). Contemporary debates concerning the relationship of dialectics to economics among such diverse writers as Raya Dunayevskaya, Georg Lukacs, Herbert Marcuse, & Antonio Gramsci are addressed. It is argued that contemporary Marxist theory needs to ground itself in the work of Hegel as well as that of Karl Marx. 41 References. Modified HA

88T6877

Chevalier, Jacques M. (Dept Sociology & Anthropology Carleton U, Ottawa Ontario K1S 5B6). The Chevalier-Taussig Debate: Who Will Rise to the Bait? ♦ Social Analysis, 1987, 21, Aug, 92-100

A response to a review symposium (see SA 35 4/87R7478) on books by Jacques M. Chevalier, Civilization and the Stolen Gift: Capital, Kin & Cult in Eastern Peru (Toronto: U of Toronto Press, 1982), & Michael Taussig, The Devil and Commodity Fetishism in South America (Chapel Hill: U of North Carolina Press, 1980 [see listings in IRPS No. 43]). Symposium participants raise fundamental questions regarding the interaction between economy & culture in Ru Latin America & also between rationalities of capitalist & noncapitalist production in the Third World. Critiques brought against Taussig revolve around the use & abuse of contrast-generalizations depicting non-Western forms of production & signification as the countercultural negation of the evils of linear thinking, commodity fetishism, & exchange-value logic. This dualistic method fails to do justice to the internal complexities, laws, & contradictions of cultural practices & class relations within or outside capitalist societies. The need is recognized to pay more theoretical & empirical attention to the role of the peripheral state & broad historical forces in the development of Ru underdevelopment. However, the charge that the author nonetheless rejects Chevalier's combination of structural Marxism with an extreme world-system theory is rejected. Civilization and the Stolen Gift challenges the dualistic divisions of base & superstructure, relations of production & exchange, & class position (the economic) & class struggle (the political). 10 References. Modified AA

88T6878

Gabel, Joseph (U Picardie, F-80025 Amiens Cedex France). Effets pervers et fausse conscience (Unanticipated Consequences and False Consciousness). Cahiers Internationaux de Sociologie, 1987, 34, 83, July-Dec, 339-354. (FRE)

A revised version of a paper presented at the World Congress of Sociologists, New Delhi, India, 1986 (see SA 34.3/86 S17888/ISA/1986/4469)

88T6879

Loitsch, Manfred & Thomas, Michael (Institut marxistisch-leninistische Soziologie Akademie Gesellschaftswissenschaften ZK SED, Johannes-Dieckmann-Str 19/23 DDR-1086 Berlin German Democratic Republic). Soziologische Kontroversen um die Intelligentsia heute (Sociological Controversies about Today's Intelligentsia). Deutsche Zeitschrift für Philosophie, 1987, 35, 8, 692-702. (GER)

Issues pertaining to the position & role of the intelligentsia in capitalist society are considered. Recent developments in conservative attitudes toward intellectuals are noted, as are contributions of non-Marxist progressives to the understanding of intellectuals & social change, particularly in the Federal Republic of Germany. Theoretical problems in the placement of the intelligentsia within the capitalist class structure are addressed. Two widely accepted approaches are criticized, one of which places the intelligentsia according to property ownership in either the ruling class or the WC, the other of which assigns it to a third MC. The complexity of the real situation is stressed, since intellectuals can be shown, by a network of factors, to belong to different classes, yet they retain a certain unity of interest because of their group history. J. Anderson

88T6880

Lynch, Michael J., Quantitative Analysis and Marxist Criminology: Some Old Answers to a Dilemma in Marxist Criminology. ♦ Crime and Social Justice, 1987, 29, 110-127

After briefly reviewing Karl Marx's concerns regarding empiricism, it is suggested that a quantitatively oriented Marxist criminology can be relevant when based on Marx's economic principle of surplus value. The nature of this variable is discussed in terms of labor, & six empirical methods of measuring the rate of surplus value are demonstrated. It is shown how the concept can be used to restate previous theoretical perspectives regarding the etiology of crime & punishment to shape a quantitative criminology that remains distinctly Marxist. However, a theory linking surplus value to crime & punishment remains to be developed. 2 Tables, 91 References. K. Hyatt

88T6881

McMichael, Philip (Dept Sociology U Georgia, Athens 30602). The Relations between Capital and Landed Property: A Reply to Fairweather. ♦ The Australian and New Zealand Journal of Sociology, 1987, 23, 3, Nov, 423-432

A response to John R. Fairweather's article on colonial development in New Zealand (see SA 35 1/87R2186). Fairweather opposes his own "internalist" theory of the organizational dynamic of capital investment in pastoral economy to an "externalist" perspective attributed to Philip McMichael (Settlers and the Agrarian Question: Foundations of Capitalism in Colonial Australia, New York: Cambridge U Press, 1984). Fairweather's organizational focus is criticized as economic & governed by a belief in technical rationality. McMichael's argument is restated, & it is shown why Fairweather's epistemology produced a caricature of this argument. His internalist/externalist dichotomy of explanations reveals the limits of an undialectical materialist analysis of the arrangement of factors of production. 14 References. Modified HA

88T6882

Meznaric, Silva, A Neo-Marxist Approach to the Sociology of Nationalism. Doomed Nations and Doomed Schemes. ♦ Praxis International, 1987, 7, 1, Apr, 79-89

Current neo-Marxist thought considers nationalism & religion as the two major social phenomena neglected by Marxist theory. The classical distinction between nations with history & therefore with revolutionary potential, & counterrevolutionary nations without history, is widely regarded as a failure of Marxism. A case study of national ideologies of the Croats & the Slovenes between 1850 & 1940 illuminates some aspects of this problem. W. H. Stoddard

88T6883

O'Malley, Pat (Dept Legal Studies La Trobe U, Bundoora Victoria 3083 Australia). Marxist Theory and Marxist Criminology. ♦ U

BMS

BULLETIN DE
METHODOLOGIE
SOCIOLOGIQUE

The BMS (Bulletin of Sociological Methodology) is a scientific journal specialized in sociological methodology. It is published four times a year at a price of 25 FF per issue or 100 FF for an annual subscription by individuals; 200 FF for institutions.

Each issue contains research articles, extensive book and article reviews, as well as documentation and information on different centres of sociology and important meetings throughout the world. Articles are in either French or English and all research articles have abstracts in both languages.

Twice a year, in the January and July issues, the BMS also contains the Logic and Methodology Newsletter of the Research Commission 33 (RC 33, Logic & Methodology) of the International Sociological Association. Members of RC 33 can subscribe to the BMS for the reduced rate of 40 FF per year.

All cheques, money orders, or transfers should be made out to AIMS (Association Internationale de Méthodologie Sociologique) and payable in French francs drawn on a French bank.

All correspondence and payments should be sent to the BMS, 54 Bd. Raspail, 75006 Paris.

Le BMS (Bulletin de méthodologie sociologique) est une revue scientifique spécialisée en méthodologie sociologique. Elle paraît quatre fois par an à un prix de 25 FF le numéro ou 100 FF pour un abonnement annuel, tarif individuel; 200 FF tarif institutionnel.

Chaque numéro comprend des articles de recherche, de nombreux comptes rendus de livres et d'articles, ainsi que de la documentation et de l'information sur des différents centres de sociologie et des réunions importantes à travers le monde entier. Les textes sont soit en français, soit en anglais, et tous les articles comprennent des résumés dans les deux langues.

Deux fois par an, dans les numéros de janvier et de juillet, le BMS contient également la Logic and Methodology Newsletter de la Commission de recherche 33 (RC 33, Logique de Méthodologie) de l'Association Internationale de Sociologie. Les membres de RC 33 peuvent s'abonner au BMS à un prix réduit de 40 FF par an.

Tous chèques, mandats ou transferts doivent être faits au nom de AIMS (Association Internationale de Méthodologie Sociologique) et payables en francs français à une banque française.

Envoyez correspondance et paiement au BMS, 54 Bd. Raspail, 75006 Paris.

3100 clinical sociology

66 clinical sociology

88T6889

Danz-Williams, Phoebe A., Harrison-Elder, Jennifer A. & Hill, Susan M. (U Florida, Gainesville 32611). Media Approach to Family Training in Behavior Management: Two Families, Issues in Comprehensive Pediatric Nursing. 1986, 9, 2, 59-77

* A report of case studies of two families with children with behavioral & developmental disorders who were being treated in a short-term inpatient care facility. The potential usefulness of a multimedia approach to family training in behavior management is assessed from the perspective of social interaction theory. Features of this approach include: (1) individualized instruction, (2) practical implementation of basic behavioral management principles, (3) healthy familial interactions, & (4) assistance for the family in establishing community support & services. It is suggested that the persistence of effects of behavioral management is a function of how others react to changes in a target child. Results indicate that a family- & community-centered approach maximizes the effectiveness of care rendered to this vulnerable population. 2 Tables, 23 References. Modified HA

88T6890

Gale, Anthony & Barker, Mary (Dept Psychology U Southampton, Highfield SO9 5NH England). The Repertory Grid Approach to Analysing Family Members' Perception of Self and Others: A Pilot Study, Journal of Family Therapy. 1987, 9, 4, Nov, 355-366

* A report of a pilot study of family relationships & personal attributes of family members ($N = 4$ families), based on a questionnaire using constructs derived from the three key target dimension of distance regulation theory (Kantor, D., & Lehr, W., Inside the Family: Towards a Theory of Family Process, San Francisco, Calif: Jossey-Bass, 1975). Family members' responses were in a form consistent with repertory grid analysis procedures. A standard computer package was used to plot each family member's construct space. The method allows the family researcher or therapist to explore the organization of the constructs for each family member, showing how each member is construed both by others & by themselves. 2 Figures, 1 Appendix, 14 References. Modified AA

88T6891

Hall, Lavinia (Harvard Law School, Cambridge MA 02138). Making the Best of a Difficult Situation: Divorce Processes and Family Mediation, Negotiation Journal. 1987, 3, 2, Apr, 147-154

* A review essay on books by Kenneth Kressel, The Process of Divorce (New York: Basic Books, Inc, 1985), John M. Haynes, Divorce Mediation (New York: Springer Publishing Co, 1981), & John Allen Lemmon, Family Mediation Practice (New York: Free Press, 1985 [see listings in IRPS No. 43]). Kressel analyzes how therapists, lawyers & mediators help couples to reach divorce settlements, based on research that included in-depth interviews & surveys. Haynes's work strongly endorses mediation as an alternative to the adversarial legal system. He presents a mediation model that aims to empower people to negotiate their own settlements. Lemmon addresses the broad scope of family mediation, covering methods & ideology, as well as suggesting how mediation techniques can be integrated into an existing practice. 4 References. 1 Rasmussen

88T6892

Kaffman, Mordecai (Kibbutz Child & Family Clinic, Derech Haifa 147 Tel Aviv 62507 Israel). Failures in Family Therapy: And Then What?, Journal of Family Therapy. 1987, 9, 4, Nov, 307-328

‡ An exploration of what can be done in a case where both the therapist & the symptomatic family have reached the conclusion that the therapy is making no headway, based on the personal experiences of a consultant available in cases of failed therapy to some 200 professionals of the kibbutz network of community mental health centers in Israel. Prior to the consultation, new material should be obtained from the referring therapist, the family, & anyone else involved in the creation or perpetuation of the problem. As the need arises, additional information may be required, such as the findings of medical examinations, medications, developmental history, etc. The referring therapist can be a major factor in trying to understand why the therapy failed, sometimes strict adherence to a theoretical approach can blind the therapist to alternative solutions. Sources of energy that feed the problem need to be identified, these may be found inside the family &/or outside it, but can usually be dealt with through creative, unorthodox intervention. Family therapy is a suitable & useful therapeutic technique for the management of emotional difficulties that develop or are closely related to the intrafamilial context, however, not every problem that emerges in a family is rooted in family dysfunction, & other effective modes of therapy should also be considered. 11 References. Modified AA

88T6893

Sein, E. P., Fundudis, T. & Kolvin, I. (Nuffield Psychology & Psychiatric Unit Fleming Memorial Hospital, Great North Rd Newcastle upon Tyne NE2 3AX England). A Behavioural and Systems Approach to Family Therapy. A Position Paper, Journal of Family Therapy. 1987, 9, 4, Nov, 339-353

‡ An integrated model of a behavioral & systems approach to family therapy is presented, the main premise being that family interactions are affected by reciprocal determination of cognitions, feelings, & behaviors in relation to the environment. Assessment involves a systematic exploration of the interaction & transactional patterns within the family, & identification of the dysfunctional aspects of such patterns. The main aim of the intervention is to produce change in family behavior by addressing the important cognitive & affective issues. This entails techniques such as cognitive restructuring, social modeling, & operant conditioning, which can be used separately, in parallel, or in combination. Whether one or more of these techniques is used depends on the nature of the family's problems & the aims of treatment. 34 References. Modified AA

88T6894

Spencer, Brenda, Morris, Jane & Thomas, Helen (Christie Hospital & Holt Radium Instit, Kinnaird Rd Withington Manchester M20 9QJ England). The South Manchester Family Worker Scheme, Health Promotion. 1987, 2, 1, 29-38

‡ A health promotion program was initiated in Manchester, GB, modeled on the work of the travailleuses familiales (family workers) in France, involving a team of family workers employed to provide social, practical, & psychological support to women in pregnancy. The aim was to improve the health & well-being of the women & their eventual offspring by reducing stress during pregnancy. Discussed are issues such as the difficulties of introducing a service that uses lay workers & adopts a client-centered approach, ethical dilemmas posed by preventive work, difficulties of cooperation among staff, & coordination of care offered through various services to the women. Results of evaluation are examined to address not only the theoretical question of whether social support is effective, but also the pragmatic question of whether social support can be delivered effectively in a "real life" situation. 2 Tables, 4 Figures, 18 References. Modified HA

Crime and Social Justice, 1987, 29, 70-87

¶ The debate over whether crime is a valid concept in Marxist theory is summarized. The principle justifications for developing a Marxist criminology are reviewed, & its central concepts, assumptions, & theoretical propositions are delineated. Problems with conceptualizing crime in Marxist terms are addressed. Marxism tends to fragment the field of crime & reconstitute it along its own theoretical lines. This is illustrated via an analysis of how Marxist theory treats the matter of organized crime, i.e., as the result of state intervention into capitalist accumulation & production relations. Suggestions for reformulating this concept outside of a criminological discourse are provided that can, in turn, increase Marxism's contributions to understanding crime. It is concluded that the theoretical tools used to understand the political aspects of crime & the criminal law need to be redesigned in order to make them compatible with Marxist theory. 51 References. K. Hyatt

88T6884

Petermann, Simon (U Libre Bruxelles, B-1050 Belgium), Les Avatars du marxisme (The Avatars of Marxism), Res Publica, 1987, 29, 2, 177-192 (FRE)

¶ For many years, Marxism was the frame of reference for the European workers' movement. It took the form of a millenarist faith & was embodied in large organizations, however, this orthodox Marxism lost its reason for existence when the WC became integrated in modern society. The advent of Communist governments in Eastern Europe brought a new inspiration, but at the expense of intellectual degeneration, when it became a state religion, Marxism ceased being creative. The various forms of leftism that emerged in the 1960s are the last avatars of Marxism in the developed countries, but they have only a remote relationship with Karl Marx's doctrine. A similar process took place in the Third World, where Marxist-Leninism was absorbed by nationalism. Modified HA

88T6885

Roman, Norma Ruth Arlene (U South Africa, Pretoria), A Sociological Study of the Debate on Marxist Methodology with Special Reference to Althusser, * Dissertation Abstracts International, 4, The Humanities and Social Sciences, 1988, 48, 7, Jan, 1906-A-1907-A. Unavailable from UMI; contact the degree-granting university.

88T6886

Spartan, Stephen F. (Dept Sociology U Kansas, Lawrence 66045), Contradictory Reproduction Imperatives of the State: The Surplus Overappropriation Crisis of the Roman Empire, Transformations, 1987, 2, 2-3, 3-17

¶ A Marxist interpretation of the history of the Roman Empire as a surplus overappropriation crisis. Slave latifundia dominated the Roman social formation, but met resistance from other social formations; in addition, the surplus appropriation needs of private estate owners & of the state conflicted. Their competition led to a decline of an excessively exploited productive base &, in consequence, to the decline of the Roman Empire. As a result of this, the East was able to develop independently, retaining resources that had formerly gone to Rome itself. 36 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T6887

Taussig, Michael (Dept Anthropology U Andes, Bogota, Colombia), The Rise and Fall of Marxist Anthropology, ♦ Social Analysis, 1987, 21, Aug, 101-113

¶ A rebuttal to a review symposium (see SA 35 4/87R7478) on Michael Taussig's The Devil and Commodity Fetishism in South America (Chapel Hill: U of North Carolina Press, 1980 [see listing in IRPS N. 43]). A pervasive trait of these essays—except for those of Roberto De Matta & Terry Turner—is the presence of envious egos. The reviewers in general are impervious to the idea that reality lies in their relationship with the Other. As an alternative approach, Marxist anthropologizing can be seen as cultural oppositional practice. Above all, Marxists need to abandon the reification of positivist social science & recognize the reality of the Other. 19 References. W. H. Stoddard

88T6888

Vallas, Steven P. (Human Resources Development Center New York Instit Technology, Old Westbury 11568), White-Collar Proletarianism: The Structure of Clerical Work and Levels of Class Consciousness, ♦ The Sociological Quarterly, 1987, 28, 4, Dec, 523-540.

¶ Marxist theory has long argued that the development of capitalism tends to proletarianize office employees. Here, the validity of this claim is investigated using telephone survey data from a subsample of 209 clerical workers employed in the US communications industry. Three hypotheses regarding the relation between computerization, clerical work & levels of class consciousness are tested. In line with predictions of deskilling, computerization seems to heighten managerial control over workers' jobs, lower the conceptual content of workers' tasks, & increase alienation. Variation in the structure of workers' jobs, however, displays little or no bearing on office workers' levels of class consciousness. In short, although the restructuring of clerical work does affect workers' attitudes toward their jobs, it does little to foster an increasingly proletarian attitude toward management. It is suggested that the structure of workers' tasks may be less consequential for the development of class consciousness than has often been presumed. 2 Tables, 71 References. HA

Document Delivery Service

The costs of reproduction are: US $0.25 per reproduced page. Orders must be PREPAID (unprepaid orders cannot be acknowledged or returned) and sent to SOCIOLOGICAL ABSTRACTS, INC. (P.O. Box 22206, San Diego, CA 92122, USA) together with the SA accession number and the complete citation of the document to be reproduced. To calculate price per document, multiply the number of pages as indicated in the citation of the abstract by US $0.25 and add a US $1.50 search fee per document. POSTAGE is EXTRA. Below is a table for postage fees that vary by weight/size of paper.

No. of Pages	US & Canada Postage Fee	All Other Countries
		Postage Fee	Air Mail
1-5	$0.39	US $1.40	US $1.00
6-10	$0.73	$2.24	$1.90
11-15	$1.07	$2.78	$2.30
16-20	$1.41	$3.32	$2.75
21+	Additional multiples as above

CONFERENCE papers are available ONLY when the following notation precedes the text of the abstract; ♦ "Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search and postage. Length: pp." For copies of paper without this notation, write directly to the author, whose address is listed in the citation.

3200 sociology of business

68 sociology of business

88T6895

Fernald, Lloyd W., Jr. & Solomon, George T. (Management Dept Coll Business Administration U Central Florida, Orlando 32816), Value Profiles of Male and Female Entrepreneurs, in The Journal of Creative Behavior, 1987, 21, 3, 234-247.

A comparison of the value systems of M & F entrepreneurs, based on survey data obtained from 200 M & 200 F entrepreneurs in Fla who completed a demographic data form & the Rokeach Value Survey. Findings provide terminal & instrumental value profiles for Rs. Pleasure & true friendship were the terminal values ranked highest by the M entrepreneurs, followed closely by a sense of accomplishment, a comfortable life & salvation, the least important terminal value held by M entrepreneurs is wisdom. F Rs ranked health as their most important terminal value, followed closely by self-respect, family security, freedom, & a sense of accomplishment, the least important terminal value held by the entrepreneurs is salvation. The two most important instrumental values held by entrepreneurs are ambitiousness & broadmindedness, the instrumental value ranked least important is self-control. The most important instrumental value held by the F entrepreneurs is honesty, other closely held values include responsibility, independence, ambitiousness, & capability. The instrumental value ranked least important by F Rs is obedience. It is concluded that general acceptance of a set of value profiles for M & F entrepreneurs will require replication & validation. Suggestions for further research & counseling applications are offered. 4 Tables, 1 figure, 34 References. Modified AA

88T6896

Roustang, Guy (Laboratoire économie & sociologie travail Centre national recherche scientifique, F-75700 Paris France), L'Expansion des services a productivité stable (The Expansion of Services with Stable Productivity), in Futuribles, 1987, 112, July-Aug, 3-14. (FR)

An idea of W J Baumol (American Economic Review, 1967, June, article title not given) is developed: the significance of the distinction between (1) economic activities (typically in the manufacturing industries) in which technological progress, the accumulation of capital, & economies of scale bring an increase of production per hour of labor, & (2) those activities (eg, services & maintenance) that are characterized by stable productivity. While employment in (1) is declining, in (2), it is expected to grow in proportion to the expansion of such activities, & since the demand for services is virtually unlimited, so too are the possibilities for creating new jobs. The two types of activity are not always easy to distinguish, but the role of labor is the key factor. The shift to an economy of services, which is necessary to provide employment, demands a new concept of progress. 5 Tables. HA Tr & Modified by C Waters

88T6897

Ryan, Michael (U Houston, University Park TX 77004), Organizational Constraints on Corporate Public Relations Practitioners, in Journalism Quarterly, 1987, 64, 2-3, summer-autumn, 473-482.

* Public relations practitioners, caught between representing their clients' best interests & those of various publics, sometimes act in ways that are inappropriate, irresponsible, or ineffective. Such behavior is attributed to various managerial constraints imposed by the organizations within which they work, particularly those relative to access to management, information collection & dissemination, & the public relations mission. Anecdotal evidence has suggested that many public relations practitioners consider themselves somehow different or more competent than their colleagues. To test the hypothesis that they may thus feel less affected by organizational constraints, mail questionnaire data were collected from 135 members of the International Assoc of Business Communicators (IABC) & the Public Relations Society of America (PRSA). Results indicate that practitioners do perceive many organizational constraints, but view them as less of a problem for themselves personally than for their colleagues in other organizations. This may be due to the elite nature of the IABC & PRSA, & thus not an accurate reflection of the realities of environmental constraint in other corporations. The importance of matching personal work style to the public relations work environment is stressed. 2 Tables. K Hyatt

88T6898

Winslow, Erik K. & Solomon, George T. (Dept Management Science George Washington U, Washington DC 20052), Entrepreneurs Are More Than Non-Conformists: They Are Mildly Sociopathic, in The Journal of Creative Behavior, 1987, 21, 3, 202-213.

* A comparison of the personality of the contemporary entrepreneur with that of the sociopath. Entrepreneurial characteristics, gathered from a review of the literature & definitions provided by participants at the Fourth Creativity, Innovation & Entrepreneurship Conference in Los Angeles, Calif (Mar 1987), are discussed alongside those of sociopaths, or "constitutional psychopathic inferiors," as defined in psychiatric texts. Though entrepreneurs & sociopaths alike display a passion for action & risk, shun close interpersonal relationships, appear charming & charismatic, & are uncomfortable with conventional wisdom & rules, entrepreneurs have more of a sense of the future & (generally) stay within the legal bounds of society, though eccentric at times, entrepreneurs are not mentally ill. It is concluded that the present economy enhances entrepreneurial activity, though there is a continual love/hate relationship between acculturated managerial types within established organizations & the nonconforming entrepreneur. 5 Tables, 24 References. K Hyatt

3300 visual sociology

71 visual sociology

No abstracts in this section.

Theory and Decision

An International Journal for Methods and Models in the Social and Decision Sciences

Editor-in-Chief

Prof. Bertrand Munier, Université d'Aix-Marseille III, France

The field of decision in the social sciences has been investigated from many aspects. All too often, however, different research approaches have been followed separately by management science, economics, psychology, operations research, praxeology, cybernetics and computer aided decision-making.

They need mutual enrichment. Theory and Decision addresses the cross-fertilization of the methods and models of these disciplines. The purpose of the journal is to let the engineering of decision-making (i.e. of intelligence, choice, sorting out, ranking, uncertainty and conflict resolution), gradually emerge. Special attention will be accorded to complex or ill-structured situations. Mathematical or other formalized treatments will be favored, if they provide a correct modeling of the given situation. Of particular interest are:

- Preference and uncertainty modeling
- Multicriteria decision-making
- Social choice, negotiation and group decision
- Game theory, gaming and conflict analysis
- Rationality, cognitive processes and interactive decision making
- Methodology and philosophy of the social and decision sciences.

Applications to various problems in management and organization science, economics and finance, systems analysis and artificial intelligence will be welcome, as long as they are of sufficiently general interest. Thus, the design of computer-supported systems of actual decision-making processes will be a relevant subject for the journal, whether pertaining to individual, group, collective or negotiatory approaches; to private decisions or public policy; to current decisions or strategic planning.

Subscription Information

ISSN 0040-5833

1988, Volumes 24-25 (6 issues)

Institutional rate: Dfl. 412.00/US$194.00 incl. postage/handling

Private rate: Dfl. 160.00/US$69.00 incl. postage/handling

Private subscriptions should be sent direct to the publishers

Back Volume(s) Available
Volumes 1-23 (1970-1987)

Price per Volume excl. postage
Dfl. 174.00/US$73.00

D. Reidel Publishing Company

Kluwer Academic Publishers

P.O. Box 989, 3300 AZ Dordrecht, The Netherlands
101 Philip Drive, Norwell, MA 02061, U.S.A.

AFRICAN URBAN QUARTERLY

THE ONLY INDEPENDENT, INTERNATIONAL AND INTERDISCIPLINARY
JOURNAL OF COMPARATIVE URBANIZATION AND PLANNING IN AFRICA

AFRICAN URBAN QUARTERLY (AUQ) is a new, quarterly, high quality independent, international, and interdisciplinary, journal for comparative urbanization and planning in Africa. The AUQ presents both theoretical and applied papers in rapidly expanding fields of urbanization and planning. It also serves as a central clearing house for research dealing with analytical, descriptive, evaluative, and prescriptive problems concerned with urban and rural planning in Africa within the rest of the world, especially the Third and Fourth Worlds. Topics covered in the AUQ include agriculture, demography, transportation, medicine, politics, geography, history, sociology, economics, statistics, mathematics, urbanization, anthropology, archaeology, education, law and environmental studies as they affect the quality of human life in both rural as well as urban areas.

Volume 1 Number of February, 1986.

- "Urbanization and Spatial Development in Africa. Some Critical Issues" Salah El-Shakhs and Hooshang Amirahmadi
- "Urbanization and Urban Policy in Sub-Saharan Africa" Elen M. Brennan and Harry W. Richardson
- "Scale and Question of Rural Development in Africa"
Fiona Mackenzie and D R F. Taylor
- "Urban Transportation Decision in Kano, Nigeria"
Alan Frishman

Volume 1 Number 2, May 1986

- "Exports and Urbanization: A comparative Study of the Provinces of Sub-Saharan Africa"
Frank Young
- "Internal Migration in Western Area of Sierra Leone: An Exercise of Policy Formulation" Eugene K. Campbell
- "Self-Reliance in African Building Materials Industry: A Cautionary Tale From Ghana" Kwabena Donkor and John Lea
- "Who Benefits From the Government Land Servicing Programmes for Urban Housing Development in Nigeria" Chukudi V. Izeogu
- "Harare, Zimbabwe: Origins, Development and Post-Colonial Change" D. Hywell Davies
- "Johannesburg's Informal Sector: Historical Continuity and Change"
C. M. Rogerson

Volume 1 Number 3 and 4, August and November, 1986

- "Exports and Urban Centers in Sub-Saharan Africa: Subnational Comparisons for 1980 Data"
Frank W. Young and T. Nolan
- "Urban Concentration in Africa"
Lee de Cola
- "Urbanization in Francophone Africa"
Elliot P. Skinner
- "Environmental Factors in Third World Housing: The case of Calabar, Nigeria"
R. A. Otu Sule
- "Rural Orientation, Return Migration and Future Movements of Urban Migrants: A Study of Kisumu Town - Kenya"
John O. Oduho
- "Industrial Decentralisation, Bantustan Policy and the Control of Labour in South Africa"
R. Tomlinson and J. Hyslop

Volume 2 Number 1, February, 1987

- "Special issue on Urbanization and Planning in Zimbabwe in the 1980's"
D. Hywell Davies (Guest Editor)

Volume 2 Number 2, May 1987

- "Spatial Management Policies in Sub-Saharan African Countries: A Comparative Analysis"
Frank W. Young and Marwan Khawaj
- "Ethno-Spatial Dimension of the Abuja Settlement as the New Nigerian Capital City: The Dilemma of Urban Planning Policy"
R. A. Otu Sule
- "Urban Development Planning and Environmental Pollution in Africa: The Case of Calabar Municipality, Nigeria"
J. U. Ohoi

"A Regional Development Structure of Uganda Through Q-Factor Analysis"

Christopher J. Bakwevegha

"Urban Bias, Regional Differentiation and Rural-Urban Interaction in Kenya"

W. T. S. Gould

"Is Dodoma, the New Capital City of Tanzania, A New Socialist City?"

Joe L. P. Lugalla

"Spatial Organization of Urban Centers in Botswana: The Evolution of Development with Equality"

Thando D. Gwebu

Volume 2 Number 3, August 1987

- "A Special issue on Shelter and Homelessness in Africa" with Introductory Papers by Dr. Aravind Ramachandran and Mrs. Ingrid Munro (UNCHS)

Volume 2 Number 4, November 1987

- "Some Common Misconceptions About Self Help Housing Policies in Less Developed Countries"

Rod Burges

"The Effect of Opportunities and Cultural Difference on Interregional Migrations in Sierra Leone"

Augustine J. Kposowa

"Resource Allocation, Territorial Justice Income and Distribution in Two Nigerian Cities"

A. I. Salau and C. V. Izeogu

"A Multivariate Analysis of the Socio-Economic Characteristics of Urban Areas in Ethiopia"

Mulatu Wubneh

"Women's Income-Generating Initiatives in Kenya: A Self-Report Perceptions of Need for Value and Women's Groups"

Minna Barret

"Old Naledi and the Idea of Town Strategies for Urban Upgrading from Botswana"

John Van Nostrand

"Autochthony, Nationhood and Development"

J. B. Ojwang

Annual Subscription Rates:

- INDIVIDUALS $40.00 (Kenya) Elsewhere $45.00
- INSTITUTIONS $70.00 (Kenya) Elsewhere $80.00
- Add $20.00 for AIRMAIL, outside Kenya
- Add $5.00 for subscription mailed outside Kenya
- Add $10.00 to clear international check

Please mail with payment in cheque, postal order, money order, or Unesco coupons. All payments must be made in United States of America dollars and mailed to the

AFRICAN URBAN QUARTERLY

P.O. Box 74165, Nairobi, Kenya

Telephone (2) 334244 EX 2086, Direct (02) 720031 and

Cable Address: VARSITY NAIROBI

Telex: 22095 VARSITY NAIROBI

NOTES

this is the new journal of europe open to psychiatry and to the sociological and biological aspects, psychological of mental health.

Subscriptions: The European Journal of Psychiatry (Eur J Psychiat.) is published quarterly in January, April, July and October. The yearly subscription including postage is.

- 1 Individuals: 30 $ USA or 3.900 ptas. or similar convertible currency.
- 2 Institutions: 40 $ USA or 5.200 ptas. or similar convertible currency

Single copies of the Journal: 8 $ USA

Payment can be made by cheque or postal money order to.

THE EUROPEAN JOURNAL OF PSYCHIATRY
Bank of Vizcaya. Office 0746-01-086000-4
SARAGOSSE. SPAIN

Correspondence, manuscripts, and book reviews should be addressed to the Editor-in-Chief:

Prof. A. SEVA
(THE EUROPEAN JOURNAL OF PSYCHIATRY)
P.O. Box 6 029
50080 SARAGOSSE SPAIN

THE EUROPEAN JOURNAL OF PSYCHIATRY

DIGLOSSOLOGIA

Quadrimestrale di insegnamento/apprendimento delle lingue straniere nella scuola primaria e secondaria

PIOVAN EDITORE

Pacific Studies

a journal devoted to the study of the Pacific—its islands and adjacent countries

Anthropology • Folklore • History • Sociolinguistics • Political Science • Sociology

Articles • Editor's Forum • Reviews • Book Review Forum

Vol. 9, No. 1 (November 1985)

- | | |
|-----------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| G.T. Harris | Motives for Migration and Land Pressure in Simbu Province, Papua New Guinea |
| Glenn Petersen | A Cultural Analysis of the Ponapean Independence Vote in the 1983 Plebiscite |
| Bruce Knapman | The Rise and Fall of the White Sugar Planter in Fiji, 1880-1925 |
| Roderic Lacey | To Limlimbur, the "Wanderers." Reflections on Journeys and Transformations in Papua New Guinea |

Vol. 9, No. 2 (March 1986)

- | | |
|-------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| David Wetherell | An Elite for a Nation? Reflections on a Missionary Group in Papua New Guinea, 1890-1986 |
| John Connell | Population, Migration, and Problems of Atoll Development in the South Pacific
Archibald Menzies' Account of the Visit of the Discovery to Rapa and Tahiti, 22 December 1791-25 January 1792 |
| James G. Peoples | Employment and Household Economy in a Micronesian Village |
| H. Arlo Nimmo | Pele, Ancient Goddess of Contemporary Hawaii |

Vol. 9, No. 3 (July 1986)

- | | |
|-------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Marty Zelenietz
and Jill Grant | The Ambiguities of Education in Kilenge, Papua New Guinea |
| Richard Feinberg, ed. | Ethnography of Ontong Java and Tasman Islands with Remarks re: The Marqueen and Abgarris Islands by R. Parkinson |
| Jeff Siegel | Pidgin English in Fiji: A Sociolinguistic History |
| Ralph Shlomowitz | The Fiji Labor Trade in Comparative Perspective, 1864-1914 |

Pacific Studies is published three times each year. Subscription rate is U.S. $20.00 per volume and $7.50 for back issues. Checks or money orders may be addressed to The Institute for Polynesian Studies, Brigham Young University—Hawaii Campus, Box 1979, Laie, HI 96762.

GLOTTA

ORGANO DE DIFUSION LINGUISTICA

The GLOTTA Magazine receives collaboration for its publications in the field of classical, modern, and indigenous languages, as well as in other areas of anthropology, history, sociology, and literature; as long as the topics are from a linguistic point of view.

FOR SUBSCRIPTIONS AND CONTRIBUTIONS, PLEASE WRITE TO:
GLOTTA: ORGANO DE DIFUSION LINGUISTICA
APARTADO AEREO 43789
BOGOTA, COLOMBIA SOUTH AMERICA

Contributions to Indian Sociology

Editor
T N MADAN

SAGE Publications

8 M Block Market, Greater Kailash I,
New Delhi - 110 048

11 West Hillcrest Drive, Newbury Park,
California 91320

1 Banner Street, London EC1Y 8QE

Contributions to Indian Sociology is the pre-eminent forum for the presentation of research material on Indian and South Asian societies and cultures and for the discussion of different approaches to their study. This journal publishes neither purely theoretical essays nor purely ethnographic accounts but favours papers in which data and theory are mutually related. Occasionally papers dealing with themes of cross-civilisational significance, bringing in data from non-South Asian societies are also published.

Contributions to Indian Sociology is an indispensable and highly regarded forum for the understanding of South Asian society, culture and religion and provides theoretical insights applicable to the study of other developing societies as well.

Contributions to Indian Sociology is published biannually in May and November.

Contents of Vol. 21, No. 2, July-December 1987

Traditions of non-caste Hinduism: The Kabir Panth

DAVID N LORENZEN

Caste overseas: Does it matter? Urban Indians in Malaysia

DAVID MEARNS

Domestic space as ideology in Goa, India CAROLINE IFEKA

Sociology of the north Gujarat urban house V S PRAMAR

Discussion

On understanding rituals in the Jgannātha temple: A rejoinder

FREDÉRIQUE A MARGLIN

Obituary

David Mandelbaum GERALD D BERREMAN

For a sociology of India

The ideological constitution of the individual: Some critical comments on Louis Dumont's comparative anthropology OYVIND JAER

Book reviews and notices

Contributions to Indian Sociology has also brought out two thematic issues:

The Word and the World: Fantasy, Symbol and Record

Contributors: Veena Das • D F Pocock • Diana L Eck • Anuradha Kapur • Sudhir Kakar • Roma Chatterji • Urvashi Misri • Harjeet Singh Gill • Richard Saumarez Smith • Ashis Nandy

Vol. 19, No. 1, 1985

Social Anthropology from Sri Lanka

Contributors: Elizabeth Nissán • Patrick Olivelle • Richard A Shweder • Veena Das • R L Shrrat • E Valentine Daniel • Sudhir Kakar • Fitz John Porter Poole • Gananath Obeyesekere • Frank E Reynolds • Charles F Keyes • H L Seneviratne • Romila Thapar • Michael Carrithers • F K Lehman (Chit Hlaing) • Stanley J Tambiah • Amitav Ghosh • Rajiv Lochan

Vol. 21, No. 1, 1987

FRAGEN

BEITRÄGE ZUR THEORIE UND PRAXIS
DES DEUTSCHEN UNTERRICHTS IN ITALIEN

CONTRIBUTI TEORICI E PRATICI
ALL'INSEGNAMENTO DEL TEDESCO IN ITALIA

Redaktion: Heinz Achauer, Silvia Serena

Mitarbeiter

Marica D'Agostini (Universität Parma)
Michael Krüger (Hessisches Institut für Bildungsplanung Wiesbaden)
Hans-Jürgen Krumm (Universität Hamburg)
Gerhard Neuner (Universität Kassel)
Giovanna Padovani (Progetto Speciale Lingue Straniere Belluno)
Umberto Patuzzi (Progetto Speciale Lingue Straniere Bassano)
Hans-Eberhard Piepho (Universität Giessen)
Maria Pia Primon (Liceo Sperimentale Bassano)
Franz Josef Zapp (Universität Augsburg)

Für Leserzuschriften und Mitteilung von Unterrichtserfahrungen oder Unterrichtsvorschlägen, sowie für jegliche Form von Mitarbeit auf Deutsch oder auf Italienisch, ist die Schriftleitung jederzeit dankbar. Beiträge und Rezensionsexemplare sind an die folgende Anschrift erbeten.
Silvia Serena - Via Giuseppe Verdi 18 - 21100 VARESE - Tel. 0332/238095

Edizioni. EDITORIALE NEWS Via Monte Grappa 5/7 - 20020 Lainate (Mi) - ITALIA

Direttore responsabile: Silvia Serena
Direttore Scientifico: Heinz Achauer
Direttore editoriale: Silvia Serena
Direttore Tecnico: Marco Fiorentino

Bezugsbedingungen

Jahresabonnement 1988

Lire 24 000 (Inland)

Lire 34 000 (Ausland)

*Erscheinungsweise: Jährlich vier Au.
(davon zwei Sondernummern)*

Die Nummern des laufenden Jahres > den neuen Abonnenten automatische zusammen mit der nachstfolgenden Ni nachgeliefert

Die ersten drei Jahrgänge (1985-1986 sind noch zum Preis von:

Lire 30 000 (Inland)

Lire 40 000 (Ausland)

erhältlich

Überweisung an

Inter Orbis, Via Lorenteggio 31/1, 20146 Milano

Postscheckkonto 13489208

SECTION

Contents:

- (1) Numbered Supplements containing abstracts of papers presented at various association meetings. The front page of each Supplement provides the name of the association, and the date and location of the meeting.
- (2) The last, or sometimes only, Supplement in this section is the International Review of Publications in Sociology (IRPS), which contains book abstracts and a listing of book reviews that appear in the serials abstracted in this issue (see Index Section for all the serials in alphabetical order). Every IRPS issue contains its own author, source, and reviewer index.

MEMORANDUM

TO: All Participants of this Conference
FROM: sociological abstracts inc.
RE: New Ancillary Services

In addition to publishing Supplements of abstracts of papers presented at meetings — as well as our regular yearly search of over 1500 serials for articles on sociology and other sociologically relevant articles which are published in sociological abstracts — we wish you to know about our expanded services to the social science community.

Abstracts of individual papers presented at this meeting and processed by sociological abstracts become available online with the following labels/vendors: File 37/Dialog Information Services; SOCA/BRS, BRKTHRU, After Dark; SOCS1/Knowledge Index; and SOCA/Data-Star.

Many requests will reach us for a copy of your paper from government agencies, private researchers and business R&D offices. Such requests will be passed along, whenever possible and if we have the author's correct address, to the author. Considerable time can be saved if authors who desire to make their papers available to all comers, send us a copy of the paper with a signed statement granting us permission to reproduce the paper.

I enclose a copy of my paper for reproduction and sale.

SS _____

SAVE FOR FUTURE REFERENCE.

Document Delivery Service

The costs of reproduction are: US $0.25 per reproduced page. Orders must be PREPAID (unprepaid orders cannot be acknowledged or returned) and sent to SOCIOLOGICAL ABSTRACTS, INC. (P.O. Box 22206, San Diego, CA 92122, USA) together with the SA accession number and the complete citation of the document to be reproduced. To calculate price per document, multiply the number of pages as indicated in the citation of the abstract by US $0.25 and add a US $1.50 search fee per document. POSTAGE is EXTRA. Below is a table for postage fees that vary by weight/size of paper.

No. of Pages	US & Canada Postage Fee	All Other Countries
		Postage Fee	Air Mail Surface
1- 5	$0.39	US $1.40	US $1.00
6-10	$0.73	$2.24	$1.90
11-15	$1.07	$2.78	$2.30
16-20	$1.41	$3.32	$2.75
21 +	Additional multiples as above

CONFERENCE papers are available ONLY when the following notation precedes the text of the abstract; ● "Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search and postage. Length: pp." For copies of paper without this notation, write directly to the author, whose address is listed in the citation.

sociological abstracts

aug 1988

AT 20-23, GA CTR CONT ED, UNIVERSITY OF GEORGIA, ATHENS

36/3

suppl 151

abstracts of papers presented at the 1988 annual meeting of the rural sociological society

abstracts of papers presented at the 1988 annual meeting of the rural sociological society

RS20166 / RSS / 1988 / 1964

Abo, Paul M. (4-Towers Extension Bldg U Georgia, Athens 30602), A Convergence of Competing Value Systems with Respect to Broiler Chicken Supply Organization.

Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 22 pp.

A comparative review of the literature of Ru sociology & of agricultural economics with regard to the subject of broiler chicken supply organization & the history of broiler growout structure revealed a convergence of opinion between the two disciplines, despite their competing value systems. A prediction is offered about future growout supply structure. Both disciplines see family farms as more efficient than nonfamily farms, & contract farms as more efficient than corporate farms, the arrangement most likely to maximize economic & social goals is seen as the contract farm. The historical evolution of broiler growout structure has eliminated totally independent farms & made contract farms the dominant method of supply organization. The future structure of broiler supply will likely include "caretaker" farms.

RS20167 / RSS / 1988 / 1965

Anosike, Nnamdi & Coughenour, C. M. (Dept Sociology U Kentucky, Lexington 40546), Farm Enterprise Diversification: An Economic, Social, and Ecological Explanation.

Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 42 pp.

An attempt to assess the effects of farm size, land tenure, & regional source variability on a farmer's decision to diversify in his enterprises, even that farmers have goals other than profit maximization, as postulated by economic theory. Agricultural production is characterized by risk & uncertainties from both the production & market environment. Farmers diversify to minimize these risks & thus to maintain income stability over a given period of time. Although received theories suggest that larger farms are more specialized, recent evidence shows them to be more diversified. The effects of land tenure & regional resource variability on farm enterprises diversification are not known with certainty. From niche theory, it is hypothesized that environmental "grain," or "patchiness," & variability determine whether farms in a region are generalist or specialist. A farmer diversifies to efficiently utilize scarce resources due to nondivisibility in resource endowments in his region. Insufficient managerial ability may impose risks of income loss, so most farmers choose narrow operations requiring less complex managerial competence, only the well-educated farmer with superior information chooses to diversify. Data obtained from a survey of Ky farmers (N not given) indicate that larger farms & those run by more educated farmers are more diversified, thus refuting previous findings. Certain regions are significantly more diversified than others, as hypothesized. Only partial support was obtained for hypotheses on the effects of land tenure & off-farm work. Application of behavioral theory yielded no support for hypotheses on form of ownership & age of farmer.

RS20168 / RSS / 1988 / 1966

Armstrong, Paula S. & Schulman, Michael D. (Dept Sociology/Anthropology/Social Work U North Carolina, Raleigh 27695-8107), The Farm Crisis: An Analysis of Stress among North Carolina Farm Operators.

While much research reported over the past decade focuses on the role of stressful life events, recent work points to continuous problems, especially economic hardship, as major sources of stress. The current farm crisis can be considered as a chronic stressor or "life strain." Using data from a statewide survey of NC farm operators (N not given), relationships between perceived social stress, social support, & SE characteristics are analyzed. Results show that age is the most important predictor of perceived stress (negative relationship). Days-on-farm labor was positively associated with perceived stress & negatively associated with social support. Farm operators with higher levels of social support perceived less stress. The findings suggest that those most at risk of developing physical &/or psychological problems related to stress are younger farmers & those with low levels of social support.

88S20169 / RSS / 1988 / 1967

Ashley, Gregory A., Cordell, H. Ken, Bergstrom, John C. & Patterson, Richard W. (Dept Agricultural Economics U Georgia, Athens 30602), Regional Economic Impacts of Development at Land between the Lakes Recreational Areas.

Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 23 pp.

An examination of economic implications of the Tennessee Valley Authority's proposed developments at Land between the Lakes recreational areas, eg, adding services to campgrounds & day-use facilities, & adding new visitor attractions. Data obtained from the Public Area Recreation Visitor Survey, a nationwide database derived from 32,000+ interviews of recreationalists compiled with the cooperation of 4 federal agencies, 12 states, 4 national associations, & 6 Us, were subjected to implan analysis, an input-output analysis that provides estimates of economic impacts generated as a result of changes in consumer spending in a region. Results indicate substantial output, income, & employment interrelatedness within the Land between the Lakes economy. In response to development, visitation should increase & new business opportunities be generated, spending by the new visitors, businesses, & households could stimulate economic activity across most of the 279 businesses currently in the region.

88S20170 / RSS / 1988 / 1968

Audirac, Ivonne (Instit Food & Agricultural Sciences U Florida, Gainesville 32611), The Automation of the Farm's Office: The Impacts of High-Tech Farming on Women.

The adoption of information technologies in agriculture is one dimension of high-technology farming. Computers are being used increasingly, primarily in large commercial operations. Since women have traditionally been the farm record keepers, not surprisingly, a field study of agricultural producers who used computers found that the majority of computer operators were women, both as farm wives & business partners, as well as office managers & employees. Data obtained from in-depth interviews (N not given) with women identified as "in charge of the computer" in agricultural operations in central Fla are used to examine the effects of office automation on women relative to their control of the means of production & their gender relations at work.

88S20171 / RSS / 1988 / 1969

Audirac, Ivonne & Beaulieu, Lionel J. (Instit Food & Agricultural Sciences U Florida, Gainesville 32611), Computer R & D in Agriculture. A Comparative Analysis between a Case Study and a National Sample of Agricultural Scientists.

Attention is drawn to the new demands placed on public agricultural research & development (R & D) in the information era & on the increasing role that agricultural scientists have come to play in the production & dissemination of information technologies in agriculture. Busch's & Lacy's seminal work on agricultural research nationwide (reference not provided) is partially replicated, but with focus on R & D of information technologies in Fla's agriculture. The research is based on a survey of agricultural scientists engaged in computer R & D (eg, robotics, agricultural software development, artificial intelligence) at a Fla land-grant institution. Time allocated to research, extension, teaching, & other activities as well as the actual & ideal amounts of time devoted to R & D are investigated. Comparisons between the Fla study & the national sample are discussed with respect to (1) rankings of criteria for research problem choice, & (2) factors influencing the research agendas of agricultural scientists. It is concluded that the factors influencing the research agenda of the Fla group are very similar to those of other agricultural scientists in the nation. "Opportunity/utility" is the factor that stands out as having direct influence on the decision to engage in computer R & D.

88S20172 / RSS / 1988 / 1970

Beal, George M. (25 Aalapapa Pl, Kailua HI 96734), Cross-National Research: Organization, Process and Impact.

Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 11 pp.

A positive evaluation of a four-year cross-cultural research & action

sociological abstracts

sponsored by the international sociological association

P.O. Box 22206, San Diego, CA 92122

Telephone: (619) 565-6603

Jerome Brickman

Eleanor Brown, Esq.

Board of Directors

Leo P. Chaff

Minam Chaff

Alfred McC Lee

† Robert L. Leslie

† Albert L. Solodur

Kurt H. Wolff

Editor: Leo P. Chaff

Procurement Office: Britt Sieger

User Education: Michelle Blackman

Marketing and Data Base

Operations: Minam Chaff

Advertising: Laurie M. Sapiente

Publications Manager: Sandra S. Stant

Indexing Department: Michael Bl

Computer Office: Lynette Hun

Advisory Board

Joseph R. Gusfield, John D. Kasarda, Edward A. Tiryakian, Martin Albrow, John Useem, Charles V. Willie

board of directors

Leo P. Chaff, Sociological Abstracts
Miriam Chaff, Sociological Abstracts
Robert L. Leslie, The Sociological Abstracts

Alfred McClung Lee, City University of New York
† Albert L. Solodur, Wechsler & Solodur
Kurt H. Wolff, Brandeis University

INTRODUCTION

This Supplement is presented to all registrants of the 1988 Rural Sociological Society meeting with the compliments of the Society and the cooperation of SA.

The numbering of the abstracts has been integrated into a continuous Supplement accessions number series begun in 1973. For example, the first abstract, that of a paper by Aho, Paul M., is numbered: 88S20166/RSS/1988/1964. S20166 is the first number following the last Supplement, No. 150, and the letter S stands for Supplement. After this number is the acronym RSS, followed by the year, and the last number indicates that this is the one thousand nine hundred and sixty-fourth abstract that SA has published from RSS meetings to date.

The abstracts from this Supplement are fully indexed and the index entries appear in the SA issue of which this Supplement is a part - SA, 1988, 36, 3, August.

Notice

Abstracts of papers that reached us after the deadline will appear in the No. 5 issue of Volume 36, 1988. For DIALOG information, call: Toll-free 800/227-1960 (continental U.S. except southern Calif.); for southern Calif., dial 800/982-5838. For Bibliographic Retrieval Services, Customer Service Dept., dial 800/833-4707.

SOCIOLOGICAL ABSTRACTS is published by Sociological Abstracts Inc., a non-profit corporation. 3 issues are published in: April, June, August, October, December. Subscriptions are $220 per year. Single issues are $30. A cumulative index issue will be published within 9 months of the last issue. Index issues are $40.00. Supplement issues $5 to libraries when & if available. Please make remittances payable by check to Sociological Abstracts Inc. When paying by UNESCO Book Coupons please add 10% for Bank charges. When paying by International Money Order, please include library order number or SA invoice number. Please add $10 for postage per subscription.

NOTICE: Claims for missing issues must reach the editorial office within 90 days of publication; for FOREIGN subscribers, within 90 days. Notify us, as well. Office, of change of address as early as possible. The U.S. Post Office de journals. It destroys them, unless specifically instructed not to do so. Issues not of failure to inform us in time of a change of address will not be replaced from POSTMASTER. Send address changes to Sociological Abstracts, P.O. 1 Diago, CA 92122-6206.

Second Class Postage paid at La Jolla, CA, and at additional mailing offices.

Copyright 1988 by Sociological Abstracts, Inc.

East Lansing 48824-1111), Development and Health: Improved Water Supply and Childhood Nutrition in the Philippines.

Diarrheal disease is the leading cause of infant & child mortality in the world. Frequent bouts of diarrhea have been linked to a greater incidence of undernutrition in children. Increases in the quantity & quality of water supplies should reduce the incidence of diarrhea & undernutrition by doing the removal of infectious agents. Data collected over a 5-year period for an experimental group, which was provided access to a municipal water system, & a control group, which was not provided such access, in Philippine cities are assessed to gauge differences in childhood undernutrition & changes in those disparities over time.

88S20181 / RSS / 1988 / 1979

Collins, Timothy (Appalachia-Science in the Public Interest, Route 5 Box 423 Livingston KY 40445), A Comparison of Appalachian Kentucky and Statewide Industrial Development Patterns.

Analysis of Kentucky State Commerce Cabinet figures from 1980 to 1986 suggests that Appalachian region industrial development continues to fall behind the rest of the state, economic wealth is concentrated in certain areas, especially the so-called Golden Triangle of Louisville, Lexington, & Covington-Newport, in the north central area. Fewer new plants were located in the 49 Appalachian counties, which, although they hold 29% of the state's population, received only 21% of the industrial jobs created during the period. New & expanded plants in the mountain counties tended to be smaller, employing fewer workers. The new manufacturing jobs that came from plant expansions were counteracted by severe losses in the coal industry. In addition, population increases in the Appalachian counties generally exceeded the state average, which could increase SE distress in the future.

88S20182 / RSS / 1988 / 1980

Constance, Douglas H. (Dept Sociology U Missouri, Columbia 65211), Obstacles or Detours: The Broiler Industry Revisited.

Continuing changes in the broiler chicken industry are examined within the context of the "agrarian question." It is asserted that changing regions of production in broilers (as well as eggs, turkeys, & hogs) deserve heavy consideration based on existing evidence on the relationship between relations of production & quality of life. For the broiler industry, temporary "detours" are giving way to wage labor as the obstacles to capitalist development are overcome.

88S20183 / RSS / 1988 / 1981

Cook, Annabel Kirschner & Beck, Don (Dept Sociology Washington State U, Pullman 99164-4006), The Emergence of a Service Society and Nonmetropolitan Occupational Change.

The increasing importance of telecommunications, especially as it is linked to the emergence of a service-based economy, is rapidly changing working conditions in the US. The future outcomes of these changes are unclear. Some have argued that the use of computers & telecommunications dramatically increases the locational flexibility of firms & individuals by overcoming or at least substantially reducing the friction that time & space have traditionally produced; this would permit more diversified development in Ru areas. On the other hand, there has been a long-standing tradition in analysis of human ecology & business firm location to study the metropolitanization of the US & the dominance of metropolitan areas as these have emerged as the core areas for control & decision making. Focus here is on assessing actual LF occupational changes in nonmetropolitan & metropolitan areas in the context of these different theoretical perspectives.

88S20184 / RSS / 1988 / 1982

Cramer, Lori & Riley, Pamela (Dept Sociology Utah State U, Logan 84322-0730), Support and Conflict in Social Networks: Effects of Community and Gender.

An examination of the extent to which personal social network ties serve as support or conflict systems, or both, investigating the differences in perception of the extent of supportive/antagonistic ties by size of community of residence & by gender of network ties cited. Research (not derived) found that both support & conflict networks were more extensive for the smallest & largest community than for a second small community that had recently experienced very rapid growth, which suggests that growth patterns may be more significant in understanding network relations than community size. The findings also indicate that range of contacts reported does not differ by gender, but F support & conflict networks are somewhat larger than those of Ms. Overall, Ms were identified more often as a tie in emotional support contexts & Fs in instrumental support contexts. Fs were more likely to be identified as requesting support from both genders, & they reported more duplication of support & conflict ties than did Ms. Both Ms & Fs are far more likely to designate same-gender individuals as contact, support, or antagonistic ties. The analysis clearly supports the notion that networks include both supportive & nonsupportive ties.

88S20185 / RSS / 1988 / 1983

Curry, James & Kenney, Martin (Ohio State U, Columbus 43210), University-Industry Research Relationships in Biotechnology at Land-Grant University Colleges of Agriculture.

The land grant agricultural Colls are undergoing considerable change as a result of the "biotechnology revolution," creating interdisciplinary institutes & biotechnology centers in an effort to establish a competitive presence in the field. Results of a survey of agricultural Coll biotechnology researchers (N = 185, 67% response rate) conducted in 1986 are discussed & compared to results of a 1985 survey of nonagricultural researchers, examining the attitudes & experiences of researchers with industry funding & those without it. Other data give an indication of the scope of the changes that agricultural Colls are experiencing. Data concerning the extent of cooperation between biotechnology-oriented researchers & their more traditionally oriented colleagues are also discussed.

88S20186 / RSS / 1988 / 1984

Daoutopoulos, George (School Agriculture Aristotelian U Thessaloniki, Tach Thyrida Pan 246 Greece 540-10), Social and Economic Transformation in a Greek Farming Village.

Aghios Loukas (Saint Luke), a small village in the north central plains of Greece, has experienced significant demographic & economic change since its incorporation into the modern Greek state in 1912, including rapid population growth due to immigration from Asia Minor. In the late 1960s, the completion of an irrigation & drainage project, followed by the consolidation of the fragmented farmland, led to the introduction of new crops capable of providing a higher income per unit of land; burley tobacco soon brought the economic base of Aghios Loukas into closer association with the global economy. The interrelationships between demographic & economic change in Aghios Loukas are traced from 1912 to the present. A basic framework of information about households, village structure, & agricultural patterns was established from a general household survey. Qualitative data were derived from focused interviews with selected persons & families in the village & from participant observation.

88S20187 / RSS / 1988 / 1985

David, Catherine C. (Coll Home Economics U Georgia, Athens 30606), Rural-Urban Differences in Housing Quality of Elderly Homeowners after Migration.

Seeking to analyze differences in housing quality found between the dwellings of elderly movers & stayers, & to determine Ru-Ur differences, data on a group of homeowners aged 55+ drawn from the 1983 Annual Housing Survey (1,783 recent movers & 2,526 stayers) were examined. Results revealed no significant differences in housing quality between movers & stayers, but there were significant Ru-Ur differences. Ru elderly homeowners were significantly more likely to live in older, smaller, & less valuable homes than their Ur counterparts. Ru movers experienced better housing quality than did Ru stayers. Although housing quality was lower in Ru areas, most Rs reported high levels of housing quality, with a mean index score of 1.5 for movers & 1.3 for stayers. These findings indicate that, overall, elderly homeowners live in dwellings of high quality.

88S20188 / RSS / 1988 / 1986

Davis, Adam Clarke & Sayers, Stephanie (Dept Sociology North Carolina State U, Raleigh 27695-8107), Newcomers, Comparative Evaluations and Community Satisfaction.

The population turnaround has produced considerable interest in the reaction of newcomers to their new small-town or Ru environments. It has generally been hypothesized that newcomers would be less satisfied with the community than long-term residents, but most research has refuted that expectation. It is suggested that newcomers assess their new place of residence in comparison to their old one. The data used to test this expectation came from a study of the social impact of migration on 4 small Ru counties in NC, selected because of immigration population increases of 25%-84%, based on responses to a mail survey yielding 1,200 usable responses, of which 230 came from newcomers (5 or fewer years of residence). Two indexes of community satisfaction were project, which sought to improve the effectiveness of agricultural knowledge generation-accessing, management, dissemination, & utilization systems in Fiji, Western Samoa, & Tonga, conducted in collaboration with the ministries of agriculture from these countries & international organizations. The project's relative success is judged on the fact that positive actions were taken consistent with 60+ % of specific recommendations to improve organization effectiveness. Major factors believed contributing to this success include: (1) the collaborative nature of the project, (2) use of a case study, field theory methodology; (3) collaborative data analysis, formulation of recommendations, & preparation & review of reports, (4) project personnel involvement with in-country decisionmakers on initial review & planning for specific actions; (5) continuing in-country visits (4 at 6-month intervals) for evaluation & future planning, & (6) project staff acting as liaison & being directly involved in securing & organizing resources.

88S20173 / RSS / 1988 / 1971

Beaulieu, Lionel J., Miller, Michael K. & Mulkey, David (U Florida, Gainesville 32611), Community Forces and Their Influence on Farm Structure.

¶ A conceptual model that incorporates key community forces & their possible consequences for the farm sector is presented. In this paradigm, changes within the farm group are viewed as the end result of interrelationships occurring within the community, i.e., the structure of the farm enterprise is influenced by three key elements: a SE component, which considers the sociodemographic & economic characteristics of the locality, a community values component, which embodies the normative structure of the local population, & a local government component, which reflects the usual taxing, spending, & regulatory activities of government. Changes in any component may be transmitted directly or indirectly, by spurring changes in the price or availability of inputs that are vital to the farming community. Examined here are the impacts that local SE & input factors have on local farm structures, based on secondary county-level data in the southern US ($N = 1,264$ Rs). In general, SE forces appear to have limited direct effects on farm scale & labor resources, only degree of rurality has significant direct effects on changes in the numbers of small, medium, & large farms. Similarly, the only direct influence on change in expenditures for hired labor comes from change in the number of persons in the civilian LF. It is clear, however, that SE factors have substantial indirect effects on the farm sector, mediated by the structural relations among the input & SE components of the community.

88S20174 / RSS / 1988 / 1972

Beck, Roger J. & McNamara, Kevin T. (Dept Agribusiness Economics Southern Illinois U, Carbondale 62901), Rural Economic Development: An Economist's Perspective.

¶ After examining the historical record of federal policies for Ru development in terms of goals & demographic transitions, a theoretical perspective of government institutions in producing the desired economic development outcomes is discussed, & then alternative theoretical approaches to Ru economic growth & development are suggested. Structural changes including market demand & input supply factors are addressed. Within the supply factors, the roles of human capital, debt capital, & equity capital in Ru development are examined. Finally, the role of state & local governments in formulating local growth strategies is discussed.

88S20175 / RSS / 1988 / 1973

Belyea, Michael J. & Reif, Linda Lobao (Dept Community & Family Medicine Duke U Medical Center, Durham NC 27705), The Effects of Economic Hardship on Depression Levels among Ohio Farmers.

¶ The current farm financial crisis in the US has resulted in a rapid & dramatic lowering of economic levels for many farmers; yet few studies have systematically addressed whether such changes are having an adverse impact on their social-psychological well-being. Data from a sample of 503 Ohio farmers collected in 1986 are used to examine the effects of economic hardship on depression. The findings provide some support for the hypothesis that lower economic well-being is related to higher depression, but that this relationship can be modified by social support networks at the personal, familial, & community levels. Implications are noted for mental health strategies & services in Ru areas.

88S20176 / RSS / 1988 / 1974

Berry, E. Helen (Dept Sociology Utah State U, Logan 84322-0730), The Timing of Migration and Fertility: Age at First

Birth and Migration in Ecuador.

¶ Demographers who study migration face a vexing problem in relating the fertility patterns of migrants. The question of the timing of fertility in relationship to migration is addressed using ANOVA on a set of data from the 1974 census of Ecuador, examining various types of migrants. The results indicate that when the impact of involuntary migration is controlled, the majority of migrants delay childbearing until the move. For lifetime migrants, there is evidence that a social process contributes to later age at first birth, socialization & adaptation to new fertility norms have the greatest effect on migrant fertility, though disruption also plays a role. Migrant selection factors are of importance, though the Ecuador data indicate that these are less influential on age at first birth than are socialization, adaptation, & disruption.

88S20177 / RSS / 1988 / 1975

Berry, Edna H. & Krannich, Richard S. (Dept Sociology Utah State U, Logan 84322-0730), Characteristics of Migrants in Rural Towns.

¶ Immigrants to modern-day "boom towns" have frequently been cited as a major source of various social problems that contribute to the rapid growth of these communities. However, little is known about the social worlds experienced by boom town immigrants, & how their experiences as newcomers may shape their perceptions of these communities. These uncertainties are addressed by examining the characteristics, experiences, & perceptions of recent immigrants, in comparison with more established medium- & long-term community residents. Results indicate that, in general, recent immigrants to 2 western US development boom towns do not differ greatly from established residents in terms of most demographic/compositional characteristics, but differ in social & attitudinal characteristics. Recent immigrants tend to exhibit lower levels of social integration, less interaction with the community, limited community participation, & low community satisfaction.

88S20178 / RSS / 1988 / 1976

Beus, Curtis E., Dunlap, Riley E., Holmes, W. Lee & Jim Ronald M. (Washington State U, Pullman 99164-6236), Conventional vs Alternative Agriculture: The Paradigmatic Roots of the Debate.

¶ Various social scientists have described the current conflict between industrial/economic forces & environmental/ecological forces in agriculture as a competition between two opposing worldviews or paradigms. This appears to be a similar schism in agriculture. The conventional industrial agricultural paradigm is being challenged by an increasingly vocal native agriculture movement, which advocates ecologically sustainable agricultural practices. An attempt is made to organize the core values associated with these two approaches to agriculture into two paradigms—conventional & alternative. The writings of major proponents of alternative agriculture (eg, William Aiken, Wendell Berry, Dean Freudenberger, Wes Jackson, Gene Logsdon, Robert Rodin) are reviewed to document the primary components of the two paradigms, which are contrasted in terms of: (1) domination vs harmony vs balance; (2) specialization vs diversity; (3) dependence vs independence; (4) competition vs community; (5) centralization vs decentralization; (6) exploitation vs discipline.

88S20179 / RSS / 1988 / 1977

Brown, Nathaniel B., Jr. & Centner, Terence J. (Dept Agricultural Economics U Georgia, Athens 30602), Needs of Small and Part-time Family Farmers: Emphasis on Cooperation.

¶ Recent studies have challenged the principles on how cooperatives operate in the general economy. However, cooperatives have maintained their character as member-owned & -controlled business in the agricultural sector. Focusing on continued survival needs of small & part-time family farmers, it is suggested that cooperatives can ameliorate their problems. Cooperatives have their own support network; they can form a critical mass to attract wholesale buyers, brokers, retailers, & others; they can negotiate a better price for their member-owned products; they can reduce the transaction cost of handling a commodity by sharing cost across the membership; they can in some instances provide a payment to the producer-owner; & they promote the cooperative unity. Several examples are presented showing that intensification of small operations with minor forms of vertical integration (ie, cooperative marketing & processing enterprises) appear to be realistic alternatives for some, though not all, small & part-time farmers.

88S20180 / RSS / 1988 / 1978

Clay, Daniel & Magness, Robert (Dept Sociology Michigan S achieved through lowering the importance of revenue from their sale the budget. Continuing high consumption of alcohol & tobacco accompanied by suboptimal diets & increasing environmental pollution will inflict heavier losses among Poland's main resource its people

IS20197 / RSS / 1988 / 1995

Fontaine, Cordell A., Jeanotte, Holly A., Livdahl, Daniel M., McDonald, Douglas J., Spletto, Mike A. & Stofferahn, Curtis W. (Sociology Dept U North Dakota, Grand Forks 58202), Dying Rural Communities: Powerlessness and Economic Development.

The perceptions of Ru community residents about the future of Ru communities are examined using data from the 1987 ND Ru Life Poll of 1,000 small-town residents. Following Padfield (1980), it is argued that the decay of agriculturally dependent communities is determined by political & economic factors that, under present rules of the game, are beyond community residents' control. Padfield also suggests that life circumstances & environments shape the behavior & mentality of individuals. It is hypothesized that the size of the community, income level, & employment variables affect the levels of powerlessness felt by individuals in Ru communities. This feeling of powerlessness will in turn affect the way individuals rate their community, the amount of community financial concern, & how they perceive economic growth within their community. It is concluded that before communities can have a successful economic development program, they must combat this feeling of powerlessness.

IS20198 / RSS / 1988 / 1996

Gheffl, Linda M. & Willits, Fern K. (ERS US Dept Agriculture, Room 340 1301 New York Ave NW Washington DC 20005-4788), Member Participation in Rural Sociological Society Activities: Differences between Men and Women.

Survey data collected from a sample of the Ru Sociological Society (RSS) membership showed marked differences in the personal/professional characteristics of M & F members. Compared with Ms in the RSS, Fs were considerably younger, more likely to be students, less likely to have belonged to the RSS for 10+ years, less likely to hold doctoral degrees, & more likely to be employed outside academia. RSS Ms had higher rates of participation in the RSS annual meetings, publishing RSS-sponsored publications, & holding of RSS offices. However, ten years of membership, education level, & U employment were controlled, participation differences, in most cases, declined to nonsignificance. Even controlling for these other characteristics, Fs were significantly less likely than Ms to have chaired sessions or served as discussants at the annual meetings, or to have published articles in Rural Sociology. Overall, Fs were found to be actively involved in the RSS, with participation rates equivalent to those of Ms with similar education, employment, & years of membership. Moreover, given the large proportion of women who are students/short-term members, it seems likely that if these women remain in the RSS, they will increasingly assume positions of prominence & leadership.

IS20199 / RSS / 1988 / 1997

Goldsmith, Harold F., Stiles, Diane J., Wagenfeld, Morton O. & Manderscheid, Ronald W. (Alcohol/Drug Abuse/Mental Health Administration, Rockville MD 20857), Ecological Patterns of Inpatient Mental Health Service Availability in Nonmetropolitan and Metropolitan Counties.

Many of the ecological patterns observed for other health services exist for mental health inpatient services. Yet there are significant deviations from the expected patterns for government-sponsored inpatient services. While government-sponsored programs may have some effect on improving services to underserved populations, there is still a significant set of persons in Ru nonmetropolitan counties with little or no access to mental health inpatient care.

IS20200 / RSS / 1988 / 1998

Hannan, Damian (Economic & Social Research Instit. 4 Burlington Rd Dublin Ireland), Irish Rural-Urban Migration: Post 1960 Changes.

Data on Ru Irish youths obtained in a study of migration decision making conducted in 1981/82 & a national School Leavers' Survey conducted in 1986/87 are compared to data collected during 1965-1968. Regression analysis is used to evaluate the relative impacts of gender, SC of origin, farm background, & remoteness of the parental home from an Ur center on the likelihood of migration during the year after obtaining the Leaving Certificate (equivalent to a US high school diploma). The results show that in the 1980s, parental SC is directly related to the amount of education received by Ru Irish youths & to their occupational aspirations. Youths completing secondary school & aspiring to higher-level occupations than those held by their fathers have much greater odds of moving out of the county of origin. Fs have greater odds of migrating than do Ms, partly because Fs receive more education & less often aspire to farming occupations. An important change from the 1960s to the 1980s is that youths from areas remote from Ur centers have greater odds of migration than do youths from less remote areas.

88S20201 / RSS / 1988 / 1999

Hannum, John B. & Lagou, Maria H. (Dept Sociology U Kentucky, Lexington 40546-0091), Mega-Theory, Neo-Smithian Marxism and the World System.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 28 pp.

§ A theoretical examination of the epistemological shortcomings of dependency/world systems theory (WST) from a political economy perspective. Taking a comparative historical approach, & drawing on a body of literature examining WST from a neo-Marxist perspective, the emergence of development theory following WWII is traced & situated within the framework of dependent capitalist development. Dependency theory is seen as the logical extension of a linear progression model that fails to rely on a dialectic of the development of capitalist dependency. A contextual analysis is made of the core/semiperiphery/periphery continuum, & it is argued that the same processes that dominate internal economic relations dominate international ones. The continuation of bimodalism in less developed countries (LDCs) is the result of these processes. Dependency theory shifts the emphasis from endogenous to exogenous change, & in so doing makes a structurally deterministic argument. A situational political economic analysis of the processes of commodification of labor is recommended in order to gain an understanding of the internal dynamics that tie LDCs to the world system.

88S20202 / RSS / 1988 / 2000

Hemken, Douglas (Dept Sociology U Kentucky, Lexington 40546-0064), The Social Construction of Germplasm Conservation Technology.

§ With the gene pool of crop plants currently threatened by the expansive economic development of agriculture, systems of germplasm conservation are now being restructured, raising both technical & social controversies. The germplasm debate centers on alternatives in technical strategies for genetic conservation & on the many organizations involved in implementing conservation programs. The links between these two spheres of debate are explored here in terms of the social construction of germplasm conservation strategies. The goals of organizations & individuals engaged in the debate are examined with particular emphasis on how the convergence & conflict of organizations' goals interact in their design & choice of germplasm conservation technologies.

88S20203 / RSS / 1988 / 2001

Hickey, Jo Ann S. & Hickey, Anthony Andrew (Dept Sociology Western Carolina U, Cullowhee NC 28723), Development in Africa: Projects by Women for Women.

§ A model for development created by & for women is described. Relevant literature is reviewed with an emphasis on the demonstrated advantages of having women involved in the development process from planning stages through evaluation. An overview of the cultural context of development in Swaziland is presented using secondary macrolevel data. These statistics are discussed in terms of their relevance to Swazi culture & by comparison with other African countries sharing similar characteristics. Summaries of primary data from a variety of Ru- & Ur-based income-generating projects in Swaziland are used to demonstrate the effectiveness of the woman-to-woman development model.

88S20204 / RSS / 1988 / 2002

Hoban, Thomas J. (North Carolina State U, Raleigh 27695-8107), Future Agricultural Technology: Challenges for Extension Sociologists.

§ The diffusion of innovations model is used to suggest future roles for Extension sociologists in evaluating & transferring new agricultural technologies, especially those involving biotechnology. The Cooperative Extension Service (CES) has considerable experience, expertise, & a mandate for carrying out applied research & promoting the adoption of new agricultural technologies. Future roles build on the existing system & well-established capabilities in technology transfer & education. Col-developed-satisfaction with community services & general community satisfaction-which served as dependent variables. As a major independent variable, a comparative index was developed in which newcomers were asked to evaluate present community services in relation to those available in the previous community of residence. Additional personal & social variables such as age & income were included, & multivariate techniques used to test the hypotheses.

88S20189 / RSS / 1988 / 1987

Decharin, Pairat (Chiang Mai City Hall, Chotana Rd CM-5000 Thailand), Past, Present, and Future Rural Development in Thailand: Any Other Alternatives?

† Contemporary needs for, & constraints against, Ru development in Thailand are reviewed. A proposal is made to mobilize the growing number of unemployed U & Coll graduates as agents of change in Ru Thai villages. These nongovernment officials would enlist villagers in setting the goals of development projects & in assuming the work toward attainment. The proposed plan would broaden the base of human & financial resources invested in Ru development

88S20190 / RSS / 1988 / 1988

Duncan, R. Paul & Miller, Michael K. (Center Health Policy Research U Florida, Box J-177 Gainesville 32610), Determinants of the Uncompensated Care Burden of Rural and Urban Hospitals in Florida.

† It has been projected that over the next decade some 700 hospitals will close due to financial pressures created at least in part by uncompensated care. Data collected from 14,000+ inpatient records from 130 Fla hospitals are used to examine the degree to which Ru hospitals experience problems of uncompensated care that differ in source or magnitude from that experienced by Ur institutions. Analyses show that 150 days following the provision of service, the mean per capita outstanding amount was $18 higher for patients seen in Ru hospitals than those seen in Ur hospitals. Further, the odds of a Ru hospital patient having an outstanding balance 150 days after service were 1.3 times those for patients seen in Ur hospitals. The residence difference is not eliminated by controlling for patients' sociodemographic differences or the circumstances surrounding the type &/or source of admission. The single most important predictor is health insurance; patients with no coverage are 38.6 times more likely to have an outstanding balance than patients with coverage. After controlling for sociodemographic & economic factors & circumstances surrounding admission, the odds increase from 38.6 to 73.6

88S20191 / RSS / 1988 / 1989

Elcher, Joanne Bubolz (Dept Design/Housing/Apparel U Minnesota, Saint Paul 55108), Social Change, Continuity, and Dress among the Kalabari of Nigeria.

† It is argued that the material & the ideational worlds of the Kalabari of Nigeria are closely intertwined. Of special interest are textiles, both imported & locally made. The artistic detail in the color, shape, & form of textiles is held to reflect Kalabari beliefs about the relationships of men & women & of the living & the dead. These relationships are nowhere more paramount than at funeral ceremonies, where mourners wear traditional garb symbolizing age & political station

88S20192 / RSS / 1988 / 1990

England, J. Lynn (Dept Sociology Brigham Young U, Provo UT 84602), Hierarchy Theory and Rural Communities.

† The efforts of Ru sociologists to understand Ru communities are confronted by an important & difficult inconsistency: on the one hand, Ru communities are examined as deterministic systems; on the other hand, Ru sociologists become involved in efforts to train local influentials or interest groups for the self-conscious & innovative creation of new institutions to pursue existing or construct new goals. Here, an integration of these two approaches is proposed, based on hierarchy theory as developed by theorists such as Herbert Simon, Michael Polanyi, Kenneth Boulding, & James Miller. Hierarchy theory provides a way of understanding the discontinuity between the deterministic community system & the open, self-creating community. It also explicates the reasons why a community may be best viewed as a deterministic system at one time & as open at another. The approach is illustrated using the literature on boomtowns.

88S20193 / RSS / 1988 / 1991

Evans, Dennis A., Brannon, Evelyn & Rush, Forest (Auburn U, AL 36849), Utilizing a Qualitative Research Technique-Evaluability Assessment-to Evaluate a Cooperative Extension Program.

† Evaluability assessment (EA) is a qualitative research technique increasingly being used to evaluate public programs, either as a stand-alone evaluation or as a preliminary step to impact evaluation. Here, an EA study of Ala's small home-based business programming is described that attempted to: (1) review programming to date, & (2) assess the potential for a full-scale impact study. In an initial meeting the task team developed logic & functional models for the programming, drafted an interview schedule, & identified stakeholders. Thirty-five stakeholders including business leaders, special interest organization personnel, legislators, regulatory personnel, specialized resource people, & education & Extension administrators were interviewed by phone. Content analysis was performed on the transcribed interviews by 3 coders using computer software sorting in 3-stage analysis. In a second task, team meeting models were revised & the analysis was validated. Results show convergence among the stakeholders & staff on issues related to small home-based business programming including audience, impact/results, & program delivery & evaluation. Recommendations include improved visibility for small home-based business programming in Ala, increased networking among agencies on small business issues, & positioning Extension as the lead agency in the area of small home-based business assistance

88S20194 / RSS / 1988 / 1992

Evans, Dennis A., Roth, Frank A., II & Dunkelberger, John (Auburn U, AL 36849), Taking a Closer Look at a Cooperative Extension Technology Transfer Program Directed to Forest Landowners-A Study of Forest Management Applications and the Centele Groups.

† In order to increase landowners' income & strengthen the state's economy, the Ala Cooperative Extension Service developed an educational program including demonstrations, meetings, tours, publications, personal contacts, continuing education, & participation in a reforestation project in cooperation with government agencies & forest industry. In order to determine the effectiveness of the extension education program, an impact study was conducted, using data collected from 2 sources: a questionnaire used at 23 forestry meetings or tours between Oct 1983 & Nov 1985, & a follow-up mail survey in June 1987. The questionnaire was completed by 563 individuals of whom 365 were landowners; the follow-up mail survey was completed by 188 landowners. Ninety-six % said the information they received helped in managing their forestland, & 93 % were interested in attending future meetings or tours; 80 % put into practice the information they received. The practices accomplished are delineated, & it is concluded that Extension technology transfer has been effective in promoting the management of 175,000 acres of Ala forestland

88S20195 / RSS / 1988 / 1993

Evans, Dennis A., Strawn, Harry B. & Drane, J. Wanzer (Auburn U, AL 36849), Assessing the Impacts of a Cooperative Extension Program to Encourage Industrial Development-A Study of Program Participants and Change at the Community Level.

† The STEP (Start Tapping Economic Potential) program was begun in 1979 to focus attention on Ru & small-town Ala as having potential for industrial development. Since then, STEP has undergone a continual evolution & maturation process. Over 40 industrial development seminars have been held under STEP; in addition an "Industrial Development Course for Development Professionals" has been incorporated into the program. STEP has also cemented relations between public & private developers in Ala & has become an education arm of the Industrial Development Assoc. Here, the characteristics of STEP programs are examined via analysis of mail survey data (N = 158 usable responses), secondary data, & results of an independent evaluation commissioned for one part of the program. Returned survey forms were tabulated statistically in subsequent regression analysis. Participants tended to react positively to the educational experience, & there was a positive r between the educational experience & the new jobs in Ala communities.

88S20196 / RSS / 1988 / 1994

Florkowski, W. J. & McNamara, K. (Dept Agricultural Economics U Georgia, Griffin 30223-1797), The Impacts of Economic and Population Changes on Alcohol and Tobacco Consumption in Poland.

† An analysis of trends in alcohol & cigarette consumption in Poland is provided to provide recommendations for policy changes. Between 1951 & 1980, the per capita consumption of alcohol & cigarettes increased by about 250%. Revenue from sales was a major source of state income & held an important position in the central budget. A specified model of vodka, wine, beer, & cigarette consumption is estimated. Results indicate that price increases would lower the consumption of alcohol & some kinds of cigarettes. The long-term decrease in consumption of alcohol & tobacco can

88S20213 / RSS / 1988 / 2011

Little, Ronald L., Kramnick, Richard S. & Endter, Joanna L. (Dept Sociology Utah State U, Logan 84322), The Continuing Saga of Caliente: The Persistence of Community following 'Death by Dieselization'.

In his classic 1950s research, Cottrell documented the apparent collapse of the social & economic fabric of Caliente, Nev. as a result of sudden technological changes related to the adoption of diesel engines in the railroad industry. As described by Cottrell, Caliente appeared to be a dying community whose fate was directly & inexorably linked to its dependence on one particular technological era within a single, extralocally controlled industry. However, despite Cottrell's grim prognosis, thirty years later Caliente remains alive, if not well. Here, historical records & current ethnographic research are used to reconstruct some of Caliente's long & ongoing history of dependency & de-development. An attempt is made to account for the unexpected persistence of the community in the face of broad SE trends that seemingly should have resulted in its "death" long ago.

88S20214 / RSS / 1988 / 2012

Malia, James E. (Dept Sociology Iowa State U, Ames 50011), The Non-Adoption of Appropriate Technologies: A Theoretical Perspective.

Although appropriate technologies have long been seen by their advocates as a cure for the ills of US agriculture, these technologies have not been readily adopted by commercial farmers. Here, an adoption-diffusion perspective is utilized to explore why US farmers have been reluctant to use appropriate technologies in their agricultural practices. The results are useful to propagators of appropriate technologies & to policymakers interested in implementing sustainable agriculture programs.

88S20215 / RSS / 1988 / 2013

Malia, James E. & Deibert, Ammerette (Dept Sociology Iowa State U, Ames 50011), Sustainable Agriculture in Iowa.

The Leopold Center for Sustainable Agriculture was established by the Iowa legislature at Iowa State U for the purpose of identifying & reducing the negative environmental & SE impacts of agricultural practices & to assist in developing emerging alternative practices that are consistent with a sustainable agriculture. Preliminary results are presented of a study that interviewed a sample of farmers already practicing sustainable agriculture in Iowa to learn how they conduct their operation, why they have chosen this method of production, & what policies are needed to support & extend sustainable agricultural practices in Iowa.

88S20216 / RSS / 1988 / 2014

Marcotte, Lawrence P., Elliott, H. & Hariri, G. (ISNAR, Oranje Buitensingel 6 The Hague Netherlands), The Agricultural Technology Management System in the Sudan: A Methodology and Test Case.

The Agricultural Technology Management System (ATMS) is a methodology designed to analyze the interdependent relationships between new & existing institutions & technologies as they are directed to meet acceptable & feasible responses by individual producers. The component parts of a generic ATMS are the technology sector, the politico-bureaucratic structure, the external sector, the underlying structural conditions, & the policy environment. This methodology was tested in the Sudan for its use as a common format for reviewing national agricultural research systems. The report includes recommendations to the Sudan government as examples of the ATMS review format, & a critique of the methodological approach.

88S20217 / RSS / 1988 / 2015

Marcotte, Lawrence P. & Wenk, Dee Ann (ISNAR, Oranje Buitensingel 6 The Hague Netherlands), Hidden Hunger in America.

Ru poverty & hunger were so widespread in the US in the 1960s that the administration declared "war" on them. Massive federal funds were allocated to eliminate poverty & its attendant phenomena, malnutrition & infant mortality. The war was fought on two fronts: structural, economic problems were attacked with educational & equal opportunity programs, & social & systemic deficiencies in food distribution & health care were attacked with food stamps, Aid to Families with Dependent Children, & free & reduced-cost lunch programs. The relative success of these programs unfortunately also caused their downfall. Declaring that the war on poverty had been largely won, the Reagan administration began dismantling the programs in 1980. The results of this errant & short-sighted understanding of the structural problems soon manifested themselves in the form of poor, hungry people & needlessly early infant death. Statistics on poverty & hunger indicate that the US has returned to the 1960s. After documenting the changes that resulted from Reagan administration decisions, a profile is created of the food crisis center & its users in Lexington, Ky.

88S20218 / RSS / 1988 / 2016

Marcotte, Lawrence P., Zuidema, L. & Stave, K. (ISNAR, Oranje Buitensingel 6 The Hague Netherlands), Human Resources in Agricultural Research.

An essential element of agricultural research management is the quality & quantity of well-motivated & well-led human resources. The collection of comprehensive data about scientific personnel is a first step toward understanding the functioning of an institution. Various kinds of data & analyses that can lead to this understanding are illustrated with examples drawn from ongoing ISNAR research in Senegal, Zimbabwe, & Malawi. Of particular interest is the profile of scientists' values within the agricultural research communities.

88S20219 / RSS / 1988 / 2017

McMurry, Daniel W. (Dept Sociology Middle Tennessee State U, Murfreesboro 37132), Hunger in Rural America: Stalking a Myth to the Cornfield. A Re-Examination of the Harvard Physician Task Force on Hunger in America.

Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 19 pp.

The Harvard Report defines hunger in terms of the proportion of the population below the poverty level combined with a low food stamp participation rate of those eligible. Using this formula, 150 counties, mainly in the Ru Midwest, were identified as "hunger counties." However, since the distribution of the counties differed from all previous reports of the "geography of hunger," the data were suspect from several perspectives. Attempting to confirm the validity of the suspicious conclusion that hunger was widespread in the Midwest & absent from the Deep South, three types of evidence were collected: economic & health data, interview data from county officials, & observations in 10 counties. It is concluded that the Harvard Report is incorrect, & that the counties were misidentified as "hungry." The major error appears to be one of validity: the Report's empirical indicators misinterpreted Ru, self-employed, farming families as "hungry."

88S20220 / RSS / 1988 / 2018

McNamara, Kevin T. & Green, Gary P. (Dept Agricultural Economics U Georgia, Athens 30602), Economic Development Activities and Regional Planning District Commissions in the Southeast.

Over the past decade the environment for local economic development in the Ru South has changed considerably. In the 1970s, the Ru South experienced a net increase in population & employment due largely to branch plants locating in the region. The 1980s, however, have been characterized by a much slower growth rate, & a net loss of population & employment in many areas. As a result, many analysts have called for new strategies & institutions to promote local economic development. The role of regional planning district commissions (PDCs) in promoting local economic development is examined via data obtained from a survey of PDCs in 9 southeastern states. Focus is on two issues: (1) the extent & variety of economic activities in which PDCs are involved, & (2) structural factors influencing their involvement in local economic activities. It is found that PDCs are not very active in promoting economic development, their activities are focused on providing a physical infrastructure & financial assistance. There exists a negative relationship between PDC size & extent of involvement in economic activities.

88S20221 / RSS / 1988 / 2019

Moore, Keith M. (Dept Sociology Oklahoma State U, Stillwater 74078), Water Quality Management and Public Policy: A Survey of Farmer and Non-Farmer Attitudes.

To determine the PO context for non-point-source pollution policies, a sample of Okla agricultural & environmental leaders were asked to respond to a set of 88 attitudinal items. Previously applied scales measuring traditional agrarianism, environmental, & water quality concerns, as well as more general political & economic attitudes, were included to explore the extent & type of variation between farmers & nonfarmers. Padgett & Hoyer (1987) found little difference between farmers & nonfarmers with respect to water quality beliefs & concerns in one area of Iowa. Although this has not been a frequent finding, the data in this study support that contention. Also explored are areas of agreement & disagreement as they relate to SC, place of residence, & scale of farming.

laboration with the private sector will need to increase. The CES will also need a concerted effort in educating the public about biotechnology. To meet these challenges CES will need to train many of its specialists & county agents in biotechnology. Extension sociologists need legitimization in efforts to anticipate & alleviate negative SE impacts that may result from future technology. The promises of future technology depend on insuring full access of all farmers to the benefits. Extension sociologists have the knowledge & methods to identify & help alleviate negative impacts, but additional support is needed from administrators, agricultural researchers, & extension specialists from other disciplines.

88S20205 / RSS / 1988 / 2003

Hobbs, Thomas J. (North Carolina State U, Raleigh 27695-8107). Resource Use Conflicts: A Social Impact Model.

¶ Social impact assessment (SIA) provides an innovative basis for identifying & mediating conflicts among users of coastal water resources. Social impacts arise not only from incompatible uses of natural resources, but also from the public policies designed to protect & manage natural resources. The problems inherent in coastal resource management are used to illustrate the application of conflict theory to the SIA process. Conflicts among the various users of the coastal water resources are discussed, as are conflicts among those who depend on the coastal water resources & certain upstream land users. Methodologies for identifying social impacts of resource use conflicts are presented. Techniques for mediating the social & economic impacts of such conflicts are suggested.

88S20206 / RSS / 1988 / 2004

Hoppe, Robert A. (ERS US Dept Agriculture, Room 140 1301 New York Ave NW Washington DC 20005-4788). Defining and Measuring Nonmetro Poverty: Results from the Survey of Income and Program Participation.

¶ The Survey of Income & Program Participation (SIPP) was developed to record people's receipts of transfer income month by month. These data allow researchers to bring a time element to the measurement of poverty. Examined here is how different ways of defining & measuring the poor can affect perceptions of poverty in nonmetropolitan (nonmetro) areas, focusing on whether, (1) the definition of poverty makes a difference in the extent of poverty in nonmetro areas, (2) nonmetro areas have proportionately more poor than metro areas under all definitions considered, (3) the composition of the nonmetro poor varies substantially under different definitions, & (4) any particular definition is preferable for examining nonmetro poverty. Results indicate that people with 4-11 months of poverty per year are disproportionately nonmetropolitan.

88S20207 / RSS / 1988 / 2005

Kabagarama, Daisy & Lorenz, Frederick O. (Dept Sociology & Anthropology Iowa State U, Ames 50011). An Attempt at Examining Factors Related to Increased Agricultural Production in Third World Countries through a Bi-Modal Approach.

¶ In an attempt to understand what factors may contribute to increased agricultural production, perceptions of 103 Third World development experts are examined. Key factors identified include (1) infrastructure, comprising roads, markets, storage facilities, & coordination between agricultural institutions, & (2) resources, comprising technology, extension services, incentives, & credit to farmers. Findings reveal that perceptions on resources are influenced by contextual variables, no individual-level variables were found to influence perceptions on infrastructure.

88S20208 / RSS / 1988 / 2006

Kabagarama, Daisy & Lorenz, Frederick O. (Dept Sociology & Anthropology Iowa State U, Ames 50011). An Examination of Third World Problems and Solutions from Perceptions of Development Experts.

¶ Perceptions of Third World & US development experts are assessed regarding problems & solutions pertaining to development. Findings show that the Third World experts rank problems & solutions differently for the three Third World regions: Asia, Latin America, & sub-Saharan Africa. The US group, on the other hand, recognizes that inadequate soil is a common problem to all three regions, nonetheless these experts suggest different solutions for the three regions.

88S20209 / RSS / 1988 / 2007

Kiger, Gary & Riley, Pamela J. (Dept Sociology Utah State U, Logan 84322-0730). The Relationship between Community Integration and Mental Health in Rural Areas.

Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at

$0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 28 pp.
 ¶ An examination of influence of type of community, gender, income & measures of community integration on measures of the mental health status of Rs in 3 nonmetropolitan communities (N = 150 each) in a western state. Results indicate that perceived stress among Rs is mitigated by certain measures of community integration (ie, extent of social support network & length of residence in the community) but not by others (ie, membership in community associations & religious participation). Additionally, women, as a group, express greater levels of perceived stress than men. The findings also suggest that not all Ru communities are alike in fostering & sustaining community integration: the farming community had greater levels of community integration compared to both a declining energy community & a nonmetropolitan U community.

88S20210 / RSS / 1988 / 2008

Kraybill, David S. & Johnson, Thomas G. (Dept Agricultural Economics Virginia Polytechnic Instit & State U, Blacksburg VA 24061). The Socio-Economic Consequences of Income Uncertainty in Virginia's Counties and Cities.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 12 pp.
 ¶ An examination of whether (1) level, distribution, & instability of income affect the quality of life in a community; & (2) Ru, natural resource-based communities respond differently to level, distribution, & instability of income than do more diversified economies. Multiple regression analysis of secondary data on Va counties & cities indicates that Va's resource-based communities have lower per capita incomes, higher variability of income, & less equally distributed income. Quality of life in resource-based economies, as measured by health, education, & housing indicators, lags far behind the rest of the state. Income level contributes to lower performance on health, education, & housing indicators. Unequal income distribution contributes to lower quality of housing & educational attainment. Income instability influences health & housing adversely.

88S20211 / RSS / 1988 / 2009

Kwong, Tsz-Man (Dept Sociology U Georgia, Athens 30602). The Effect of Markets on Urban-Rural Inequality: China as a Case Study.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 35 pp.
 ¶ Since 1979, China has instituted several new economic reforms, including the introduction of markets into the economic system to increase peasants' productivity. Here, official data published by the Chinese State Statistical Bureau in 1987 are used to examine the relationship between markets & Ur-Ru inequality in China. Particular focus is on whether markets have similar effects on Ur-Ru inequality in China as in capitalist countries. The content of government policies & the changing pattern of Ur-Ru inequality are also discussed.

88S20212 / RSS / 1988 / 2010

LeClere, Felicia B. & McLaughlin, Diane K. (Dept Agricultural Economics & Ru Sociology Pennsylvania State U, University Park 16802). Educational Attainment: Comparisons between Metropolitan and Nonmetropolitan Labor Markets.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 36 pp.
 ¶ Using both standard census & labor market definitions of rurality, the relationships between age, Ru vs Ur residence, educational attainment & their interaction are examined. Both bivariate comparisons & multivariate loglinear analysis suggest that, although there are measurable differences between the age structures of Ru & Ur areas, the differences have no effect on the variation in educational attainment by residence. The educational gap by residence is real & especially significant for the north-central & southern regions of the US. Age, although it does not account for the variation of attainment by residence, has an independent effect on educational attainment; as might be expected, younger cohorts were found to be more highly educated. The evidence on whether the differences between Ru & Ur residents has declined among the younger cohorts is mixed. The bivariate results show that, at least for the South, the residence gap for attainment has declined in the younger cohorts. However, the multivariate logit models fit to the labor market definitions of rurality show that the gap has widened in the younger cohorts for the US as a whole, which suggests that educationally selective outmigration from Ru areas has increased over time. Thus, a second Ru revitalization policy would include not only provisions for improving educational facilities & access in Ru areas but also means for retaining the highly educated in Ru areas.

trend should, it is hypothesized, result in a redistribution of Ecuadorian population toward areas serviced by roads. Ru areas with easier access to cities should retain their populations because residents can benefit from small-farm maintenance with Ur employment, while villages without roads, located a considerable distance from cities, should lose population. Analysis of parish-level data confirms the hypotheses. Implications of these trends for the political mobilization of the peasantry, the issue of transportation issues in the peasantry's political agenda, & provision of services to Ru populations are explored.

20231 / RSS / 1988 / 2029

Smith, Suzanne D. & Price, Sharon J. (Home Economics Programs-FAS U Florida, Gainesville 32611), Women and Plant Closings: Unemployment, Reemployment, and Job Training Enrollment following Relocation.

An examination of factors that affect FL activity following job displacement, i.e. factors that discriminate between, classify, & describe Fs by frequent employment, unemployment, or job training enrollment. Following a Ga apparel manufacturer's closure of 1 Ru & 1 Ur plant in 1986 (respectively), face-to-face interviews were conducted with unemployed & reemployed groups, & questionnaires completed by job-training group, covering demographic & psychological characteristics, economic circumstances, social support, health, stress, & work. Discriminant analysis was used to determine the linear combinations of variables that maximally differentiated the 3 groups, equalized for analyses ($n = 80$). The job training group differed significantly from the unemployed & employed groups. Variables that appeared to reflect life cycle differences accounted for these results (i.e. age, number & ages of children at home, & income). Job training enrollees also perceived less social support from spouses. The unemployed group appeared to be receptive for group differences on work & stress functions, tending to underpraise their employability, value work less, & rate their stress as high. The employed group appeared responsible for differences on the health function, of 7 discriminant functions, only the psychological characteristics function was not significant. Results demonstrate the intersected aspects of women's work & family lives & the meaning of unemployment in the context of these demands. Subsequent FL activity conditioned by personal & household characteristics, economic circumstances, & opportunities & job training outcomes. The importance of these findings for Ru communities is discussed.

20232 / RSS / 1988 / 2030

Stofferahn, Curtis W., Staples, Clifford L. & Manthey, Douglas R. (Dept Sociology U North Dakota, Grand Forks 58202), Social Class Correlates of Expert Farmers.

Peasant class structure (ACS) has received increasing attention by sociologists. The influence of Wright's (1978) seminal work has induced researchers to apply Wright's typology to ACS. Wright hypothesized that the four processes underlying social relations of production—control over labor power, the physical means of production, investments, & resources. From these relations of production he developed pure class positions & three contradictory locations—managers & revisors, small employers, & semiautonomous employees. In later writings (eg. 1985), Wright criticized his earlier elaboration of class structure, focusing on two problems, the contradictoriness of contradictory locations, & autonomy as a class criterion. He reformulated his theory by focusing on three principal dimensions of exploitation—relations-based on control of capital, organization, & credentials/skills. In these dimensions he examines: assets in means of production—whether they are self-employed & the number of employees; assets in organizational control—whether they are directly involved in policy decisions & have any supervisory authority over subordinates; assets in scarce skills & talents—type of occupation, amount of education required, & extent of autonomy. An attempt is made here to apply Wright's reformulation to develop a typology of ACS, with particular interest in the interaction of skills, credentials, & organizational assets for development of an "expert" class of farmers who are using new information technologies to improve their financial position. The data come from the 1987/88 ND Ru Life Poll of 1,000 farmers.

20233 / RSS / 1988 / 2031

Swaney, Anne L. (Dept Housing/Home Management/Consumer Economics U Georgia, Athens 30602), Barriers and Incentives to Affordable Housing in Four Rural Communities in Georgia.

Since federal funding for housing is not a national priority, many Ru communities are faced with the concern that housing for low- & moderate-income families must be provided by state & local sources. Most past success in the delivery of adequate housing in Ru areas has been the result of local community actions, through elected & appointed governing bodies (boards, councils, & commissions). Others who affect housing delivery include lenders, regulators, builders, & consumers. A research project (part of the Southern Regional Housing Research Project S-194) was undertaken to identify barriers & incentives existing in Ru communities & to develop methods to better provide housing for all residents. Four Ga communities were selected for study based on community tolerance to innovation in housing, determined by census data & interviews. Housing consumers & intermediaries were interviewed (following a mailed survey) to determine their knowledge regarding innovations in housing, acceptability of alternative housing, & other factors. Results of those surveys are presented, along with community case studies that define operations & output of the housing markets & the barriers & incentives to affordable alternative housing operating within each community.

88S20234 / RSS / 1988 / 2032

Taylor, Teresa D., Broder, Josef M. & McNamara, Kevin T. (Dept Agricultural Economics U Georgia, Athens 30602), The Socioeconomic Implications of Developmental Highways.

¶ The impacts of 6 developmental highways constructed in Ru Ga from 1975 through 1981 are examined. Regression discontinuity time-series analysis was employed to measure changes in population, number of manufacturing firms, manufacturing employment, service employment, per capita gross income, & taxable sales associated with the construction of developmental highways. It was found that some counties experienced economic growth with highway development, & others economic decline; success or failure may depend on more inherent factors. Further research is suggested to examine the dynamic interaction of economic criteria & the political process in planning highway construction.

88S20235 / RSS / 1988 / 2033

Thompson, Alton & Gray, Benny G. (Dept Agricultural Economics North Carolina State U, Greensboro 27401), A Structural Analysis of Farming-Dependent Counties in North Carolina.

¶ An examination of the extent to which selected farm, demographic, & FL structural variables differentiate between 18 farming-dependent & 18 non-farming-dependent counties in NC—the former receive at least 20% of their total labor & proprietors' income from farming, & the latter receive at least 80% of their income from nonagricultural sources. Discriminant analysis is employed to assess the predictive accuracy of these variables as well as the overall fit of each structural model. All three structural models are statistically significant, but the FL model performs better than the farming & demographic models in distinguishing between farming- & non-farming-dependent counties. Implications of these structural differences are considered.

88S20236 / RSS / 1988 / 2034

Torreclilha, Ramon S. (Dept Ru Sociology U Wisconsin, Madison 53706), Migration, Education, and Income Differentials on Selected Rural Poor Counties in the South, 1975-80.

¶ In an analysis of the impact of migration on chronically depressed areas of the Ru South, 121 nonmetropolitan poor counties were identified, based on data from the County to County Migration Flow file, released by the Bureau of the Census in 1984. Results show that for the period 1975-1980, predominantly black poor counties experienced a higher rate of outmigration than poor white counties. This drainage in black counties is reflected in the loss of educational capital. Poor white counties also show a slight depletion in educational capital between 1975 & 1980, but considerably less than that of poor black counties. It was also found that outmigrants, as compared to immigrants, are less successful in capitalizing their education. Fs as a whole show lower income levels during the period under study than Ms, regardless of migratory status. These results extend support to the assertion (by Bouvier et al. 1976) that the importance of education in the process of migration means different things in different places & times.

88S20237 / RSS / 1988 / 2035

Turner, Steven C. (Dept Agricultural Economics U Georgia, Athens 30602), An Empirical Analysis of a Marketing Order Vote for a Specialty Crop: The Georgia Vidalia Onion Case.

¶ In a 20-county area of southeastern Ga., the production of Vidalia onions is a major industry, 260 registered producers grow & market these onions. In a recent move to increase cooperation among growers, a state marketing order was proposed. Data on the voting for a referendum to

88S20222 / RSS / 1988 / 2020

Norman, Charles L. (Central District Office, PO Box 1017 Fort Valley GA 31030). An Analysis of Organizational Climate and Training Needs of the Georgia Cooperative Extension Service.

† Administrators in the Georgia Cooperative Extension Service (CES) (N = 57) were surveyed to uncover their management techniques, determine problem areas associated with certain techniques, provide a systematic analysis of problem areas associated with management techniques, & develop managerial training recommendations for administrators. The survey instrument was constructed to obtain data in four areas: (1) organizational climate, (2) attitude toward the Georgia CES, (3) training priorities, & (4) selected personal & job-related characteristics. Data collected via mailed questionnaire (100% response rate) were subjected to factor analysis, theta reliability, multiple regression, & Spearman's rho. Age, gender, farm background, length of CES experience, education, use of computer, role as an administrator or educator, current position, & total staff for which leadership is provided proved to be significant positive indicators of administrators' attitudes toward CES & its organizational climate. There were no significant differences between district & state administrators in their rankings of training priorities. Recommendations based on these findings include: (A) additional research using different personal & job-related characteristics, (B) separate administrative training programs for state & district administrators, (C) possibilities for administrators to participate in training programs with public service & private industry administrators, (D) computer training programs for administrators & (E) dissemination of study results to all Georgia CES administrators.

88S20223 / RSS / 1988 / 2021

Parker, Timothy S. & Whitener, Leslie A. (US Dept Agriculture, 1301 New York Ave NW Washington DC 20005-4788). Labor Market Conditions Facing US Farmers.

† The last several decades have seen a persistent decline in agricultural employment. As a result of changes in the structure of agriculture & recent financial stress, many farmers have sought nonfarm employment, & others are combining farm activities with nonfarm jobs. The labor market conditions facing farmers as they seek nonfarm employment opportunities are examined based on 1980 census data of LF characteristics, employment structure, & level of labor market hardship. Findings indicate that the LF characteristics & occupational & industrial structure experienced by farmers do not differ substantially from those experienced by the total civilian LF; however, farmers do face different conditions of labor market stress. Labor market areas where farmers live are characterized by higher levels of unemployment (& underemployment), slower employment growth over the last decade, lower average per capita income, a higher incidence of poverty, & unstable rates of income growth. The policy implications of these findings are explored.

88S20224 / RSS / 1988 / 2022

Peacock, Walter & Green, Gary (Dept Sociology U Alabama, Huntsville 35899). Home Production in Peasant Households: Family Labor, Farm Structure, and Cultural Factors.

† In recent years there has been a resurgence in research on the structure of peasant economies. Much of this literature has relied on either the Chayanovian theory of utility & demographic differentiation or neoclassical economic theories of the firm to explain the economic & political logic of peasants. These theories are used here to examine one component of the organization of the peasant household—the home production process. Analysis of the interaction between family labor characteristics, farm structure, & cultural factors in influencing the extent of home production among peasants in Guatemala indicates that cultural factors are the strongest predictors of home production activities. There are, however, different patterns in the production of food, clothing, fuel, & furniture.

88S20225 / RSS / 1988 / 2023

Pinkerton, James R. & Glazier, Jack D. (Dept Ru Sociology U Missouri, Columbia 65211). Cooperative Library/Extension Information Centers in Low-Income Rural Communities.

† (For further information, see SA 35:3/87S19946.) Loss of federal revenue-sharing funds, inflation, & voters' refusal to approve tax increases have caused some Ru county Extension offices in Mo to reduce their operating levels, & others to close. Also, many Ru public libraries have inadequate financial support to provide informational services. Given the complementary roles & concerns of local U Extension Centers & Ru libraries, these organizations should work together to better meet community informational needs. Such a cooperative project was undertaken in Texas County, Mo, using the main library as an Extension public information outlet for print sources & for computer access to Extension online resources & the libraries of the U of Missouri Information Network. A before-after evaluation of the project indicates that ongoing coordination between local libraries & Extension centers can be created & maintained. Moreover, local Ru libraries can be effective information outlets for the practical type of information provided by the Extension Service.

88S20226 / RSS / 1988 / 2024

Poston, Dudley L., Jr. & Winston, Terry (Dept Ru Sociology Cornell U, Ithaca NY 14853). Socioeconomic Development, Gender Equality, and Fertility in the Developing and Newly Industrialized Countries of the World.

† The impact of gender equality on fertility is examined within the context of SE development. Most previous studies of this genre have given insufficient attention to the specific role of gender equality. These relationships are investigated with path analyses among all developing & newly industrialized countries of Asia & of the world as a whole in the mid-1980s. Implications of the results for demographic & development theories are discussed.

88S20227 / RSS / 1988 / 2025

Rathge, Richard W. (Dept Sociology & Agricultural Economics North Dakota State U, Fargo 58105). The Transmission of Information regarding Population Change in a Rural County.

† Content analysis of items published about population growth in the major weekly newspaper of a Great Lakes county with rapid net immigration over a 9-year period (1970-1979) showed that the largest number of items concerned crime & public service, & these items most frequently appeared on page one. Problems concerning population growth were seldom voiced in letters to the editor, but those that were published dealt mainly with expansion of the local school system. Despite adequate press coverage, the fact of rapid population growth was not perceived by most local leaders in the townships & the county, & these officials differed sharply on how to solve the problems posed by rapid population growth.

88S20228 / RSS / 1988 / 2026

Reif, Linda Lobao & Schulman, Michael D. (Dept Agricultural Economics & Ru Sociology Ohio State U, Columbus 43210-1099). Farm Structure and Socioeconomic Conditions: Regional Differences.

† The impact of farm structure on SE conditions has been an important issue in Ru sociology. While recent research suggests that these impacts vary by region, few regionally comparative studies exist. Here, the effect of 3 farm structures on income levels are examined for 4 major census regions: the Northeast, South, North Central, & West—based on data of 2,348 nonmetropolitan US counties collected by the Census of Agriculture & other major secondary sources. Few significant relationships between farm structure & income levels are found in the Northeast. Large family farming is related to higher income levels, & smaller family farming to lower levels, in the remaining 3 regions. The impacts of corporate commercial farming are less clearly & consistently related to income levels, indicating greater regional variation for this type of farming. Several reasons for these regional variations are explored, eg, state intervention in regional economies, unionization levels, & nonfarm employment patterns.

88S20229 / RSS / 1988 / 2027

Rhea, Victoria A., Stinner, William & Toney, Michael B. (Dept Sociology Utah State U, Logan 84322). Poverty and Migration among Nonmetropolitan Young Adults: Race and Gender.

† The relationship between migration behavior & economic mobility of poor & nonpoor nonmetropolitan youth is examined using data from the Youth Cohort of the National Longitudinal Surveys. The empirical analysis centers on Rs aged 18+ who are in the adult LF. Within the poor & nonpoor groupings, gender & racial/ethnic differences are examined. While migration seems to have no effect on change in poverty status, it does have an effect for whites & for Fs. Although the effect for whites is positive, the effect for Fs can be either positive or negative.

88S20230 / RSS / 1988 / 2028

Rudel, Thomas K. & Richards, Samuel (Dept Human Ecology Coll Rutgers U, New Brunswick NJ 08903). Urbanization, Roads, and Rural Population Redistribution in the Ecuadorian Andes.

† Like many developing countries, Ecuador has recently experienced extensive urbanization & a pattern of temporary Ru-Ur LF migration.

sociological abstracts

Announces

The First Edition of Its Thesaurus of Sociological Indexing Terms

(Publication Date: October 1986)

The new sa Thesaurus contains approximately 4,000 descriptors, arranged alphabetically.

- Each entry is cross-referenced and displayed with its broader, narrower, and/or related terms.
- Scope notes provide a definition and show how the term has been used. History notes trace discontinued terms.
- "Used for" terms (listing synonyms) provide in-depth guidance for the information professional and subject specialist alike.

PREPAYMENT SPEEDS DELIVERY!

sociological abstracts

P.O. Box 22206 San Diego, CA 92122 619/565-6603

Order Form

Yes! Reserve ____ copies of the sa Thesaurus of Sociological Indexing Terms at the price of $50.00 (plus $1.50 postage and handling).

Ship to:

Name _____

Institution _____

Department _____

Street Address _____

City _____

State _____

Zip Code _____

institute the marketing order are subjected to probit analysis to investigate several hypotheses: first, the decision to vote was modeled as a function of county, acreage devoted to production, type of grower, & number of packers in a county; & second, the yes/no vote response was modeled as a function of the first 3 variables of the first model & of the % of growers in a county that were packers. Results indicate that county & the packer-related variables were the primary factors influencing voting behavior.

88S20238 / RSS / 1988 / 2036

Wenk, Dee Ann L. (Population Center U North Carolina, Chapel Hill 27514-3997), An Examination of the Relationship between Economic Conditions and Teenage Motherhood in Southeastern Labor Market Areas.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 33 pp.
¶ It is hypothesized that in areas with more economic opportunities, the likelihood of women being teenage mothers is lower than in areas with fewer opportunities, & that the amount of F LF participation, indicating employment opportunities for young women, has a negative effect on the probability of parenthood. These effects are expected to vary by race & SES. Data for 67 labor market areas in Va, W Va, Tenn, NC, & Ky were selected from the 1980 Public-Use & Micro-Data Samples of the US Census (N = 10,258 white & black Fs aged 15-19). Results of logistic regression analysis show that the probability of never-married teenage Fs becoming mothers is negatively affected by their LF participation in F-dominated industries & area employment, more strongly for whites than blacks, among married Fs, the relationship is stronger for blacks. These results support the main hypothesis & suggest the importance of marital status & race as factors conditioning the effects of regional economic conditions on the timing of motherhood in the southeastern US.

88S20239 / RSS / 1988 / 2037

Wheelock, Gerald C. & Zekeri, Andrew A. (Dept Agribusiness Alabama A & M U, Normal 35762), Evaluation of Curriculum Competencies and Skills by Land-Grant University Alumni in Agricultural and Non-Agricultural Careers.

¶ In spite of the fact that agricultural-related career opportunities are about four times more prevalent than the number of graduates from land-grant Us, many alumni enter nonagricultural careers each year. Considering this, general action competencies perceived to be "essential" by alumni differ significantly between those remaining in agriculture & those taking nonagricultural jobs. If the perceived essential skills do differ, there may be associated linkages with salary differentials & the propensity for alumni to further specialize & seek advanced degrees. While significant differences would hold implications for land-grant Coll curricula & the mobility of land-grant graduates, no major differences are expected. The analysis is controlled for alumni of 1890 & 1862 land-grant Colls. Fifteen action competencies & 23 agricultural competencies were evaluated by a current sample of former students (1977). Descriptive statistics, exploratory factor analysis, & analysis-of-variance tests for a posteriori contrasts among majors with agricultural jobs are presented. As part of the Agricultural Careers Regional Research Project (S-200), 1987 samples of alumni from 20 southern region land-grant Us are included.

88S20240 / RSS / 1988 / 2038

Wimberley, Ronald C. & Reif, Linda Lehee (Dept Sociology & Anthropology North Carolina State U, Raleigh 27695-8107), The Measurement of Farm Structure and the Goldschmidt Hypothesis.

¶ Ru sociologists have long studied the effects of farm structure on conditions. Researchers have tested the Goldschmidt hypothesis: the large-scale, industrial-like, hired-labor farms are related to lower conditions, with the converse relationship for smaller-scale, family-operated farms. To empirically represent these conceptually dichotomous poles of farm structure, researchers have employed such measures as farm scale, amount of hired labor, & extent of operator ownership. No consensus about the Goldschmidt hypothesis has not been reached. One possibility for these divergent findings is investigated: how the measurement of farm structure might affect research outcomes. Data from the Census of Agriculture & other secondary sources for 2,348 non-metropolitan counties for 1978-1980 are used to examine: (1) whether previous measures of farm structure are indeed measuring the same underlying construct, & (2) the differential effects of several commonly used measures of farm structure on county income levels. The analysis supports the hypothesis.

88S20241 / RSS / 1988 / 2039

Young, Frank W. (Dept Ru Sociology Cornell U, Ithaca NY 14853), Regional Urban Hierarchies and Economic Diversity in Sub-Saharan Africa.

¶ When Ur hierarchies are analyzed in the context of the 280 subnational regions of sub-Saharan Africa, regularities are revealed that diverge from conclusions drawn at the national level. Using data from detailed maps of Africa, it appears that the Ur hierarchy, defined simply as the cities with 20,000+ population, organizes regions all across Africa. Correlated with number of cities are the number of towns, the population of the largest place, the population of the region, density, the number of industries (both agricultural & general), & even ecological features such as lakes, forests, & dams. Additionally, & surprisingly, the number of different agricultural export crops in the region & the number of different minerals that are exploited correlate with the number of cities. In other words, the Ur hierarchy in Africa is closely associated with export activity, reflecting, no doubt, the colonial background & present day economic emphases. Food crops are not linearly related to the number of cities, but show an inverted U relationship. The relevance of these findings for a deeper conception of regional structure is discussed.

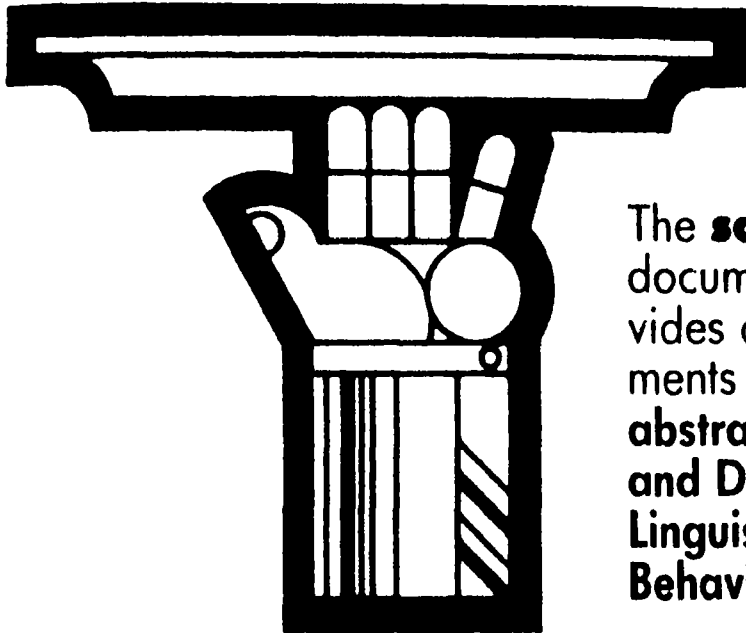

88S20242 / RSS / 1988 / 2040

Young, Frank W. (Dept Ru Sociology Cornell U, Ithaca NY 14853), Structural Mediation in Rural Development.

¶ A formalization of the virtually axiomatic proposition that social structure conditions the relationship of primary technology, trade, & similar "environmental transactions" to the welfare of constituent populations. The general form of the hypothesis may be stated symbolically as $W = f(T^*S)$. For example, Green Revolution technology will enhance or depress the average welfare of agrarian populations depending on such dimensions of structure as the level of urbanization, political pluralism & social mobilization. These dimensions of social structure are conceptualized, & categories of welfare & environmental transactions codified. Examples from the development literature of this type of interaction hypothesis are discussed.

PLEASE NOTE: THE ABSTRACTS PUBLISHED IN THIS SUPPLEMENT ARE INDEXED IN sociological abstracts, 1988, VOLUME 36, NUMBER 3. They are ALSO AVAILABLE ONLINE THROUGH DIALOG, BRS, AND IN EUROPE, THROUGH DATA-STAR.

We bring you the steak along with the sizzle!

The sociological abstracts document delivery service provides affordable copies of documents cited in sociological abstracts, Social Planning/Policy and Development Abstracts, and Linguistics and Language Behavior Abstracts.

Our $.25 per page charge and $1.50 search fee include all royalty payments. (Postage is extra.)

Forty-eight hour turn around, guaranteed.

For complete details on the types of documents available, contact:

sociological abstracts, inc.

Document Delivery Service

P.O. Box 22206
San Diego, CA 92122-0206

Deposit accounts welcome.

Document Delivery Service

The costs of reproduction are: US $0.25 per reproduced page. Orders must be PREPAID (unprepaid orders cannot be acknowledged or returned) and sent to SOCIOLOGICAL ABSTRACTS, INC. (P.O. Box 22206, San Diego, CA 92122, USA) together with the SA accession number and the complete citation of the document to be reproduced. To calculate price per document, multiply the number of pages as indicated in the citation of the abstract by US $0.25 and add a US $1.50 search fee per document. POSTAGE is EXTRA. Below is a table for postage fees that vary by weight/size of paper.

No. of Pages	US & Canada Postage Fee	All Other Countries		Surface
		Postage Fee	Air Mail
1- 5	$0.39	US $1.40		US $1.00
6-10	$0.73	$2.24		$1.90
11-15	$1.07	$2.78		$2.30
16-20	$1.41	$3.32		$2.75
21 +	Additional multiples as above

CONFERENCE papers are available ONLY when the following notation precedes the text of the abstract; ● "Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search and postage. Length: pp." For copies of paper without this notation, write directly to the author, whose address is listed in the citation.

Document Delivery Service

The costs of reproduction are: US $0.25 per reproduced page. Orders must be PREPAID (unprepaid orders cannot be acknowledged or returned) and sent to SOCIOLOGICAL ABSTRACTS, INC. (P.O. Box 22206, San Diego, CA 92122, USA) together with the SA accession number and the complete citation of the document to be reproduced. To calculate price per document, multiply the number of pages as indicated in the citation of the abstract by US $0.25 and add a US $1.50 search fee per document. POSTAGE is EXTRA. Below is a table for postage fees that vary by weight/size of paper.

No. of Pages	US & Canada Postage Fee	All Other Countries		Surface
		Postage Fee	Air Mail
1- 5	$0.39	US $1.40		US $1.00
6-10	$0.73	$2.24		$1.90
11-15	$1.07	$2.78		$2.30
16-20	$1.41	$3.32		$2.75
21 +	Additional multiples as above

CONFERENCE papers are available ONLY when the following notation precedes the text of the abstract; ● "Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search and postage. Length: pp." For copies of paper without this notation, write directly to the author, whose address is listed in the citation.

sociological abstracts

aug 1988

ST 21-23, WESTIN PEACHTREE PLAZA, ATLANTA, GA

36/3

suppl 152

abstracts of papers presented at the 38th annual meeting of the society for the study of social problems

Your editors will no longer accept excuses!

Now you can check the accuracy of your references in a matter of seconds.

If you need to verify an author's name and/or the complete bibliographic citation of his/her article ... sa has 180,000 citations waiting online for your query (time span 1968 onward) ...

If you need to proof the title and subtitle, or year of publication, or name of a book's translator, or the original language, ... IRPS awaits you with over 53,000 book reviews culled from over 240 core sociology journals, continuously screened, abstracted, and indexed from a dozen+ languages (time span 1980 onward) ...

If you need the reprint of an article quickly, each online record tells you how and from whom it can be ordered. sa's document delivery service is fast and inexpensive.

Here's how you can tap into our tapes

Information professionals can use BRS (file label SOCA), Data-Star (file label SOCA); and Dialog (file 37) for searches.

Subject specialists can access sa on three user-friendly services: BRS's After Dark and Colleague (file labels SOCA) and Dialog's Knowledge index (file SOCS1).

Of course, all our information products are available in traditional hard copy. Does your library have a complete set?

sa's print and online services are updated in April, June, August, October and December.

sociological abstracts

P.O. Box 22206
San Diego, CA 92122-0206
U.S.A.
(619) 565-6603

abstracts of papers presented at the 38th annual meeting of the society for the study of social problems

88S20243 / SSSP / 1988 / 2700

Alicea, Marisa (Dept Sociology Northwestern U, Evanston IL 60208), Development and Change of an Ethnic Organization: Consequences for the Ethnic Group.

Most studies of ethnic institutions seek to explain how these organizations emerge, persist, & change; some explain change as a result of factors external to the ethnic community, eg, discrimination, others find internal factors more important, eg, ethnic resilience. The question of the emergence & change of ethnic organizations is addressed here by comparing these perspectives, examining the interplay of external & internal forces that contributed to changes within a Puerto Rican ethnic organization, the Caballeros de San Juan Credit Union, based on participant observation for 15 years. This Credit Union has encountered numerous policy & structural changes since it was established in 1954, being transformed from a small mutual aid society to a large bureaucratic institution. With this shift, it was successful in creating a capital base for the Latino community & in promoting the ethnic group. However, it was less able to help lower-income members of the Latino community, which it had originally intended to serve—one of the ironies faced by an ethnic organization as it developed.

88S20244 / SSSP / 1988 / 2701

Appelbaum, Richard P. (Dept Sociology U California, Santa Barbara 93106), The Homeless: Who They Are, Why They Are Homeless.

The number of homeless people in the US is larger now than at any time since the Great Depression of the 1930s, & according to recent research is rapidly increasing, particularly among F's & F-headed families. Examined here are the causes of homelessness, the issue of numbers, the public policy issues involved in developing solutions. Special attention is given to the relationship between homelessness & housing costs in the US & some solutions are offered that specifically address the need for low income housing.

88S20245 / SSSP / 1988 / 2702

Aulette, Judy Root (Dept Sociology U North Carolina, Charlotte 28223), Midwestern Blue-Collar Families in the 1981-1983 Recession (Conflict and Change in the Division of Labor in Families).

An examination of the relationship between husbands & wives in blue-collar families during a period of economic decline, based on data from a survey (N = 328 Rs) & in-depth interviews (N = 22) conducted in a small industrial Ohio city during the 1981-1983 recession. In all of the couples, either the husband or the wife had been laid off. The question of housework was focused on as an indicator of political relationships between husbands & wives, & was considered in terms of time spent, changes since the layoff, distribution of specific tasks, satisfaction, arguments & reactions from friends & family to the changes in DoFL. The findings suggest that layoff creates tensions & sometimes change in household DoFL. Families do not act to resolve the disruption of the economic system, but rather, reflect the uncertainty & discomfort of a social system gone awry.

88S20246 / SSSP / 1988 / 2703

Bailey, Kenneth D. (Dept Sociology U California, Los Angeles 90024), The Ethics of Social Research.

Ethical issues are increasingly relevant in social research, particularly survey research. Eight reasons for increased interest in the ethics of social research are outlined, including size of the field, number of studies, amount of data collected, technological advances, organizational changes, increased interest in privacy & in human rights, & changes in research trends in codes of ethics, notorious cases in sociology, & ways to avoid ethical dilemmas are discussed. An exchange model of ethical dilemmas is presented to illustrate the discussion.

88S20247 / SSSP / 1988 / 2704

Baril, Cecile M. (Southern Oregon State Coll, Ashland 95720), Village Health Volunteers and Improvements in Health and Health Care Delivery: The Case of Thailand.

Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at

$0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 24 pp.

¶ The question of whether the primary health care (PHC) delivery model encouraged by the World Health Organization is an effective vehicle for promoting & improving health in developing & newly industrialized nations is addressed, drawing on personal observations, research literature, statistical records, & interviews with health care researchers & administrators to describe the organization of the modern PHC delivery system as well as the active indigenous care system in Thailand. Since the PHC program was implemented in 1977, health status indicators have shown improvements, changes are also noted in health care resources & in illness behaviors. Despite continuing problems with access to secondary care facilities & with the maldistribution of MDs & nurses, the more available PHC facilities remain underutilized. In exploring why, focus is on the heavy reliance of the PHC program on village volunteers, who are seen as lacking guidance, incentive, & expertise, & as poorly integrated in both community organization & the PHC delivery system. Recently implemented solutions are described, but it is nonetheless concluded that reliance on village volunteers is of questionable value.

88S20248 / SSSP / 1988 / 2705

Best, Joel (Dept Sociology California State U, Fresno 93740-0107), What Is Child Abuse? Definition, Typification, and Domain Expansion in Claims-Making.

¶ Definitions of social problems tend to change over time. Initial claims-making often defines the problem narrowly, using dramatic examples to attract attention to the problem & typify it. Once a problem becomes accepted, its domain tends to expand as the label is applied to more & more activities. The history of the child abuse problem illustrates this process. Originally, the battered child syndrome referred to instances of extreme physical brutality, but the domain of child abuse has expanded to include sexual abuse, neglect, psychological abuse, etc. A natural history for such domain expansion is outlined.

88S20249 / SSSP / 1988 / 2706

Bickel, Robert (Marshall U, Huntington WV 25755-2440), Teacher Salaries and High School Outcomes.

¶ Low teacher salaries are widely regarded as a serious educational problem that diminishes school effectiveness. District-level data from Fla's 67 school districts are analyzed to determine if variation in teacher salaries is related to variation in 3 high profile outcome measures: high school completion rates, Coll attendance rates among high school graduates, & achievement test scores. Multiple regression analysis indicates that when suitable controls for district social, economic, & school characteristics are introduced, average teacher salary is not related to any of the outcome measures. When teacher salary itself is used as an outcome measure, the only independent variables with statistically significant regression coefficients are % of the population classified as Ru (negative) & median family income (positive).

88S20250 / SSSP / 1988 / 2707

Bickel, Robert & Banks, Steven (Marshall U, Huntington WV 25755-2440), State-Level Planning with Technocratic Assumptions.

¶ The Florida State Comprehensive Plan has received national attention as a prototype of planning efforts, it will be emulated by other states as circumstances force them to address changing opportunities & constraints. Public education has an especially prominent place in Fla's plan. Nevertheless, sanguine expectations as to prospects for improving educational effectiveness & using public education as an omnibus social reform tool are inconsistent with the findings of much published research. Policymakers' excessively optimistic expectations are due, in large part, to uncritical acceptance of taken-for-granted assumptions as to the inevitable progressive role of education in the ongoing development of a modern society. Based on two years of participant observation, an account is provided of inconsistencies between technocratic assumptions & results of empirical research, also, difficulties are noted with the technocratic perspective that assigns education the primary role in Fla's planning process.

sociological abstract

sponsored by the international sociological association

P.O. Box 22206, San Diego, CA 92122

Telephone: (619) 565-6603

Board of Directors
Jerome Brickman Eleanor Brown, Esq. Leo P. Chall Miriam Chall Alfred McC Lee
† Robert L. Leske † Albert L. Solodur Kurt H. Wolff

Editor: Leo P. Chall
Procurement Office: Britt Sieger
User Education: Michelle Blackman

Marketing and Data Base
Operations: Miriam Chall
Advertising: Laurie M. Sapiente

Publications Manager: Sandra S. Stanton
Indexing Department: Michael Blair
Computer Office: Lynette Hunter

Advisory Board

Joseph R. Gusfield, John D. Kasarda, Edward A. Tiryakian, Martin Albrow, John Useem, Charles V. Willie

board of directors

Leo P. Chall, Sociological Abstracts
Miriam Chall, Sociological Abstracts
Robert L. Leske, The Sociological Quarterly

Alfred McClung Lee, City University of New York
† Albert L. Solodur, Wechsler & Solodur
Kurt H. Wolff, Brandeis University

INTRODUCTION

This Supplement is presented to all registrants of the 1988 Society for the Study of Social Problems meeting with the compliments of the Society and the cooperation of SA.

The numbering of the abstracts has been integrated into a continuous Supplement accessions number series begun in 1973. For example, the first abstract, that of a paper by Marisa, Alicea is numbered: S20243/SSSP/1988/2700. S20243 is the first number following the last Supplement, No. 151, and the letter S stands for Supplement. After this number is the acronym SSSP, followed by the year, and the last number indicates that this is the two thousand seven hundredth abstract that SA has published from SSSP meetings to date.

The abstracts from this Supplement are fully indexed and the index entries appear in the SA issue of which this Supplement is a part - SA, 1988, 36, 3, August.

Notice

Abstracts of papers that reached us after the deadline will appear in the No. 5 issue of Volume 36, 1988. For DIALOG information, call: Toll-free 800/227-1960 (continental U.S. except southern Calif.); for southern Calif., dial 800/982-5838. For Bibliographic Retrieval Services, Customer Service Dept, dial 800/833-4707. 619/565-6603.

SOCIOLOGICAL ABSTRACTS is published by Sociological Abstracts Inc., a non-profit corporation. 5 issues are published in: April, June, August, October, December. Subscriptions are $220 per year. Single issues are $30. A cumulative index issue will be published within 9 months of the last issue. Index issues are $40.00. Supplement issues $5 to libraries when & if available. Please make remittances payable by cheque to Sociological Abstracts Inc. When paying by UNESCO Book Coupons please add 10% for Bank charges. When paying by International Money Order, please include library order number or SA invoice number. Please add $10 for postage per subscription.

Second Class Postage paid at La Jolla, CA, and at additional mailing offices.

NOTICE: Claims for missing issues must reach the editorial office within 60 days of publication, for FOREIGN subscribers, within 90 days. Notify us, as well as the U.S. Office, of change of address as early as possible. The U.S. Post Office does not insure journals. It destroys them, unless specifically instructed not to do so. Issues missing and of failure to inform us in time of a change of address will not be replaced free of charge. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Sociological Abstracts, P.O. Box 22206, San Diego, CA 92122-0206.

Copyright 1988 by Sociological Abstracts, Inc.

88S20258 / SSSP / 1988 / 2715

Ennenhauser, Paul (PO Box EEE, Emory VA 24327), Contracting Convict Labor—New York, 1817-1870.

An examination of the system of contracting out convict labor in NY's prison system in the nineteenth century. Problems with contracting are discussed, with special emphasis on its impact on the prison system. Implications for the current trend toward privatization in the penal system are discussed.

88S20259 / SSSP / 1988 / 2716

Ehrman, Howard A. (Connecticut Coll, New London 06320), The Reagan Administration's Attack on Poverty Programs: The Uses and Abuses of Applied Sociology.

A discussion of the Reagan administration's efforts during the 1980s to undermine government programs for aiding the poor. This attack has used applied sociology & social science research to minimize the extent of hunger & poverty in the US. It has also challenged the effectiveness of various welfare programs, & has placed the overwhelming blame for the causes of poverty on its victims & the assistance programs that serve them, ignoring the political & economic system under which both the poor & the welfare establishment operate. This critique by the government has been part of a general attack on the welfare state & on the legacy of the war on poverty. Different ideological positions on this subject have been taken by various social critics, among them, Michael Harrington, Michael Walzer, Daniel Moynihan, Nathan Glazer, George Gilder, & Charles Murray.

88S20260 / SSSP / 1988 / 2717

Ferdock, Matthew B. & McKinlay, John B. (American Instit Research, 9 Galen St Watertown MA 02172), Is Social Support Derived from an Individual or a Network?: Results from the Massachusetts Women's Health Study.

Operationalizing social support (a concept commonly used to describe the beneficial effects of a group of friends & relatives in buffering the negative impact of stress on health) in social research often means developing an elaborate survey instrument designed to measure the supportive dimensions of a number of social network members. The hypothesis that measuring support from one individual (eg, a best friend) might be sufficient to account for total social support is tested with data from the Massachusetts Women's Health Study, a longitudinal survey of 2,500 mid-aged Mass women. Logistic regression models show that support from an individual was significantly associated with decreased levels of depression, symptom reporting, & restricted activity days, while combined support from the rest of the network was not significant, supporting the hypothesis. The findings also show that social support from an individual changes over time & affects women's physical & psychological health.

88S20261 / SSSP / 1988 / 2718

Floyd, James E. (Division Social Sciences Macon Coll, GA 31297), The Role of Crisis Theory in Black Family Research.

Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 30 pp. The family life of black Americans is one of the most misunderstood aspects of the black experience in the new world. Social commentators have obscured the true character of these kinship units in that they have additionally equated them with instability & disorganization, ie, the literature has propagated the notion that black families are frail social units that produce maladjusted individuals. A research approach is introduced that hopefully will generate the kind of data necessary to challenge the accuracy of this generalized indictment of black families. The best way to determine the validity of the disorganization thesis is to use a carefully weighted combination of crisis theory & genealogical research to order & interpret the social experiences of black families. The idea of using crisis theory to interpret historically based data is linked to the premise that the real indicator of a family's resilience is its ability to respond to crisis situations over a period of several generations. The ability to cope with misfortune & change & move on to the next stage of the life cycle is an expression of family strength.

88S20262 / SSSP / 1988 / 2719

Ford, Thomas E., Welch, Michael & Mabli, Jerome (c/o Welch, Dept Sociology Saint John's U, Jamaica NY 11439), Inmates' Attitudes toward Substance Abuse and the Limitations of Programs and Their Evaluation.

An examination of attitudes regarding substance abuse. 522 inmates at a federal minimum security correctional institution were questioned about their views on physical & psychological harmfulness, legalization, addictiveness, interpersonal effects, & treatment. Overall, inmates assigned to substance abuse programs as well as those in a control group endorsed attitudes seen as neutral between strongly prosocial & strongly antisocial. While the program failed to account for any change in attitude toward substance abuse, it should be noted that the participation of many inmates was interrupted by widespread releases & transfers. The problems of administering a substance abuse program in a correctional institution are discussed in the larger context of philosophies & goals within the criminal justice system.

88S20263 / SSSP / 1988 / 2720

Gilbert, Kathleen R. (Dept Psychiatry U Texas Health Science Center, San Antonio 78284-7792), Parental Grief: An Interactive Model.

Experiencing the death of one's child has been described as one of the most traumatic events that can occur in adult life. A qualitative interview study was conducted examining the grief resolution process in 27 marital couples after the fetal or infant death of their child. Interactive dynamics in the couples' relationship & ways in which they coped with the effects of the death on themselves individually & as part of a dyadic system were of central importance, with primary focus on the dyadic context, in which marital partners attempted to meet relational responsibilities as well as their own needs. The pressures of being in a system in which both partners are coping with strong & frequently unfamiliar thoughts & emotions are described. Factors that lead to conflict & add stress during this time are discussed, as well as factors that minimize conflict & reduce stress. Implications of these findings for those working with bereaved parents, & for future research in parental bereavement, are presented.

88S20264 / SSSP / 1988 / 2721

Golding, Jacqueline M. (School Public Health U California, Los Angeles 90024), Chronic Strain among Mexican Americans and Non-Hispanic Whites.

Chronic strain is a form of stress that is related to, but distinct from, stressful life events & daily hassles. Economic & household strain were assessed in a randomly selected community sample of 1,244 Mexican Americans (538 born in the US & 706 in Mexico) & 1,149 non-Hispanic whites. In multivariate models, Mexican-American immigrants reported more economic & household strain than non-Hispanic whites & the US-born. It was not possible to test directly the hypothesis that SE differences among these groups accounted for the intra- & interethnic differences in strain, however, there was suggestive evidence that this might be the case. Distinctive patterns of demographic variables & stressful life events were associated with each source of strain. The associations of educational attainment with strain differed for the ethnic & immigration groups.

88S20265 / SSSP / 1988 / 2722

Gottschalk, Shimon S., White, Barbara W. & Yee, Samyeann (School Social Work Florida State U, Tallahassee 32306-2024), Children and Parents in Families: A Multiethnic Perspective on the Meaning of Social Work Intervention.

The primary assumptions that undergird & define the relationship between parents & children are examined within three different cultures: Afro-American, Korean, & American-Jewish. The analytical focus is on the rights & duties of parents toward children, & of children toward parents. In the light of identified cultural differences, the meaning of the patterns of social work intervention that have evolved in the twentieth century in the US are critically examined. The unique balancing of the rights of children, as against the rights of parents, of families, & of the society, which uneasily characterizes the dominant cultural mode, has led to methods of social work intervention & to social policies that are at best irrelevant, & at worst destructive of the integrity of a variety of traditional families.

88S20266 / SSSP / 1988 / 2723

Haines, Herbert H. (Dept Sociology/Anthropology State U New York, Cortland 13045), Justifications in Deviance Theory.

A review of the literature on justifications, rationalizations, & excuses in deviant behavior, including the contributions of Sutherland, Mills, Sykes & Matza, Akers, & others. Several key dimensions in these discussions are identified: justifications may be employed prior to action or only after the fact, they may be primary & causal motives or merely enabling devices that facilitate action otherwise motivated, justifications may be sincerely embraced by the actor or merely used to avoid sanctions, & they may positively affirm the value of a course of action or merely neutralize condemnation &/or guilt in a particular instance.

88S20251 / SSSP / 1988 / 2708

Brown, Shirley Vining (Administration U Maryland, Baltimore 21228), Gender Differences in the Academic Careers of Minority Doctorate Recipients.

¶ An examination of the career choices & pathways taken by minority PhDs from graduate school into the labor market, focusing on their destination & progress in academe. Based on the assumption that differences within race/ethnic groups may be as great or even greater than differences between race/ethnic groups, described are: (1) the PhD production rates, field choices, sources of graduate school support, & postgraduation plans of black, Hispanic, Asian-American, & (for comparison) white M & F PhD recipients, & (2) the academic career status of minority M & F PhDs, focusing on differences in their rates of appointments, work experiences, rank attainment, & promotion & tenure rates in academe. Analysis of data from the National Research Council's Survey of Earned Doctorates, 1975-1986, reveals that, although Fs have increased their share of degrees by 39% since 1975, Ms continue to claim the largest share of doctorates. In general, the findings suggest that Fs (minority & majority) may be disadvantaged by their primary sources of graduate school support & compared to minority Ms, compare less favorably in their career progress in academe. However, specifications by race/ethnic group status indicate that the pattern & degree of disadvantage differ among groups, particularly in the black PhD pool, where there were more F than M doctorates in 1986, & where the career progress in academe is often more similar than different. Deviations in race/ethnic subgroup patterns are examined in detail, & recommendations are made to increase the participation of minority Fs in the doctorate pool & in academe.

88S20252 / SSSP / 1988 / 2709

Butler, Amy C. (School Social Work State U New York, Buffalo 14260), The Effect of Welfare Benefit Levels on Poor Children's Educational Attainment.

¶ Addressing the question of whether higher welfare benefit levels help or hurt poor children in the long run, the effect of the AFDC (Aid to Families with Dependent Children) guarantee on the number of years of schooling children completed by 1985 is examined with longitudinal survey data from the Panel Study of Income Dynamics, supplemented with state-level indicators of the AFDC guarantee for 1970-1982 & county-level data from the Bureau of Labor Statistics & the 1980 Census of the Population. A major focus is on controlling for factors that may be correlated with both benefit levels & educational attainment, seeking to minimize the chances that the estimates of the effect of welfare benefit levels are spurious. The findings indicate that higher AFDC guarantees available to children following the separation of their parents are associated with higher educational attainment of the children in 1985. This overall effect is due mainly to the impact of the guarantee on decreasing the odds that children drop out of school during grades 9-10 & increasing the odds that children complete 2-3 years of postsecondary school.

88S20253 / SSSP / 1988 / 2710

Byers, Joseph B. (Center Human Services Policy & Administration Florida State U, Tallahassee 32306), Evaluation of a Case-Managed System of Primary Care for Indigent Children.

¶ A lack of adequate primary health care (PHC) places children at risk of chronic or disabling health problems. These risks are increased for indigent children, for whom both access to & quality of PHC are typically deficient. Results are reported of an evaluation of an innovative program to meet the PHC needs of indigent children in a largely Ru, multicounty service district in northwestern Fla. Through the Florida Dept of Health & Rehabilitative Services, PHC services are provided by private MDs under a capitated payment system, & are coordinated by nurse/case managers who are also responsible for patient/family education & linking client families with nonmedical services. The two principal objectives of the evaluation—to determine effectiveness in meeting clients' PHC needs at reasonable cost, & to assure continued participation by private MDs—are assessed via analysis of both qualitative & quantitative data, eg, interviews with pediatricians, case managers, & clients' parents, observations of enrollment encounters between parents & case managers, review of client immunization records, & comparison of use & costs of project services with those of services obtained in the same geographic area under Medicaid fee-for-service arrangements. The findings support the conclusion that the project succeeds in assuring clients access to & continuity of quality PHC services, & also indicate that the incentives & support the project offers private pediatricians are sufficient to ensure

88S20254 / SSSP / 1988 / 2711

Caberas, Amado & Kawaguchi, Gary (Dept Ethnic Studies U California, Berkeley 94720), The Continuing Significance of Race, Ethnicity, Gender, and Nativity in an Empirical Study of Industrial Sectorization in California in 1980.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 34.

¶ A structural approach is used to examine economic inequality in employment in Calif by race/ethnicity, nativity, & gender. Utilizing census data, the analysis focuses on employment in key industries with 16 industrial sectors, using employed civilian LF for parity. The employment patterns found are: (1) high-level employment of white Ms, both US- & foreign-born, as managers & professionals, (2) dominant union-organized blue-collar ranks by US-born Ms, both white & nonwhite, (3) continuing gender segregation & underemployment of both white & nonwhite, in the clerical ranks; (4) concentration of foreign-born Ms & Fs of color as assembly-line workers, & of US-born Ms & Fs of color as cleaning service workers, & (5) concentration of foreign-born Ms & Fs of color as low-wage blue-collar workers. For both younger & older workers, strong evidence is found for the continuing significance of race & gender in studies of economic inequality.

88S20255 / SSSP / 1988 / 2712

Campbell, John L. (Dept Sociology U Wisconsin-Parkside, Kenosha 53141), Business Associations and Industrial Self-Regulation. Why Do Corporations Organize Collectively?

¶ Conventional theories explain the genesis of industrial self-regulation through business associations as a defensive response by corporations to threats of intervention from a strong state. It is argued that such action may also occur in response to fundamental crises threatening an industry's survival, particularly when the corporations involved perceive the state as being too weak to resolve the problem for them. The argument is based on an analysis of the commercial nuclear energy sector's interorganizational response to the accident at Three Mile Island, Pa, employing data from government documents, trade association publications, personal interviews & correspondence.

88S20256 / SSSP / 1988 / 2713

Case, Carole (New Mexico State U, Las Cruces 88003), The Unmet/Strain Tradition: Substance and Criticisms.

¶ Strain theory dominated the areas of social deviance & criminology in the 1950s & 1960s. Its subsequent decline is unmerited. An overview presented of the strain tradition through the theoretical contributions of Robert K. Merton & Albert Cohen, the efficacy of subsequent investigations of their work is questioned. It is suggested that strain theory fared somewhat poorly in empirical investigations over a forty-year period largely due to the fact that some of the research is based on misconceptions of the theoretical hypotheses & concepts, & some is based on inadequate & inappropriate methods of testing hypotheses.

88S20257 / SSSP / 1988 / 2714

Dunlop, Burton D. & Wells, James A. (Project HOPE Center Health Affairs, 2 Wisconsin Circle #500 Chevy Chase MD 20815), Ensuring Care for the Frail Elderly: Sociological Analysis of Unmet Needs & Volunteering.

¶ To ensure care for future cohorts of disabled elderly, policy planners have proposed that volunteers provide unpaid home care, including establishing a system of service credit banking (SCB), under which persons who volunteer services would accrue care credits that they could use to obtain similar service when they become disabled. Four questions are addressed: (1) Is there a substantial group of elderly who lack primary group affiliations, placing them at risk? (2) Is there significant need for services among the disabled? (3) Is the level of elderly volunteering sufficient to meet such a need? (4) Do volunteers originate from groups likely to subsequently have unmet needs? Analysis of data from the 1984 National Health Interview Survey, Supplement on Aging (N = 13,807) & a follow-up subset of 5,151 Rs aged 70+ at baseline) reveals that disabled elderly are embedded in a network of primary groups: only 2% of Rs aged 65+ reported engaging in none of 7 types of social interaction in the preceding 2 weeks; 94% reported that somebody would be available to care for them for a few days if necessary. Volunteering is shown to be strongly associated with higher SES, whereas greater disability & lack of help are associated with lower SES. Those most needing assistance (the socially isolated) are least likely to have earned caregiver credits. Thus, an organized volunteer system would achieve success only among a fraction of the isolated elderly.

importance of region as a sociohistorical construct that serves to filter whites' perceptions of the minority, thereby influencing the degree of threat triggered by the minority group

88S20275 / SSSP / 1988 / 2732

Jacobs, David & Simpson, Sally S. (Dept Sociology U Oregon, Eugene 97403), The Determinants of Sanctions for Antitrust Violations. An investigation of extralegal characteristics apt to influence Dept of Justice & court processing of antitrust violators. Using a sample of corporations charged with antitrust violations from 1946 through 1978, it hypothesized that two broad types of characteristics may affect case outcome: (1) firm level attributes (eg, size, profitability, type of ownership, & control) & (2) variables that gauge the greater political & economic context (eg, administration type, organizational strength of the largest corporations, health of the economy). Theoretical connections between sanction outcome & these variables are proposed as well as a research plan to test the hypothesized relationships.

88S20276 / SSSP / 1988 / 2733

Jewell, K. Sue (Ohio State U, Columbus 43210), Social Gains: Some Empirical Realities for Black American Men and Women.

SE gains experienced by black Americans are examined from three perspectives: (1) social advances over the past twenty-five years, (2) SE consequences of these advances, & (3) strategies for increasing blacks' access to opportunity structures. Also discussed is the importance of reducing institutional resistance to social policies & legislation designed to bring about parity for blacks. In spite of social policies designed to increase opportunities for blacks, their social progress was modest, statistical data indicating that blacks made substantial gains belie the actual level of integration & participation of blacks in major societal institutions. Strategies & social policy initiatives are explored that might improve the situation of blacks in social institutions & elevate the economic status of black men & women in the US.

88S20277 / SSSP / 1988 / 2734

Jones, Brian J., McFalls, Joseph A., Jr. & Gallagher, Bernard J., III (Sociology Dept Villanova U, PA 19083), Toward a Unified Model for Social Problems Theory.

(Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 33 pp.) Elements of a model spanning the objectivist & subjectivist (or social constructionist) approaches to social problems theory are proposed. It is argued that both empirical evidence & claims-making activities are indispensable in the conceptualization of social problems. Three major factors are offered to explain the transformation of social indicator data into O about social problems: visibility, expectations, & values. Two extended case studies of unemployment & sex roles are presented as demonstrations of this process, nine other social problems are worked through the model in condensed tabular form. The aim is to develop a social problems theory applicable to a wide range of social issues instead of the current fragmented analyses of each problem as a special case in claims-making.

88S20278 / SSSP / 1988 / 2735

Kaplan, Elaine Bell (U California, Berkeley 94720), Black Teen-Age Mothers and Their Mothers: The Impact of Teen Pregnancy on the Daughter-Mother Relationship.

A discussion of the impact of teenage pregnancy on the relationship between daughter & mother in black F-headed households. Qualitative data obtained in 30 in-depth interviews with current (aged 14-19) & former teenage mothers (aged 21-43) are used to examine whether teenage pregnancy is condoned by the black family. Findings support the argument that an antagonistic relationship exists between unwed teenage mothers & grandmothers that can last well into the grandchild's adulthood. The pregnancy embarrasses & stigmatizes both women, & teenage mothers perceive that they are being severely sanctioned by their mothers. In addition, the grandmother may try to influence her daughter's decision about abortion. The conflict becomes centered, after the birth, on the grandmother's control & authority over the daughter, the daughter's status & identity, who should be responsible for the child, & the relationship with the baby's father. It is suggested that underlying gender expectations & obligations compound the problem of racism & class inequality faced by these families.

88S20279 / SSSP / 1988 / 2736

Keigher, Sharon M. (School Social Work U Michigan, Ann Arbor 48109), Homelessness among the Elderly: A Preliminary Exploratory

Study of Causation.

¶ The identity of the homeless elderly in Chicago, Ill, & their shelter & nonshelter needs are explored using case-specific data on clients (N = 125, aged 60+) for whom emergency services had been provided by the Chicago Depts of Human Services & Aging & Disability, data were also collected via interviews conducted with 45 key informants & participant observation. Findings indicate that this population was generally older & more likely to be minority than the city's aged population, 33% of the sample had been picked up because they were wandering the streets or lost, & 31% had used an agency shelter at least once, & 50% of these were considered "chronically undomiciled." Compared with those who had never used a shelter, the shelter users had experienced more health & emotional problems & victimization by violence. The shelter nonusers had frequently been assisted with equally serious personal, medical, & psychiatric problems, however, in addition, they had significant problems with the condition of their housing. The immensity of housing problems for the elderly is underscored.

88S20280 / SSSP / 1988 / 2737

Kilty, Keith M. & Richardson, Virginia (Coll Social Work Ohio State U, Columbus 43210), Gender and Commitment to Work among Retiring Workers.

¶ An examination of whether gender, sex-role attitudes, & work factors were related to subjective commitment to work in a sample of older people who were about to retire. Findings indicate that gender was generally independent of work commitment, even though women had intermittent & unstable careers as compared to men, also, sex-role attitudes were not at all related to subjective work commitment indices. On the whole, the women were just as committed to their careers as the men. Past presumptions that there are differences between men & women in commitment to work & that this commitment affects adjustment to retirement may have been displaced. At the least, this presumption has led to a neglect of women in this area of social science theory & research.

88S20281 / SSSP / 1988 / 2738

Klein, Hugh A. & Pittman, David J. (Dept Sociology Washington U, Saint Louis MO 63130), Perceived Consequences Associated with the Use of Beer, Wine, Distilled Spirits, and Wine Coolers.

¶ Data from a national probability sample of 2,401 Americans aged 21+ (1,069 of whom were deemed "drinkers" on the basis of having drunk at least 1 alcoholic beverage in the past 7 days) are used to examine problems associated with the use of beer, distilled spirits, wine, & wine coolers. Results indicate that people associate alcoholism, birth defects, drunk driving, & fighting & rowdy behavior equally with these 4 types of alcohol, however when beverage associations are made, distilled spirits & beer are blamed most frequently for these problems. Similarly, distilled spirits are most commonly blamed for severe health problems, eg, liver disease, & beer is blamed most commonly for teenage or underage drinking. Wine & wine coolers are virtually never thought of as being closely related to any of the problems examined. It was also determined that nearly 1 out of 7 people surveyed reported that birth defects are unrelated to alcohol use of any kind. Sex, age, & marital status were found to have significant effects in these relationships, while education & income effects were generally minimal.

88S20282 / SSSP / 1988 / 2739

Klein, Lloyd (Dept Sociology Brooklyn Coll, NY 11210), Airing Our Dirty Linen: Changing Social Attitudes and Sexuality in Television Programming.

¶ It is argued that open sexual forums are predominant in TV programming. The ratings war between Phil Donahue & Oprah Winfrey has produced an emphasis on "nuts, sluts, & perverts" & their victims, & discussion of sexual problems (ie, relationship complaints & conflicts produced by changing gender roles) are commonplace on TV talk shows. Additionally, Dr David Viscott & Dr Ruth Westheimer have conducted syndicated on-the-air therapy programs. Analyzed is how these programs exploit taboo sexual topics that were previously discussed behind closed doors, focusing on the: (1) voyeuristic appeal of sexual themes among the viewing public, (2) reflection of changing sexual mores in the TV medium, (3) tacit acceptance of public confessionals of, eg, child abuse, incest, & infidelity, & (4) the impact of TV programming content & legitimization of sexual discourse in everyday lives.

88S20283 / SSSP / 1988 / 2740

Klein, Lloyd & Luxenburg, Joan (Dept Sociology Brooklyn Coll, NY 11210), "Duel in the Sun": Impact of the "Make My Day" Law and

88S20267 / SSSP / 1988 / 2724

Hiday, Virginia Aldige & Herman, Carolyn (Dept Sociology North Carolina State U, Raleigh 27695-8107). Criminalization and Civil Commitment: Arrests of Expatients.

¶ A large sample (1,226) of ex-Rs to civil commitment procedures throughout one state were followed for 6 months through criminal district & superior court records to observe number & type of arrests. Arrests are analyzed by sociodemographic & illness characteristics of Rs & by their court dispositions. The following hypotheses are tested: (1) arrest rates vary in the larger society, but young adult Ms are more likely to be arrested; (2) arrests can be accounted for largely by character disorders & substance abuse; & (3) arrests do not vary by court dispositions.

88S20268 / SSSP / 1988 / 2725

Higgins, Susan M. (Western Michigan U, Kalamazoo 49008). Consolidation in Grand Rapids: An Analysis of How Decisions Are Made and Who Makes Them.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 36 pp.

¶ A report of a study of political decision-making processes & the influence of powerful people on this process. Using the cultural consolidation issue in Grand Rapids, Mich, the decision-making processes are shown to be in line with models developed by C. Levine, I. Rubin, & G. Wolohojian (The Politics of Retrenchments: How Local Governments Manage Fiscal Stress, Beverly Hills: Sage Library of Social Research, 1981). The influence of powerful people involved in the process is also shown to be predictable, based on a model synthesized from a review of related literature, & results from interviews & William D. Schutz's Fundamental Interpersonal Relations Inventory-Behavior (A Learning Concept, San Diego: University Associates, 1981). It is concluded that a liaison, understanding & utilizing these models, could have a high probability of influencing the outcome of future efforts toward consolidation of governmental services in the Greater Grand Rapids area.

88S20269 / SSSP / 1988 / 2726

Hilbert, Richard A. (Gustavus Adolphus Coll, Saint Peter MN 56082). Durkheim and Merton on Anomie: Some Unthematized Contrasts.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 14 pp.

¶ For Robert K. Merton, anomie causes deviance, while for Emile Durkheim, deviance prevents anomie. Combining these yields anomie prevents anomie. This absurdity indicates that the two theories do not address the same phenomenon, neither theory anticipates nor expands on the other. This peculiarly overlooked distinction can be located in the differing assumptions within the sociologists' respective works. While Durkheim's altruistic & egoistic suicide has resemblances with Merton's deviance, anomie suicide has no Mertonian counterpart. Merton makes no provision for the necessity of deviance as a hedge against anomie, a crisis of greater magnitude for Durkheim. Merton's categories of explained deviance are identical to commonsense moral judgments about behavior, while for Durkheim, no specific behavior need be deviance. Ultimately, Durkheim's theory is more compatible with modern labeling theory & with ethnomethodology than it is with Mertonian functionalism.

88S20270 / SSSP / 1988 / 2727

Hill, Robert B. (907 6th St SW #216-C, Washington DC 20024). Race, Class and Culture: Common Pitfalls in Research on Minorities.

¶ Many policymakers are puzzled by the anomaly of rising rates of unemployment, poverty, & single-parent families among blacks despite a significance of race. It is contended that the declining racism & polarization notions prevent proper understanding of the contemporary institutional mechanisms for perpetuating the subordination of minorities by misusing three concepts—race, class, & culture. The major deficiencies in current usage of the race concept derive from a failure to distinguish prejudice from discrimination; institutional from individual racism; & unintentional from intentional racism. The concept of class is often misused by: failing to provide specific operational definitions for the various SC strata, placing undue concentration on two strata—underclass, & Mc—to the exclusion of the Wc among blacks; relying class prototypes; conducting static analyses that deemphasize downward mobility among the Mc & upward mobility among the underclass; & minimizing the culpability of external forces for the disadvantaged conditions of the underclass. Misuse of the concept of culture is most often manifested by:

equating underclass lifestyles with culture of poverty; inferring attitudes from behaviors & not from psychological data; failing to distinguish situational adaptations from cultural continuities; & failing to examine the role of positive culture adaptations or strengths among & other minorities. Misleading usage of these concepts impedes development of public & private strategies that would significantly improve the status of minorities & the poor in the US.

88S20271 / SSSP / 1988 / 2728

Holmstrom, Lynda Lytle & Guillemia, Jeanne Harley (Depts Boston Coll, Chestnut Hill MA 02167). Newborn Intensive Care: Implications for Women.

¶ The medicalization of childbirth has been widely argued as a trend aimed at limiting the power of women over procreation. This trend is extended by presenting newborn intensive care as a technical & organizational means of increasing the authority of medical professionals during the crucial first month of infant life. While the infants admitted to newborn intensive care are only briefly part of the mother's life, the decisions about their survival & their immediate & long-term care are made without reference to maternal wishes or interests. The struggle between medical control of decision making & parental autonomy can easily lead to scenarios in which the mother is socially isolated & therefore left with the consequences of hospital treatment, rather than actively engaged in its determination. Exclusive focus on the newborn's needs necessarily diminishes & can even negate the trust traditionally invested in the role of mother.

88S20272 / SSSP / 1988 / 2729

Holstein, James A. (Dept Social & Cultural Sciences Marquette U, Milwaukee WI 53233). Court-Ordered Incompetence: Competence and Organization in Involuntary Commitment Hearings.

¶ An analysis of the organization of candidate patients' testimony in voluntary commitment hearings, based on fieldwork in courts where such hearings are conducted. It examines conversational practices by attorneys & witnesses as they collaborate to produce evidence which determinations of grave disability are based. Rather than candidate patients' testimony as their individual production, it is that attorneys & witnesses collaborate to produce conversational moments of competence or incompetence. Thus it is interactional conversational practice that produces examples of talk that are signs of individual illness or wellness.

88S20273 / SSSP / 1988 / 2730

Huguley, Sandra & Owen-Smith, Patti (Emory U, Atlanta GA 30322). Sexual Assault vs Physical Assault: Differences in Victim's Experience.

¶ A report on the results of a study that attempted to differentiate sexual assault from other forms of physical assault as perceived & experienced by the victim. Variables considered include status of relationship associated with the act of violence, place of occurrence, result of the assault, & reporting procedures taken by the victim. Data were collected in 2 studies that assessed the frequency & severity of dating violence experienced by the undergraduate population. In study 1, a random sample of 705 undergraduates on 2 southern campuses was asked to complete a questionnaire, 217 questionnaires were returned. In study 2, a random sample of 1,446 undergraduate students registered in 4 midwest colleges was asked to complete a questionnaire. In study 1, 65 Rs indicated victimization, with 30 reporting so in study 2. Significant differences were found relating to partners, stage of relationship, victim status, situational factors for fighting back, & result for relationship. Based on these findings it might be suggested that sexual assault, in contrast to physical assault, is considered more serious & least tolerated by the undergraduate population. Perhaps one explanation is that sexual assault is more clearly defined by the undergraduate population than is physical assault. Further ramifications & implications for study & prevention are offered.

88S20274 / SSSP / 1988 / 2731

Jackson, Pamela Irving (Dept Sociology Rhode Island College, Providence RI 02908). Region, Race, and Ethnicity: Minority Group Social Control.

¶ An assessment of regional variations in the link between group threat & social control resource allocation. Analysis of 1980 data on US cities of 25,000+ indicates regional differences in the impact of the size of the Hispanic & black populations on the public commitment to social control. Overall, the findings suggest bl, (3) social pressure or social satisfaction; & (4) import/isolation on the inmate culture. Questionnaire & interview data support all but social pressure theory. Further longitudinal research is proposed

S20291 / SSSP / 1988 / 2748

Manning, Peter K. (Dept Sociology Michigan State U, East Lansing 48824), Nuclear Risks as Accidents, Violations of the Status Quo or Crimes.

Nuclear risks are the consequence of nuclear power plant production electricity by nuclear reactors. Some risks become events, or known inside the closed world of the utilities & the Nuclear Regulatory Commission. These can be seen, depending on the sanctioning system, as accidents, violations of the status quo, or crimes, involving respectively, tort, civil law, contracts & governmental & intragovernmental relations, or criminal law. The historical role of government in arms production has blurred these distinctions among Western nations. Some materials from study of the British & US approaches to nuclear risk are presented. It is argued that nuclear risks are typically seen as matters of intragovernmental relations, rather than as torts or crimes.

S20292 / SSSP / 1988 / 2749

McDonough, Josefina Figueira (School Social Work Michigan State U, East Lansing 48824), Catch 22 Controls as Barriers to Women's Rights.

Both gender & deviance are cultural constructs that shape the behavioral options & the self-concepts of those who are categorized as M or deviant or normal. It is argued that norms defining deviance, especially when actively enforced by control mechanisms, set the boundaries of acceptable gender behavior more sharply than do broad definitions of gender roles. Understanding the position of women in society should therefore be enhanced by analyzing the differential attributions of deviance to men & women. Here, four hypotheses regarding the links between gendered definitions of deviance & women's inferior status are examined: (1) definitions of deviance impose restrictions on the rights of the labeled deviants & have historically been used to control minorities; (2) women are often defined as "all-purpose" deviants, i.e., the deviant gender; (3) the deviant status of women is functional to the present order; & (4) contradictory normative demands effectively keep women trapped in deviant (& therefore inferior) positions.

S20293 / SSSP / 1988 / 2750

Meachen, Sarah, Kelley, Susan D. M. & Rond, Philip C. (Center Human Services Policy & Administration Florida State U, Tallahassee 32306-4016), Barriers to Perinatal Care for Low-Income Women in Florida.

The Fla Maternal & Child Health program, in collaboration with the Center for Human Services Policy & Administration, initiated a project Feb 1987 to examine outreach techniques for prenatal care for indigent women & pregnant women's perceptions of barriers to that care. This project complemented the National Academy of Sciences Institute of Medicine's study of the same issue. Structured interviews were conducted by 11 Fla county outreach coordinators with a stratified, random sample of 1,020 low-income women identified on sampling lists as starting prenatal care early, late, or receiving no prenatal care, to obtain social demographic, health, general pregnancy, & prenatal care information. Four mutually exclusive & exhaustive prenatal care seeking/obtaining categories were established based on (1) during what month of pregnancy they first sought care, & (2) during what month of pregnancy they obtained care. Preliminary findings suggest significant predictability in examining the timing of care. Race (nonwhite), utilization of hospital emergency departments as the primary source of medical care, & a past history of needing prenatal care but not being able to get it discriminate the no-prenatal group from early & late care categories. In contrast to prior research, in few instances did planning of the pregnancy predict when women sought or received care. Discriminant analyses point to potential changes in health care policies & programs on state & local levels that may increase prenatal care use indices among low-income women.

IS20294 / SSSP / 1988 / 2751

Merlo, Joan M. Reidy & Smith, Kathleen Maurer (Dept Sociology Molloy Coll, Rockville Centre NY 11570), A Log-Linear Analysis of Male and Female Voice-Over in Television Commercials.

An investigation of the voice-over in TV commercials with regard to Ms & Fs are utilized as the unseen "voice of authority" that provides important information about the product being sold. Commercial advertisements that appeared during prime-time premier episodes of major network TV shown during 1983-1985 were examined, via loglinear analysis, focusing on whether M voice-overs are still used in the majority of commercials, as earlier studies have indicated, what kinds of products women voice-overs are likely to be spokespersons for, & whether any change in these areas has occurred over time. The results indicate that M voice-overs continue to dominate prime-time TV advertising for all product categories, with Fs making up only 11.5% of all voice-overs. When F voice-overs do occur they appear seven out of ten times in commercials for beauty & health care products. The majority of these commercials had 1 central character only. No significant change has occurred regarding sex of voice-overs in the past two decades. In the rare instances in which women are used as the voice of authority, they are most likely to be selling women's products to women.

88S20295 / SSSP / 1988 / 2752

Miller, Gale (Dept Social & Cultural Sciences Marquette U, Milwaukee WI 53233), Producing "Reports" and "Symptoms": Clinical Orientations and Definitions of Family Troubles.

Observational data are used to analyze the recognition & diagnosis of troubles in a family therapy agency. It is argued that the clinical attitude or mentality produces two distinct orientations to clients' discussions of their problems: (1) to treat such discussions as more or less accurate reports on clients' activities, relations, & problems, & (2) to treat the talk as symptomatic of clients' underlying dispositions, troubles, & problems. These orientations are considered as aspects of the micropolitical dynamics of social problems work in a therapeutically oriented setting. The implications of the clinical orientations for the definition & management of family troubles are discussed.

88S20296 / SSSP / 1988 / 2753

Mooney, Linda A., Gramlin, Robert & Forsyth, Craig (Dept Sociology East Carolina U, Greenville NC 27858), Legal Drinking Age and Alcohol Consumption Deterrence or Amplification.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 18 pp.

Utilizing samples from two states, La., where the legal age for the possession & consumption of alcohol is 18, & NC, where the legal age is 21, the assumption that restricting access to alcohol results in lower alcohol consumption rates for the target population (age 18-20) is examined. Findings provide little support for this assumption. However, considerable evidence is found that restrictive legislation drives younger drinkers underground, resulting in overall higher consumption rates for the target population.

88S20297 / SSSP / 1988 / 2754

Naples, Nancy A. (Graduate Center City U New York, NY 10036), The Political Participation of Female Community Workers from Low-Income Neighborhoods.

A description of the political participation of 42, predominantly minority, women who were hired through the Economic Opportunity Act (EOA) of 1964, which sponsored the development of sites for local organizing & political training. Interviews indicate that Rs' community work experiences contributed to an increased sense of personal & political power. The community workers distinguished their community work from politics, which is not concerned about the needs of poor people. Analysis suggests that the political climate is one determinant of Rs' community work & political behavior. Only Hispanic Rs reported extensive problems with sexism & expressed a need to organize around gender-specific issues. None of the women, regardless of race or ethnicity, desired a relationship with the women's movement, however, their perspectives on gender identity reveal a unique feminist theory & practice. Many community workers recognized a difference between the organizing styles of men & women, believing that women were more effective organizers & offered a more egalitarian vision of community participation than their M counterparts.

88S20298 / SSSP / 1988 / 2755

Ndabezitha, Siyabonga W. (Dept Sociology State U New York, Binghamton 13901), Divided but Unconquered: Black Labor Unrest in South Africa, 1984-1987.

There are two primary objectives here: to analyze the nature & character of black labor grievances that have spurred social unrest, & to examine contradictory labor control strategies that have been adopted by capital & the state to deal with the rising tide of labor unrest in Ur centers of South Africa during the mid-1980s. Although black labor grievances cannot be separated in concrete reality, for analytic purpose, these griev-

Crime Control Ideology.

¶ The persistent target-hardening campaign of the criminal justice system has provided a call for enhanced citizen protection against violent crime. Colo. & Okla. have implemented "Make My Day" laws wherein citizens can legally shoot individuals intruding on their property or breaking into a home. These laws, named after Clint Eastwood's character in the movie Dirty Harry tap directly into the crime control ideology. Here, such laws are analyzed, with reference to: (1) the impact of crime control ideology, (2) the relationship between liberalized citizen protection measures & the Fla. gun laws, (3) public reaction toward the Bernard Goetz case in N.Y., & (4) the growing movement toward legitimizing citizen violence against criminal offenders.

88S20284 / SSSP / 1988 / 2741

Kolker, Aliza, Phillips, Jane U., Jones, Shirley & Schulman, Joseph D. (Dept. Sociology/Anthropology George Mason U., Fairfax VA 22030), CVS: Preliminary Findings.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 28 pp.

¶ Chorionic villus biopsy (CVS) is rapidly gaining acceptance as the technique of choice for prenatal diagnosis. CVS is performed in the ninth to eleventh week of the pregnancy & thus offers an advantage over amniocentesis, which is usually performed in the fourteenth to eighteenth week, however, the risk of miscarriage may be somewhat higher. In order to understand what motivates some women to choose CVS & what impact this choice has on the pregnancy, questionnaires were administered to CVS & amniocentesis clients at the same clinic; these data were supplemented by in-depth interviews conducted with both clients & genetic counselors. As Everett M. Rogers's & E. Floyd Shoemaker's model of innovation adoption suggests (Communication of Innovations, New York: Free Press, 1971), CVS users were found to have higher SES than amniocentesis users. No differences were found in reproductive history, concerns about birth defects & about losing the pregnancy, maternal bonding, or assessment of genetic risk. Surprisingly, while most women in both groups supported abortion rights, CVS clients were more likely to support a woman's right to abortion after the first trimester. It is concluded that the choice of procedures may be interpreted as the adoption of an innovation. It appears that women with higher educational & income levels are more likely to have heard of CVS & to request this procedure rather than amniocentesis.

88S20285 / SSSP / 1988 / 2742

Kronenfeld, Jennie J. & Glik, Deborah C. (School Public Health U. South Carolina, Columbia 29208), Perceptions of Risk and Health Practices: Conceptual Development.

¶ An emerging paradigm in the health & applied social science literatures uses theoretical frameworks based on cognitive models to predict human behaviors. Within behavioral sciences, the health belief model is an example of such work, as is behavioral decision theory. Perceived risk fits within this line of theoretical development. Much of the original work on perception of risk & risk taking comes from fields other than health, i.e., psychology, & business & economics; also health psychologists are beginning to apply these concepts to health behavior. Here, a sociological development of this concept is proposed. Even though early health studies did not always find strong linkages between attitudes & behaviors, refinements in the conceptualization of attitudes & behaviors have demonstrated the importance of cognitive social psychological approaches in behavioral sciences. Perceptions of risk provide another more sophisticated approach to understanding decision-making processes & linking attitudes to behavior. Perceptions of risks to health as conceptualized can provide information about selective attention to educational inputs on risk, the differential reinforcement of learning, & varying levels of information exposure. The development of this concept is considered as a substantive theory that updates & extends earlier work such as the health belief model.

88S20286 / SSSP / 1988 / 2743

La Greca, Anthony J. & Mitchell, David (Dept. Sociology & Urban & Regional Research Center U. Florida, Gainesville 32611), Black Female-Headed Households: Central City and Suburban Differences.

¶ An examination of the stability & changes in housing & SE characteristics of black F-headed households (BFHH) in & out of the central city, using data drawn from the Annual Housing Survey for 1975/76 & 1983. Variables analyzed include: SE & demographic factors; R rating of housing/neighborhood, a housing scale (Hscale) used to obtain a composite score of 9 housing characteristics; & a neighborhood scale (Ns-cale) based on a composite of 5 items assessing the desire to move because of unfavorable neighborhood conditions. For the central city BFHH, the overall R's rating for both neighborhood & housing indicated improving conditions. The Hscale showed the reverse of this pattern; the Hscale showed no significant change from 1975/76 to 1983. For BFHH outside the central city, the R's rating of housing conditions showed a significant improvement. The Hscale for outside the central city showed a significant improvement in housing conditions, but there was no significant change in Nscale. These findings are preliminary. Further analysis is needed to fully assess whether BFHH characteristics are declining or improving over time & whether any decline or improvement is differentiated by central city vs noncentral city dwellings.

88S20287 / SSSP / 1988 / 2744

Lempert, Lora Bex (Dept. Social & Behavioral Sciences U. California, San Francisco 94143), Dimensions of the "Back Stage" in a Parent Participation Nursery School.

¶ An examination of a parent participation cooperative nursery school focusing on the social organization of the school in meeting parent needs. Fieldwork data were collected via participant observation during Nov. 1987 through Mar. 1988, which concentrated on the interactions of the parents with one another & with the director. Data were also obtained through in-depth interviews with participating parents & with the director, school & public documents were also consulted. Results are used to determine how parents socially construct a cooperative nursery school, the meaning they give to school issues & considerations, & their perceptions of school functioning. Findings indicate that this parent participation nursery school is organized to meet the need of the parents primarily & children secondarily. The school's social organization reflects "front stage" & "back stage" dimensions, as described by Erving Goffman (The Presentation of Self in Everyday Life, Garden City, NY: Doubleday, 1959), wherein the public construction of the school to provide education & social experiences for preschoolers, while accomplished well, is secondary to the private construction of meeting the social needs of the parents, particularly mothers, of preschool children.

88S20288 / SSSP / 1988 / 2745

Levinson, David L. (Dept. Sociology Merrimack Coll., North Andover MA 01845), Contradictions and Conflicts: Higher Education's Role in Building a High-Tech Society.

¶ US higher education plays a critical role in the production of high technology. Industry leaders argue that scientific & technical knowledge is of primary strategic importance for the growth of high technology & that higher education is uniquely equipped to satisfy this need. Higher education's role in the process, however, is beset with an array of contradictions & conflicts. Here, focus is on how higher education's involvement in high tech development in Mass. has placed contradictory imperatives on academic institutions. The analysis reveals that educational integrity is often compromised when institutional priorities reflect the human capital requirements of the high-tech industry, & involvement in high-tech development denigrates the public sector's commitment to open access.

88S20289 / SSSP / 1988 / 2746

Loseke, Donileen R. (Dept. Sociology/Anthropology/Social Work Skidmore Coll., Saratoga Springs NY 12866-1632), Creating Clients and Their Troubles: Social Problems Work in a Battered Women's Shelter.

¶ Data obtained via participant observation & analysis of organizational records are used to examine social problems work in a shelter for battered women, focusing on issues of client selection. It is argued that workers depict clients so as to portray them as "battered women," a social type with a constellation of psychological & social problems for which the shelter is an appropriate remedy. It is demonstrated how social problems are produced for workers' practical & organizational purposes, & it is suggested that this interpretive work serves to continually reproduce instances of the social type "battered woman," thus confirming workers' understanding of the social collectivity itself.

88S20290 / SSSP / 1988 / 2747

Macias, Danny A. & Arnold, William R. (c/o Arnold-Dept. Sociology U. Kansas, Lawrence 66045), Inmates' Choice of Jobs in Prison.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 25 pp.

¶ Four theories of job choice among prison inmates are examined: (1) escape from the pains of imprisonment (extrinsic job rewards); (2) energy use/avoidance of debilitating idleness (intrinsic rewards of the

88S20305 / SSSP / 1988 / 2762

Rosenberg, Helen & Lewis, Don A. (Center Ur Affairs Northwestern U., Evanston IL 60208), Patient Functioning in a Deinstitutionalized Society.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 22 pp.

Current theoretical debates over what mental illness is & how the mental hospital influences the role of the mental patient are based on the assumption that this institution still socializes the individual & determines his/her self-concept & life chances. However, deinstitutionalization has transformed the social reality of the treatment process of the mentally ill & in turn, has transformed how society must think of both institutionalized & deinstitutionalized mentally ill. Findings from a study of 211 mental patients in the community suggest that the hospital has little influence over their lives. Comparisons of patient functioning in the hospital & in the community suggest that people do not change in their functioning capabilities. Rather, women & the more educated function somewhat better under deinstitutionalization than men & people with less than a high school degree. Under current conditions, sociologists interested in the study of social problems had best rethink their theoretical commitment to institutional theories of the self if they are to understand variations in the experience of patients.

88S20306 / SSSP / 1988 / 2763

Rosenfeld, Richard B. & Erchak, Gerald M. (Dept Sociology Skidmore Coll, Saratoga Springs NY 12866), Learning Disabilities, Dyslexia, and the Medicalization of the Classroom.

A critical examination of recent conceptions of & responses to academically underachievement, focusing on the social construction of learning disabilities & dyslexia. These problems are viewed as instances of the medicalization of deviant behavior &, more broadly, the continuing expansion of the social & epistemological power of medicine in the US. Utilizing observational & interviewing strategies, the analysis centers on medical decision-making in the area of learning problems. The impact of medicalization of underachievement on the status & power of educators is considered as well.

88S20307 / SSSP / 1988 / 2764

Rottman, David B. & Warkov, Seymour (National Center State Courts, 300 Newport Ave Williamsburg VA 23187), Explaining Insider Trading: A Sociological Contribution.

A sociological perspective is taken to explain the current prevalence of insider trading violations in the stock market & the characteristics of the firms & individuals who are involved. Four explanatory factors are proposed: (1) changes in the macroenvironment within which investment banking operates; (2) organizational adaptations to those changes in the form of altered distribution of power & resources within the banking community & in the control structures available to dominant organizational coalitions; (3) networks that tie role incumbents within the financial community to one another; & (4) the organizational culture that pervades Wall Street firms. It is argued that a major transformation of the Wall Street environment altered the allocation of power & opportunity among firms & organizational roles within firms. It also changed the criteria through which persons are allocated to those roles & overcame the capacity of organizations & regulatory agencies to monitor conduct in the banking community. These changes, in turn, had ramifications for the interpersonal networks formed & the cultures found in Wall Street firms. One effect of these combined changes was to increase the likelihood that the dominant coalitions of organizations would adopt legal methods in pursuit of organizational objectives. This analysis is offered as an explication of ideas that can potentially be applied to other forms of white-collar crime in & by organizations.

88S20308 / SSSP / 1988 / 2765

Rutledge, Easie M., Eve, Susan B. & Doering, Thomas A. (Dept Sociology Western Illinois U, Macomb 61455), Use of Health Care Services by Older Blacks and Whites: Implications for Health Care Policy.

An examination of health care services utilization by older whites (N = 10,372) & blacks (N = 886) who responded to the National Center Health Statistics' 1981 Health Interview Survey. Emphasis is on public assistance programs, income, & health & their effects on the use of total, hospital, & MD services. T-tests & multiple regression analyses reveal that older blacks' lower incomes resulted in older whites' greater use of discretionary health care services, despite the fact that older blacks reported poorer health on both objective (limitation of activity, restricted activity days, bed disability days) & subjective (health status) measures. Income was an important predictor of use of dental services, with older blacks reporting less use than older whites. Health & income measures predicted the use of hospital & MD services, with older blacks reporting more use. Income had significant effects on all use of health care, suggesting that equality of access has not been achieved. Policy implications of these findings are discussed.

88S20309 / SSSP / 1988 / 2766

Savelberg, Joachim J. (Center European Studies Harvard U, Cambridge MA 02138), When Power Comes In after the Problematicization: Counterproductive Consequences in the White-Collar Case.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 46 pp.

¶ Intentions of those who successfully define social problems, the results of political programming initiated through successful problem definition, & the outcomes of program implementation may constitute three dramatically different realities. In each, perceptions & definitions are formed under different structural conditions. The case of the problematization of white-collar offenses in West German mass media, its development over time, the types of offenders & victims it has exposed, & the demands posed in this process are presented, & the use of this definition in the political process & the probable application of the resulting laws in the implementation process documented. It is shown that the redistributive intentions of problem definers are counteracted when they meet with power in the political & implementation process. The case study points to central explanatory factors in the quality of the problematization, the political & implementation agencies, the target groups, & the societal & historical situation. These factors are used to formulate some general hypotheses about the conditions under which counterproductive consequences of successful problem definitions are likely. It is shown how the effects of problem definitions can only be understood from the interplay of definitions on different levels & in different spheres & the structural environment in which they are formed.

88S20310 / SSSP / 1988 / 2767

Schmeidler, Emilie (Center Ur Policy Research Rutgers U, New Brunswick NJ 08903), New Hazardous Waste Facilities: What Is at Issue?

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 20 pp.

¶ Siting hazardous waste facilities is a bitterly contentious issue. During the last decade, US federal & state laws have promoted safe hazardous waste management through state-of-the-art facilities, but local opposition has continued to thwart efforts to site any large treatment, storage, or disposal facilities. The reasons for this pattern of failure are identified as processes that do not require sufficient attention be paid to the conflicting interests & values of the stake-holding parties. Most states attempt to override local opposition or to limit the range of issues that may be raised. Resolving the issue requires redefining the nature of the "problem" from siting hazardous waste facilities to managing hazardous waste, using decision processes that take into account social as well as technical factors.

88S20311 / SSSP / 1988 / 2768

Schmid, Carol L. (GTCC-Social Sciences, PO Box 309 Jamestown NC 27282), Ecology and Feminism: How Feminist Is the West German Green Party?

¶ The evolution & formation of the West German Green Party provides an important case study of the opportunities & constraints of integrating a feminist agenda into new political movements. It is argued that several factors have contributed to the relative success of the Greens with respect to women in leadership positions & the presence of a feminist agenda: (1) in the initial stages of the movement, women played a significant role on the grass-roots level, (2) women were among the initial founders of the national Green Party; & (3) significant support for the fledgling Party came from the new West German women's movement. Because of these factors, women were able to demand & obtain veto power over all issues concerning women. Finally, the unique structure of the West German political system, in which only 5% of the popular vote is necessary for a party to be represented in the parliament, made it possible for various new social movements to combine & challenge the traditional parties. Although women are better represented in the Green Party than in other traditional parties, many barriers continue to hamper access to true equality within this small ecological party.

ances may be grouped into two categories: economic (low wages & poor working conditions, job insecurity, unemployment) & political (high bus fares & rents, inferior education, harassment of labor leaders, etc). While capital has relied on both "democratic" (negotiations, mediation, etc) & repressive (mass dismissals, retrenchments, etc) measures to deal with the issue, the state has increasingly used repressive measures (eg, detention of labor unionists, banning of labor organizations). It is the interplay between these contradictory strategies of labor control, coupled with severe economic depression, that has radicalized the black labor movement in South Africa

88S20299 / SSSP / 1988 / 2756

Nesbitt, Paula D. (Dept Sociology Harvard U, Cambridge MA 02138), Beyond Plant Closure: A New Strategy for Corporate Social Responsibility.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 21 pp.

1 The issue of corporate social responsibility for companies & communities faced with plant closure, divestiture, or a major change in operations is investigated in terms of traditional parental vs participatory covenantal models. It is argued that the key to contemporary social responsibility between a dominant company & dependent community is through reformulating traditional covenantal relationships into those based on participatory decision making, inclusive of all interest or stakeholder groups in the community. Plant closure legislation is explored as a nonviable alternative, in that it maintains a parental covenantal relationship by replacing a company with government as the authority, without changing the covenantal structure on which the community is organized. The discussion focuses on a case study of International Paper's (IP) 1982 closure & divestiture of its Weed, Calif, wood products operation, & the participatory restructuring of this company town, which effectively assured both its survival & that new covenantal arrangements would be negotiated with buyers of the IP operations & with other businesses entering the area

88S20300 / SSSP / 1988 / 2757

Ovrego, Beverly & Montali, Theresa (Dept Health Education San Francisco State U, CA 94132), The Sexual Marketplace as Masked Ball: An Analysis of 20 Years of Personal Relationship Ads.

1 A qualitative analysis of personal relationships advertisements placed in the classified section of the San Francisco Bay Guardian from its inception in 1967 to the present. One issue per year was sampled, yielding a sample of 1,169 ads, which were read, content-analyzed, & coded into analytic categories according to the grounded theory method of analysis. In this marketplace of personal relations, certain characteristics augmented one's value as a commodity (eg, attractive), while others indicated that certain persons should not respond (eg, unemployed). Those who presented themselves did so as buyer or seller. There were gender differences in terms of what was being bought & sold, in general, men sold relationships to buy sex, & women sold sex to buy relationships. On the micro level, individuals donned "masks" (ie, metaphors for self & identity) to enter the market to facilitate symbolic interaction with others. Some wore mirrors, seeking "same" or a fit counterpart, some wore the mask of a celebrity (Woody Allen/Diane Keaton), & some took the mask of a professional (poet/adventurer) or, eg, as one who participated in ideal activities (long walks). There was tension between the mask & the actual self. Screening devices were used to unmask those who replied, such as requests for a photograph. These findings offer insight into contemporary sexuality, especially gender differences in strategies for finding partners, & notions of ideal self & ideal partner.

88S20301 / SSSP / 1988 / 2758

Prossono, Marvin C. & Mihordia, Ronald J. (U California, San Francisco 94143), Forensic Psychiatrist: Guardian or Prisoner of Context.

1 A report based on collaborative efforts between a sociologist working on an internship sponsored by the American Sociological Assoc & a forensic psychiatrist with the California Dept of Mental Health. Psychiatrists have always had to work in a variety of organizational contexts, & increasingly find themselves in organizations headed by managers who are not necessarily psychiatrists or MDs. The forensic psychiatrist, in particular, has had to balance medical ethics, clinical ideology, & professional goals with the demands made by legislative, judicial, or bureaucratic authorities. Historical material is briefly reviewed to model the shape & direction of the contextual dilemmas posed for the contemporary forensic psychiatrist. Data gathered from interviews & firsthand material are analyzed with a view toward understanding some of the methods & approaches used by the forensic psychiatrist in meeting the challenges of various organizational & institutional environments. Comparisons are made between military & penal system psychiatry. Finally (Max) Weberian & (George H.) Meadian analyses are brought to bear on the problem, seeking to understand the nature of forensic psychiatry as one of attempted accommodation & integration of the diverse requirements made on a medical specialist who is a professional but who may also be a bureaucrat, a subordinate in an organizational chain of command, or an expert retained by one of the parties in an adversarial context.

88S20302 / SSSP / 1988 / 2759

Reed, Wernie L. (William Monroe Trotter Instit U Massachusetts Boston 02125), Serving the Elderly: Need versus Policy.

1 An examination of contributions to health care policy for the aged. It is generally presumed that health care policies, especially Medicare, provide basic medical care insurance for all older persons. In reality, this is not the case; Medicare covers only about 45% of the medical expenses of the elderly. Medicaid provides medical care insurance coverage for many poor persons, but many of the poor are not eligible for Medicaid (eg, homeowners). Actuarial tables are presented to show expected out-of-pocket costs of medical care for older persons, including those with & without supplementary medical care insurance. The current expenditure patterns of older persons are contrasted with patterns that would exist if financial support for medical care were related to need.

88S20303 / SSSP / 1988 / 2760

Rollins, Judith C. (Dept Child Development & Family Relations East Carolina U, Greenville NC 27858), Longitudinal Grief Responses of Husbands and Wives after the Death of Their Child.

1 Although many writers have suggested that the death of a child is the most traumatic crisis a couple can endure, longitudinal studies of this phenomenon are almost nonexistent. In an exploration of grief patterns of bereaved spouses undertaken to determine differences between the sexes over time on several dependent variables—denial, despair, anger, guilt, social isolation, loss of control, rumination, depersonalization, death anxiety, somatization, vigor, & physical strength—33 bereaved husbands & wives completed the Grief Experience Inventory, consisting of 135 true-false items, at 3 different times over a 1-year period. Results of a repeated-measures MANOVA indicated that wives experienced greater intensity of grief regarding despair, loss of control, rumination, depersonalization, somatization, death anxiety, vigor, & physical strength than husbands did over time. There was one notable exception; husbands scored significantly higher on denial at each wave.

88S20304 / SSSP / 1988 / 2761

Romero, Mary A. (Yale Coll Dean's Office Yale U, New Haven CT 06520), Renegotiating Race, Class and Gender Hierarchies in the Everyday Interactions between Private Household Workers and Employers.

1 An exploration of the interpersonal relationship between private household workers & employers, seeking to uncover whether hierarchies of race, class, & gender are either transcended or reproduced within the intimate setting of the mistresses' homes. A historical analysis, which reveals the racial & cultural relations between mistresses & maids in the US Southwest, as well as existing traditions in the occupation, is followed by a discussion of contemporary private household workers, based on extensive work histories of Chicanas in Denver, Colo. Workers identified several ways in which status differences were reproduced in employers' homes: spatial & verbal deference, eating arrangements, & one-directional gift-giving. Faced with a dilemma between the occupational servitude characteristics & the potential for autonomy & flexibility, Chicanas identified ways to renegotiate the work process to create better working conditions. In eliminating personal service, domestics created a kind of client-customer relationship. The basic component involved gaining control over the work process, ie, removing the mistress from a supervisory role & thereby obtaining autonomy. Payment by the service rather than the hour was also crucial in changing the working conditions. Chicana private household workers considered themselves "professional housekeepers." Reducing personal interaction lessened the likelihood that workers would be used for companionship or confidante, both of which usually extended the work day & extracted unpaid emotional labor. By restructuring the work process to gain autonomy & flexibility, contemporary Chicana private household workers can transcend traditional roles as servants.

assessment of the effect of two nationally televised programs, controlling other variables including holidays & temporal effects, reveals that the rates did not increase teenage suicide. In fact, there were, on average, fewer suicides than expected during the week after the films. Further analysis that controlled for TV news stories on suicide, corrected for specials on teenage suicide, & restricted the analysis to large cities did not establish any link between films & suicide.

820321 / SSSP / 1988 / 2778

Santor, J. Jill & Pilbemer, Karl (Family Research Laboratory U New Hampshire, Durham 03824). Caregiving as a Status Transition: A New Conceptual Framework.

The past decade has seen increasing research on the causes & consequences of stress experienced by primary caregivers (PCGs) to victims of Alzheimer's disease (AD). One important finding is that PCGs' sense of burden is reduced by others' provision of support & by high levels of social interaction, but, paradoxically, if of interaction with family & friends often declines after becoming a PCG. Little study has been directed toward understanding the processes by which networks change when individuals assume the role of PCG. Recognizing that becoming a PCG to an AD victim constitutes a major status transition, the literature on status transitions & interpersonal relationships is drawn on to examine these processes, to develop a conceptual framework, & to propose methodological strategies for studying PCG stress. Both the theoretical deficit & the proposed methodology focus on the importance of using longitudinal designs to examine the effects of the structure & function of the individual's social network at the time he or she assumed the status of PCG.

820322 / SSSP / 1988 / 2779

Tennstedt, Sharon L., McKinlay, John B. & D'Agostino, Ralph (New England Research Inst., 9 Galen St Watertown MA 02172). Predictors of Primary Source of Community Long-Term Care for Frail Elders: Formal vs Informal.

Predominance of informal care over formal services has been well established empirically, yet concerns with potential demand for, & cost of, formal service continue. In a report of baseline data from a longitudinal survey of a random sample of 635 frail individuals aged 70+ & 429 informal caregivers, a multinomial logistic regression model was used to discriminate groups of elders defined by their primary source of care, formal (21%) or informal (79%). Significant predictors of primary source of care included living arrangement, level of frailty, & annual income. Elders who lived alone, were not impaired, & had higher incomes were more likely to rely on formal services. Predictors of nonutilization of formal services included living arrangement & marital status. Frail elders living with a spouse were likely to receive only informal care. Further, those reliant on formal services received substantially less help (19 hours per week) than those receiving mostly informal care (57 hours). These data show that service use is explained more by social circumstances than by physical status.

8820323 / SSSP / 1988 / 2780

Thorne, Barrie (Dept Sociology U Southern California, Los Angeles 90089). Paradoxes of Memory and Power in Participant Observation with Children.

When adults undertake fieldwork with children of their own culture, encounters with difference take complex & often paradoxical forms. Reflections are offered on the challenges of learning from children, the politics of adults representing children's experiences in knowledge; problems of gaining access to children's social worlds; sometimes contradictory ways in which the imposition & avoidance of adult authority may enter into processes of research; & the evocation of one's own childhood memories as a force that may both enhance & distort perception. These reflections, which bear on questions of epistemology as well as strategies of research, emerged over 11 months of participant observation in 2 elementary schools.

8820324 / SSSP / 1988 / 2781

Trent, Roger B. (Dept Sociology West Virginia U, Morgantown 26505). Work Injury and Alcohol in the U.S. Workforce.

Recently, alcohol-related work injuries have become defined as a social problem, primarily because of the coincidence of several events: (1) a vigorous executive initiative to harness employers to enforce substance abuse policies; (2) development of cheap substance abuse testing; (3) new awareness of injury as the major public health problem; & (4) concern about liability to employers who do not ensure a "drug free workplace."

Once the stage was set for this definition of alcohol-related work injury, justification was presented in the form of vivid anecdotes & impressive statistics, specifically, data from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration's Fatal Accident Reporting System. The data indicate alcohol involvement in about 50% of all fatal injuries. Actual research on alcohol-related work injuries indicates an incident rate of about 5% in the LF as a whole. The empirical facts are ignored by partisans of the industry that has arisen to counter the problem. In the longer run, employee assistance programs & other institutional responses will be justified or not on bases other than their ability to reduce injury in the workplace.

88S20325 / SSSP / 1988 / 2782

Trevino, A. Javier & Petronzio, Anna M. (Dept Sociology Holy Cross Coll, Worcester MA 01610). Differential Deviance Definitions: The Case of Alcoholic Women.

An exploration of the case of alcoholic women, discussing (1) the moral structure of illness, & (2) the proposition of differential deviance definitions. Immorality & illness are thought to have cause & effect relationships, i.e., immorality causes illness, or illness causes immorality. Yet another relationship is possible: that immorality & illness are synonymous. The revolutionary shift in attitudes toward alcoholism from the paradigm of immorality to the medical paradigm successfully occurred in the mid-nineteenth century, as medicine began to achieve hegemonic dominance & a pervasive cultural influence. Even though the effects of alcohol on the body have been known since ancient times, only in the last fifty years has alcoholism been regarded as a medical problem (i.e., a disease or allergy), but while the detrimental effects of alcohol in both Ms & Fs are seen as biomedical in origin, a double standard exists. This proposition of differential deviance definitions may be stated as follows: alcoholism deviance in Ms is primarily defined (socially) & treated (medically) as illness, while this deviance in Fs is primarily defined & treated (punished) as illness & immorality. The process of differential deviance defining includes two components: clinical & social diagnosing. While only clinical diagnosing is involved in the evaluation of alcoholism in Ms, both clinical & social diagnosing tend to be involved in the evaluation of alcoholism in Fs. It may be said that two distinct sociomedical realities regarding alcoholism exist: for Ms, a "simple alcoholism reality" diagnoses them as clinically ill; for Fs, a "complex alcoholism reality" diagnoses them as clinically ill & socially immoral. These two conflicting paradigmatic realities help to explain why society has historically defined, labeled, & treated alcoholic Fs very differently from alcoholic Ms.

88S20326 / SSSP / 1988 / 2783

Troyer, Ronald J. (Dept Sociology Drake U, Des Moines IA 50311). Chinese Thinking about Crime and Social Control.

Many Westerners read newspaper stories about the execution of criminals in China, but these accounts usually do not explain the Chinese view of the crime problem. Based on data gathered during several visits to the People's Republic of China, & from secondary sources, some of the key points of the Chinese approach to crime & social control are identified. Elements of traditional Confucian thought, Maoist ideology, & the more recent Deng Xiaoping views are evident in the explanations of crime offered by Chinese officials. Most important, thinking about the nature of humans & human behavior differs substantially from that found in most Western societies. These ideas are also the key to understanding Chinese anticrime & crime prevention policies.

88S20327 / SSSP / 1988 / 2784

Turnbull, Marjorie R. & Kelley, Susan D. M. (Center Human Services Policy & Administration Florida State U, Tallahassee 32306-4016). Long-Term Care in Rural Florida.

Influenced by increasing life expectancy, the rising cost of institutional & medical care, restraints on federal & state funding, & society's growing commitment to maintaining an individual at home, federal & state health care policies have shifted in emphasis from institutional long-term care services to community-based services. Here, long-term care services in two geographically large, rural human service delivery districts in northern Fla are examined, & existing services are compared to three model integrated systems that would protect the elderly's independence. The rural long-term care system fell short in the following several respects: (1) availability of each level of service, (2) knowledge on the part of the elderly & their families of services available, (3) availability of transportation to & from services, (4) ability of the elderly to pay for services or the existence of adequate alternative funding mechanisms for those who cannot pay, & (5) uniform eligibility requirements. The data provide striking evidence that conditions of rural poverty appear to encourage early entry into the most costly, restrictive form of care—nursing homes.

88S20312 / SSSP / 1988 / 2769

Schutt, Russell K. (Dept Sociology U Massachusetts, Boston 02125), The Role of Services in Housing the Homeless.

1 Efforts to meet the social & health needs of the homeless have taken a variety of organizational forms in different US cities. Some approaches include extensive networks among service providers, some include proactive outreach efforts, & some emphasize transitional housing components. Different service approaches are described on the basis of published reports, records of site visits made by various task forces, & interviews with service providers in Mass, & a typology of approaches is presented. An explanation of the distribution of these approaches between cities & their development over time is proposed. Policy alternatives are evaluated on the basis of current knowledge about the residential situation & health problems of the homeless, drawing on findings from interviews with homeless persons in Mass.

88S20313 / SSSP / 1988 / 2770

Shaw, Nancy Stoller (Board Community Studies Merrill Coll U California, Santa Cruz 95064), Lessons from the Damned: What Queers, Junkies and Whores Are Doing about AIDS.

1 A test of the hypothesis that public health authorities, on the one hand, & communities at high risk for AIDS (acquired immune deficiency syndrome), on the other, would utilize different techniques to respond to & prevent the spread of AIDS, & that these reflect the differing social positions & priorities of the organizations & institutions mounting the program. The data are derived from a pilot study of community intervention programs designed to reduce AIDS among gay men, prostitutes, & members of drug-using networks. The methods included participant observation, interviews, & documentary & statistical analysis. Interventions with high & low levels of community input (as measured by consultation, staffing, & decision making in design & execution of programs) are compared in terms of funding, program design, & actual or potential effectiveness. High-input programs are more labor-intensive in their design, operate on lower budgets, & utilize direct interventions to produce behavioral change to reduce transmission. Low-input programs are more likely to utilize capital-intensive strategies, pay higher salaries, & utilize interventions that provide information to populations at risk &/or management strategies for sexual & social control.

88S20314 / SSSP / 1988 / 2771

Shostak, Arthur B. (Dept Sociology Drexel U, Philadelphia PA 19104), Futuristics and Its Uses and Abuses as Applied Sociology.

1 Futuristics is identified as a mix of moral philosophy, art form, & applied sociology, with a history that includes the writings of Auguste Comte & Saint Simon. Attention is paid to a broad array of uses made of futuristics in both the public & private sectors, & recommendations are offered for upgrading the applied sociology component. Colleagues are encouraged to draw more extensively on this rewarding art form.

88S20315 / SSSP / 1988 / 2772

Silvestri, William V., Pratt, Virginia, Klabanoff, Varda & Gully, Anthony (U Massachusetts-Harbor Campus, Boston 02125), Sharing Childhood Experiences—A Study of Alcoholic Counselors Who Are Adult Children of Alcoholics.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 33 pp.

1 Children of alcoholics are heavily represented on the staffs of alcohol treatment facilities. Data from in-depth interviews with 10 alcoholism counselors with alcoholic parent(s) are used to examine childhood experiences with alcoholism & their effect on the interviewees' professional work with alcoholics. Since 9 of the 10 Rs were alcoholics themselves, their experiences of recovery & the effects of this on their professional work were also explored.

88S20316 / SSSP / 1988 / 2773

Singh, B. Krishna, Williams, J. S., Singh, B. B. & Halstead, J. S. (Richmond Public Schools, 301 North Ninth St VA 23219), Fear of Victimization among Urban Youth: Some Socio-Demographic Correlates.

1 To examine fear of victimization among Ur youth in a medium sized city, a 20% sample of public school students enrolled in grades 6-12 (N = nearly 1,800) completed a survey instrument. Three settings of victimization were examined: safety in the neighborhood, in the neighborhood at night, & in the school or on the school bus. Results of discriminant analyses indicate that 94% felt safe in their neighborhood, 59+% in their neighborhood at night, & nearly 83% in the school or on the bus.

In general, Ms, whites, & other ethnic/racial groups as compared to blacks, Rs from nonsubsidized housing, & Rs who had prior victimization experiences felt safer in their neighborhood at night. In terms of feeling safe in the school, younger students & those without victimization experience felt safer. Some policy implications are discussed.

88S20317 / SSSP / 1988 / 2774

Singh, Betsy B., Singh, B. K., Williams, J. S. & Hartnett, J. J. (Dept Psychology Virginia Commonwealth U, Richmond 23284-2018), Impact of Nonmarital Sexual Activity on Hiring Decisions.

1 An attempt was made to determine whether knowledge of nonmarital sexual activity influences the decision to hire or not hire a job applicant, particularly in internal hiring situations where the marital status & nonmarital sexual activity of personnel may be known, based on mail questionnaire data gathered from supervisory persons in a large organization (N = 140, 64% F, 55% black, 78% with masters degrees, & 14% PhDs). The instrument included questions pertaining to general & specific premarital & extramarital sexual attitudes, ethical position, & several personal characteristics, of which only church attendance proved to be significant. Decision to hire applicants engaged in one nonmarital sexual activity significantly predicted supervisors' hiring decision for other scenarios. The findings indicate that traditional ways of looking at sexual behavior attitude may not adequately predict the influence of nonmarital sexual behavior on hiring decisions within the corporate milieu.

88S20318 / SSSP / 1988 / 2775

Smith, Kathleen Maurer (Dept Sociology Molloy Coll, Rockville Centre NY 11570), As Women Alcoholics Recover: Aspects of Family Systems Which Support or Undermine Sobriety.

1 A report on research in progress examining the families of F alcoholics who occupy the wife/mother role & have sought to recover from their alcoholism. Families with F alcoholics who have been recovering successfully are compared to families with F alcoholics who have experienced recurring relapses, based on data from intensive interviews with all family members. The basic assumption is that since the alcoholic's family has organized its roles around having a wife/mother who is an active alcoholic, & has developed rules & rituals to reinforce the family's role relationships, when the alcoholic makes an effort to recover, these roles, rules, & rituals need to be revised. Without revision relapse is more likely, since the old rituals reinforce old (alcoholic) behaviors. Differences between these families are discussed, particularly with regard to family role expectations & relationships, rules regarding behavior & interactions & rituals that have evolved—especially those associated with holidays, which were often difficult & stressful times during the active alcoholism phase & may therefore trigger a relapse.

88S20319 / SSSP / 1988 / 2776

Sosnowitz, Barbara G. & Appleby, George A. (Central Connecticut State U, New Britain 06050), Preventing Volunteer Burnout through a Structured Support Network.

1 Offering direct service to clients with AIDS (acquired immune deficiency syndrome) & their families takes enormous energy & places psychological strains on the volunteer, leaving him or her exhausted & with a sense of isolation. Developing & implementing educational programs for a diverse volunteer population often results in a hostile & confusing reception, which may cause the volunteer to become bewildered & doubt his or her effectiveness. The organizational & social support literature are drawn on to describe the internal support structure developed in two community-based AIDS projects designed to help their volunteers manage stigma (as described by Erving Goffman, Stigma, Englewood Cliffs NJ: Prentice-Hall, 1973) & counter the effects of burnout. Several approaches to volunteer management are described: (1) different training models to orient new volunteers & to put in place a social support network; (2) meetings to address inservice needs & strengthen group cohesion; & (3) team cohorts to provide support, feedback, & back-up for volunteers facing critical & hostile situations.

88S20320 / SSSP / 1988 / 2777

Stack, Steven J. (Dept Sociology Auburn U, AL 36830), The Impact of Fictional Television Films on Teenage Suicide, 1984: A Research Note.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 13 pp.

1 Work on the imitation theory of suicide has neglected fictional accounts of suicides while concentrating on the impact of real suicides. As

PLEASE NOTE: THE ABSTRACTS PUBLISHED IN THIS SUPPLEMENT ARE INDEXED IN SOCIOLOGICAL ABSTRACTS, 1988, VOLUME 36, NUMBER 3. THEY ARE ALSO AVAILABLE ONLINE THROUGH DIALOG, BRS, AND IN EUROPE THROUGH DATA-STAR.

Document Delivery Service

The costs of reproduction are: US $0.25 per reproduced page. Orders must be PREPAID (unprepaid orders cannot be acknowledged or returned) and sent to SOCIOLOGICAL ABSTRACTS, INC. (P.O. Box 22206, San Diego, CA 92122, USA) together with the SA accession number and the complete citation of the document to be reproduced. To calculate price per document, multiply the number of pages as indicated in the citation of the abstract by US $0.25 and add a US $1.50 search fee per document. POSTAGE is EXTRA. Below is a table for postage fees that vary by weight/size of paper.

No. of Pages	US & Canada Postage Fee	All Other Countries
		Postage Fee	Air Mail
1- 5	$0.39	US $1.40	Surface
6-10	$0.73	$2.24	US $1.00
11-15	$1.07	$2.78	$1.90
16-20	$1.41	$3.32	$2.30
21 +	Additional multiples as above
			$2.75

CONFERENCE papers are available ONLY when the following notation precedes the text of the abstract; ● "Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search and postage. Length: pp." For copies of paper without this notation, write directly to the author, whose address is listed in the citation.

88S20328 / SSSP / 1988 / 2785

Ulbrich, Patricia M., Warheit, George J. & Zimmerman, Rick S. (Dept Sociology U Miami, Coral Gables FL 33124), Race, Socioeconomic Status and Psychological Distress: Testing the Vulnerability Hypothesis.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 40 pp.

1 Using data from a 1985 epidemiological survey of 2,115 adults in Fla, the proposition that race & SES jointly influence mental health is tested, & the contribution of undesirable life events & economic problems to psychological distress across SES groups is examined. The influence of race & SES on mental health varied with the measures used. The most general conclusion is that SES interacts with race to increase psychological symptoms of distress. Partitioning the sample into three SES categories (low, middle, high), the contribution of stressors to the greater distress among lower SES blacks is examined as compared to other blacks & lower SES whites. Lower SES blacks are less exposed to undesirable events than others, but they are more vulnerable to the impact of these events. Lower SES blacks are more exposed than others to economic problems, but they are less vulnerable than others to the impact of these problems.

88S20329 / SSSP / 1988 / 2786

VanVleet, Henk J. (METROPOLINK Consultancy & Research, Zeeburgerpad 1 to 38 NL-1018 AK Amsterdam Netherlands), Syringe-Exchange, AIDS-Prevention and Drug Policy in the Netherlands.

1 Syringe-exchange programs most of them government regulated & administered play a significant role in acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) prevention & drug policy in the Netherlands. The position of syringe-exchange programs, some preliminary results, & other data are presented in the context of the hard-drug situation in the Netherlands & the development of AIDS prevention, as seen from advisory positions in the drug & AIDS policy-making structures & in comparison with the situation in other Western European countries. Pragmatic drug policy in the Netherlands has generated over the past 15 years such important results as a highly accessible drug treatment system that reaches an estimated 70% of the 15,000 users mentioned, working relations between the official world & the various drug scenes & users' organizations, & an open public debate on drugs. Debate & practice on syringe-exchange should consider that this instrument cannot be used in an instrumental & isolated way. It requires a coherent vision of harm reduction & behavioral change among users. For the years to come fight against AIDS must take priority over the fight against drugs.

88S20330 / SSSP / 1988 / 2787

Waldorf, Daniel, Reinarman, Craig & Murphy, Sheila (Instit Scientific Analysis, 2250 Central Ave Alameda CA 94501), Social-Psychological Strategies for Cessation from Cocaine Use.

1 Findings from a 2-year National Insttit of Drug Abuse-funded study of cessation from cocaine use are reported. Some 250 heavy cocaine users (both current users & quitters) were selected by means of a snowball sampling technique. Life history interview & questionnaire responses were analyzed to generate hypotheses regarding the social-psychological processes involved in successful cessation. The model of cessation that emerged from these data is rooted in: (1) the accumulation of problems in different spheres of life; (2) the transformation of the very effects of cocaine (euphoria to dysphoria); & (3) the importance of a stake in conventional, everyday life roles as a social-psychological resource. Importantly, these data suggest that inundation in the cocaine life is not an inevitable outcome of chronic, heavy cocaine use; may be managed long-term cocaine use without serious difficulties in any sphere of life.

88S20331 / SSSP / 1988 / 2788

Wenger, Morton G. (Dept Sociology U Louisville, KY 40292), High Technology and Vulgar Theory: A Materialist Dereliction.

1 With the development of cybernetic machines & the dramatic rise in recent years of the organic composition of capital in the core capitalist societies, both popular & academic treatises on the nature & consequences of a purportedly new, high technology have abounded. Generally, such arguments have proceeded in terms of the effect that new technologies have had on society. Such a view of technologies, as things that arise from & affect social relations but that have a logic independent of such relations, has appeared in many theoretical contexts, both mainstream & critical. Only on rare occasions has the fact been grasped that new technologies are themselves constituted in large part of new forms of social relations in their primary form, & not of new material artifacts alone. In order to comprehend this, a fundamental reexamination of the social & material nature of tools is required, in which tools are seen to be the actual material embodiment of varying types of social labor.

88S20332 / SSSP / 1988 / 2789

Wilk, Rita J. (Dept Social Work U South Florida, Tampa 33620), Mental Health System Reform: The Implications of Involuntary Outpatient Commitment.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 20 pp.

1 The tide of mental health reform is again rising in the US, focusing on the issue of involuntary commitment. A number of states have already changed their laws, making it easier to commit persons for involuntary treatment, & many more are considering such legislative reform. Three recent phenomena have converged to create the pressure for reform: the perceived failure of deinstitutionalization, the plight of homeless mentally ill persons, & dissatisfaction with inflexible civil commitment laws. Here, involuntary outpatient commitment, touted as an effective alternative to compulsory inpatient treatment as a way to catch those who are falling between the cracks, is examined. Existing commitment laws & procedures are reviewed, the concept of involuntary outpatient commitment is discussed, & empirical data concerning its effectiveness are reviewed. The administrative & policy implications of applying such mental health reforms are considered, focusing on the community mental health agencies likely to be directly affected & problems likely to be encountered, eg, problems with liability, cost, "right to treatment" suits, staff resistance, & the interface with the criminal justice system. The use of outpatient commitment on a broad scale in any state is viewed with skepticism.

88S20333 / SSSP / 1988 / 2790

Worth, Lark (Dept Sociology Temple U, Philadelphia PA 19122), On Becoming a Peace Maker: Contributions of the Symbolic Interactionist Perspective.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 21 pp.

1 An attempt to apply sociological theory to the question asked by the Nonviolence & Children Committee of the Philadelphia (Pa) Yearly Meeting of Friends (Quakers): What are the environmental factors that enable people, children in particular, to become peacemakers? A broad overview is provided of the contributions of the symbolic interactionist perspective. Focus is on the processes by which: (1) the individual perceives what is going on in the world; (2) individuals make sense of this world through thought & conversation; (3) emotional responses are learned, eg, the fear & anger frequently associated with violent behavior; & (4) individuals acquire motivations, in particular, the motivation to be a peacemaker. Four contributions of the symbolic interactionist perspective to our understanding of the process of becoming a peacemaker are identified. It is recommended that future research focus both on personal biographies of individuals who do & who do not become peacemakers & on the social biographies of the groups that they belong to that either enable or prevent individuals from becoming peacemakers. Several examples are provided for possible social action to enable more people to become peacemakers.

88S20333a / SSSP / 1988 / 2791

Zablocki, Benjamin D., Aldala, Angela A. & White, Helen R. (Sociology Dept Rutgers U, New Brunswick NJ 08903), The Drug Consumption Patterns of Baby Boomers: Age, Birth Cohort, Period and Subculture Effects.

1 An examination of the use of marijuana, alcohol, cocaine, & hallucinogenic drugs over a 20-year period (1967-1987) within a sample of predominantly Mc baby boomers (N = 805). This sample is not representative of the larger population of US Mc baby boomers; however, it offers the advantage of allowing a close look at the effects of adult peer group participation on drug & alcohol consumption. Variations in substance use over time are examined as a function of birth cohort, period, subculture, & peer group. Significant drug use differences are found among three subcultures—hippie, political activist, & Eastern spiritual—despite the fact that members of these groups show almost no differentiation in their drug use patterns prior to their indoctrinations.

Abstracts

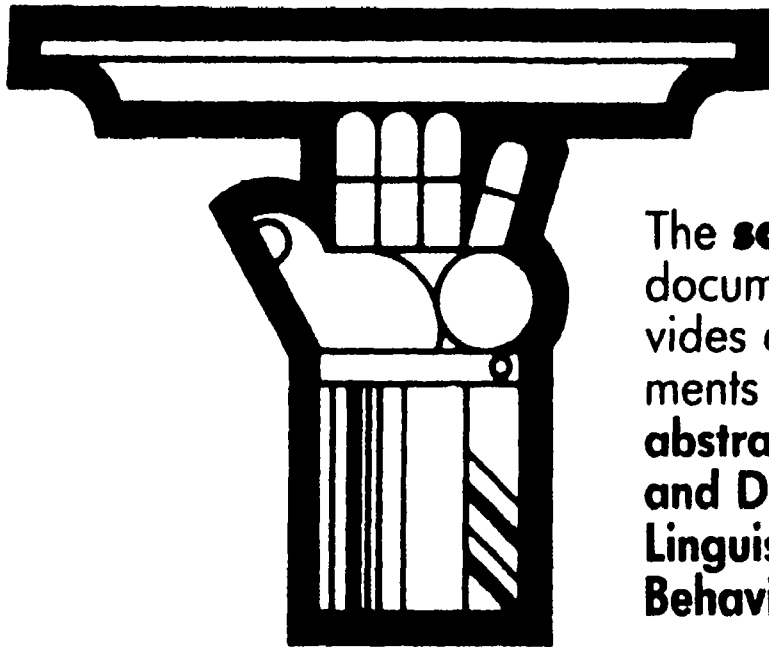

at 24-26 Atlanta Marriott Marquis, Atlanta, Georgia

suppl

The American Sociological Association

Abstracts of papers presented at the 83rd
Annual Meeting

We bring you the steak
along with the sizzle!

The sociological abstracts document delivery service provides affordable copies of documents cited in sociological abstracts, Social Planning/Policy and Development Abstracts, and Linguistics and Language Behavior Abstracts.

Our $.25 per page charge and $1.50 search fee include all royalty payments. (Postage is extra.)

Forty-eight hour turn around, guaranteed.

For complete details on the types of documents available, contact:

sociological abstracts, inc.

Document Delivery Service

P.O. Box 22206
San Diego, CA 92122-0206

Deposit accounts welcome.

cosponsored by the international sociological association

107. CA 41:20402

E. coli, S. flexneri, S. flexneri, S. flexneri

Maryanne Foster Maryam Chell

A. G. 107, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911, 912, 913, 914, 915, 916, 917, 918, 919, 920, 921, 922, 923, 924, 925, 926, 927, 928, 929, 930, 931, 932, 933, 934, 935, 936, 937, 938, 939, 940, 941, 942, 943, 944, 945, 946, 947, 9

Joseph R. Gusfield, John D. Kasarda, Edward A. Tiryakian, Martin Ajrovi, John Useem, Charles V. Willie

\mathbb{R}^n is a vector space over \mathbb{R} with the standard inner product. Let $\mathbf{v}_1, \dots, \mathbf{v}_n$ be an orthonormal basis for \mathbb{R}^n . Define the matrix $\mathbf{V} = [\mathbf{v}_1 \dots \mathbf{v}_n]$. Then $\mathbf{V}^T \mathbf{V} = \mathbf{I}_n$. Let \mathbf{A} be an $n \times n$ matrix. Then $\mathbf{A} \mathbf{V} = \mathbf{V} \mathbf{\Lambda}$, where $\mathbf{\Lambda}$ is a diagonal matrix with eigenvalues $\lambda_1, \dots, \lambda_n$ on the diagonal. The matrix \mathbf{V} is orthogonal, so $\mathbf{V}^{-1} = \mathbf{V}^T$. Therefore, $\mathbf{A} = \mathbf{V} \mathbf{\Lambda} \mathbf{V}^T$.

[illegible]

together with the corresponding \mathcal{H}^1 -norms of the reproduction and the infection rates, respectively, and the \mathcal{H}^1 -norm of the total number of individuals.

[illegible]

As you will utilize the same system, you will not only keep the union participants in Atlanta, but also in Chicago, Detroit, and other borders as well.

forward to an exciting and Truly yours,

William V. D'Antonio
Executive Officer LC
American Sociological Association

Leo P. Chall
Editor
sociological abstracts

Sociological Abstracts

sponsored by the international sociological association

P.O. Box 22206, San Diego, CA 92122

Telephone (619) 565-6603

Board of Directors

Jerome Brickman Leo P. Chaff Miriam Chaff Alfred McC Lee
Robert L. Leslie †Albert L. Solodov Kurt H. Wolff

Advisory Board

Joseph R. Gusfield John D. Kasarda Edward A. Tiryakian Martin Albrow John Useem Charles V. Willie

Editor Leo P. Chaff

Production Office Britt Sawyer

Chief Editor John A. Schellinger

Managing Editor

Editorial Manager

Advertising Manager

Production Manager Linda S. Stanton

Indexing Department Michael Blair

Computer Office Lynette Hunter

This supplement is presented to all registrants of the 83rd Annual Meeting of the American Sociological Association with the compliments of the Association and the collaboration of Sociological Abstracts (SA).

The numbering of the abstracts has been integrated into a continuous SA supplements acquisitions number series. For example, the first abstract, that of a paper by Deborah A. Abowitz, is numbered as follows:

88S20334/ASA/1988/4617

88 stands for the complete designation of year of presentation. S20334 is the first supplement abstract number following from supplement No. 152. The accession number is followed by an abbreviation of the conference name, the year in which the meeting is held, and the last number indicates that it is the 4617th abstract SA has published from ASA Annual Meetings.

Supplement No 153 Contents

Letter of Presentation	i
Abstracts: A - I . . . S20334 - S20517	41 - 64
J - N . . . S20518 - S20623	64 - 78
O - S . . . S20624 - S20715	78 - 90
T - Z . . . S20716 - S20751	90 - 95
Author Index	96 - 97
List of Abbreviations	Cover III
Document Delivery Service	95 & Cover IV

Available in print and online via: Dialog, BRS and Data-Star

IOLOGICAL ABSTRACTS is published by Sociological Abstracts Inc., a non-profit corporation. 5 issues are published in April, June, August, October, December. Subscriptions are $230 per year. Single issues are $50. A cumulative index issue will be published 9 months of the last issue. Index issues are $45.00. Supplement issues $5 to libraries & if available. Please make remittances payable by cheque to Sociological Abstracts. When paying by UNESCO Book Coupons please add 10% for Bank charges. When paying by International Money Order, please include library order number or SA invoice number. Please add $10 for postage per subscription.

Class Postage paid at La Jolla, CA, and at additional mailing offices.

NOTICE: Claims for missing issues must reach the editorial office within 60 days of date of publication, for FOREIGN subscribers, within 90 days. Notify us, as well as the U.S. Post Office, of change of address as early as possible. The U.S. Post Office does not forward journals. It destroys them, unless specifically instructed not to do so. Issues missing as a result of failure to inform us in time of a change of address will not be replaced free of charge. POSTMASTER: Send address changes to Sociological Abstracts, P.O. Box 22206, San Diego, CA 92122-0206.

Copyright 1988 by Sociological Abstracts, Inc.

Abstracts of papers presented at the 83rd Annual Meeting

8820334 181 1988 4617

Abowitz, Deborah A. (Dept. Sociology, Black College University, P.O. Box 100, PA 19101) Socio-Political Participation and Gender Roles: A Problem of Competing Obligations

1978 Detroit (Mich.) Area Study of the role of men & women in order of differentials in the process of political participation in terms of the competing interests & needs of men & women in political and social roles of men & women. Socioeconomic participation of men & women in politics. Abstracts. Based on the results of such activities as voting & contacting & socializing & consists of campaigning & other types of community participation. The model of competing interests & obligations includes multiple variables at both the individual & contextual levels. The political social forces that affect participation in politics & opportunity costs of participation for men & women. Men & women techniques establish that the determinants of men & women are assumed to be similar for men & women in the context of political activity significantly by gender.

8820335 ASA 1988 4618

Adams, David W. (Dept. Sociology, U. Pennsylvania, PA) TECHNOLOGY AND Women and Technology: The Part Played by Technology Use in Success in a Technology-Oriented University Major

Complete paper available from SAE Reproduction Service prepaid at $8.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 18 pp.

Men have traditionally not chosen to enter technology-related fields of engineering & have also tended to leave when they do enter the field. It has been suggested that the explanation is that men have the talent that men have, so men are better at technology than do women & that this relationship is due to academic success in fields such as math & science. However, a study of 441 E & M freshmen enrolled in engineering at a large U.S. university was asked to describe their past experience with technology-related activities. Data were disaggregated by gender, performance & on student persistence in engineering at the 4-year level. Patterns of past experience with technology were compared for Ms & Es using t-statistics. In addition, multiple regression analyses were performed in order to estimate direct & indirect effects of selected variables on academic performance & persistence. Results suggest that although there are differences between men & women in the patterns of technology-related activities, it does not account in any significant way for the differences in the academic experiences of women & men in engineering.

8820336 ISA 1988 4619

Adler, Marina A. & Brayfield, April A. (Dept. Sociology, U. Miami, College Park 20742) Status Characteristics and Perceptions of Women's Opportunities in the Federal Republic of Germany and the United Kingdom empirical study assessing the impact of SE & family structure on perceptions of women's opportunities in the Federal Republic of Germany (FRG) & the UK. The theoretical framework links national characteristics with individual objective status & perceptions. It is hypothesized that the effect of objective status on perceptions of women's opportunities is moderated in part due to cross-national differences in gender equality. Using the 1978 Euro Barometer 3 data set, a representative sample of 10,000 items rating women's opportunities, relative to men, were analysed using multiple regression analyses for men & women separately. The results show that important variations in the effects of FF participation on perceptions of the number of children at home on opportunity related perceptions are found.

8820337 ASA 1988 / 4620

Adler, Peter & Adler, Patricia A. (Dept. Sociol., U. Denver, CO 80202)
 7. The Gloried Self: Integrating Impulse and Rationalization in College Athletics.

of changes in the selves of Coll athletes that result from their in arena of celebrity & glory. Drawing on 4 years of participant observation research with a Coll basketball team, athletes' sense of enlargement & self-diminishment are discussed in the context of

They keep the expanded gloried self but they become telescoped & abandon the committed dimensional aspects of their selves. The gloried self represents a metaphor for the self in the 1980s: it retains the impulsive character of the self identified in self theories of the 1960s & 1970s, yet directs the self to the institutionally valued goals & structure that characterize the self in the institutionalized 1980s.

ASS20138 ASA 1988 1631

Agnew, Robert & Huguley, Sandra (Dept. Sociology, Emory U., Atlanta, GA 30322) Adolescent Violence toward Parents: An Examination of the Extent, Correlates, and Causes of Parental Assault

• The second type of family violence is child abuse and spouse abuse. The third major type of family violence, parent abuse. Data from a national sample of adolescents is used to examine the extent, social and ethnic correlates, & causes of assaults on parents. An integrated theory of parental assault, combining traditional family violence variables with theories of juvenile delinquency, is tested. Results indicate that adolescent who assault parents are more likely to (1) have friends who assault parents, (2) approve of delinquency, including violence, (3) believe the probability of official sanction for parental assault is low, & (4) be severely attached to parents.

84520339 ASA 1988 16''

Abmad Aqmal (Center Interdisciplinary Study of Science & Technology, Northwestern University, Evanston, IL 60201) Globalization of Technology: A New Paradigm for International Development

• A consideration of the worldwide penetration, transfer & application of technology knowledge for development & related international science & technology policy & management issues. It is suggested that this global system of technology will be firmly in place by the twenty-first century. The rate and relation will be largely determined by technoeconomic consideration of a global society & those left out of this system & how a little time to survive & grow is civilized societies. These propositions are supported by data on current & emerging international technology trend.

88520340 ASA 1984 4633

Ajzen, Ian (Dept. Sociology, U. Toronto, Ontario M5S 1A1) Modern Society is a Moral Community (Back to Aristotle).

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 26pp.

88520341 ASA 1988 1674

Alcantara, Adelmar N. (East West Center, P.O. Box 1199 Honolulu HI 96813) The Role of Women in Household Decisionmaking: Gender Equality in the Philippines

6. A re-evaluation of appropriateness of providing Western models, & a more favorable F status with economic factors & low F status & low F status, & domestic factors, in developing countries such as the Philippines. A study based on data from the 1981 Women in Development Survey, which was administered to 7,393 married couples who lived in Cebu and Manila, Philippines. It is argued that Western models, which stem from a tradition of positive valuation of production, per se, & a tradition that denigrates the private or public realm as the locus of the creation of value, lead to ethnocentric distortions concerning how & in what context women achieve status.

Your editors will no longer accept excuses!

Now you can check the accuracy of your references in a matter of seconds.

If you need to verify an author's name and/or the complete bibliographic citation of his/her article sa has 180,000 citations waiting online for your query (time span 1968 onward)

If you need to proof the title and subtitle, or year of publication, or name of a book's translator, or the original language, IRPS awaits you with over 53,000 book reviews culled from over 240 core sociology journals, continuously screened, abstracted, and indexed from a dozen + languages (time span 1980 onward)

If you need the reprint of an article quickly, each online record tells you how and from whom it can be ordered sa's document delivery service is fast and inexpensive

Here's how you can tap into our tapes

Information professionals can use BRS (file label SOCA), Data-Star (file label SOCA), and Dialog (file 37) for searches

Subject specialists can access sa on three user-friendly services: BRS's After Dark and Colleague (file labels SOCA) and Dialog's Knowledge Index (file SOCS1)

Of course, all our information products are available in traditional hard copy. Does your library have a complete set?

sa's print and online services are updated in April, June, August, October and December

sociological abstracts

P.O. Box 22206
San Diego, CA 92122-0206
U.S.A.
(619) 565-6603

88S20350 ASA / 1988 / 4633

Vafaei, Shahrokh (Washburn U., Topeka, KS 66621). Social Change, Class Line-Ups, and Revolution in Iran

Aspects of the structural process of the establishment of capitalism, social organization & SC formation are discussed. The popular SC line-ups in the most important political changes of the 19th century, the fall of monarchism after 2,500 years & the establishment of the Islamic Republic is explained. The Shah's 1967 White Revolution's aftermath of gradual development & finally the establishment of capitalist mode of production in Iran in the 1960s & 1970s influenced the social structure of Iranian society, resulting in the Islamic fundamentalism to power in 1979.

88S20351 ASA / 1988 / 4634

Raker, Wayne (U. Chicago, IL 60637). The Organization-Market Interface: Corporations' Relations with Investment Banks

Relationships among business organizations, specifically corporations & investment banks, are investigated, including what types of relationships exist in many industries, the shift from relationships (strong long-term ties) to transactions (weak short-lived episodic relations) and that relationships are still the major type of interface relations used as quasimarket relations, informal long-term contracts, which the market continues to operate. However, in response to structural changes that created more opportunities, uncertainty, liquidity, corporations developed a hybrid market interface, a two-sided set of quasimarket ties & transaction ties that permit a firm to take full advantage of the complementarities of the two types of ties. Markets are shown to be patterned by the same generic principles that govern market, interorganizational relations, resource dependence, & redundancy.

88S20352 ASA / 1988 / 4635

Bannister, Robert C. (Dept. History, Swarthmore Coll., PA 19081). Sociology and Scientism: The Case of William Fielding Ogburn

Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 17 pp.

A sociological career of William Fielding Ogburn (1886-1979) provides a case study in the development of a movement in the interwar period (1910-1940) to pattern sociology after the natural sciences. After embracing objectivism, neopositivism, or scientism, the approach attempted to confine sociological inquiry to the observable external social behavior & quantify the result. Objective materialism, the product of the convergence of several different factors, that shaped the careers of leading representatives of sociology's second generation, including Ogburn, among them: (1) social fragmentation that appeared to require additional values & behavior totally irrelevant to modern life; (2) congruence between Calvinism & Darwinism as US culture legitimated around science rather than Protestantism; (3) the professionalization & institutionalization of scholarship; & (4) political liberalism & the rise of a corporatist, consumer-oriented capitalism after 1900. Analysis is based on Ogburn's published & unpublished work, including a personal journal not previously used by his followers.

88S20353 ASA / 1988 / 4636

Barkan, Steven E., Cohn, Steven E. & Whitaker, William H. (Dept. Soc. Sci., U. Maine, Orono 04469). Individual and Structural Sources of Commitment and Participation in a National Anti-Hunger Organization

Examination of the determinants of commitment & participation of young members of social movement organizations. Particular focus on the membership of Bread for the World, a national institution for that lobbies in Washington, DC. The implications of results for action on social movements & voluntary associations are discussed.

88S20354 ASA / 1988 / 4637

Fraumann, Eleen A. (Dept. Sociology, Oregon State U., Corvallis, OR 97331). Fun and Work at Sales Parties: Commercial Uses of Sociability at "Naughty Lady Parties"

A functionalist analysis of the experience of selling & consuming at sales parties, with focus on "Naughty Lady Parties" where lingerie & toys are sold. Participant observations took place at 14 parties over a 2 years in the northwestern U.S., primarily in communities of 50,000 people, sales & supervisory personnel working for a retail company served as key informants. The physical & social environment & the performance of the sales representative contribute to the sociability & the commercial success of the gathering. Sociability is generated & enhanced by the performance of the company representative & the nature of the merchandise. At the same time, sociability is manipulated for commercial purposes. The emotional labor involved in the home sales process & the costs & rewards to both buyers & sellers in this exchange process are discussed. It is argued that the popularity of this direct sales technique arises from several characteristics of the party sales approach: (1) sales people create an emotional experience for participants & the gathering itself is usually enjoyable & a relief from the tensions & pressures of everyday life.

88S20355 ASA / 1988 / 4638

Beck, Bernard (Dept. Sociology, Northwestern U., Evanston, IL 60208). Retail Feelings: How Actors Construct Emotional Performances

As a contribution to the sociology of emotions, the social construction of emotional aspects of theatrical productions by actors, directors, & others are discussed. Based on participant observation as a professional actor, sociocultural & artistic works such as plays, films, & TV shows are discussed as a basis for interpretation of the social systems from which these concrete emotions depicted in such works become data for the sociology of emotions. The processes by which such performances are constructed are therefore important to understand, especially if they differ from the emotional work of ordinary members of society. Central issues in the process include realism, authenticity, believability, audience acceptance, & entertainment value. Dimensions affecting the negotiation include the distribution of power, command over resources, certification of skill, & the coordination of the work of multiple actors.

88S20356 ASA / 1988 / 4639

Bersel, Nicola (Dept. Sociology, U. Michigan, Ann Arbor 48109). Family Ideology and the Suppression of Contraception in Nineteenth Century New York

An examination of the interaction of SC conflict & family ideology in the mobilization of the New York City (NY) elite into the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice (NYSSV). The NYSSV successfully lobbied the US Congress for a bill that forbade the use of the postal service for the distribution of contraceptive information or device. Previous researchers focused on feminist & SC conflict theories to explain elite support of the NYSSV. Empirical findings presented here demonstrate that 1) parents were concerned about the behavior of their children & the preservation of their SC. This interaction suggests that SC preservation, which unifies SC & gender concerns, & transcends economic survival, mobilizes elite action.

88S20357 ASA / 1988 / 4640

Belgrave, Linda Lusk (Frances Payne Bolton School Nursing, Case Western Reserve U., Cleveland OH 44106). The Effects of Race Differences in Work History, Work Attitudes, Economic Resources and Health on Women's Retirement

The effects of work history, work attitudes, economic resources & health on the retirement of women, particularly black women, are poorly understood. Here, racial differences in the 2 factors & in their effects on the decision to retire are examined, using data gathered from 258 black & white women aged 62-66. Results show that black women were considered more likely than white to have worked steadily most of their adult lives, although black & white women expressed quite similar attitudes toward work. Reflecting their work histories, black women are more likely than white to be eligible for pensions, but are less likely to have retired. In contrast, retirement is poor health is a predictor of retirement for both black & white women, while low average income over the last five years of employment is a predictor only for blacks. Work history & attitudes are unrelated to retirement.

88S20358 ASA / 1988 / 4641

Bell, Wendell & Olsh, Jeffrey K. (Dept. Sociology, Yale U., New Haven, CT 06520). The Role of Prediction in Futures Research: Some Epistemological Suppositions about "Knowing" the Future

Three conditions are proposed to the epistemologic problem of "knowing" the future: (1) Relying in the future, on methods of prediction that have worked in the past is simply a pragmatic empirical argument, i.e., it does not depend on formal principles of logical justification. (2) Aspects of the past & present that bear on the future can be studied, including people's image of possible, probable, & preferable futures, people's intentions to act, social obligations & commitments, traditions, trends, historical analogies, & present possibilities for the future. (3) Causal laws can be restated in a predictive form, however probable or conditional they may be.

88S20342 ASA 1988 4627

Alexander, Victoria D. (Dept. Soc., 225 St. 211, CA 94303). Pictures at an Exhibition: Does Funding Affect Content?

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 35 pp.

* The funding of U.S. art museums is charged for its role in recent years. However, whether private, public, & federal government's supported funding in the last two decades, however, the federal government & private corporations have become and remain patrons of the art, while the important cultural judgments have been made. Here, we examined whether the cultural funding affects the management of exhibitions, artists, & the character of contemporary art. A wide range of organizational structure links art to their audiences. Production of culture theory argues that these social relations have a substantial impact on the nature of the art itself. Approaching this perspective, the author has contributed to the understanding of acceptance of various artistic style, particularly postmodernism, or discussed.

88S20343 ASA 1988 4629

Allan, Emily Andersen & Steffensmeier, Darrell J. (Dept. Behavioral Science, Saint Francis Coll., Foretto PA 1909). Youth, Underemployment, and Property Crime: Differential Effects of Job Availability and Job Quality on Juvenile and Young Adult Arrest Rates

* The relationship between employment conditions & property crime arrest rates of M juveniles & young adults is examined using new, specific state-level data for the years 1977-1980, compiled from arrest data of the Federal Bureau of Investigation's Uniform Crime Reports & from the U.S. Census Bureau's annual March Current Population Survey. Several strategies are used to explore the labor market-crime relationship in greater depth than has been done in previous research, including disaggregation by age & utilization of dimensions of employment (under- as well as unemployment) & such measures of job quality as low hours & low wages. Controls are included for criminal opportunity & other variables related to both crime & the labor market. The findings reveal that labor market effects on arrest rates differ for juveniles & young adults; availability of employment produces strong effects on juvenile arrest rates, while job quality shows strong effects on young adult rates. Theoretical & policy implications of these findings are discussed.

88S20344 ASA 1988 4627

Allison, Paul D. (Sociology Dept. U. Pennsylvania, Philadelphia 19104-6299). In Defense of Change Scores

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 15pp.

* Two alternative approaches are considered for the analysis of data in which the dependent variable is measured at two points in time: (1) the regression of y_2 on x_1 & (2) the regression of y_2 on y_1 & x_1 . Despite a long-standing consensus against the use of change scores, it is argued that method (1) is typically superior to the more conventional method (2). The argument is developed in detail for the nonequivalent control group design in which x_1 is a dummy variable representing a treatment that occurs to some of the cases between time 1 & time 2. An empirical example is presented in which a straightforward examination of the means would indicate no treatment effect, while the application of method (2) does yield a treatment effect. Similarly, in an example in which changes in the means would indicate a treatment effect, application of method (2) does not find in effect. In both cases, method (1) yields conclusions that are consistent with intuition. It is shown that the choice between (1) & (2) can be viewed as a choice between alternative formal models. The model justifying method (1) has major advantages with respect to measurement error & omitted variables, & is usually a more reasonable representation of the causal process.

88S20345 ASA 1988 4628

Alwin, Duane F. (Instit. Social Research U. Michigan, Ann Arbor 48109). Changes in Qualities Valued in Children in the United States, 1964 to 1984

* Changes that have occurred over the past few decades in parental assessments of qualities valued in children are examined using data from several NORC national surveys. Findings support earlier observations regarding changes in parental values. Those child qualities generally thought to be associated with obedience (to obey parents, to have good manners, to be neat & clean, & to act according to sex-role norms) are seen to have declined in importance & the qualities generally associated with autonomy or self-direction (good sense & sound judgment, honesty, responsibility, & considerateness) have increased in their assessed importance for parents during this period. It is suggested that educational antecedents of parental autonomy vs. conformity values are of little change. However, little support is found for the role of correlated or "generational" factors; in fact, the cohort differences observed suggest a reversal of the trend. Results also indicate gender background, particularly Catholicism, accounts for a substantial portion of changes in parental autonomy vs. conformity values period.

88S20346 ASA 1988 4629

Armer, J. Michael & Robinson, Richard (Dept. Sociology, State U., Tallahassee 32306). Educational Expansion and Output in Taiwan, 1951-1985

* An aggregate production function framework is used to estimate educational effects on economic output, net of labor & the two basic factors of production. Focus is on Taiwan because of high rates of economic growth, relative equality of income distribution, & high levels of political & economic dependency. Aggregate series analyses indicate that expansion of primary, secondary, & levels of schooling make varying contributions to economic output, with different phases of economic development during a five-year period considered.

88S20347 ASA 1988 4630

Ashley, David (Dept. Sociology, U. Wyoming, Laramie 8207). "modernism" and the End of the Individual: From Repressive Mastery to Ecstatic Communication

* An analysis of the recent claims made by the Nietzschean analysts Jean Baudrillard & Jean-Francois Lyotard that classical social theory no longer applies. If such theory, from Karl Marx to Jean Baudrillard, represents a discourse or narrative about modernity, it is no longer possible for this discourse or narrative to be grounded by or empirically. End of theory & end of the individual, discussed, with focus on the debate between the "last great rationalist" Habermas & the so-called "postmodernists" (e.g., Baudrillard & Lyotard).

88S20348 ASA 1988 4631

Auerbach, Judith D. (Society Research Child Development, Arlington DC 20001). The Privatization of Child Care: The Employer Support

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 15pp.

* In a period in which the headed single-parent family is a growing family form & in which nearly 50% of mothers with under age 1 are employed, one would expect to find increased demand for child care services & benefits. However, public funds & have not materialized to match the growing need; instead, a child care activity has occurred has been primarily in the private sector. The reasons for & implications of this privatization are explored using cultural & ideological norms that have limited public provision, instead encouraged private solutions. Focusing on employer-child care, discussed are conditions that have led to its emergence, motivations & barriers employers perceive, & the nature of employer involvement. It is argued that employer supported care is not the solution to the nation's child care crisis, especially as it contributes to the privatization of child care services among parents.

88S20349 ASA 1988 4632

Ayers, David John (Dept. Sociology, Kings Coll., Briarcliff NY 10510). The Irgun Zvai Leumi of Eretz Israel: A Case History of Religious Nature of a Terrorist Movement

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 15pp.

* Drawing on Max Weber's theory that action is the result of interests directed by ideological imagery, & that collective action can be created by an empathetic prophet presenting such in the form of a plan of salvation to an oppressed people, an analysis of Menachem Begin's Irgun terrorist group as a movement with distinctly religious characteristics. It is suggested that Irgun leaders served as prophets in constructing an ideological framework for action that was directed toward heavily oppressed Sephardim that could justify military action in such a manner as to be consistent with the latter as both consistent with Jewish beliefs & history, & toward their life situation. This analysis is based on qualitative Irgun memoirs, trial records, & propaganda.

$0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 26 pp.
 88S20365 ASA / 1988 / 4650
 Bolak, Hale C. (Psychology Board Stevenson Coll U. California, Santa Cruz 95064). Gender Identity and Marital Negotiations Under Stranding Intra-Cultural Diversity in the Working Class Marriage. A case analytic approach is used to explore the implications of E. broad status & men's failure to meet their normative obligations toward wives for negotiation of the conjugal contract in the Turkish blue-collar marriage. It was expected that husbands' & wives' characterization & responses to the current breadwinner configuration in the group would mediate their expectations & strategies around marital conflict. A field study of 41 We families in Istanbul separate semistructured interviews were conducted with working women & their husbands. Wives were either employed, unemployed, or intermittently employed. Content analysis reveals five distinct patterns of negotiation: (1) M dominance with little or no contest of wills; (2) M dominance with conflict over traditional E prerogatives; (3) M dominance with conflicts over modern E expectations; (4) emergent E dominance; & (5) ideology fluidity. Women's expectations with respect to marital negotiations mediated by their socialization & general life experiences, perception of their situation as working women, mothers, & wives, reference to E & attitudes toward their husbands, as well as the importance of relative contribution to the family budget. Men's conflict as their wives' employment was more direct, & deterministic of orientation to marital power, suggesting greater centrality of gender & M self-identity. The implications of the relative silence of gender & family survival for marital negotiations in the context of the Turkish family are discussed.

88S20367 ASA / 1988 / 4650

Bolak, Hale C. (Psychology Board Stevenson Coll U. California, Santa Cruz 95064). Gender Identity and Marital Negotiations Under Stranding Intra-Cultural Diversity in the Working Class Marriage. A case analytic approach is used to explore the implications of E. broad status & men's failure to meet their normative obligations toward wives for negotiation of the conjugal contract in the Turkish blue-collar marriage. It was expected that husbands' & wives' characterization & responses to the current breadwinner configuration in the group would mediate their expectations & strategies around marital conflict. A field study of 41 We families in Istanbul separate semistructured interviews were conducted with working women & their husbands. Wives were either employed, unemployed, or intermittently employed. Content analysis reveals five distinct patterns of negotiation: (1) M dominance with little or no contest of wills; (2) M dominance with conflict over traditional E prerogatives; (3) M dominance with conflicts over modern E expectations; (4) emergent E dominance; & (5) ideology fluidity. Women's expectations with respect to marital negotiations mediated by their socialization & general life experiences, perception of their situation as working women, mothers, & wives, reference to E & attitudes toward their husbands, as well as the importance of relative contribution to the family budget. Men's conflict as their wives' employment was more direct, & deterministic of orientation to marital power, suggesting greater centrality of gender & M self-identity. The implications of the relative silence of gender & family survival for marital negotiations in the context of the Turkish family are discussed.

88S20368 ASA / 1988 / 4651

Boli, John & Ramirez, Francisco O. (U. Lund, S-22100 Sweden). The Rise of Compulsory Schooling in the Western Cultural Context: Common Frame and Varying Obstacles. Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 40 pp.
 88S20369 ASA / 1988 / 4652
 Bowser, Benjamin P. (Dept Sociology & Social Services California State U. Hayward 94542). Defining Corporate Culture: Exploring the Relations between Values, Decision-Making and Cultural Diversity. Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 26 pp.
 88S20370 ASA / 1988 / 4653
 Brabant, Sarah & Mooney, Linda A. (U. Southwestern Louisiana, Lafayette 70504). When "Critters" Act Like People: Anthropomorphism in Greeting Cards. Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 20 pp.
 88S20371 ASA / 1988 / 4654
 Bradley, Raymond Trevor & Roberts, Nancy C. (Dept Sociology U. California, Santa Cruz 95064). The Logic of Charismatic Change: Transcending Weberian Irrationality. Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 18pp.
 88S20372 ASA / 1988 / 4655
 Breines, Winifred (Dept Sociology, Northeastern U., Boston, MA 02115). Gender and Social Change: 1950s Mothers and Their Daughters. The differences between two generations of white Mc women, mothers in the 1950s & young women in the 1970s, who could have been (& in some cases were) the former's daughters, are explored to better comprehend the contradictory personal, social, & cultural forces that shaped the younger generation. Survey data from the 1950s about the mothers' & family life are compared with a variety of data about the "daughters," including letters they wrote to Betty Friedan about her book The Feminine Mystique (1963) & previously published interview & questionnaire data. Much of what the daughters learned about gender in their families was traditional, at the very time that opportunities for women were expanding. It is concluded that there were dramatic differences between the mothers' & daughters' much of what the daughters learned at home conflicted with what they learned in the wider popular culture, as well as with the growing potential for education & careers.

* Based on personal experience & a review of the literature, discussed are the challenges that three new developments will present to corporate structures & cultures: diversity in the EE of collective identities & lifestyles; increasing specialization & internationalization of domestic markets; & the transformation of markets from product orientation to service relations. It is asserted that current organizational values, decision-making processes, & cultural uniformity do not result in a corporate culture that can meet these challenges. Analysis of case materials suggests that organizational efficiency & effectiveness will require radical modification of the current rigid hierarchical structure by moving decision making closer to the customer & client level. In addition, employees will have to be more directly involved in determining how the corporate mission is executed & how their roles are defined. The demand for these changes is as well as a call for leadership that can manage the new environments will be crucial to future competitiveness. The creativity, skill, & experience needed to run such organizations is not concentrated in the SC & racial/ethnic groups who currently dominate corporate management. These organizations will have to draw on the broader range of talents & backgrounds present in the general population.

88S20370 ASA / 1988 / 4653

Brabant, Sarah & Mooney, Linda A. (U. Southwestern Louisiana, Lafayette 70504). When "Critters" Act Like People: Anthropomorphism in Greeting Cards.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 20 pp.

* Anthropomorphism is examined as a social phenomenon, using birthday cards (N = 535 from 15 retail outlets), one of the most widely used modes of interpersonal communication. Each outlet represented a geographically distinct high traffic area varying in type of establishment (discount drug store, department grocery, & card stores) & SE level of the community. The incidence of anthropomorphism in birthday cards & differences between cards with & without anthropomorphism are presented. Cards with anthropomorphism are compared with respect to the type of animal(s) & the context within which the animal(s) is pictured. Using Erving Goffman's model of frame analysis as reference, social & cultural implications are discussed.

88S20371 ASA / 1988 / 4654

Bradley, Raymond Trevor & Roberts, Nancy C. (Dept Sociology U. California, Santa Cruz 95064). The Logic of Charismatic Change: Transcending Weberian Irrationality.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 18pp.

* By postulating a complementary relationship between love & power in social collectivities, a new theory of the logic of structural transformation in charismatic systems is outlined. Radical reorganization of structure requires idealizing & realigning enormous amounts of social energy, which is liberated by love. When patterned as communion, love fuses the group into an undifferentiated whole & releases the energy previously locked up in an institutionalized structure. Released from form, however, collective energy is highly volatile & produces immense pressures leading toward instability. Counterbalancing the pressure from communion, a strong collective order of power functions to harness & align the energy, thereby promoting group stability & enhancing the prospects for structural transformation. The theory is illustrated with data from a national study of 60 charismatic communal organizations.

88S20372 ASA / 1988 / 4655

Breines, Winifred (Dept Sociology, Northeastern U., Boston, MA 02115). Gender and Social Change: 1950s Mothers and Their Daughters.

* The differences between two generations of white Mc women, mothers in the 1950s & young women in the 1970s, who could have been (& in some cases were) the former's daughters, are explored to better comprehend the contradictory personal, social, & cultural forces that shaped the younger generation. Survey data from the 1950s about the mothers' & family life are compared with a variety of data about the "daughters," including letters they wrote to Betty Friedan about her book The Feminine Mystique (1963) & previously published interview & questionnaire data. Much of what the daughters learned about gender in their families was traditional, at the very time that opportunities for women were expanding. It is concluded that there were dramatic differences between the mothers' & daughters' much of what the daughters learned at home conflicted with what they learned in the wider popular culture, as well as with the growing potential for education & careers.

88S20359 ASA 1988 4640

Benavot, Aaron, Kamens, David, Wong, Suk-Ying & Cha, Yun-Kyung (Dept Sociology, U. Georgia, Athens 30602) World Culture and the Curricular Content of National Education Systems, 1920-1985

* A review of curricular change in national education systems is based on data derived from official curricula of 108 national education systems & 1000 textbooks from the first two world wars, and a large number of 1200 national curricular collection, educational yearbooks, & popular educational literature. Official curricula are predominantly European in character, but have been modified in national curricula of other regions. The textbooks are more varied & reflect the variation in content & objectives. The curriculum is largely explained by underlying political, economic, & cultural factors. Results indicate a pattern of curriculum change that is characterized by a variation over time & a more definite pattern of change in content & objectives. A concurrent emphasis on the national identity of the curriculum, the cultural differences, & the role of the curriculum in education are traced to national identity & a national curriculum model.

88S20360 ASA 1988 4641

Berezin, Mabel (Dept Sociology, Harvard U., Cambridge, MA 02138) Capturing the Story: Newspaper Coverage of Terrorist Activity in the United States and Italy

* Between 17 Apr 1975, when a bomb exploded in a Madrid subway, & 14 Apr 1986, when the US Embassy in Beirut was destroyed, terrorism occurred in Western Europe & the Mediterranean basin. Previous civil construction of terrorism in different national models reveals the manner in which individual nations, with their public, reflect about terrorism & might ultimately produce revealing of the political application of terrorism on national level & the political situation that eventually come it. Focus is on press coverage in Italy & the US of the Oct 1985 hijacking of the Ahille Lauro cruise ship. The Italian case was covered in international waters by Middle Eastern terrorists. The incident resulted in the death of one American & precipitated a crisis with the Italian government. Based on a content analysis of relevant articles in the New York Times, Time, Newsweek, & the Milano Corriere della Sera, examined are the rhetorical strategies of the reporting, exploring the following aspects of the coverage: (1) portrayal of the terrorists; (2) portrayal of the victims; (3) problem-oriented approaches; language of moral retribution; (4) amount of attention paid to the international context & precipitating events; & (5) reporting of uncertainty as the story was unfolding. Preliminary analysis suggests that the Italian coverage was paradoxically more objective. The language of the US media was less objective than the Italian media, however, the US media tended to report the story with little emphasis on context, as the result of prior international political actions. The Italian press firmly embedded the hijacking in a series of other political actions & offered causal hypotheses about the rationale for the action & its implications. Because the US reporting downplayed context, it left the event curiously neutral & its interpretation open to internal political manipulation.

88S20361 ASA 1988 4644

Bergthold, Linda A., Estes, Carroll L. & Swan, James (Inst Health & Aging, U. California, San Francisco 94143) Organizational Changes and Access in Home Care

* A review of organizational changes in home health agencies in the US since the early 1980s. Data from the Inst for Health & Aging (U of California, San Francisco) telephone surveys of 200 randomly selected home health agencies in 9 metropolitan areas of 8 states in 1986-87 are analyzed via regression, investigating the impact of system affiliation, tax status, degree of market competition, length of stay, budgetary constraints, & several demand factors (population, age, & nursing home bed supply) on perceived access to care. It is concluded that for-profit chain-owned home health agencies are more likely to report a refusal of service to elderly clients than independent for-profit agencies & nonprofit agencies. For-profit agencies in highly competitive markets & markets with fewer nursing home beds refuse service less than nonprofits in those market areas. There is no difference in refusal among agencies relying on Medicare for more than 85% of their revenues. Implications of these findings for public policy are presented.

88S20362 ASA 1988 4645

Berheide, Catherine White & Segal, Marcia Texler (Dept Sociology, Skidmore Coll., Saratoga Springs, NY 12866) The Status of Female-Headed Small-Holder Households in Malawi

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper 31 pp.

* A comparison of the status of female-headed households (FHHs) in 1980 with 1975 is based on the 1983-84 Annual Sample Survey of Agriculture conducted in representative sample (N = 3,749) of smallholder households in Malawi. FHHs are defined as households with fewer than 10 members, less than 100 acres of land, and some poultry, less livestock, less land, & less income. However, FHHs that belonged to the 1975 survey are not included in the survey. The average FHH & the average of all other households (MHHs) but not as well as the average of all MHHs were more likely to belong to former clubs. Though FHHs were more likely to belong to former clubs to obtain credit, they were less likely to be independent MHHs. Female-headed households are more likely to be of other type of household, have had some access to agricultural extension services. It is concluded that FHHs would benefit from greater access to agricultural extension services & credit, & would be more likely to be in former clubs.

88S20363 ASA 1988 4646

Bernstein, Basil & Sadovnik, Alan R. (U. Sadozick, HES, H. H. Adolph U., Garden City, NY 11530) Pedagogic Practice in Educational Reform: An Application of a Theory of Pedagogic Practice

* A theoretical model of pedagogic practice & available pedagogic practice (Basil Bernstein's Class, Codes, and Control, Vol III) is applied to the analysis of the underlying different forms of pedagogic practice & discourse. Based on the theoretical model, cycles of educational reform in the US from the 1960s to the present are analyzed, concluding about the limitations of educational reform in solving problems of social inequality. A central part of the analysis is the conflict between two forms of viable pedagogy, one that leads to economic dependency & distrust of classed market identity, & relates the evolution of pedagogic practices in the US questions of efficiency, standards, productivity, & excellence, as well as to public equality & diversity.

88S20364 ASA 1988 4647

Bills, David (U. Iowa, Iowa City 52242) Employers and Overeducation: When Is a Lot Too Much?

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper 18 p.

* Increasingly large numbers of employees have education directed beyond those needed for performance of their jobs. It is suggested that it may be more useful to conceive of overeducation in the employment terms than to rely on often vague or arbitrary conceptualizations of educational demands of different occupations. Overeducation is studied here as the upper level of schooling that would disqualify candidate for consideration for a job opening, & an attempt is to determine under what conditions employers will screen out education credentials that they judge is too high. Analysis of data from six Chicago (Ill) organizations indicates that employers do not make educational decisions for positions but that these are usually flexible & shifted largely by default. Reasons given by employers for their refusal or refusal to hire overeducated candidates are discussed, & it is concluded that reconceptualizing overeducation as a barrier to the culmination of a job worker match, rather than as an element of mismatch between proxied worker skills & job demands, can contribute to an understanding of overeducation.

88S20365 ASA 1988 4648

Blaauw, Wim (Erasmus U., PO Box 1738, NL 3000 DR Rotterdam, Netherlands), Urban Renaissance and the Back-to-the-City Migration: The Case of the Netherlands

* Within the last decade, city administrators have become aware of growing interest in the Netherlands for living. They may now sell their cities to companies & households. In the same period, the balance of migration for the big cities became less negative, & in some cases even positive. It seems that families who once moved to the suburbs are attracted by the urban revitalization & are returning to the city. A possible relationship between urban revitalization & back-to-the-city migration is examined.

88S20366 ASA 1988 4649

Boies, John L. (U. Michigan, Ann Arbor 48109-1382) Wrestling with the State: The Fortune 500, Rational Self Interests, and the Success of Political Action Committees turn affect intrinsic & extrinsic self-esteem. For boys, self-esteem is unrelated to grades. Girls apparently feel grades are important & see them as reflections on both their highly valued performances (extrinsic self-esteem) & their gender (intrinsic self-esteem).

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper 31 pp.

88S20381 ASA 1988 / 4664

Byrne, Noel T. (Dept. Management, Sonoma State U., Rohnert Park, CA 94928) Time Deviance.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 37 pp. Drawing on participant observation data from public places, skid rows, & other settings, the phenomenon of time deviance is examined. Social networks serve not only as organizing frames (in helping to make sense of ongoing interactions & experiences) but also as mechanisms of control & as bases for deviance designations. Among the timing patterns examined are those temporal norms that bear on activities & relations (ie, pacing, scheduling, coordination, sequencing, initiation, duration, & synchronicity) & those that bear on internal states (ie, social orientations & horizons). Configurations of such temporal states are linked to kinds of interaction frames & categories of mensural principles. A number of temporal control issues are examined, including that of moral socialization. Note is taken of the difference between desirable temporal norms (to which all are held accountable, as with the requirement to listen while another is talking) & heroic temporal norms (standards established by the first & most exceptional to enter a particular activity, as with the first person on the moon). Note is also taken of the fact that time carry their greatest weight with relation to social timing norms since all are held accountable to these.

88S20382 ASA 1988 / 4665

Call, Vaughn R. A. & Otto, Luther B. (U. Wisconsin, Madison 53706) Proximity to College Campuses: Impacts on the Educational Aspirations and Attainments of Males and Females.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 16 pp. Educational aspirations & subsequent postsecondary educational attainment of a large, longitudinal sample of Ms & Fs (N = 6,129) are examined. The pattern of educational choices between 2- & 4-year Colls is compared with prior educational aspirations & the number & type of Colls in the local community. The proximity to 2- or 4-year Coll campus does not affect levels of educational attainment within 12 years of leaving high school, but does have a modest, positive impact on educational aspirations formed during high school. Detailed comparison of educational aspirations to first Coll attended shows considerable variation in the pathways that young people choose to enact their aspirations. The operationalization of Coll plans in the sociological literature fails to take into account life course differences that occur because of different educational timetables, certification, & proximity to Colls.

88S20383 ASA 1988 / 4666

Callero, Peter L. (Dept. Sociology, Western Oregon State Coll., Monmouth, OR 97361) Measuring the Self.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 17 pp. A measure of role identity proposed by Peter J. Burke & J. Tully (see 88S-7718750) offers a theoretically sophisticated procedure for measuring the meaning of self in a particular role. This measure produces a single numerical score that can be used in multivariate statistical analyses. Here, a measure of self-definition is proposed that extends the technique by eliminating the need for counteridentities, bipolar scales, & discriminant analysis. The result is a measure of self in role that is more versatile, less cumbersome to employ, more easily replicated, & theoretically more appropriate. A number of comparative tests of validity were conducted & several hypotheses derived from the literature are supported using the proposed measure.

88S20384 ASA / 1988 / 4667

Carley, Kathleen (Carnegie Mellon U., Pittsburgh PA 15213) Social and Cognitive Stability.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 29pp. Although change is an integral part of life, there is often a preference for stability. For example, at the social level, stability aids in governing the transference of norms, & the preservation of culture. According to constructivist theory, the social world is an artifact that is constructed. Individuals in the society add information to their cognitive structures. Thus, social stability occurs when the pattern of relationships across individuals' cognitive structures does not change. Based on the constructivist theory, a computer simulation model of individual cognitive & social behavior was developed, CONSTRUCT, which can be used to explore the relationship between different configurations of the social network & different distributions of knowledge across the members of the society, the diffusion of information, etc. Here, CONSTRUCT is used to explore whether or not commonly studied social network configurations are stable over time. Both social cognitive stability & social interaction stability are examined. The social network configurations explored are: opposing cliques, Heiderian triads, minority vs. majority situations, & weak ties amidst strong ties. Cliques, in both knowledge & interaction, are found to be extremely stable configurations. Heiderian triad, minority, & weak tie configurations are not stable. Weak ties connecting otherwise noncommunicating groups lead to the eventual dissolution of the group & increase societal homogeneity & overall social stability. The findings suggest that social interaction stability is maintained at the cost of social cognitive stagnation; social cognitive stability is achieved by segmenting the social network.

88S20385 ASA 1988 / 4668

Carley, Kathleen & Wendt, Kira (Carnegie Mellon U., Pittsburgh PA 15213) Electronic Mail and the Diffusion of Scientific Information: The Study of SOAR and Its Dominant Users.

● Both the invisible Coll & proximity, which rely on face-to-face communication between the scientists linked by the network, have been forwarded as dominant determinants of the flow of information among scientists. Here, it is examined whether electronic mail (E-mail) will replace or augment traditional modes of scientific communication, thus reducing or enhancing the impact of invisible Colls & proximity. The argument is tested via analysis of diffusion & use of SOAR by its 76 dominant users. SOAR is considered as a model of cognitive architecture or as a production system in language with learning. Data were obtained on: proximity & invisible Coll ties; acquisition of the basic idea, the operationalization & supporting ideas related to SOAR; & the use of personal E-mail, group E-mail, & traditional modes of communication. Results indicate that different communication modes are used to acquire different types of scientific information. In general, E-mail is used to support the basic infrastructure of science, also, it does not promote collaboration among individuals who were not previously proximal or shared student mentor ties. It is concluded that E-mail enhances rather than reduces the impact of invisible Colls & proximity, in part because it makes it possible to maintain previous contacts & to extend the invisible Coll in terms of number of members.

88S20386 ASA 1988 / 4669

Carr, Leslie G. & Ziegler, Donald (Inst. Study Minority Issues Old Dominion U., Norfolk VA 23529-0090) When Busing for Integration Ends: The First Years of the Norfolk Experiment.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 21pp. To test predictions that white flight would continue & Norfolk, Va., schools would become resegregated if busing were not stopped, & that if it were stopped, white flight would be reversed, enrollment figures were analyzed & a telephone survey (N = 484 Rs) was conducted at the end of the first year without busing for integration. Comparisons were made between an experimental group (elementary schools that had used busing for integration & ended it) & a control group (those that had never used busing for integration). It was found that white flight did not continue; rather, enrollments in the school system stabilized for 5 years prior to ending busing. Chi-square analysis revealed no difference in white enrollment patterns between the experimental & control schools. Ending busing for integration did not improve PO of the schools. It is concluded that straight line projections of white flight trends may be erroneous. Since most schools remained well integrated after busing was stopped, it appears that white flight may be more the result of flight from integration than flight from busing per se.

88S20387 ASA / 1988 / 4670

Case, Carole (Dept. Sociology, State U., New York, Albany 12222) Integrative Ritual in an Occupational Community.

● It is suggested that the ability of ritual to integrate participants into a community may be related to the social prestige of the participants. Here, this possibility is explored through examination of a fox-hunt ritual in the occupational community of horse-racing known as the paddock ritual. Based on participant observation & open-ended interviews conducted

88S20373 ASA 1988 4666

Breslau, Daniel (Dept Sociology, U Chicago, IL 60637). The Mediations between Sociology and Its Context in the Career of Robert Park: A Study in Pierre Bourdieu's Sociology of Science

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 19pp.

* Historical study that shows correspondence between the work of sociologists & (1) the social changes of the interwar period & (2) those who use those works generally do not explain how this correspondence is reached. The correspondence probably gives to the acceptance of the renewal of pre-suppositions & created interwar social science. A solution to this problem is suggested by work of Pierre Bourdieu's program in the work on the sociology of science (see SA 1987 4606). In this approach, the scientific field is treated as the locus of a competitive struggle between actors endowed with different amounts & types of capital (either objectified in the form of education or embodied in the form of knowledge, skill, or lifestyle). The career of Robert Park in relation to the field of US sociology is then examined to track that the correspondence between Park's socialization & his sociological work & that between his work & the attack on progressivism in the 1920s, which is intended to support, can be accounted for using this approach.

88S20374 ASA 1988 4667

Brinton, Mary C. (Dept Sociology, U Chicago, IL 60637). Gender and Labor Market Organization in Japan

* Survey data, Japanese government statistics, & ethnographic evidence are used to investigate the proportion of men & women who enter large firms & within those groups, the proportion entering internal labor markets within large firms. Sex differences in the processes of institutional entrance to the labor market are analyzed with special attention to the differential effects of educational level & quality for men & women. The findings indicate that young Japanese M&F enter large firms at nearly equivalent rates & through similar processes. In contrast, men have a much higher probability than women of entering international labor markets & a number of sex differences are evident in the processes of entrance to such labor markets.

88S20375 ASA 1988 4688

Brown, Phil (Dept Sociology, Brown U, Providence, RI 02912). Conflicts between Lay and Professional Approaches to Environmental Health Risks

* Drawing on a detailed study of the Woburn, MA, childhood leukemia cluster, & on toxic waste activism in various communities, lay & professional approaches to environmental health risks are situated in a larger context, which includes public awareness & pressure, state authority, social movements, economic interests, & challenges to scientific authority. Of particular interest is the study of how lay & professional groups define data quality, methods of analysis, traditionally acceptable levels of measurement & statistical significance, & relations between scientific method & public policy. Lay communication of risk places into central position the social context of the scientific methods & logic employed in disease detection, as opposed to the professional scientific context. The risk detection & solution seeking activities of Woburn & other communities are here conceptualized as popular epidemiology, the process by which lay persons gather data & direct & marshal the knowledge & resources of experts to understand the epidemiology of disease, to treat existing & prevent future disease, & to remove the responsible environmental contaminants. This framework incorporates medical sociology, environmental sociology, & sociology of science to look at the content of lay & professional perceptions, examine the background factors behind those perceptions, investigate the ethical & professional inputs & outcomes, & study the complex interaction of communities, social movements, scientists, & government officials.

88S20376 ASA 1988 4689

Brustein, William (U Minnesota, Minneapolis 55488). The Rationality of Fascism: The Political Geography of Fascist Party Membership in Italy and Germany during the Interwar Period

* An explanation of the political geography of fascist party membership in Italy & Germany during the interwar period is presented. Both general & case study explanations of the rise of fascism fail to distinguish between the motivations responsible for voting for & joining a fascist party; both kinds of explanations emphasize irrational rather than rational motivations for joining a fascist party. It is argued that regional variation in fascist party membership in Italy & Germany could be attributed to regional differences in perceptions that the fascist party program could redress individual grievances, opportunities to join the party, the paucity of other selective incentives, & the solidarity of local social networks. These factors were important because they shaped individuals' calculations of the costs & benefits associated with joining a fascist party.

88S20377 ASA 1988 4689

Bullard, Robert D. (U Tennessee, Knoxville 37996). Blacks and New South: The Struggle for Parity

* The civil rights movement in the US was born in the South. The great struggle in the 1960s for equality gave rise to the new Negro South, which emerged in Dixie. The black exodus from the new white South in the 1940s & 1950s, & the South was promoted as a model of a new South. Although blacks have made impressive gains in the economic, political, & educational areas over the past three decades, parity with the larger society remains an elusive goal. Institutions, however, continue to exist in the 1980s, denying a significant portion of the population a great deal of the region's wealth. While the economic system is not a black economy, as it once existed, the more sophisticated and more industrialized, the results of dual opportunities. Until 1960, when it constituted nearly 20% of the region's population, there were more blacks in the region's resources & prosperity, there it became a new South.

88S20378 ASA 1988 4661

Burke, Peter J. (Dept Sociology, Washington State U, Pullman 99164-4070). Academic Identity and Race Differences in Educational Aspirations

* In a previous study (reference not provided), Burke & Hoelter tested the Weir statistical aspirations attainment model, & using a sample of high school seniors, demonstrated that their model was appropriate for white M&F as well as black F's. The failure of the modified model for black M's was attributed to differences in the meaning of continuing on to college for black M's compared to white M's. Here, a more direct test of this hypothesis shows the effect of academic identity on college plans is contingent on the meaning attached to college by blacks & whites. The implications of the findings both identity theory & weirs statistical aspirations attainment process are discussed.

88S20379 ASA 1988 4667

Burris, Beverly H. (Dept Sociology, U New Mexico, Albuquerque 87131). Technocratic Organization and Control

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 17.

* Technocracy, a new type of organizational control structure, is defined & analyzed. The culmination of a dialectical process of organizational rationalization, technocracy transcends & integrates earlier forms of control, particularly technical, bureaucratic, & professional control. Technocratic organizations are characterized by a flattening of bureaucratic hierarchies, a polarization into expert & nonexpert sectors, a substitution of expertise for rank position as the primary base of authority, a de-emphasis on internal job ladders in favor of external credentials, & credential barriers, flexible configurations of centralization/decentralization, & other related organizational changes. Technocracy is analyzed with regard to both its contemporary manifestations in different workplaces & its sociopolitical implications at the level of individual workplaces, the societal (i.e., international) level of labor markets, & terms of general ideology.

88S20380 ASA 1988 4663

Buching, William A. & Farrell, Michael (Dept Sociology, State U New York, Buffalo 14260). Gender Differences in the Relationship between Self-Esteem and Grades

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 16.

* The relationship between level of self-esteem & grades is examined using a sample of 232 third-graders from a large western metropolitan area. Thirty items selected from the Piers-Harris Children's Self-Concept Scale were used to measure 2 types of self-esteem before & after grades: intrinsic (basic self-worth) & extrinsic (self-evaluation of role-related performances & personal characteristics). Statistically significant correlations were obtained for girls between grades & (1) intrinsic self-esteem measured before grades, (2) intrinsic self-esteem measured after grades, & (3) extrinsic self-esteem measured after grades. No statistically significant correlations between grades & self-esteem were found for boys. Findings suggest that for girls intrinsic self-esteem affects grades.

uses cross-sectional wage data from government & other sources on 1,000 coal miners during 1900-1935. Net of market variables, strike frequency over the long term is the most potent conflict-related correlate of wages, outperforming strike success & union density. This finding is robust to a variety of alternative specifications, & holds in both the union & nonunion sector.

88S20395 / ASA / 1988 / 4678

Cohn, Steven F. (Dept Sociology & Social Work U. Maine, Orono 04469-0124). Class Differences in Emotional Experience: Implications of Schachter's Theory.

An exploration of the implications of Schachter's two-factor theory of emotions for a theory of class differences in emotional experience. It is suggested that members of the Ue are likely to have a greater clarity about their emotions & to experience a wider range of emotions. Schachter's division of emotional experiences into cognitive & physiological components indicates the importance of appropriate cognitive labels for emotional experience. Members of the Ue may be more likely to attach appropriate labels to their physiological states for two reasons: they are more likely to have internally consistent worldviews, & Ue experiences are more likely to be the object of cultural study. The ability to attach appropriate labels is likely in turn to lead to greater clarity about emotional experiences & to increased ability to make fine emotional distinctions & experience a greater emotional range.

88S20396 / ASA / 1988 / 4679

Colombatos, John, Gorman, Sheila & Grau, Lois (Division Social Medical Sciences School Public Health Columbia U, New York NY 10032). The Effects of Caring for AIDS Patients on Health Care Workers.

The effects of caring for acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) patients on the physical & psychological well-being, work satisfaction & career plans of health care workers are examined. Health care workers' perceptions & attitudes toward AIDS & the major risk groups homosexual Ms & intravenous drug users are also examined. Specific questions addressed include: (1) the extent to which health care workers' conceptions of AIDS are related to their attitudes toward the major risk groups, (2) the extent to which health care workers' perceptions of AIDS precaution guidelines & their conceptions & attitudes toward AIDS & the major risk groups are related to their perceptions of the risk of contagion & the precautionary measures they take in caring for AIDS patients, & (3) the extent to which health care workers' conceptions of & attitudes toward AIDS & the major risk groups, their perceptions of risk & precautions & their commitment to professional norms are related to their willingness to treat AIDS patients. Data were obtained by self-administered questionnaire from approximately 700 attending MDs, housestaff & fellows, & registered nurses in the medical units of 3 large teaching hospitals in New York City, NY, & from personal interviews with 100 home-care workers who have cared for AIDS patients.

88S20397 / ASA / 1988 / 4680

Connell, R. W. (Dept Sociology Macquarie U, New South Wales 2109 Australia). Gender as a Structure of Power.

Gender cannot be understood as a sex role added to a biological dichotomy. It must be seen as a complex, highly differentiated social structure with its own dynamic of historical change. At least three substructures within gender relations must be distinguished: a DofL, a structure of power, & a structure of cathexis. The structure of power, whose main axis is the connection of authority with masculinity, invests institutions commonly seen as "gendered," such as the family, as well as those not so classified, such as corporations & the state. In the contemporary gender order of rich countries, a masculinized institutional core can be distinguished, with a more diffuse or contested patriarchy outside it. This division runs through the state as well as the economy. The shape of social struggle around such issues as equal employment opportunity, sexual violence & child care highlights the ambivalent position of the state in sex-gender politics.

88S20398 / ASA / 1988 / 4681

Cook, Judith A. & Gorman, Brigid (2700 North Lakeview, Chicago IL 60614). The Utility of Follow-Up Information in Evaluating the Effects of Community-Based Treatment for Severe Mental Illness.

End-of-program evaluation data & follow-up interviews conducted with participants in a psychiatric rehabilitation program for persons with severe mental illness (N = 125) are used to address whether (1) the post-program status of severely mentally ill clients accurately predicts clients' status at follow-up, & (2) differences between treatment groups at the end of rehabilitation accurately predict differences between these same groups at follow-up. Results indicate that termination information reliably predicted client status at follow-up, regardless of whether the termination assessment was an objective behavioral measure (eg, employment status, residential status, days hospitalized) or a caseworker assessment, & regardless of the treatment area targeted (eg, vocational, living status, psychiatric recidivism). However, when controlling for clients' age cohort, it was apparent that the predictive utility of termination information for follow-up status was limited to adult clients, & did not hold true for clients who were under age 21 years when they began treatment.

88S20399 / ASA / 1988 / 4682

Cook, Judith A., Richardson, Laurel & Statham, Anne (c/o Richardson Ohio State U, Columbus 43210). Gender and University Teaching.

Men's & women's management of authority in the U classrooms of a large midwestern state U is explored, using a combined approach of structural & interpretive role theory along with a feminist theoretical synthesis in which the building & maintenance of interpersonal relationships are viewed as a process that bridges the two (often competing) paradigms. The data were derived from a triangulated methodological strategy including coded observations of 167 professors' classroom interactions, collection of teacher evaluation data from their students, & interviews with a subsample of 30 professors, matched for gender, rank, & discipline. Starting from the perspective of status inconsistency/structural role theory, a role conflict for academic women in the classroom was posited in which they were faced simultaneously with the tasks of establishing their competence on the one hand, & downplaying their appearance of authority on the other, men, it was hypothesized, would have a different authority management imperative, that of reducing their appearance of authority to elicit student classroom participation. The findings of extensive analysis led to construction of a synthesis of two approaches to role theory, using recent developments in feminist ontology, in order to understand the unique demands of women in a nontraditional professional role.

88S20400 / ASA / 1988 / 4683

Cooney, Rosemary Santana & Cullinan, Meritta B. (Dept Sociology Fordham U, Bronx NY 10458). Sex-Typing and Occupational Attainment: Examining the Relevance of the Socialization Perspective.

An examination of the relevance of the socialization perspective, particularly aspirations & parental role modeling, for understanding sex-type of first full-time civilian job after leaving full-time education & current job. Data were drawn from the 1966-1980 National Longitudinal Surveys of Labor Market Experience, with the sample restricted to whites aged 14-18 who were enrolled full-time at the initial survey date 1966 for men & 1968 for women. The general conceptual framework is derived from the status attainment literature. Major elaborations include marital/family & work histories, with attention to the sequencing of these experiences before & after their first job. While the greatest direct influence of family background & aspirations is shown, as expected, to be on first job, it is important to evaluate indirect influence, through first job, on subsequent work & family life history experiences.

88S20401 / ASA / 1988 / 4684

Cornfield, Daniel B., Filho, Hilquias B. Cavalcanti & Chun, Bang Jee (Box 1811 Station B, Nashville TN 37235). Household, Work, and Labor Activism: Gender Differences in the Determinants of Union Membership Participation.

With union-corporation competition for worker allegiances & declining union membership during the post-WWII era, unions have increasingly sought to replenish their sagging memberships from the ranks of women workers, a growing pool of potential union members. Consequently, unions have entered into a competition with households for the allegiances of women workers, given the persistence of traditionalism in gender roles & that women workers are also chiefly responsible for their households. Here, household constraints on individual activism in labor organizations are addressed by examining gender differences in the determinants of membership participation in the Tennessee State Employees Assoc. Results show that women's participation is more constrained than men's by household responsibilities, suggesting that competition among institutions for individual allegiances contributes to the level of individual activism in a social movement organization.

at several prestigious racetracks in the northeastern U.S., the paddock ritual is interpreted within the context of the community & its emergent status hierarchy. The paddock rites provide the opportunity for certain marginal community members to be accorded public recognition & acknowledgement of their contributions, which may otherwise be ignored. Such recognition & acknowledgement serve to mitigate the alienation these members routinely experience & thereby maintain the social order of the community. The implications of these findings for the differential integration of marginal community members through similar rites, including parades, holidays, & religious rites are discussed.

88S20388 / ASA / 1988 / 4671

Charmaz, Kathy (Sonoma State U., Rohnert Park, CA 94928), The Self in the Present.

¶ It is argued that selves are situated in time as well as in relationships & that experiencing chronic illness may alter relationships between time & self. Anchoring the self in the lived present is discussed, & three specific forms of the present in which people situate their self-concepts are examined, including the filled present, the slowed-down present, & the intense present. Ways that all people learn to live in the present are explored, based on data from in-depth interviews with 75 chronically ill people & from a collection of anecdotes, case summaries, & published & unpublished personal accounts. These qualitative materials are analyzed through the strategies of grounded theory.

88S20389 / ASA / 1988 / 4671

Chen, Hsiao-hung Nancy (Dept. Sociology, National Chengchi U., Taipei, Taiwan Republic, China), Community Development and Local Autonomy: Partner or Opponent for Taiwan's Development.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 21pp.

¶ An analysis of whether, in Taiwan, local autonomy, which has a history of 40+ years, & community development with a history of about 20 years, should be considered as one issue to avoid competition & waste in terms of limited manpower & financial resources. To visualize this situation objectively, data were gathered via a 1987 island-wide survey of 500 social workers & 770 village officials. It is found that, in theory, community development & local autonomy could be treated as identical, in practice, however, each confronts different challenges that must be faced for ultimate goals to be realized. Therefore, it is concluded that these two topics should be dealt with complementarily, as effective partners for Taiwan's future development, seeking to resolve such issues as boundaries, finance, organization, contradictory policies, & coping with societal change.

88S20390 / ASA / 1988 / 4673

Chen, Huey-Tsyrn (Dept. Sociology U. Akron, OH 44325), Beyond the Quantitative-Qualitative Debate: Current Developments and Their Implications for Program Evaluation.

¶ Since the 1970s, intensive debates over the most appropriate method for doing program evaluation have centered on the continuing conflict between the qualitative & quantitative camps. Recently, however, there have been some major developments, expanding the scope of program evaluation & creating a basis for reconciling these methodological conflicts. Emergent perspectives emphasize ideas such as using multiple methods to meet the needs of multiple program stakeholders, or developing a comprehensive theoretical framework for understanding program structures, processes, & outcomes. Research designs are breaking away from the traditional design taxonomy of the experimental paradigm & becoming hybrid, tailored to fit a wide range of program situations & evaluation needs. Further, instead of adhering to the traditional division between formative & summative evaluations, there are new efforts to integrate both types. The implications of these new developments, especially for sociologists, are discussed.

88S20391 / ASA / 1988 / 4674

Chua, Beng-Hunt (Dept. Sociology, National U. Singapore, 0511 Singapore), Sociology of Public Housing: A Comparative Perspective.

¶ A comparison of the success & failures of three different modes of public housing provision represented by the U.S., socialist countries, & Singapore. The U.S. system fails because it relies largely on the market to provide housing & limits public housing to the lowest income groups. This restrictive provision has resulted in concentrating the socially most disadvantaged groups within public housing estates, creating dire social & physical consequences for many Americans. The socialist countries fail at the other end by removing housing from the market completely. It is deemed to be a natural entitlement of all citizens & should be provided by the state at nominal rent. This leads to gross underprovision because housing becomes a constant drain on the national economy without capital returns. The Singapore program succeeds by combining the public notion of universal provision with that of a private market in the housing sector. Land is decommunitized. Housing prices for different types are fixed at affordable levels for economically differentiated income groups. Upgrading is encouraged by permitting residents to sell their flats in the private market & keep the capital gains, correspondingly leading to filtering downward of flats to lower income groups. This successful program is executed entirely in high-rise, high-density new towns, indicating that such environments are not necessarily a formula for social disaster. The success of high-rise living is discussed.

88S20392 / ASA / 1988 / 4675

Claire, Jeffrey Michael (Gerontology Research Institute Southern California, Los Angeles 90089), Regressive Intervention: The Discovery of Medicine during Terminal Encounters.

¶ A grounded theory approach guides the interpretation of observational, semistructured interview, content analysis, & taped discourse data collected from a 48-bed oncology unit with 288 study patients. The findings explicate generated concepts of regressive intervention & the dying process & indicate that when MDs no longer perceive their goals of cure achievable, they distance themselves from patients. MDs use certain devices to facilitate this gradual or abrupt, but purposeful, withdrawal from patients' curative regimens, e.g., use of the medical record, silence, & alternative interactants (family members). MD authority, cautious optimistic conversational strategies, & patient role investment are peripheral factors related to regressive interventionary action. Accompanying MD efforts to disengage are expectations that patients cease to remain dependent on MDs, who have, in the process of diagnosing a fatal illness, transferred them from the sick to the dying role. Having done so, MDs no longer hold a position of primary importance in patient care, although they may oversee supportive & palliative treatments. This rite of passage vites & forbids independent identity at the same moment. Dying patients are expected to limit their claim on others for attention, imposing as burdensome as possible, are encouraged not to verbalize certain complaints, use a minimum of medication, & rely on themselves to the extent possible. The dying person has the right to be taken care of, but the family is expected to fill these needs. The obligation of medical staff to maintain certain humane standards of treatment for patients presents problems for the face of institutional efficiency. Data are presented that demonstrate specific features of biomedical interaction that display a responsiveness to patients' attempts to construct meaningful accounts of their problem & further, to encourage the development of noncoercive discourse. These features are argued to improve the quality of care & to make MDs' purposeful withdrawal a decision based on norms or reciprocity rather than on authority subordination.

88S20393 / ASA / 1988 / 4676

Clogg, Clifford C. & Lindsay, Bruce (Dept. Sociology, Pennsylvania State U., University Park 16802), A Simple Latent Class Model for Item Analysis.

¶ A latent class model is suggested as an alternative to the usual Rasch model for item analysis. The nuisance-parameter problem is solved by using estimators of the Kiefer-Wolfowitz type. Under general conditions, the unconditional-likelihood representation of the proposed model is equivalent to the conditional-likelihood representation of Rasch's model provided that the number T of latent classes is greater than or equal to $(J+1)/2$, where J is the number of items. Simple diagnostic checks & procedures for assigning scores to subjects are also discussed.

88S20394 / ASA / 1988 / 4677

Cohn, Samuel & Winsborough, K. Kelly (U. Wisconsin, Madison 53706), The Benefits of Aggressiveness: Optimizing the Effect of Industrial Conflict on the Wages of Early Twentieth-Century French Coal Miners.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 47pp.

¶ Five theories of strike strategy are contrasted: two strategies of strike minimization, striking for informational purposes, striking for short-term results, & strike maximization. It is argued that when market conditions permit, a policy of frequent & aggressive striking maximizes workers' economic benefits, when employers perceive a union as being strike-prone, they are likely to offer relatively generous preemptive concessions as a strategy for maintaining labor peace. The theory is tested with crosses the fields of economics, jurisprudence, political science, & policy analysis. These varied perspectives share common weaknesses that point to the importance of adding a sociological voice to the debate. An analytic framework that emphasizes the traditional sociological concepts of power, interorganizational ties, & social structure yields new insights into strategic bankruptcies, eg, the Chapter 11 filing of the Manville Corp, formerly the nation's leading asbestos manufacturer. In turn, this perspective leads to a questioning of some of the basic assumptions concerning the role & operation of corporate bankruptcy law.

88S20411 / ASA / 1988 / 4694

DeIlo Buono, Richard A. (Dept Sociology Rosary Coll, River Forest IL 60305), Nicaragua's Escuela de Sociologia: The Emerging Agenda for Cooperation between Nica - U.S. Sociologists.

Sociology plays an important role in the formulation, analysis, & evaluation of revolutionary policies in Nicaragua. As the academic center of Nicaraguan sociology, the Escuela de Sociologia has worked to establish relations with sociological currents throughout the world. Many sociologists from the US have taken great interest in participating in projects signed to assist the development of Nicaraguan sociology. As a result, the formal mechanisms of scholarly exchange have been initiated. Following an outline of these various types of exchange programs, suggestions are offered for further expanding & institutionalizing Nicaraguan exchange based on a common agenda of social research & cooperation.

88S20412 / ASA / 1988 / 4695

Demos, Vasiliki (Division Social Sciences U Minnesota Morris 56267), Ethnicity and Gender in Two Greek-American Communities. Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 19 pp. Differences in the retention of ethnicity & traditional gender roles among Greek Orthodox American men & women are examined via questionnaire data (N = 553) from members of one parish in Baltimore, Md, & one in Minneapolis, Minn. It is revealed that in the 2 communities examined: (1) there is an erosion of traditional features of Greek ethnicity; (2) the most persistent difference between Greek American men & women involves endogamy, with women significantly more endogamous than men; (3) second-generation differences between men & women are particularly evident, with second generation women experiencing greater problems of marginality; & (4) educational attainment beyond high school is a powerful means for Greek-American women to attenuate differences between themselves & their M counterparts.

88S20413 / ASA / 1988 / 4696

Denzin, Norman K. (Dept Sociology U Illinois, Urbana 61801), An Interpretive Reading of Rational Choice Models.

An interpretive, deconstructive reading of rational choice models of social action & society, from George Homans to Peter Blau, Robert Merton, & Michael Hechter, is offered. The underlying ideological, sociological, logocentric, & linguistic biases of the model are identified. The functions of such texts in the late postmodern period are examined. An alternative, interpretive, expressive sociology of the emotions, socialization, & social order is briefly sketched.

88S20414 / ASA / 1988 / 4697

Desai, Manisha K. (Dept Sociology Washington U, Saint Louis MO 63130), New Social Movements and Non-Party Political Formations: Comparable Phenomena?

Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 13 pp. The concept of new social movements, used to refer to recent Western movements eg, the feminist, human rights, peace, environmental, & alternate lifestyle movements, is applied to the movements of women, peasants, tribals, & dalits (ex-untouchables) in India, known as the "non-party political formations." Through a comparative analysis of issues, values, modes of action, & the actors in such movements, it is demonstrated that the new social movements are not unique to postindustrial societies. Theorists argue. Some of what is considered new about the movements has been evident to Indian analysts since the time of Mahatma Gandhi in the independence struggle.

88S20415 / ASA / 1988 / 4698

Di Iellio, Anna (Dept Sociology Columbia U, New York NY 10027), The Need for Comparative Analysis in Studies of Citizenship in Local Societies.

Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 16 pp.

* Some questions that have arisen from comparing the citizenship of high-technology engineers & managers in two localities, Dallas, Tex, & Grenoble, France, are addressed, based on interviews (N not provided) & participant observation. The focus on these occupations in local communities grew out of a concern over the abstract & deterministic orientation of many theories that analyze & interpret political & social identities in advanced industrial societies as effects depending on changes in the structure of work. However, among the groups studied, the differences observed in both political & everyday life identities depended on aspects of national political structures & cultural traditions, rather than structure of work.

88S20416 / ASA / 1988 / 4699

Dinges, William D. (Dept Religion & Religious Education Catholic U America, Washington DC 20064), Quandry of Dissent on the Catholic Right.

* The Second Vatican Council marked a historic shift in which Catholic officialdom moved away from a position of long-standing opposition to many cultural & intellectual dynamics of modernity. Although the nature & scope of this accommodation has remained contested, one key sociological consequence has been the spread of factionalism & polarization in the postconciliar Church. This decomposition of Catholics has taken the form of widespread public dissent, the loss of unifying symbols, & the formation of ideological interest groups & organizations. Based on participant observation & an analysis of traditionalist Catholic literature, issues of dissent relevant to the emergence of a Catholic traditionalist movement are examined, focusing on the problem of legitimization. Examination of these issues sheds light on the dynamics of sectarianism, the construction of social movement ideologies, & the sociology of dissent.

88S20417 / ASA / 1988 / 4700

DiIomasso, Nancy & Thompson, Donna E. (Graduate School Management Rutgers U, Newark NJ 07102), Making It in Corporate Management: Perspectives of Successful Minority Managers and Current Minority MBA Students.

* Unstructured interviews with successful minority managers are compared to those with current or recent Masters in Business Administration (MBA) graduates to determine the potential differences in the career paths of minority managers who entered their careers during or just after the civil rights movements with those who are now in the "post civil rights" period. Interviewees, including blacks, Hispanics, & Asians, were asked to reflect on what has helped (or will help) them the most in their career success, what has hindered (or might hinder) them the most, & what they would like to have had (or to have) available if it were possible to facilitate their career achievement. These responses are placed in the context of work on career development & human resource management policies, specifically on the development of equal opportunity & affirmative action programs.

88S20418 / ASA / 1988 / 4701

Dobbin, Frank R. (Dept Sociology Indiana U, Bloomington 47405), The Privatization of American Social Insurance: Organizations, Fringe Benefits, and the State, 1920-1950.

● Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 21 pp.

* Students of US welfare exceptionalism have focused on the failure of public social insurance legislation early in this century, while often neglecting the related issue of how private coverage came to serve the same functions. Here, the development of private pension & health insurance schemes in US industry from 1920 to 1950 is charted using economy-wide data collected by the National Industrial Conference Board. Findings suggest that state actions played a key role in the growth of industrial insurance, but that related industry & union actions were important as well. Understanding US exceptionalism as a two-sided process, in which state responsibilities were circumscribed while the private sector expanded, offers important insights into both organizational theory & theories of the state.

88S20419 / ASA / 1988 / 4702

Doubt, Keith (Eastern Oregon State Coll, La Grande 97850), Autonomy and Responsibility in Social Theory.

* Focusing on the character of Jurgen Habermas's work as presented in Knowledge and Human Interests (see SA 19 7/71F2813), his formulation & critique of the positivistic sciences are applied to labeling theory, & an examination is conducted of how his formulation of the hermeneu-

88S20402 / ASA / 1988 / 4685

Corradi, Consuelo (Via Cavata 858, I-00189 Rome Italy). Hermeneutics and Field Research.

- Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 16 pp.

¶ Field research is based on a heuristic situation with specific characteristics: visible presence of the researcher, collection of personal or individual data, & a flexibility of tools & techniques that aims above all at letting the problem come to the surface in its own terms. The collection & analysis of life histories are discussed as an instance of field research. Life histories are considered as oral expressions, resulting from the activity of a self-reflecting subject (autobiography), but also from a question-answer pattern (dialogue). They are also considered as texts, i.e., written documents fixing the transient event of speech that in textual analysis must be taken both as a whole & in its parts. In sociological analysis these two perspectives translate into the intertwining of biography & society. Concrete criteria are drawn from the discussion, & examples are given from classic works.

88S20403 / ASA / 1988 / 4686

Courage, Myrna M. (Coll Nursing JHMHC, Ft. Florida, Gainesville 32610). Regional Differences in Views on Women's Work-Family Roles.

- Complete paper available from SA Reproduction Service prepaid at $0.25 per page plus $1.50 search & postage. Length of paper: 20 pp.

¶ The current status of women's work-family roles was studied from a structural perspective, focusing on the effects of gender, race, & region on views of women's work-family roles in the U.S. with emphasis on the southern region. Data were gathered from a national sample of 3,000 women & 1,000 men in a 1985 survey of women's changing status in society. Overall, gender, race, & region analyses show that women hold less traditional views of women's work-family roles than men. Blacks hold less traditional views than whites, & Southerners & Westerners hold less traditional views than Northeasterners & Midwesterners. Gender differences are more obvious in the South, where gender differences are greatest between white women & men & least between black women & men. The effect of southern culture is muted by the effects of other structural & demographic factors, especially gender, age, & employment.

88S20404 / ASA / 1988 / 4687

